R.A.F. Fighter Planes Seen Driving Off German Raiders From Yorkshire and Thames Estuary

London, March 1—(CP) — German air raiders attacked fishing boats and other shipping along the east coast of Britain from Yorkshire to the Thames Estuary today.

The German raids followed by a few hours Royal Air Force flights over northwest Germany, Baltic ports and Berlin.

A British pursuit plane drove off German planes which bombed and machine-gunned the fishing boat Courage. Several trawlers engaged in fishing were attacked off Yorkshire.

Went to Aid

A trawler and a drifter went to the aid of a vessel which sent an SOS and a Norwegian ship, badly damaged and listing heavily, managed to reach an east coast port after sending distress signals. She was believed damaged by German air attack. One man was killed and 11 persons were missing after an unnamed Italian steamship was mined in the North Sea.

The flight over Berlin was the third this week. R.A.F. planes reconnoitred Hamburg and Bremen as well as Kiel and several harbors

Why The Weather?

March winds! As winds are caused by differences in temperature, the strongest winds occur when there are the greatest differences in temperatures. This is the condition which prevails in the northern hemisphere in March; the Arctic region is then coldest after its long winter night, just as it is coldest anywhere just before dawn, and hence the greatest difference in temperature between the tropics and the Arctic occurs about now. March is the stormiest month, most places reporting their greatest average wind speeds this month. But higher instantaneous speeds may occur in summer in connection with thunderstorms or tornadoes. The records do not bear out the old proverb, "When March comes in like a lion, it goes out like a

200,000 ANSWER RUMANIAN CALL TO THE COLORS

1,600,000 Men Now on Duty Against Possible Broadening of War

PEASANTS RELEASED

Bucharest, Mar. 1 (AP). — Two hundred thousand citizen soldiers answered Rumania's call to the colors today, raising her army to 1,600,000 men against a possible broadening of the war in the spring.

A minimum of confusion attended the concentration because the new contingents of sheepskin-coated peasants and drably dressed Urbanites had been informed months beforehand of the frontier points where they should report.

At the same time, Rumania announced that "great numbers" of peasants soon may be released from the army for sowing crops. Their places will be taken during one-month leaves by non-agricultural conscripts.

Russia Border Fortified.

The heaviest concentration of Rumanian strength is along the Russian border where a fortification program has been hurried.

There are, however, no immediate international signs of trouble for the Balkans.

Only last night Premier Refik Saydam of Turkey told his countrymen emphatically that Turkey's relations with Roviet Russia are "normal and good". His broadcast from Ankara was regarded as notice that Turkey would stay out of war unless her security is threatened.

Latest Steps In Rumania.

Aside from the calling of the 200,000 new soldiers, these are Rumania's latest preparedness steps:

Issuance of a decree for an immediate $16,000,000 enlargement of the railway system for "strategic and industrial purposes."

An appeal through brightly colored posters for further contribut-

BLANSHARD MAN SHOT AND KILLED AT REAR OF HOME

J. CRAWFORD HELD

Service Station Operator Arrested and Charged With Murder by Provincial Police

Stratford, Ont., March 1 (CP)—James Crawford, 41, Prospect Hill service station operator, was charged today with the murder last night of Amber Carter, 39, and was remanded for trial to March 8 in custody.

Carter, father of two children, was shot as he stepped from his automobile at the rear of his home by a man who asked "where have you been tonight?" Carter died a few minutes later and Crawford was taken into custody shortly after.

Police said two discharges from a shotgun struck Carter in the chest

Circumstances Vague

Circumstances surrounding the shooting were vague. Carter returned to his home about 11 o'clock last night from Stratford where he had spent the evening. He was accompanied by James McWilliams, an uncle who resides at the Carter home.

London Provincial Police hurried to the scene early today when they received a telephone call from a man who said: "I have just shot a man."

Detention Nazi Coal Exports To Italy to Begin Tonight

Ships Leaving Holland After Midnight Will be Detained by Navy

ITALY WARNED

London, Mar. 1 (CP).—Detention of German coal exports to Italy by the Royal navy will begin at midnight tonight, it was disclosed authoritatively today.

Sources close to the Ministry of Economic Warfare emphasized, however, that it was "not in any way a reprisal for the temporary difficulties which have arisen in British-Italian commercial and financial talks in Rome."

Several Italian ships now are in Rotterdam, Holland, loading German coal and unless they sail by midnight they will be detained by British naval patrols.

The usual route of German coal exports to Italy is up the Rhine to Rotterdam, thence to Genoa by ship. The seaborne traffic amounts to about 6,000,000 tons a year and between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 tons more move by land.

Circles close to the foreign office and the ministry of economic warfare emphasized that the Italian government had been warned that German coal exports to Italy would be subjected to export control shortly after the order-in-council for the two-way blockade was signed last Nov. 27.

Informed British sources, however, said that interrupted war trade negotiations with Italy were continuing and that the coal ban might be lifted. During the weeks of negotiations, Britain had allowed Italy to import German coal by water, to avoid causing inconvenience.

The snag which resulted in the stoppage was said unofficially to have been Italy's refusal to supply Britain with products of her heavy industries.

Canadians Praised on Solid Grasp Of Work by Infantry Inspector

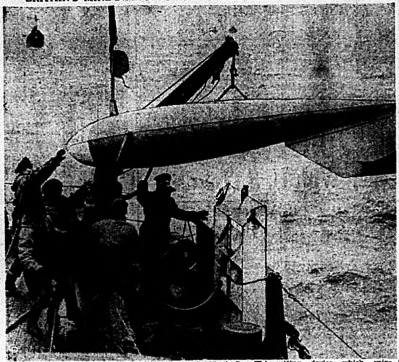
By EDWIN JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aldershot, Mar. 1 (CP-Cable).—At the conclusion of a three-day tour of the Canadian training camp here which gave him a close-up view of every phase and detail of individual preparedness and the operations of the troops, General J. W. Wilcox, Inspector General of Infantry, today left this message of tribute:

"I am exceedingly pleased with the high standard and the progress in training displayed by the Canadians who come directly within the scope of my department. They are doing a splendid job and I take away a feeling that they have the most profound knowledge and solid grasp of the important work they have in hand."

The general's words of praise came after he had inspected Brigadier A. A. Smith's First Brigade, embracing such crack outfits as the Royal Canadian Regiment, the 48th Highlanders of Toonto and the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Previously he had visited the two other brigades of infantry and the machine-gun personnel.

BRITAIN'S MINE-SWEEPERS HAVE WAR'S MOST DANGEROUS JOB



The mine-sweeping patrol is without a doubt one of the present war's most dangerous jobs and here are some of the men who hunt Nazi mines in the North Sea. This sweeper is putting in at an unnamed port and the crew is swinging aboard the paravane, mine-cable cutting device which snips the mine cables, sending the deadly weapon bobbing to the surface, where they're exploded by rifle fire.

THE NETHERLANDS CURBS TRAFFIC IN 'GIFT' PACKAGES

Packages Henceforth Will Only be Accepted From One Individual to Another

BOLSTER NEUTRALITY

Amsterdam, March 1 (AP)—The Netherlands, with her normal life and trade dislocated by war next door, sought today to bolster her neutrality and resources by curbing traffic in "gift packages of foodstuffs to Germany and elsewhere.

Under regulations going into effect today the Netherlands post office accepted only packages addressed by an individual in the Netherlands to a person in a foreign country. Thus the government barred the sizeable business in foodstuffs which some firms have been doing on orders from the United States for delivery to families in Germany. To a much smaller extent similar packages have been going to Great Britain.

Without a permit, an individual Netherlander—not a company — may ship food to a maximum of three kilograms (6.6 pounds) but not exceeding one kilogram (2.2 pounds) each of butter, cheese, meat and condensed milk and 250 grams (between eight and nine ounces) each of coffee and chocolate.

Heretofore it has been possible for an individual to send five kilograms (11 pounds) of butter and cheese each week.

PRIME MINISTER LIBERAL CHOICE AS CANDIDATE

Addresses Constituents at Prince Albert and Leaves Immediately for Ottawa

DEFENDS ACTIONS

Prince Albert, March 1 (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared before his home constituents here yesterday that he intends to remain at the head of the Canadian Government as long as he has the confidence of the people of Canada and the "strength to perform duties of my office."

"But if I have to gain that confidence by going back and forth across the country making speeches here and there, and by seeking to cater to local caste and prejudice, I do not wish to occupy office for a day," he said.

The Prime Minister addressed two public meetings here following his unanimous selection by a Liberal convention to contest Prince Albert riding which he has represented since 1926. After his evening address before an audience of 3,000 in the Armouries, he left immediately for Ottawa.

Convinced Loss His Own

While expressing regret that he had been unable to visit his constituents since the 1935 election, the Prime Minister said he is convinced the loss was his alone. He was sure that if he remained on the job to direct the multiplicity of problems which had beset Canada in the last five years, and did that job efficiently, his electors would

SERGEANT-PILOT AWARDED D. F. M.

Reginald Carey, R.A.F., Attacked Enemy Aircraft Which Was Attacking Shipping

London, March 1—(CP)— Sergeant-Pilot Frank Reginald Carey, Royal Air Force hero of two encounters with German aircraft, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal, the Air Ministry announced today.

During January, Carey with his section leader engaged an enemy aircraft over the North Sea while it was attacking shipping. Again in February, while leading a section of two aircraft, he engaged a Nazi plane over the North Sea and shot it down.

"Low clouds were present during these engagements," the Air Ministry bulletin said, "but Sergt. Carey's initiative, determination and skill prevented the enemy from taking cover and brought the engagement to a successful conclusion."

Nazi Attempts to Bleed Britain By Air Attacks in Shipping Doomed to Failure Says Expert

London, Mar. 1 (CP).—German air attacks on shipping "apparently are part of a long-term attempt to bleed Britain", an authoritative British aviation source declared today as the half-year point was reached in the war.

"The essence of the German plan," said this aviation authority, "seems to be to strike at Britain in a way in which Germany cannot well be struck in return and to refrain from measures which would invite immediate and overwhelming counter attack."

German hopes for success of such a program may be dispelled, however, he said, in recalling that last month Lord Chatfield, Minister for Defence Co-ordination, declared British air power would be brought into play at the right moment.

Failure of Germany to launch mass attacks which Great Britain expected during the first weeks of the war has bolstered confidence in the nation's anti-aircraft defence and has permitted expansion of the Royal Air Force without the disturbance of major fighting.

"The Allies' growing air ascendancy is backed by the great Dominion air training scheme now getting into stride, chiefly in Canada," said the aviation source, remarking that "after a short period of comparative immunity," German raiders are suffering renewed casualties, mostly due to pursuit by British fighter planes.

Attacks Would Bring Reprisals.

Many Britons believe that even if the German air force is capable of mass raids on Britain, it is refraining either because Germany cannot afford to expend men and materials or for fear of reprisals. Everyone in

Russians Only Mile From Viipuri and Fast Closing in Finns Report Reconnaissance Flights and Several Fierce Aerial Battles—Bomb Traffic Junction

VIIPURI DESERTED

Reported 19 Fresh Divisions Totalling 300,000 Men Thrown Into Fighting on Karelian Isthmus — Finns Falling Back is Report

Helsinki, March 1 (AP)—The Red army's efforts to push across the bay of Viipuri in an encircling drive on Viipuri itself continued in conjunction with heavy attacks along a line due east of the city, the Finnish high command announced today.

The Red army continued its persistent battering of Finland's Mannerheim line, striking at both extremes under a continued protective barrage from warplanes.

Unusually heavy air activity was reported in the daily communique, covering action yesterday, with "fierce air battles" in which the Finns said they shot down 14 Russian planes and lost four themselves.

(A Red army communique last night on yesterday's action reported the Russians were a little more than a mile from Viipuri and were closing in from the south and east in a "developing" offensive.)

Several Reconnaissance Flights

The Finns said their air force carried out several reconnaissance flights "and bombed a certain air base, a traffic junction, and enemy trains."

"Both in the home area and the war zone there were numerous fierce air battles." The Finns said that 'several hundred enemy planes were estimated to have flown' over the home area.

"According to information available so far," said the communique, "an aggregate of 14 civilians were killed and 16 wounded."

The greatest loss of life was said to have occurred at Savonlinna.

As the Russians approached Viipuri the city was a deserted, bomb-shattered ghost port.

A reinforced Red army stepped up the pace of its month long drive against Finland's key city on the Karelian Isthmus. Some sources said the Russians had sent 19 fresh divisions, nearly 300,000 men, into the isthmus fighting.

Stave off Encirclement

The Finns fell back to stronger positions, mined Viipuri Bay and massed artillery in an effort to stave off encirclement by preventing the Russians from crossing the ice from north of the Koivisto fortified area to the west and rear of Viipuri.

Magnetic Mines Made Early in 1938 By Germany, British Report Shows

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Mar. 1 (CP-Cable).—Germany started manufacturing magnetic mines as early as 1938, it was revealed today when a full description of one of the underwater terrors was released from official quarters.

Four men risked their lives to examine the mine after it was dropped from a German seaplane near Shoeburyness in the Thames Estuary. It was a 1,500-pound pear-shaped affair, with two detonators, one set to fire a 700-pound force of high explosive on contact with the other governing magnetic appliance.

Germany has dropped many magnetic mines in shallow water along the east coast and planted others by submarine. They are only effective in shallow waters. Below 50 fathoms they are useless.

In effect, this is how they work: The magnetic field of a steel ship passing directly overhead releases a magnet, which then makes contact with the detonator firing the mine. The contact detonator would operate if the mine were dropped on the deck of a ship from a seaplane but it is not sufficiently sensitive to fire the mines when it strikes the water.

Outside the case of the mine is aluminum. A parachute is used to break the speed of the mine's descent from the plane. They are usually dropped from a height of 1,500 feet on moonlight nights when pilots are able to distinguish landmarks.

The date 1938 was found stamped on several parts of the recovered mine when it was finally dismantled. It was spotted in the water late at night. Men were set to watch it but warned to keep well away.

As soon as daylight broke the mine was photographed from all possible positions and drawings made to scale. Non-magnetic tools were forced to fit the projecting appliances.

By this time it was noon. One man, a naval lieutenant, offered to risk his life in dismantling the mine. As soon as he disconnected one portion he went back to the beach before starting to unscrew another—so that if the mine blew up at least something would be known about it.

Afterwards he was invested by the King.

As soon as the lieutenant had removed the detonator all four experts on mines crowded round in the belief that it was perfectly harmless. They prodded this part, hammered that, and removed a third.

Finally one of them found a second detonator and only then it was discovered what a narrow escape they all had—the first detonator to be removed was the contact detonator and the one still in the mine was the one controlling the magnetic mechanism. It was removed without further delay or harm

SAYS RIBBENTROP EXPRESSES VIEW TO U. S. ENVOY

Opinion is Welles Was Told Germany Wants Britain's Dominant Position Ended

WELLES MEETS HITLER

(By Louis Lochner Associated Press Staff Writer).

Berlin, March 1 (AP)—Germany is not prepared to discuss peace unless Great Britain's "stranglehold on the economic life of the world" is broken—this is understood to have been the central theme of the first talk today between President Roosevelt's fact-finding Emissary and Adolf Hitler's Foreign Minister.

Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop is understood to have told Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State, unless Britain's dominant position is ended Germany refuses to entertain American ideas concerning elimination of autarchy, regimentation and totalitarianism from the post-war economic world.

Little Doubt of Import of Talk

Men in Von Ribbentrop's confidence developed this idea so strongly to this correspondent that there can be little doubt that Von Ribbentrop himself gave this line of talk to Welles, with whom he conferred soon after the American's arrival this morning.

It is understood the main purpose of Welles' talk with Von Ribbentrop was to prepare the ground for his meeting with Hitler probably tomorrow.

In developing the thesis that Britain has a stranglehold on the world Von Ribbentrop is believed to have told Welles that so long as Britain holds Gibraltar and the Suez Canal, for example, there is no security for the rest of the world.

Germany, in the Foreign Office view which undoubtedly was communicated to Welles, would rather fight to the bitter end than agree to a compromise.

Von Ribbentrop, according to these circles, claimed Germany established a protectorate over Bohemia and Moravia (heart of the former Czecho-Slovak Republic) and seized Poland because Britain and France tried to use these areas as operating bases against Germany.

The Foreign Office lays claim to being in possession of evidence that the Allies are busy in Lithuania, especially encouraging the Poles there to create a disturbance in the so-called "Governor's area" of Poland administered by Germany.

MEMORIAL SERVICE HELD FOR FLYING OFFICER J. WHITE

Rev. Beauchamp Payne Conducts Service at St. Thomas Church — Late Officer Was Member of Choir for Long Period

R.A.F. REPRESENTED

At the Church of St. Thomas this Friday morning a memorial service was conducted for the late Flying Officer John Arthur White, son of Mrs. John (White) Price, McDonald Avenue, in this city, the official confirmation of whose death, while in the discharge of duty, was received here recently from the British Air Ministry.

The service was a fully choral celebration of the Holy Eucharist and the celebrant was the Vicar, the Rev. Rural Dean A. Beauchamp Payne.

The church was well filled with friends and members of St. Thomas' congregation. Several members of the Royal Air Force who arrived at the Trenton Airport recently from England, were present at the service.

The late John White grew from boyhood to young manhood in the Church of St. Thomas and served for a long period as a member of the choir and acted as Crucifer.

Members of the late Flying Officer's family were present at the service.

Sam Bowers, Tweed Celebrates His 98th Birthday

Tweed —(Special)—Mr. Samuel Bowers, Tweed's "grand old man," celebrated his ninety-eighth birthday on February 22nd. Gradually failing strength, resulting from an illness of a year ago, has resulted in his being forced to remain indoors for the greater part of the past winter. With the coming of warmer weather his familiar figure will once again be seen on the streets. Mr. Bowers was a shanty man during his early years, later taking up farming in Hungerford. A number of years ago he retired to make his home in Tweed, where he has since lived. Mrs. Bowers passed away a number of years ago, after they had celebrated their sixty-fourth wedding anniversary.

John Kerr of Bancroft was charged in police court with an infraction of The Highway Traffic Act, resulting in a motor accident. It is charged that he left his car standing in the centre of the roadway at the bottom of a hill; a car approaching from the opposite direction collided with it damaging both vehicles.

Mr. Merritt "Pete" Clark of Drumheller is visiting his father, Mr. H. J. Clarke for a couple of weeks. He is manager of the Selrite branch store of Drumheller, and is making his first visit home since 1938.

Mr. John McNaught has purchased the residence of Miss Margaret Holdcroft north of the C. P. R. station. For the past several years, Miss Holdcroft, formerly a member of the Consolidated School Staff, has spent the winters in Clearwater, Florida with her sister, Mrs. (Dr.) Nickle.

Miss Frances Graham fell while skiing on the hills north of Tweed, one of her skiis striking her in the face, and inflicting a gash that required several stitches.

George Shewring Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Shewring, Tweed, is the latest recruit joining the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

The Salvation Army Red Shield War and Home Service Committee met at their headquarters to prepare plans for the campaign which will get under way on March 11th. Mr. Ed Way, chairman of the committee presided. There was a good attendance of members of the committee which is composed of: C. E. Way, F. W. Clark, Treasurer, L. H. Marriott, secretary; A. Rupert, S. R. Curry, S. H. Connor, A. J. Maynes, Ray Quinn, Joe Rashotte, W. LeSage, H. W. Crosbie, H. Myles, Dr. W. A. Paul, A. Corbett (Sulphide), T. N. Beatty, E. W. Jones, W. S. Gordon, Dr. M. G. Dales.

Committee members will begin the advance gift campaign this week.

Arrangements Completed for Reception of Dr. Manion Who Will Speak Here Saturday

Dominion National Conservative Leader Will Arrive in City in Early Evening From Oshawa

WARDEN CHAIRMAN

Officials and members of the South Hastings Conservative Association today rushed to completion final arrangements for the reception of the Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, Dominion National Conservative leader who speaks in the Belleville Collegiate Auditorium here Saturday night in support of candidates for the ridings of Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland and Peterborough counties.

The distinguished speaker will arrive by train in the early evening from Oshawa, where he speaks in the afternoon.

Arrangements have been made to provide for an overflow crowd after the auditorium of the Institute is filled. A public address system will be installed so that those unable to obtain admission to the auditorium proper, will be able to hear the speakers.

On the platform with Dr. Manion, will be George H. Stokes, Hastings South; Jamieson Bone, Northumberland, George A. White, Hastings-Peterborough, George H. Tustin, Prince Edward-Lennox, R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P., Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P., and other prominent party stalwarts.

Warden John L. Churcher of Hastings County will be the chairman for the meeting with Mrs. Evelyn M. McCarthy, daughter of the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell acting as vice-chairman.

The Belleville Public School Boys' Band under the direction of Conductor E. Cooper will play during the meeting. Ushers will include, Messrs. W. W. Gray, Geo. Ketcheson, Norman White, Ward English, Jack Parrott, Harry Knott, William Warham, Norman Garbutt and E. Thompson.

Official Rates of Exchange Must be Used by All Persons Dealing With U. S. Tourists

Importance of Allowing Official Premium Urged by Ontario Travel of Publicity Bureau

TOURISTS APPRECIATED

The Ontario Travel and Publicity Bureau has sent out the following:—

The Foreign Exchange Control Board, Ottawa, has advised us that it has received complaints from American tourists from time to time that they have not been allowed the official premium on their United States funds.

"From the point of view of encouraging the tourist business," the Board points out, "it is essential that the official rates of exchange be used by all persons dealing with tourists and the Foreign Exchange Control Board is accordingly REQUIRING that the official rates be observed in all cases."

These rates are published in the daily newspapers and may be obtained from any branch of a chartered bank.

We would also draw your attention to another important ruling of the Ottawa Board. It specifies "that hotelkeepers and other residents accepting foreign exchange from non-resident tourists for goods or services or in exchange for Canadian currency may make change in the same currency and SHOULD NOT REQUIRE the non-resident to accept Canadian dollars in change."

"A word or two might be added here to the Board's timely advice. A contented tourist, as everyone knows, is the best possible advertising. For that reason, we cannot be too courteous or considerate this year in our reception of him or in our handling of the money he brings along with him. Every cent our United States friends spend in Ontario is to be appreciated. With a potentially-long war staring us in the face we should do everything to encourage rather than discourage that spending."

Thanking you for your co-operation in this matter, we are,

Ontario Travel and Publicity Bureau.

Madoc

Madoc — On Tuesday evening a social time was enjoyed in the church parlors of Trinity United Church, where the Senior and Junior groups of the C. G. I. T. affiliated themselves with the Senior Missionary organization, the W. M. S. in the presence of a few mothers and those interested.

During the devotional period led by the Senior leaders, Miss Ruth Schell, a fitting hymn was sung, followed by the reading responsively of Psalm 24. Prayer by Mrs. Fox preceded the Affiliation Service in which Mesdames A. Poulter, F. Fleming, W. McBain, M. Fox, T. E. Burnside and L. Ashley, assisted with clear responses, received by Misses Betty Phillips, Sadie Parks, Lillian Embury, Fay Fleming, Verna Embury and Joyce Fleming.

Appropriate remarks concerning co-operation as a small or large unit, personal sense of responsibility and the understanding of Missionary giving, were pleasantly and ably directed to the girls by Mrs. Fox. Favorite sing-songs were given by the girls after which the Study Book, "Tales from India" by Basil Matthews was introduced by Miss Thelma Foster. Miss Schell continued with this thought by reading an Indian poem. A group of girls, Misses Phyllis Tanner, Shirley Gunter, Sadie Parks and Betty Phillips offered a cheery song, following which the paper, "The Royal Father" containing many interesting historical facts, were presented by Miss Fay Fleming. A musical selection by Mrs. Percy Phillips and daughter, Miss Betty Phillips concluded a fine program.

During the lunch hour, much sociability was enjoyed and appreciation felt by the leaders, Miss Schell and Mrs. Jack, for the splendid spirit of cooperation shown by all partaking.

On Wednesday afternoon, Madoc Chapter No. 143, O.E.S., held a very successful afternoon tea and card party. The guests were received by the Worthy Matron, Mrs. Blanche Keller. The ladies receiving the prizes were: for bridge, Mrs. Jas. Watson; euchre, Mrs. E. Phillips. The members assisting were: Mrs. Munro, Mrs. Caverly, Mrs. C. McCoy, Miss Connor and Miss West.

Marmora Kinsmen Plan Program of Club Activities

Marmora — The monthly meeting of Marmora Kinsmen Club was held on Monday, February 26, at 6.30 p. m. at the Royal Hotel.

President Ray Underwood outlined briefly a possible program of events which should take place between now and August 31st, 1940. the termination of the National Year. This program included the regular semi-monthly meetings, a Kiddies Night, and possibly an inter-club meeting to be held some time during the Summer, and at which the Marmora Club would play host to the various Clubs in No. 6 district. However, this program is merely a proposed one, at this time, and will be further discussed at future meetings.

The chairmen of the various committees gave their regular reports and it was suggested that the aid of every member be solicited at the present time in order to make the proposed Marmora Kinsmen Minstrel Show as great a success as possible. The date for this show has not been set as yet but it is understood that it will take place during the first week of April. It was made clear that Roy Smith and Bill Townson of the entertainment committee have a big job on their hands in this respect and every one was urged to co-operate in every respect. Sid Bulbuc was voted chairman of the Programme Committee for the Minstrel Show and as he is doing excellent work as Editor of the Kinsmen Bulletin, the Programme Committee is in very capable hands.

Two new members were welcomed into the Club, namely, Howard Linton of Marmora and Percy Gray of Deloro and these new additions will also be included as Charter Members.

The secretary read a letter received from the Belleville Club, inviting as many as possible to attend an inter-club meeting to be held in Belleville. The Marmora Club voted to adjourn its regular General Meeting in Marmora and accept the invitation of the Belleville Club to meet with them in Belleville on that date. It is hoped that practically all the Marmora boys will attend this meeting. A letter was also read from the Hanover Club, congratulating the Marmora Club on its formation, and extending every possible wish for success.

Ottawa, March 1—(CP)—No. 115 (Fighter) squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force will come to Ottawa from Montreal tomorrow under the command of Squadron Leader Roy H. Foss, to undergo instruction in machine gun firing over Lake Deschenes.

This unit has been training for some time in Montreal and will come here with two battle aircraft. The Lake Deschenes site, about six miles west of Ottawa, was selected for similar instruction given pilots and air gunners of No. 110 (City of Toronto) Army Co-operation Squadron, prior to its departure for the United Kingdom.

Five officers and 10 airmen will be in the Montreal group which will conclude its training next Thursday. Arrangements have been made for No. 112 (City of Winnipeg) Army Co-operation Squadron, now in training here, to begin instruction in air fighting after the return of No. 115 Squadron to Montreal.

Defence Forces of India Modernized

London, March 1—(CP) — The British government yesterday announced "assistance amounting to £34,000,000 ($151,300,000)" is being extended for modernizing Indian defence forces over a five-year period.

Sir Hugh O'Neill, under-secretary for India, announced in the House of Commons that one fourth of the sum would be considered a loan to India.

He said Britain considered India should meet the costs of special defence measures undertaken for India's interests during the war, but that Britain would contribute toward maintenance of Indian troops outside India. Some are now stationed in Egypt.

The annual grant to the Indian army remains at its 1939 level of £2,000,000.

The Indian defence budget for the 1940-41 fiscal year totals £40,000,000, including £6,000,000 extra because of the war.

MARCH 1ST., ST. DAVID AND THE WELSH

March 1st., the opening day of the spring month, is a day of special interest in Wales, that part of Britain where the people preserve much of national customs and traditions dating back for many centuries. It is the day of their saint, David, who lived to be an old man. He was born in the fifth century, ancient manuscripts say, and died either in 544 when he was said to have reached a great age or in 601, when he must have been of incredible years.

Welsh legends are that a white dove perched on the shoulder of the venerable David whenever he preached, and that the ground where he stood while he preached raised itself into a mound, that he might be better heard by his audience. He was one of the few native saints of the British Isles.

David was born in Glamorganshire, and was, say the savants, with bland inexactitude, "either a nephew or an uncle of King Arthur"—Arthur of the Table Round, hero of ancient chivalry. His lineage was subject to much research. Back in the 10th. century, a devotee published a most amazing table of David's ancestry.

David was actually an evangelist among the Britons, ordained by St. Paulinus. In Britain he founded or restored two monastries, one at Glastonbury and one at Bath. He was credited with making the famous healing waters of Bath "warm and salubrious," but as a matter of fact the Romans had discovered their qualities centuries before. It was to Glastonbury his bones were brought 300 years after his death, tradition says.

Returning to Wales, he obtained permission of his relative, King Arthur, to move the episcopal seat from Caerleon to Mynyw, or Menevia, now St. David's, and still cathedral city of the western see.

Another folk tale is of David choosing the leek as the emblem of Wales. In the course of a battle against the invading Saxons, the Welsh became sadly confused, and could not tell friend from foe. During a lull, David told them to pluck leeks and wear them in their hats, that they might not slaughter one another.

The lyrical Welsh came in great numbers to America at the beginning of the century. Eastern Pennsylvania is dotted with Welsh town names, and there is a Welsh musical tradition among the people. On St. David's Day in 1729, the Society of Ancient Britons was founded in Philadelphia and loyal sons of Wâles paraded to church wearing leeks, to listen to a sermon in Cymric ancient tongue of Britons driven from England into Wales by Anglo-Saxons.

National appurtement of the Welsh is the eisteddfod—modest word merely meaning "sitting." or "session," but now generally applied to a festival of music that may last for days and attract musicians of all races. The musical Welsh share with the Arabs credit for the first stringed instrument with a bow, a primitive violin.

"Rhyfelgyrch Gwyr Harlech," the militant patriotic song known to most people as "Men of Harlech," is a popular national air of Wales.

ANGLO-FRENCH AGREEMENT

The alliance of Britain and France in arms is one of the factors of increasing importance for the ultimate end which will crown the efforts of the fight for the maintenance of freedom against a would-be dominator. As with the large slabs of stone which went into the building of the pyramids, there is not a point at which Adolf Hitler can find the thinnest crack or flaw in which to stick a point. He has tried to pry them apart but both know that Hitler in these efforts is the clever fox who would disunite a power which spells his own overthrow and the righting of the balance of Europe in favor of justice. It is said that the thinnest edge of a knife could not find the slightest space between stones of the pyramids. Of solid slabs of enduring stone the pyramids were built and neither the sand of the desert nor the fierce heat of the sun has been able to destroy these giants of thousands of years agō, built long before any of the modern states and before Europe was far on the way of civilization.'

In such a way the Anglo-French alliance is built—on fairness and equality and recognition of the rights of both. With this basis these two can go far after the war's end toward the construction of a peaceful Europe. The principles which have been made for solidarity during the war will be continued long after.

Attention is called to the meetings of a joint committee of the British House of Commons and the French Chamber of Deputies held on French and British soil at various times. There is no interference with the governments but the delegates are concerned with exchange of free and frank information. The New York Times points out that a public meeting of this body may be held later, according to Harold Nicholson, one of the English members. "I can foresee an almost allegorical meeting at Beauvais, or at Canterbury at which the elected representatives of the two peoples will meet together and affirm before the world their joint determination to bring the war to a victorious conclusion."

The Times comments as follows:

"Somehow, it tugs at the imagination, for this is a foretaste of what the future can bring if enough common sense survives in European minds. If the two greatest democratic assemblies of Europe can at the same time resolve to make a just and intelligent peace, their meeting will be a thrilling adventure. France and Britain have already shown that they can discard the follies of nationalism in the face of a common enemy. Theirs is the opportunity to set an even finer example to the world when peace comes."

CITIZEN SOLDIERS

The place of the citizen soldier attracts attention in this day when so many men wear uniform to make their contribution to the defence of their country and liberty.

The Hamilton Spectator has a timely reference to this question:

"When Bernard Shaw said somewhat caustically that a civilian could be turned into a good soldier almost overnight, he was trying to drive home the idea that a huge standing army could only in the end be disastrous for any nation.

"He had something substantial on which to build up his theory. Great Britain has never had it as a part of her policy to maintain such an army—Germany has; and there was a rather ironical plaintiveness in Hitler's recent declaration that he did not want the Reich to be a permanent barracks. The fact is that in morale, in skill and even in the higher forms of leadership, the British civilian turned soldier was fully the equal—and often the superior—of the professionals he fought in the last war, and in the present struggle he is again meeting the test.

"In no branch of the service is this better illustrated than in the Air Force. Grocery clerks, bank tellers and young lawyers have shown their mettle in meeting and defeating the best of German raiders. And to show how a nation can take up arms of its own accord, it is worth noting that sixteen members of parliament are serving today in the R.A.F. They range from wing-commander to sergeant and in age from 56 to 29.

"None of these is a product of a national barracks."

Nations which are peace-loving and who fight only when they are called upon to defend the principles of freedom prove themselves in both peace and war.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Colds and Fatigue May Cause Pneumonia

The story is often told of the man being examined for insurance who was asked if he had had any of the diseases of childhood.

"No", was his answer.

"What! Have you never had measles, chickenpox, scarlet fever or mumps?"

"Oh, yes", he replied, "I've had all those diseases half a dozen times."

Most diseases of childhood seldom occur more than once, but in this man's opinion they were unimportant. There is, however, one ailment that may occur more than once and each time it occurs it lessens the resistance of the patient so that he is more apt to have another attack. That disease is pneumonia. Hospital statistics show that about two of every three pneumonia patients had a head cold, sore throat, or slight bronchitis before the pneumonia appeared.

What does this mean? This means that either the lining of the nose, throat, and bronchial tubes becomes less able to ward off infection each time the individual has a cold or the infection lowers the general strength of the body so that the body as a whole is less able to fight off each succeeding attack of colds and bronchitis which may be followed by pneumonia.

However, pneumonia may attack an individual who is not subject to colds and bronchitis, and may also in some cases attack an individual without starting in with a cold or bronchitis. However, the reason the pneumonia attacks the individual, whether or not a cold is present, is because he is not well, is run down, is very tired, or has been exposed to cold and dampness. The fact that pneumonia occurs 5 to 10 times as often in the cold weather as in the warm weather shows that cold and dampness lower vitality.

As pneumonia organisms are present in individuals in perfect health, the reason that these organisms do not set up an infection in the body is because the individual is in good health. "Pneumonia does not, as a rule, attack a perfectly healthy person."

The lesson is plain. Try to avoid colds, but if a cold occurs, get off the feet, and give the body its best chance to prevent an attack of pneumonia. Should pneumonia occur, the heart will have some reserve power with which to fight it.

Task of the News Editors With War and Elections

Somebody has been asking what it was with which the newspapers used to fill their columns in the old days—that is, before last September. Now we have a couple of wars, a couple of elections, and all the odds and ends of the news of the world, and it seems to fit without crowding. How come?

The wire services and the telegraph desks have the answer. Every day's newspaper represents the survival of the fittest. The news that is important is carried and published, and second-rate material sinks without a trace. Moreover a war gives us a new set of standards of importance in news, and stories which a year ago would have rated banners and front-page place now can be dismissed with a couple of paragraphs and a small heading.

The newspapers print all they can get about the war which is new or illuminating, and readers would not be satisfied with anything less. The election is different. Every candidate naturally believes that his lightest word is a pronouncement of rare merit and should be printed, but at the latest count the candidates were approaching the 600 mark and their words per day are literally beyond computation. Thus the newspapers have to concentrate on the leaders, the local candidates, and even so they have to guard against repetition, try to pick out that which is new and striking.

In a sense the newspaper is a vessel of infinite elasticity: there is always room for the "big" news, because values are relative and the little stuff finds its level But as the big things pile up, wars and elections and such, the necessity for close and skilful editing is emphasized if space is not to be wasted and essential points missed.—Ottawa Journal.

Newspaper the best medium

Various authorities on advertising have of late expressed the conviction that newspapers remain the best medium through which to advertise wares of every description. The latest witness in behalf of the daily journals is Mr. Francis E. Ingalls, of the Lincoln Co-operative Bank, of Lynn, a busy manufacturing city in Massachusetts. Speaking before the mid-winter conference of the American Savings and Loan Institute at Pittsburgh, Mr. Ingalls asserted that newspapers provide the best advertising medium for savings and loan banks. "We need," he continued, "to make newspaper advertising "a live and vital force in our savings and loan programs." This testimony from a banker is no new thing for bankers have long recognized the value of publicity in the press for banking service, including the largest loans. Everybody reads a newspaper, not only for its record of the day's doings in the world, but for its advertising. Mr. Ingalls uttered other good advice when he urged adherence to truth in sales promotion literature. The public quickly learns to shun what is false and the advertiser who seeks to fool the people with his wares is headed for failure. True advertising yields returns, a fact which advertisers know. The Bureau of Advertising, Canadian Daily Newspapers Association, reports that Advertising lineage in 60 Canadian daily newspapers, representing approximately 85 per cent of total circulation, shows an improvement of 2.2 per cent. for January this year as compared with January, 1939, and an increase of 5 per cent over the corresponding month in 1938. This is not only a sign of trade improvement, it is also testimony to the truth of the belief that advertising pays, and pays best when the newspaper is the medium, as Mr. Ingalls, the American banker, declares.—Montreal Gazette.

Canadians Led At Paardeburg 40 Years Ago

By The Canadian Press

Daily news despatches on the First Canadian Division training in England for the Western Front recall that a first contingent from a younger Canada was making Empire military history 40 years ago on the battlefields of South Africa.

The South African, or Anglo-Boer War, 1899-1902, opened Oct. 11, 1899, following a dispute between the South African and British governments over excessive taxation of "uitlander"—mostly British—minorities in the Transvaal and Orange Free State republics. Immediately the Boer forces invaded the neighboring British possessions of Natal, Rhodesia and Cape Colony.

A British advance under Lord Roberts, starting Feb. 18, 1900, from Klip Drift in the Orange Free State was climaxed by the historic attack at Paardeburg by the Royal Canadian Regiment in the darkness of early morning, Feb. 27. It was followed the same day by the surrender of the Boer general, Pier Arnoldus Cronje, with his force of 4,000 men and heavy wagon transport.

Confidence Regained

Paardeburg was the first decisive British victory of the war. It retrieved army prestige that had suffered severely at Magersfontein, where General A. G. Wauchope was killed and his Highland Brigade decimated and Colenso, where the British lost 10 precious guns.

Also Cronje's surrender at Paardeburg occurred on the 19th anniversary of the British defeat and the death of General Sir George Colley at Majuba Hill (Feb. 27, 1881). Majuba and the pacification policy of the Gladstone government ended British sovereignty in the Transvaal at that time.

The Royal Canadian Regiment was commanded at the victory of Paardeburg by the late Lt.-Col. W. D. Otter, afterwards Major-General Sir William Otter. Writing in 1934 of the battle in the light of a generation of developments, a Canadian editor said: "In this engagement Canadian soldiers won for themselves and for their country undying fame. But Paardeburg, as a military incident, is becoming very remote, and lives chiefly in the memory of those who took part in the grim struggle on the banks of the Modder River. While the Boers were fairly well entrenched, the attacking force, led by the Canadiens, had little cover and the battle was a long-distance rifle duel, ending after a week's fighting in the splendid rush of the Boer laager (corral and camp) at dawn on the day of victory."

From 800 to 900 Canadians were engaged in the battle, also several Imperial regiments. In nine days of fighting Canadian losses were 20 killed and 90 wounded including seven killed and 30 wounded in the final stage, Feb. 27.

While Paardeburg was a decisive British victory and "broke the back of the Boer offensive," it didn't by any means end the war. Mafeking was still under siege and 50,000 determined, well-armed and mounted Boers in many separate commandoes roamed the country in guerilla warfare, eventually ending with the treaty of Vereeniging, May 31, 1902.

Among the Boer leaders in the last two years of the fighting was the gallant 30-year-old commandant, Jan Christian Smuts. Fifteen years later in the course of the First Great War General Smuts commanded the British South African Union troops in the capture of German Southwest Africa and served with the armies of the Empire in France.

On Jan. 27, 1940, Prime Minister Smuts led the British South African government to victory in the Union's House of Assembly at Cape Town, and confirmed the nation's allegiance to the allied cause against Germany in the present conflict.

Sir John Reith Had Unique Way

London, (CP)—A crisp sketch of Sir John Reith, new Minister of Information, is contained in R. S. Lambert's new book "Ariel and ail his Quality." Lambert, as editor of "The Listener," a British Broadcasting Corporation publication, worked under Sir John for 10 years. Mr. Lambert now lives in Toronto, Canada.

He writes that Sir John practised interviewing as a fine art when he was at the B.B.C. In Sir John's room at Broadcasting House were three grades of seats: A hard, solitary chair for nobodies or offenders; an upholstered armchair for senior subordinates or persons of standing; and a sofa reserved for high dignitaries or for individuals whom the interviewer wished to impress by close personal proximity.

Lambert writes: "Sometimes Sir John would be so absorbed in his work as to remain unaware of the entry of the person he was to interview; he would continue to write or ponder, whilst the other stood undecided near his table."

The author, recounting his own interview with Sir John, recalls that among the questions the former radio chief shot at him was: "Do you accept the fundamental teachings of Jesus Christ?" And Sir John added: "In my opinion no man can do good work—at any rate in this corporation—unless he has got religion."

Sir John and his chief assistants, according to Lambert, seemed to think that it added somehow to their dignity not to recognize even their senior assistants when they came across them.

Winter Day's Air Fighting Coolish Work

This is one of a Canadian Press series written during a visit to Royal Air Force stations behind the Maginot Line.

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in France—(CP)—You can't always be sure these days that a clump of trees in a field in eastern France is just that. Closer inspection may reveal that the trees are merely props concealing the presence of an airfield, from whose surface at any time bombers may take off for Germany.

On one of winter's coldest days with the mercury close to zero, newspaper correspondents representing the Empire were driven from the Royal Air Force operations headquarters in France to see a bomber squadron on such an airfield.

A small radio mast was neatly camouflaged by trees. Branches helped hide the whereabouts of the big Blenheim bombers scattered singly across the field. Here and there were machine gun nests ready to deliver a message with a sting to any intruder venturing too close.

Newly-built sheds, partly hidden by a genuine clump of trees, housed the operations staff. Beside one plane the correspondents noticed canisters of incendiary bombs, hidden beneath a pile of logs.

It was easy for the newspapermen, shivering in the bitter wind, to sympathize with the mechanics toiling over the engines of their machines, which stand out in the open at all times. Wrappings of blankets and use of hot oil help to keep the planes ready for prompt action. Some of them, we were told, had been in the Kiel Canal raid on the second day of the war.

Crude Quarters

Men of the bomber squadron were billetted in a village a mile away. Most of them were living in a stable. We stumbled up an outside staircase to see their quarters over a sheep pen. The men slept in home-made beds, the frames formed of small sapplings and the "mattress" consisting of a criss-cross of heavy cord. Oil stoves supplied warmth. Rifles and respirators were slung on the walls. Photographs and sketches from illustrated magazines provided a domestic touch.

The men billetted here had only one complaint. Just across the road was a sugar beet factory. They said the smell was unbearable when it was in operation.

Pilots and observers from bases like this have reached heights of as much as five miles on photographic reconnaisance flights over the heart of Germany. They have encountered temperatures inside their cabins as low as 20 below zero which formed layers of ice on the floors.

Against this cold their only protection is warm clothing as the old electrically heated flying suits have been discarded on the ground a break in the wiring would leave the men without warmth. In addition to physiological conditions imposed by high altitude flying the men face special problems arising from their height and speed.

Bombers flying 200 miles an hour at 20,000 feet must release their missles 2 1-2 miles from their targets. To ensure accuracy the aimer must begin sighting three miles from the point at which he will release the bombs, a total of 5 1-2 miles from the target. In such a flight it is essential for the pilot to maintain a straight, level course, facilitating the aimer's work, despite distraction of enemy anti-aircraft fire.

North's Winter still Beckons Veteran Airmen

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, (CP)—Every once in a while as the Director of Plans and Operations for the Royal Canadian Air Force looks over the map of Canada his eyes pause at a big, nearly blank area to the north of the Province of Quebec.

Wing Commander Thomas A. Lawrence, who holds this position, lives and works with the map of Canada but he has a special fondness for the Hudson Strait area. He spent 14 arduous months there 12 years ago but as long as he is responsible for planning Canada's home air defences, he has little chance of getting back.

"I would like to spend another winter there," he says. "It was hard going but we had good times. The air is crisp and fresh in winter. You feel full of life and you are free to move about. The summer is wet and sloppy and the mosquitoes are big and savage. I would like to go further north, up to Ellesmere and Devon Islands. Weather and flying conditions are more consistent up there and there is a fair proportion of game."

Yearns For North

That Arctic experience stands out in Wing Commander Lawrence's memory but his service in the Air Force extends over 22 years. He is now one of the flying executives of the Air Force, for, although he works in an office in downtown Ottawa, he slips out to an air station whenever opportunity offers to fly one of the modern aircraft which differ so much from the ships he flew in the First Great War and for many years after.

But the man who flew over the fighting front in France in 1918, who fought in the ranks with the infantry and who has flown over every part of Canada on peacetime duties, would like another winter in the wind-swept wastes of the far north, would like to renew acquaintances with the Eskimos, his silent companions on many journeys by air and dog-team.

Wing Commander Lawrence commanded the Hudson Strait Expedition of 1927 and with a party of some 40 white men spent 14 months gathering all the information needed about the feasibility of navigation in that chilly stretch of water which provides the shipping route into Hudson Bay. That information was of great value in making it possible for ships to travel safely into Churchill, load grain carried northward over the Hudson Bay Railway and transport it across the Atlantic.

Leisurely Ground Work

Flier Lawrence liked mushing as well as flying. One of the experiences he recalls with pleasure is a seven-weeks trip by dog-team, with an Eskimo companion, around the shore of Ungava Bay from Port Burwell to Wakeham Bay, more than 700 miles. The purpose was to observe conditions along the shore at leisure, thus supplementing the results of air observations.

"During the whole period we had no sickness among the white men of the expedition except one case of scarlet fever which we were able to isolate," he said. This he regards as evidence of the healthful character of the northern climate. The source of the scarlet fever was never determined, but some dusty old books, gathered from attics and taken north to provide reading matter in the long Arctic winter nights were suspected.

One white men become hardened, they can endure more than the Eskimos, is Lawrence's experience. The natives require more food and do not thrive on the white man's rations. They require their fat meat to fortify them against the cold.

The call of duty in 1914 was the start of Wing Commander Lawrence's varied and adventurous career. As a youth from Barrie, Ont., he joined the 76th Battalion and went overseas where he was transferred to the Fourth Battalion.

On Air Board Staff

After the war Wing Commander Lawrence joined the staff of the Air Board, the first civil aviation authority established in Canada and continued flying. Later, when the Royal Canadian Air Force was established, he was granted a commission in the permanent force.

For three years, from 1932 to 1935, he served as liaison officer for the Royal Canadian Air Force at the Air Ministry in London and on returning to Canada was placed in command of the school of army co-operation at Camp Borden and Trenton.

When war threatened at the time of the Munich crisis, in September, 1938, he took a squadron to the Atlantic coast for coastal patrol and defence duties.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The Russian army maintains continuous pressure on the hard-fighting Finnish forces in the Karelian Isthmus in an endeavor to capitalize on recent advances.

The Red army has everything to gain and nothing to lose by keeping up the pressure. Prospect of the capture of Viipuri, once one of the chief Finnish cities but now abandoned and shattered by bomb and shell, is attractive in itself. It would give the Communist propaganda organs something to crow about and describe as a great victory.

More important is the value of keeping the small Finnish army constantly occupied and preventing it from obtaining needed rest and reinforcement and from strengthening the defences of its new positions.

Also important is the weather factor. Spring is coming soon and when the ice on the lakes and rivers melts and the frozen land thaws out movement will be difficult if not impossible for Soviet tanks and supply trucks.

The period of the spring breakup is certain to bring operations to a halt for a time at least. After the ground dries out there may be another story although military authorities familiar with the type of country over which the war is being waged are inclined to the view winter is the best time for offensive operations

The country is well-watered. Much of it is low and marshy. Roads are few and road-building takes time, and much effort. The new Finnish defence line appears to follow a chain of lakes across the Isthmus and is shorter than the fortified line from which the Finns have been driven.

Real Horrors of War Will Break Early This Spring Is Prediction Of Various Government Leaders

(By the Canadian Press)

Ominous predictions that the real horrors of war will break this spring and happier references to such things as the visit of the King and Queen last spring provide sharp contrasts in subjects discussed before the voters in the current Dominion election campaign.

Through the speeches of several cabinet ministers recently has run a thread of warning that the conflict soon will break in all its fury and last night Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Transport Minister Howe again mentioned it as a probability.

At Prince Albert, Sask., where he was nominated again as Liberal candidate, the Prime Minister said the spring will bring an offensive on a scale "to make us suffer such agony of spirit as we have never known." Mr. Howe said in a London, Ont., address that Canadians will know "before long" that they are in the war.

Personally Extended Invitation

But the Prime Minister did not dwell at length on his "total war" theme and instead made a rather unique hustings speech, mentioning the royal visit. He told his constituents that he was partly responsible for the visit of Their Majesties and personally extended an invitation to them at their coronation.

Mr. Mackenzie King also referred to his own health and said "I never was in better shape in my life."

To national government advocates he said that "bitter and contemptible" words would not make for unity and co-operation and he said that no word of his during the campaign would alienate the friendship and co-operation of any man or woman of any political party. He said later, however, that this was not to be construed as indicating a coalition government plan.

Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, said in an Ontario network broadcast it was a "pitiful exhibition" for Prime Minister Mackenzie King to deal in his public addresses with a comparison of Canada's defences in 1939 against those of 1935 because the hope of general disarmament did not fade until 1935.

Drew Denies Statement

He charged that some Canadian troops still are drilling without uniforms and without proper arms. It was untrue that three contingents of Canadian troops crossed the Atlantic fully clothed and fully equipped.

"You should never be forgiven, Mr. King, for playing with the truth so carelessly when the lives of men are at stake," he said. "You know they were not fully equipped. You know they are being equipped in Great Britain."

Col. Drew said that his speech had been "heavily censored."

"For that reason it may at some points be disconnected," he said. "Free speech has become a vital issue in this election. You are prevented from hearing much that you should hear over the radio.

"It therefore becomes important that you attend public meetings so that you may hear the real facts fully and frankly discussed. There has never been a more critical election in Canadian history, nor business more important to you personally than the government of Canada. It is your duty to play your part in assuring good government by assisting some candidate and exercising your democratic right to vote."

Same Procedure Followed

(James Moore, Manager of Station CFRB, said the same procedure was followed in the case of Col. Drew's address as in the case of all radio addresses.

(The management of a station reads and interprets an address according to the defence of Canada regulations, Moore said, and if the speaker is not satisfied with the station's ideas of what is censorable he can appeal to the official censor for the district. He said that "that is the procedure followed in Col. Drew's case.")

Challenged to Name Liberals

Labor Minister McLarty, speaking in a 30-minute Ontario network broadcast at Ottawa challenged Conservative leader Manion to name the "best Liberals" who are ready to join in forming a national government.

Mr. McLarty referred to Dr. Manion's Winnipeg statement that many of the best Liberals, who are outside the government, were ready to assist in formation of his proposed national government.

"If these best Liberals outside the King government are ready to join with him in forming a national government, is there any reason why he should not now name them specifically?" asked the minister. "Who is ashamed? Is he or are they?"

"Is not Dr. Manion asking the Canadian people to give him a blank cheque as to who will form his government on the one hand and what program that government proposes on the other?" Mr. McLarty asked.

The minister mentioned the sudden dissolution of parliament last Jan. 25 and said that it is the supreme right of any government, if doubt is cast upon its interpretation of the people's will, to appeal at any time to the people themselves.

Supports Highway Project

Support of the British Columbia-Alaska highway and opposition to annexation of the Yukon by British Columbia were expressed at Dawson City, Y.T., by Hon. George Black in formally opening his campaign as a national government candidate in Yukon constituency.

Mr. Black was Speaker of the House of Commons during the Conservative Government of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett and in the last parliament Mrs. Black represented Yukon constituency because of Mr. Black's illness.

If Canada accords highway access to Alaska, said Mr. Black in announcing his platform, Canada in return should be granted similar concessions across the Alaska panhandle to the Yukon.

At Niagara Falls A. A. Heaps, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation Member of the last Parliament for Winnipeg North, called the action of Prime Minister Mackenzie King in dissolving Parliament "contemptuous."

Called Autocratic Action

Mr. Heaps said he never had known of "a more autocratic action than the one taken by Premier King when he dissolved Parliament in the very high-handed manner in which he did last month."

"No man should deal with Parliament in the very high-handed manner which the Prime Minister did," he said. "If we are going to look up to Parliament the Prime Minister should set an example and he didn't do it on Jan. 25."

Canada's wartime defence regulations are necessary to prevent sabotage and so long as they are administered in the right "spirit" there should be no objection, Justice Minister Lapointe said at Edmonton.

He said that while he is Minister of Justice he will administer the regulations so that enemies of the country can do no "dirty work."

Canada United

Replying to criticism of Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Conservative Minister of Trade, that the regulations are "arbitrary and dictatorial," Mr. Lapointe said the government always uses discretion according to the information available when dealing with cases coming under the regulations.

Canada was more united now than at any time in its history and Prime Minister Mackenzie King was responsible for that unity, Mr. Lapointe said.

He stated Conservative leader Manion had charged he and Mackenzie King had jointed in a "conspiracy" to wreck national unity. The only conspiracy he knew of was Dr. Manion's conspiracy against himself. Every speech the Conservative leader delivered was decreasing the Canadian people's estimation of Dr. Manion's ability.

Dissention Will Reign is Claim

Dissention will reign if Hon. R. J. Manion and a National Government are elected, Revenue Minister Ilsley said at Liverpool, N.S.

Dr. Manion would find it difficult to obtain unity, Mr. Ilsley said, with the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation opposed to sending troops overseas and Social Credit members favoring conscription. Also, there was no representation of the French Canadian people in Dr. Manion's ranks.

Although conscription would "jeopardize" the future of Canada, the Federal Social Credit party had urged conscription in the House of Commons, M. J. Coldwell, National Chairman of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, charged in an address at Calgary.

The Social Creditors were the only party to urge conscription, he said. "Intelligent leaders of all parties are agreed that conscription of men would split this country from end to end . . .

Must Get Together

"Mr. Blackmore, Social Credit leader, stated that conscription of finance, industry and men must go together," said Mr. Coldwell. "Support, therefore, for Social Credit and new democracy candidates will be considered to have been a vote for an all inclusive policy of conscription."

"We can assume before this war is over, all countries of Europe will be in it," Transport Minister Howe warned a Liberal campaign meeting at London.

His plea to Canadians to bend every effort to support the Dominion's role was climaxed with the admonition, "we'll all know we're in the conflict before long."

"But I believe," he said, "that we'd rather face the present danger than the shadow of war which has hovered over us in the past few years. We Canadians believe it is better to see the thing out—win or lose—and get the question of peace settled for our lifetime."

Gaining Strength Steadily

The Transport Minister said that Germany outnumbers the Allies in numbers of armed men, and in airplanes but while she has a "powerful military machine, France and England are gaining strength steadily," he said.

Mr. Howe claimed that for the first time in the history of this country, "we can say that Canada is adequately defended from the air." Outlining air advances since 1935, he stressed that the personnel of the Royal Canadian Air Force is now "9,000 highly-trained men," and that well-equipped squadrons have been built up for the defence of both coasts.

On taking office the Liberal Government of Prime Minister Mackenzie King undertook to restore Canada's position in aviation and progress "has been spectacular," Mr. Howe said.

A system of modern airports had been completed by federal co-operation with municipalities and by federal construction away from municipal centres, Mr. Howe said. In all the Transport Department built or improved 109 airdromes, including 15 principal airports, 23 secondary airports and 50 emergency landing fields on the trans-Canada system and 21 airports on branch lines.

He forecast a service from Toronto to London and Windsor. This would start shortly and ground work is being laid for another service connecting principal Quebec cities.

BERLIN VISITED BY R.A.F. PLANES

in Heligoland Bight.

Planes believed to be German flew over the Thames Estuary today calling forth the fire of anti-aircraft batteries. There was no raid alarm.

Other German planes attacked fishing craft off the Yorkshire coast. The R.A.F. fighter planes were seen over the coast for several hours.

The skipper of one boat said a plane fired a burst while flying at 50 feet and later dropped a bomb which lifted the small craft out of the water, although not damaging her.

The Ministry's communique follows:

"In the course of the night aircraft of the Royal Air Force carried out a series of successful patrols and reconnaissance flights over enemy territory.

"These included standing patrol of the Frisian Islands for the purpose of restricting activities of enemy mine-laying and aircraft reconnaissance patrols over the Baltic ports of Kiel and Luebeck.

"Our aircraft further reconnoitred a number of important towns in northwest Germany, including Hamburg, Bremen and Hanover and the ports of Cuxhaven and Brunsbuettel in Heligoland Bight.

"In addition our aircraft again penetrated central Germany and reached Berlin.

Berlin, March 1—(AP)— DNB, German news agency, claimed German air bombers attacked "numerous" British warships, convoys and armed merchantmen this morning and that several large vessels were reported sunk.

The place of the attack was not given.

The agency said direct bomb hits "caused the sinking of several ships, another was set afire and the convoy was dispersed." (Passed by censor.)

BLANSHARD MAN SHOT AND KILLED

McWilliams told police that after he and Carter stepped from the car at their farmhouse the form of a man evidently had been concealed behind another car parked nearby emerged from the darkness.

"The man said 'Where have you been tonight?'" McWilliams told police. "Then there were two shots close together. I saw Amber fall over and the man who fired the shots ran down the laneway."

Died in Own Home

Frank Ruston, a neighbor who was visiting the Carter home, helped McWilliams bring the wounded man into the kitchen where he died a few minutes later.

Provincial officer John M. Douglas of Stratford, notified that Carter had been shot, also was informed that a man, believed to have gone berserk, was running about the neighborhood with a shotgun. Provincial officer Douglas communicated with the district office of the Provincial Police at Kitchener and a detail was despatched to the scene.

Provincial officers John Fulton and George V. Clubbe of London, responding to instructions received in the telephone conversation, stopped at the home of Crawford.

Crawford accompanied the police to the scene of the shooting where he was placed under arrest by Provincial Officer Douglas.

Gun Taken by Police

London Provincial Police are said to have taken possession of a double-barrelled shot gun and then turned it over to Provincial Officer Douglas.

Body of Carter was taken to funeral parlors at St. Mary's. The body will be viewed today by a jury under Coroner Dr. J. G. Grieve of Stratford.

The shots were fired at a distance of about 30 feet from the victim. One struck Carter in the chest and the other in the left leg.

Crawford, a married man, until about a year ago had lived on the Embro road where he had farmed.

Carter was born at Clandeboye in Biddulph Township, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Carter. His widow and two children, James and Alice, survive.

Collegiate News

Girls' Athletic Society—February 28, 1940.

The girls' basketball is still being played off and the finals will be started Thursday, the twenty-ninth. On Monday after four XIIB defeated XIC with a lead of about 24-4. The same night XIE defeated XIII grade. On Tuesday XIID and XIIA played off; with XIIA winning over XIID in a totally unexpected victory with a score of 17-8. In the second game XIIB defeated XIIIA and B with a score of 14-6.

Thursday XIIA and XIE play off, both teams having six points, as they have won three games. On Monday next XIIB and XID with eight points, having won all their games, play off and the following Wednesday or Thursday the winners "fight it out" for the school championship.

May the best team win.

NAZI ATTEMPTS TO BLEED BRITAIN

Britain believes that reprisals would be launched against Berlin and other objectives.

"The comparatively late start made by Britain and France in "serious air rearmament" has become an advantage.

Germany's big air fleet already is built, said an aviation observer, and consequently it is becoming obsolete while the Allies "have gained in modernity of design what they lacked in numbers.

He commented that this air war is being fought "on drawing boards and in design shops no less than in the field."

Already, it was asserted, "crack fighters and bombers in service on both sides are outmoded by newer types on the stocks" of factories, and "Germany is faced with rapidly growing obsolescence of thousands of aircraft so far used only as threats."

In an effort to keep abreast of design, Germany is reported to have developed a new Heinkel plane powered with new type Daimler-Benz motors producing 4,500 horsepower and 350 miles an hour speed.

British designers say they will have an answer to this or any new German craft, "just as our Vickers Spitfires and Hawker Hurricanes have mastered existing Heinkels and Dorniers."

(Germany yesterday celebrated the fifth anniversary of its air force reorganization in contravention of the Versailles Treaty. Air Marshal Goering, in an order of the day, praised German aerial power.)

Attacks Expected.

Even though mass bombing attacks have not developed, the British government has been periodically warning the public that an aerial "blitzkrieg" might come with the warm weather of spring, and has continued to move hundreds of clerks out of London to disperse the machinery of government.

Meanwhile, the war office expects the army to absorb about 250,000 men monthly throughout the summer. Some of higher medical rating than required for the army will be drafted into the air force and the navy.

Many will be kept in vital civilian jobs under a national registration program. Plans are being made to employ at least 1,000,000 women in munitions factories and other war industries.

The extent of expansion of the fighting forces on land, sea and in the air, is cloaked in secrecy, but the navy is known to be adding more than a ship a week to its effective strength.

It has borne the brunt of the war thus far, with thirty naval vessels lost and about 3,000 men killed in the struggle against mines and submarines, surface craft and aerial raiders.

Lupe Velez and Leon Errol in a comedy scream scene from "Mexican Spitfire," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

The convoy system, adopted at the opening of the war, has guarded about 9,000 merchantships, with the loss of only a score.

The cost of this and other war efforts is not often mentioned these days. Taxation takes at least 37 per cent of everyone's income to help provide the $25,700,000 a day which the war is costing, but Britons accept this as part of their inevitable burden.

Value of Education Stressed by Speaker

Questioned by one of his listeners as to whether they should enlist, Mr. H. C. Hudson, Ontario Superintendent of the Canadian Employment Service, Toronto, told a student group at Albert College on Wednesday night, "that the decision rests with you. If you think your capacity fits you for better service at home, or if you feel that you can serve better by joining His Majesty's Forces that rests entirely with the individual."

Mr. Hudson gave an address on "Twenty Years Looking for a Job," in which he outlined the difficulties experienced in modern times by uneducated youths who apply daily for positions at the many employment offices in the dominion.

He mentioned some of Canada's great men, who rose to the heights of business and other phases of life minus an advanced education. This is impossible in these days, he said, as employers demand at least some secondary education on the part of applicants for positions.

Mr. Hudson spoke to his audience, some 45 students in the Common Room of the college, and following his address was taken on a tour of the buildings.

PERSONALS

Mrs. Claude D. Tice is confined to her home seriously ill.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Logie left yesterday for Toronto, where they will take up residence.

Aircraftsman Donald McKee has returned to his home in Belleville, after spending a few days with friends in Lindsay.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Mallory of Trenton, have arrived home from Miami, Florida, after spending the winter months in the South. The roads north are in a terrible condition, Mr. Mallory stated.

Miss Isobel Bryant of Galt, whose marriage to Ted Harris of this city, takes place on Saturday, has been guest of honour at several delightfully arranged showers in the past few weeks. Miss Anne and Jessie McKenzie entertained several girl friends at a personal shower; Mrs. Herbert Rosenburg gave a pantry shower; Mrs. T. Bertram cream and green enamelware; Mrs. F. Gaskin a combination kitchen and pantry and Mrs. A. Parsons, a Pyrex ovenware shower. Last Saturday Miss Bryant's co-workers of the C. Turnbull Co., presented her with an ivory tri-lite lamp and book-case.

The following ex-students and friends are returning for the Albert College At Home, which is being held tonight for ex-students and students:—Misses Joyce Porritt, St. Hilda's College; Doris Parker, Oakville, Ont.; Marg Kinney, Trenton; Shirley Bonter, Trenton; Wanda Morton, Fort Erie; Jean Brown, Fort Erie; Alex Gilmore, Tamworth; Gladys Stephen, Campbellford; Phyliss Newman, Picton; Betty Weaver, Trenton, Queen's University; Nancy Davern, Wellington; Fred Newman, Picton, Queen's; Walter Fraser, Picton; Wayne Simmons, Trenton; John Campbell, Coppercliff; Houston Hanlan, Ottawa, O.A.C.; Gordon Bartlett, Dunnville; Harvie Allan, Dunnville; Bob Rutherford, Fergus; Fred Beatty, Fergus, U. of T.; Bill Hockin, Dutton, U. of Western Ontario; Jack Munro, Timmins; Pete Ostrosser, Timmins; Don Blackman, Timmins; Dave Mady, Garson Mines, Queen's; Keith Lougheed, Fitzroy Harbour, Queen's; Jack Finlay, Toronto, U. of T.

Charming Springtime flowers made an attractive setting for the afternoon tea held yesterday at the home of Mrs. A. R. Cameron, under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Church. Mrs. Cameron was assisted in receiving by Mrs. J. Fargey, president of the Society, and Mrs. W. J. Walker. Mrs. C. Bateman and Miss Blair were conveners of the enjoyable affair. Mrs. A. B. Baird invited the guests to the tea room. Snapdragons and daffodils were used on the tea table at which Mrs. E. Ford and Mrs. H. S. Graham poured tea. Mrs. V. Weir, Mrs. K. Watt, Mrs. D. Pepper and Mrs. W. Mantle were tea assistants and Mrs. P. Ranson replenished the tea table. Mrs. E. Bigden and Mrs. G. Sherry were in charge of the popular home cooking table and Mrs. D. L. Fleming acted as treasurer for the afternoon.

Welsh Patron Saint Is Honored Today

Today good Welshmen celebrate St. David's Day, the festival of the patron saint of their mountainous country. Today the red dragon flag of Wales flies over the battlements of Carnarvon Castle. It was on this date that the Princes of Wales would wear the uniform of the Colonel-in-Chief of the Welsh Guards, on the hat of which would be the real green leek that commemorates the time when the mountaineers were victorious over Englishmen in a battle that centred about a Welsh kitchen garden.

St. David was an extremely powerful saint who died in 544 A.D., after a life that certainly was filled with learning and popularly was also filled with miracles. He was Archbishop of Caerleon.

The medieval chroniclers say that a white dove sat on his shoulder when he preached, and if he held an open air service an earthquake usually accommodated him by raising the ground under his feet for a temporary pulpit.

The first of March, then, is peculiarly the Welshmen's day. On this date, and wherever they may be, sons and daughters of the Little Principality do honor to the memory of Saint David. Gatherings are usually held at which oratorical tributes are paid to the homeland and the haunting melody of its sentimental and patriotic songs entrances the hearers.

In earlier days Wales had her full quota of wandering bards and minstrels; and today she may boast of poets who keep alive the old traditions and orators whose eloquence seems to be a racial gift.

All Welsh people have a talent for vocal or instrumental music, and the laborer in a mine may have a voice that would thrill any fashionable audience. In their own quiet way, Welsh folks are intensely attached to the homeland and its delightful folklore; hence it is with full hearts that they assemble on St. David's Day to honor their national day and renew fealty to the country of their birth.

Keeping Feet Happy

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO YOU love to play with your toes, little one? And, after indulging in this diversion, do you find that you can scarcely hobble because of all the pain that is lodged inside your shoes? Same old story. Chiropodists shake their heads, wonder why women try to remove corns and callouses with manicure scissors or Daddy's razor. Serious infections have resulted. Foot specialists deplore the practice because of dangers it entails.

An ingrowing toe-nail is a particularly interesting subject for home surgery. The more the afflicted one digs out the hardened tissue, the more it will bank up. If she cuts down the nail at the side, it may never be normal again. The remedy for this condition is a shoe that does not press against the flesh. It isn't that the nail grows in, but that the cuticle banks up until it becomes inflamed and painful.

Nearly all women are fussy about shoes, but their fussiness is concerned with appearance rather than comfort. Which seems pretty silly, since a shoe can be smart and sensible, give ease and satisfaction. There are hundreds of lasts from which to choose; the right one can be found.

A little overweight is nothing to worry about if proportions are good, carriage erect and vibrant. The silhouette is the important matter.

A daily work-out of ten minutes will keep one from putting on adipose upholstery, if backed up by diet restrictions. No need of starving. There are plenty of good things to eat that won't put on an ounce of flesh—lean meats, fish, poultry, green salads, vegetables that grow above ground, fruit, cottage cheese, buttermilk, fruit juices, tomato juice.

JOAN BLONDELL . . . has no foot troubles to mar her sparkling smile.

An easy exercise for getting a whippet waistline: Stand erect, hands clinched and stretched out on a level with the shoulders. Lift one hand high while lowering the other. Stretch with a gosh-awful muscle pull.

French Restaurants Serve Nice Variety Medium-Priced Food

By W. M. McGAFFIN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, March 1—(AP)— After six months of war Jean Frenchman remains a celebrated individualist. His war machine has been constructed to operate with a minimum of home front regimentation.

Alone among the three major belligerents, this nation of gourmets is not handicapped by a rationing system in a favorite recreation—eating.

Here is a sample menu of a medium-priced restaurant, the prices roughly converted to the equivalent in cents:

Consomme 12 cents, hors d'oeuvres 16, half grapefruit 14, fresh salmon 26, half lobster 24, trout 20, foie gras 24, a dozen oysters 24, roast chicken 24, pheasant 26, lamb 10, minute steak 28, peas 10, string beans 10, spinach 8, potatoes 8, green salad 12, tart 10, eclair 10, fruit compote 10, ice cream 8, assorted cheese 12, coffee 6, bread and butter 8. Butter is served in unlimited quantities.

Another great interest—feminine fashions—is also comparatively unfettered. Madame can still dress smartly because the government depends on the health of the nation's economic life. It encourages dressmakers particularly for their sales abroad bring in foreign exchange.

If Jean owned a car before the war he can continue to get gasoline for a certain amount of pleasure motoring. Other opportunities to amuse himself have been expanding since the early September shutdown.

Jean leaves the nude shown to the English and crowds the cafes to listen to pianists strumming Beethoven and Viennese waltzes. The curfew has been moved up from 11 p.m. to midnight.

Since the subway shuts down at 11.30 p.m. to save fuel Jean doesn't stay till closing time unless he wants to take a chance on walking home. Taxis are still inexpensive, but have diminished by 3,000 since the war.

Jean would just as soon get to bed early anyway since he works 60 to 70 hours a week now in a factory compared to 40 before. Madame is working harder, too, doing anything from building airplanes to ploughing spring fields.

About 2,500 francs ($55) approximates the average monthly salary. At the market the French must pay double for many commodities.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

When Marriage Depends on Getting a Job

So many young men write to this column that a job would turn this world, in spite of all its horrors, into a Paradise. They've got the girl, their families approve and in a good many cases they've got the ring—but no job.

So, suppose this morning we have a little sales talk on the subject of job getting. Ever since I had lunch with those two indefatigable optimists who wrote "We are Forty and We did get Jobs", I've been under the impression that you can land a job if you go about it the right way.

For instance, these women said that when they went after a job they persuaded the pundit who had the job to give, that they were not looking for work as much as he was looking for someone of their knowledge and ability.

I remember one particular instance, in which a job was offered to demonstrate a new type of refrigerator. Not only did they study up everything connected with that refrigerator in advance, but they went around to places where rival refrigerators were sold and discovered everything available about the rival coolers besides. When they applied for the job they simply overwhelmed the new refrigerator agent with what they knew concerning refrigerators past and present, and especially the one about to be put on the market.

A current magazine reprints an article on: "They Pick their Jobs—and Land Them". The marketing clinics have followed the lines of the two women who wrote "We are Forty and We Did get Jobs". These clinics say "provided you are qualified, the key to the job you want lies in your own hands—if you only knew it."

This is no glittering Ham-and-Egg racket. It's plain every-day truth. In cold-hearted New York, where job competition is ruthless, thousands of people—all sorts of people —have found the keys that unlock doors, providing them with a living.

The question of job-getting boils down to this: How much do you know about the job you want to get? A couple of weeks ago, at one of Mrs. Roosevelt's press conferences, the guests were two women trying to reduce that terrific quota of jobless youth, amounting to between four and a half to five million.

It seems that a tremendous proportion of jobless girls went to be stenographers and typists, yet they have not the equipment for these white-collar jobs. A good many have not been through high school, and they are weak on the absolutely necessary secretarial foundations—a working knowledge of the English language, spelling punctuation and sentence structure. To get a secretarial job, it's necessary to have accomplished the ground work, and one must study to acquire these qualifications.

There is a strong feeling among girls against being domestics. Statistics prove that domestics marry, though the palm for marriage has to go to waitresses. Goodness knows why, except that feeding a man probably suggests domesticity. Domestic servants marry to a greater degree than those who hold down the white-collar job.

We seem to have been discussing jobs for women more than jobs for men. But the same rule holds good for both. If a boy has left school in one of the lower grades, he's got to study up if he wants a white-collar job. The tragedy of these odd-man jobs is that so many boys, who have not completed a grade school education are after them.

"Dig out your hidden assets. Everybody has them," says the Man-Marketing Clinic, founded by Sidney Edlund. The clinic teaches people to see themselves as they would like their employer to see them.

These clinics are cropping up all over the United States. The original clinic started in New York, has resulted in the founding of others, in Chicago, New Orleans, Fordham University, and at the University of Oklahoma. Ten more are in the making elsewhere.

A group of youngsters opened their own clinic for mutual criticism and aid. Now that clinic is closed—because they all found jobs.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Club Relationship Reveal Manners

It's a familiar saying that the perfect clubman is the perfect gentleman. It's equally true that the perfect clubwoman is the perfect gentlewoman.

Every relationship we have toward our club is indicative of every relationship we have toward everything else in life. When we go from our homes to attend a meeting of our club, our manners, good or bad, go with us, and we reveal ourselves as courteous women, or, as quite often happens, women who are occasionally thoughtlessly discourteous.

Let's consider some of these special times that need our alert and considerate attention. If, for example, you are the new member, attending your first meeting, bear in mind the value of the first impression. Be well-groomed; dress appropriately, according to the nature of the club and the time of the meeting.

Respond to all introductions simply and graciously. But remember that you are the one being received; do not be too informal in what you say or do.

Step lightly and slowly as you are making your club contacts. Begin at the beginnig; learn the customs and traditions and aims of the club. These are what give the personality. You may be an original person, full of ideas, but you should guard against the temptations to set them forth at the first meeting. Wait until you see and understand what's what and why. An opportunity will doubtless come when your ideas will be very valuable, perhaps when you have been made a member of a committee. The woman of taste and discretion waits for this opportunity to play a more active role than is appropriate at the first meeting, or one of the first meetings.

If you are appointed to serve on a committee, or are asked to take part in any other duty, or club activity, you accept graciously and willingly, and in your co-operation and active participation show your well-directed sense of responsibility to a trust.

Be punctual at meetings. Stop talking when the gavel sounds, no matter how important or engaging is the conversation you are having. This does not mean merely lowering your voice, or changing to a whisper. It means giving instant and courteous attention to the president or chairman. Give you unshared attention to the reading of all reports (no matter how statistical!), and carefully follow all discussions. Show the chairman or speaker, by the enthusiastic expression on your face, that you are giving her your alert and thoughtful attention. If you have ever been a speaker at a club or anywhere else, or if you have even the slightest realization of the difficulties of being a speaker, you will know the joy and spiritual fortification of a mannerly, intelligent, enthusiastic listener!

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Lead Poisoning

There are various factors that make chronic lead poisoning an illness so dangerous that children often die of it. One is that the child may have taken in the lead in such small quantities that the onset of the symptoms is very gradual, and the doctor isn't called until the child is in convulsions or a coma.

Another factor is that when the doctor isn't called until this stage, diagnosing the lead poisoning is frequently very difficult. He may suspect what is the matter, but on searching for a possible source of the lead, he may be baffled by the fact that there just doesn't seem to be anything around that the child could get it from.

I remember once almost losing a baby just because of this. The baby had symptoms that pointed to lead poisoning, and it was a very sick child. Yet, I hadn't found any source of the poison, and I had almost come to the conclusion that my diagnosis must be wrong. The child was breast fed, it didn't have access to metal toys, or painted ones either. Then I made a discovery—the mother was in the habit of using a nipple shield. Sure enough, when I examined it, it was lead. Then I knew for certain what the baby's trouble was, and as a result he lived.

In treating chronic lead poisoning, your doctor will prescribe a diet containing a minimum of calcium, for we have found that calcium tends to cause the lead to be deposited on the bones and so it is prevented from passing out of the system.

Anyone with lead poisoning should be given plenty of water to drink for this helps wash out the poison. Your doctor will know, too, how to treat any paralysis present if the illness has gone that far.

Every parent should keep on the lookout for toys that might cause lead poisoning in a child. Remember, a baby will nearly always put his toys in his mouth. Ordinary paint contains lead. Fortunately most toy manufacturers today use paint that contains no lead. However, it is wise to make certain that the toys are safe. Also to see to it that a child doesn't get a chance to gnaw on painted articles like chairs, beds or beads.

We have always guarded the Dionne Quintuplets againts lead poisoning. They had enough to go through without that, I can tell you. We watched their toys and saw to it they didn't get any metal or painted ones.

We had out in the play yard what we call a "gymnasium", but which was really a sort of frame for the children to climb around on. It was just natural wood because I had forbidden paint on it. You see, the children, as they cut teeth, would bite on the wood in this structure. However, one of the attendants thought the "gymnasium" looked untidy, so he started out to paint it on his own hook. Fortunately I saw him before he got very far and I made him go at it with sandpaper and clean off every bit of paint.

4 Feared Drowned Discovered Safe Clinging to Tree

One Missing of Party in Car Which Overturns When River Dike Bursts—Breaking of Dike Believed to Have Relieved Pressure of Backwater and to Have Saved City of Colusa, California, 8 Miles North

Meridian, Calif., March 1 (AP)—Four of the five persons who were thought to have drowned in a flood early today, were found safe in a tree surrounded by swirling water.

Six persons were thrown into the flood when their automobile overturned as they fled when a river dike burst.

Of the six, only one, Mrs. Frank Fleharty was missing, and members of her family believed she drowned.

Rescue workers said the other members of the family clung to the tree branches from 2 a.m. until 8.15 a.m.

The breaking of the dike was believed to have saved the city of Colusa, about eight miles to the [illegible]ed the pressure of back water at Colusa, about tight miles to the north, after the Sacramento River had crested at 29.5 feet, higher than the record flood of 1907.

GENERAL WILCOX VISITS H. & P. E. BATT. IN CAMP

Has Meal With Men Which Was Served by Madoc and Stirling Soldiers

NO FORMALITY

(By Harold Fair)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 1.—(CP Cable)—The Canadian Legion Club was wished "every success" today by Lady Patricia Ramsay — Princess Pat to thousands of Canadian soldiers of the last war—as she officially opened the hostel which has been providing troops on leave with homelike comforts for the last couple of weeks.

Before a distinguished gathering, which included Hon. Vincent Massey Canadian High Commissioner in the United Kingdom, and Mrs. Massey; Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, and Mrs. Anthony Eden, wife of the Dominions Secretary, Lady Patricia said "It is splendid that the men who fought in the last war should be doing all they can for the soldiers in this war."

Accompanied by Husband

Lady Patricia, who was accompanied by her husband, Admiral Sir Alexander Ramsey, inspected a guard of honor supplied by the London Association of Canadian ex-servicemen.

Mr. Massey hailed the club, as one more link in the chain of service which is being created in London for the Canadian troops.

Others present included Field-Marshal Lord Milne, Grand President of the British Empire Service League; Major-General H. D. G. Crerar, senior officer of Canadian military headquarters here, and a group of his assistants; and several officers of the French military mission.

Throughout the tour there was no semblance of ceremonial. The Inspector General wanted to see the men in their everyday routine job and that is what he got—right from fatigue duties to full-dress field manoeuvres.

At the camp of the Royal Canadian Regiment, first call on today's program, the General strolled along the parade grounds as the squads went about the business of Bren-gun drill, raking the "enemy" divisions with feigned bursts of fire.

Listened to Lecture

He stood by while another company listened to a lecture on the theory of small arms and grenades while a short distance away a platoon was receiving expert instruction in defence against gas an din personal decintamination.

A short motor ride into the countryside brought the Inspector General to the 48th Highlanders settling defensive works, consolidating outposts and bridging streams. Orders barked at intervals as groups of men, whose uniforms were blended so perfectly with the terrain they could barely be see, deployed cautiously on protective patrol.

On the way to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment operations General Wilcox halted briefly by the roadside to chat with Major H. P. Seymour of Montreal, whose fourth field company of engineers was "digging in" and putting finishing touches to yawning tank traps.

In nearby woods the official party encountered the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment engaged in large-scale field operations. They had just reached a set objective and were refueling themselves with food as the General arrived.

Dishing out rations from huge dixies were Private James Young of Madoc and Stanley Dainard of Stirling, Ont.

"You've made me feel hungry too" the General said as he helped himself to a sandwich at an improvised serving table. He stayed to see the men advance to their next objective in the manoeuvre, which the General described as "very good."

WAR BRIEFS

Paris, March 1 (AP)—The loss of two cargo boats by German submarine and mine action the scattering of a small German troop concentration on the western front, and a German-French exchange of scouting flights were reported today.

The freighters, both sunk in mid-February, were the 3,754-ton P.L.M. 15, torpedoed with 15 crewmen lost, and the 5,391-ton P.L.M. 25, which struck a mine and lost four men.

This morning's communique said:

"A quiet night on the whole. Patrol and firing activity in the Lauter region."

Berlin, March 1 (C.P.-Havas) — Today's communique from the German high command said:

"In the west there was local artillery and reconnaissance activity. Despite bad weather, the air force on February 29 carried out reconnaissance flights over eastern France and the North Sea".

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Mar. 1 (CP)—Five women drowned last night when their automobile, lost in the blackout, plunged into the harbor while they were returning from war work at the Belfast naval canteen.

London, March 1 (CP)—Two lifeboats from an Italian steamship reported mined in the North Sea reached the Suffolk coast today, bearing 14 men, one dead and the others suffering from exposure.

The name of the ship was not immediately disclosed.

The survivors said 11 other crew men were missing and a coastal lifeboat put out to seek them.

London, March 1 (CP)—Sir John Anderson Home Secretary, reported to the House of Commons today that 62,244 Germans and 11,989 Austrians had registered with the British police.

"I think it is a mistake," he said, "to assume that every German domestic servant is a menace to the security of this country."

He had been asked whether 250 German servant girls would be required to leave the vicinity of the Aldershot military area.

London, March 1 (CP) — Sir Percy Ashley, cotton controller, said today Great Britain might shift some of her wartime cotton purchases from the United States to Brazil if a shortage of Foreign Exchange compels her to seek a substitute source for her present North American supplies.

Amsterdam, March 1—(AP) Anti-aircraft batteries in the Amsterdam and Utrecht areas today fired at unidentified foreign planes.

London, March 1—(CP) — Pictures were released today of the Royal Navy's newest defensive device—a fleet of fast motor torpedo boats called "sea wasps."

Armed with torpedoes, depth charges, and machine guns, they are capable of 50 miles an hour and are intended to guard the coast and English channel routes to France.

CHEESE FACTORY TO OPEN MONDAY

Frankford Factory Will Accept Milk From Outside Range of Patrons—Earliest Opening in Years

In view of district farmers' willingness to co-operate with the government's appeal for the production of more cheese, and the existing high price of the commodity, officials of the Frankford Cheese Company will start 1940 manufacturing operations on Monday, Russell Embury, cheesemaker, announced today.

The date of commencement of operations establishes a record for the company, being two months in advance of any previous starting date, he said. Next year, Mr. Embury added, the plant will be in twelve-months-operation if the current year's early starting meets with any degree of success.

Centrality of location in the large surrounding districts, from which the supply of milk will be drawn, will enable farmers outside the range of the regular patrons of the company to bring their milk to the plant. Milk producers of Murray and Sidney townships, who sell their milk ordinarily to other factories now non-operating, will be asked to contribute their production, Mr. Embury stated.

The existing price of cheese which ranges between eighteen and nineteen cents, should urge producers and patrons alike to further cheese-producing efforts, he added. Thus far, no other factories in this district, most of which are located in rural sections, have signified their intentions of starting manufacturing operations before regular Spring dates.

ALCOHOLIC DRINKS AVAILABLE ONLY 3 DAYS A WEEK

Wartime Program for Civilians in France Announced by Government

SUPPRESS LUXURIES

Paris, March 1—(AP)— Three "prohibition days" a week were decreed today as the government announced details of its wartime program for civilians

Among 17 decrees published in the official journal were these:—

Public sale and consumption of alcoholic drinks to be forbidden on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Pastry shops to be closed Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

A general census as a prelude to the issuance of ration cards to be completed by April 1.

Ministries were authorized to issue notices later of products sale of which will be restricted. First commodity to be rationed is expected to be bread.

The decrees are part of the general belt-tightening program announced yesterday which included a gold revaluation bookkeeping operation that put a 22 per cent higher value on France's gold supply and provided nearly half of a 50,000,000,000 franc (about $1,226,-250,000) addition to her war funds.

Other decrees suppressed the sale of luxury chocolate and breads; ordered prices maintained at the level of Sept. 1, 1939; provided for rationing of gasoline on a monthly basis; ordered restaurants to limit meals to two plates of which only one can be meat.

Revalue Gold Reserve

Levelling the gold reserve at the new rate of 43 3 francs to the United States dollar, instead of the old 36.8, brought the official value more nearly into line with current exchange quotations

(Parity of the franc as of Nov. 12, 1938, when it was devalued, was approximately 2.65 United States cents, but foreign exchanges yesterday quoted it at about 2.23 cents.

(The franc was quoted at 2.47-1-4 cents Thursday in terms of Canadian currency, or about 40.4 francs to the dollar.)

Finance Minister Paul Reynaud said the old rate was "below the real value of the gold" held by the Bank of France.

A decree published today in the official journal—which makes it law—tells how Reynaud and the Governor of the Bank of France worked out the 50,000,000,000,-franc transaction:—

The bank agreed to lend the state 20,000,000,000 francs in currency, taking as security non-interest-bearing bonds renewable every three months until the loan is repaid. This involves no gold because it will be paid in paper money.

The bank also agreed to lend the state 30,000,000,000 francs in gold against three-month treasury bonds bearing ordinary interest.

Reserve Raised in Value

The gold reserve of 97,273,000,000 francs was raised in value 21,400,-000,000 francs, however. Thus only 8,600,000,000 francs of the 30,-000,000,000-franc loan actually comes out of the newly-valued gold stocks.

The loan will be put in the exchange stabilization fund, Reynaud said in announcing the measures last night. In addition, he said, "a fraction of our war chest" of Bank of France gold will be put aside as a secret fund to finance purchases from abroad.

About 400,000 men will be sent to the farms, through the assignment of farmers of the military classes of 1912 to 1915, inclusive, and Polish and Czech refugees.

New decrees also provide for coarsening of bread with bean meal closing of cake and pastry shops three days a week, placing of women in munitions plants, abolition of customs duties on farm machinery, government distribution of fertilizer, and easier taxes for landlords who are losing rents because of the war.

LIFEBOAT FAILS TO FIND STEAMER

London, March 1—(CP)—A lifeboat which had put out from the Yorkshire coast returned late today after an unsuccessful search for the Latvian steamship Katvaldis, 3,206 tons, which had reported she was being bombed and machine-gunned by two German planes.

BRITISH LINER PYRRHUS SUNK

8 Men Lost as 7,418-Ton Vessel Sunk by Enemy Action

London, March 1—(CP)— The British liner Pyrrhus, 7,418 tons, today was reported sunk "by enemy action" off the west coast of England with eight men lost.

GRAF SPEE SOLD FOR SCRAP

Montevideo, Uruguay, March 1—(AP)—The hulk of the scuttled German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee has been sold by Germany for an undisclosed price to Julio Vega Helguera, Montevideo salvage firm.

The vessel was sunk by its crew in Montevideo's outer harbor in December after it was trapped by three British cruisers. Blown up, she smouldered for days.

Russian Contribution to Finnish Defence

The contribution was not made voluntarily, needless to say, but it is very acceptable just the same. The white-clad Finn is examining a multiple machine gun used for anti-aircraft work, particularly against diving bombers or hedge-hopping planes. It was part of the equipment captured by the Finns and later used against the former owners.

PREDICTS RADIOPHOTOS FROM AIRPLANES

This photo of the late King Edward VII, INSET, was transmitted from Paris to London November 8, 1907, and is one of the first pictures ever sent by wire. The sender was Dr. Arthur Korn, ABOVE, a recent emigre from Germany, who is now teaching higher physics in the department of electrical engineering of Stevens Institute of Technology, in Hoboken N.J. The scientist, who sent the first photograph over wire in 1904 and whose research laid the groundwork for the technique of modern radio and telephotography, predicts that the forthcoming military development of the war will be the radio transmission of photos from airplanes in flight. When he wired the first photo to England from the continent in 1907, his invention became a sensation in Europe.

YUGOSLAV POLICE ON TRAIL OF RING OF PROPAGANDISTS

Ring Uncovered by Arrest of 10 Germans in Slovenia on February 23

RADIO CONFISCATED

Belgrade, March 1—(CP—Havas)—Yugoslav police revealed today they are on the trail of a nation-wide ring of spies and propagandists established by the German Gestapo in this country.

The ring was first uncovered with the arrest of 10 Germans in Slovenia Feb. 23. It was later found to have ramifications. Its task was to keep tabs on the German-speaking minority and to relay information of a military economic nature.

Rotterdam, March 1 —(AP) — Police today announced the arrest of two men and the confiscation of a secret radio transmitter allegedly used to send weather information to Germany for the benefit of military fliers. The prisoners were listed as H. Dreves of Essen, a German, and a Hollander identified only by the initials P. B.

NAVAL BATTLE IMPENDING OFF URUGUAY RUMORED

Montevideo, March 1—(COP — Havas)—Rumors of an impending naval battle along the Uruguayan coast continued to be heard today.

A radio report said a German pocket battleship, a submarine, and a large merchant vessel had been observed off the coast of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil. Two French and three British warships were reported in the vicinity, near Punta Del Este.

Oppose New Set Bomb-Proof Locks for Panama Canal

Washington, March 1—(AP) — Congressional Opposition to a new set of bomb-proof locks for the Panama Canal, an administration leader said today, may bring a special presidential appeal for funds.

President Roosevelt's budget asked $15,000,000 to begin work on the locks, but the item was deleted from a war department bill by the House of Representatives appropriations committee.

The House backed up its committee yesterday by voting only $850,-000 to prepare plans for the locks. It did not debate the larger sum.

A usually well-informed source told reporters there was a good chance that President Roosevelt, who visited the canal this week, will send a letter or other message to the Senate urging restoration of the $15,000,000 fund.

Advocates of new locks argue that since they would be reserved for United States vessels, they would be in less danger of sabotage than the present locks, open to ships of all nations.

Hitting Woman on Head No Cure for Nervousness Says Magistrate

Hamilton, Ont., March 1—(CP)—Leslie Woodhouse, 35, who allegedly struck his wife three times over the head with a brass candlestick, was given an additional remand for sentence on a charge of assault with intent when he appeared in court today. He is to appear on Tuesday.

In pleading for leniency, defence council William Schreiber stated that the act was done in a moment of great stress and strain caused by the criticism of a nervous wife.

"Bashing a woman over the head is no way to cure her of nervousness," said the magistrate.

MRS. JAS. MURRAY, CANNIFTON ROAD, ATTACKED IN HOME

Tells Police She Was Bound and Gagged and Hit Over Temple — Rendered Unconscious

FOUND BY NEIGHBOR

Found with her hands and feet securely tied with rubber-covered radio wire and gagged Mrs. James Murray, 101 Cannifton Road, told police of being struck over the left temple, following which she knew nothing until she regained consciousness in her home late last evening. When she returned to her senses and found herself trussed up with her hands tied behind her back, her feet tied together and gagged, Mrs. Murray had presence of mind enough to roll off the chesterfield upon which she had been resting when attacked, and gaining a partition wall, kicked it with sufficient force so as to arouse next door neighbours.

Robert Royle, 103 Cannifton Road, and neighbour, heard the thumping on the wall and upon investigation in the Murray home released the woman and notified police authorities. Although a physician was not summoned Mrs. Murray showed outward signs of having been attacked as a large bruise was observed over her left temple. Subsequent investigations revealed the sum of $5.00 had been stolen from Mrs. Murray's purse, which had been left in a nearby bureau drawer. Constables Taylor and Ellis searched all of the surrounding district, but could find no evidence of Mrs. Murray's assailant. "We could find no foot prints in the snow leading from the rear of the house", Constable Taylor reported.

Reclined on Chesterfield

Mrs. Murray told police she had reclined upon the chesterfield and shortly after 10.30 p.m. thought she heard some person walk along the side of the house. "The next thing I knew something hit me over the forehead. I don't remember anything further until I gained consciousness and found myself hands and legs tied", revealed Mrs. Murray, who could throw no light upon the solution of the attack. The only drawer found disturbed by the police was the one in which Mrs. Murray kept her purse and money.

Today city police continued their investigations when Sergt. Arthur Harman found the print of a shoe in the snow directly outside of a window looking into the room in which Mrs. Murray was attacked. Chief Kidd further revealed that two persons had already been questioned regarding the attack and that an arrest is imminent. In the meantime the two pieces of radio wire are being held as material evidence. No weapon which might have been used to strike Mrs. Murray down was found by the police however. The injury sustained by Mrs. Murray was not serious.

Y.P.U. MEETINGS IN DISTRICT

Bridge St. Y.P.U.

Bridge St. Young People's Union held their regular weekly meeting Monday evening in the ladies' parlours with a good attendance.

The meeting opened with a short worship service conducted by Gordon Munn, Prayer was offered by the president, Perry Everett, after which the Scripture was read by Grace Fleming.

The remainder of the evening was under the Christian Citizenship group, Betty Anderson gave a very amusing reading. Albert Watson introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Pete Beach, physical director of Albert College. He chose as his topic "What it Means to be a Good Citizen." Mr. Beach also led the group in a lively discussion on this subject.

Gertrude Lazier moved her appreciation on behalf of the society for Mr. Beach's fine address, After hymn No. 6, the meeting closed with Mizpah benediction.

Melrose Y.P.U.

The regular meeting of the Melrose Y.P.U. was held in the church hall on Tuesday evening, Feb. 27, with an attendance of 27. The meeting opened with Hymn 168, "O God of Bethel," followed by the Lord's prayer repeated in unison. Alex. Allison read the Scripture lesson, John 9. The minutes were read and adopted and business was discussed. Due to the absence of the Christian Fellowship convener, all joined in the singing of several hymns led by the president. The remainder of the evening was spent in games which were enjoyed by all. The meeting closed with the hymn "Blest Be the Tie that Binds" followed by the Mizpah benediction.

Foxboro Y.P.U.

Foxboro Young People's Union was held on Monday night. Miss Edythe Cook arranged a very interesting program, consisting of a lovely story by Marie Bartlett, musical selections by James Ketcheson and a solo by Mrs J. Gowsell, Garfield Evans gave an interesting report on winter school and Verna Sherry led in prayer.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction. After the meeting everybody enjoyed a few games led by Miss M. Milligan.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

TEACHERS 'REMEMBER' FORMER PUPIL BY DESPATCH OF PARCEL

Teachers of Queen Alexandra School yesterday "remembered" a former pupil of the school, Private Sydney King, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, who is now in England with his unit.

Clubbing their funds they "made up" a substantial parcel which contained several items of comforts dear to the heart of a soldier and despatched it to the youth now serving his King and Country overseas.

H. & P. E. OFFICERS APPEAR IN PICTURE

Mrs Clifford Holmes, wife of Lieutenant Clifford Holmes, now in England with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, is in receipt of a handsome photograph picturing the King's inspection of the Signal Section of the regiment at Aldershot recently.

Major Howard Graham, second in command of the unit is shown walking with His Majesty, while Lieut. Holmes can be plainly seen standing at attention in front of his men. Other soldier residents of this district can be readily recognized, as can General McNaughton, commander-in-chief, of the Canadians.

In his letter to Mrs. Holmes, the officer stated that the health of the "troops" was excellent, and everyone was enjoying England. Lieutenant Holmes is now in charge of all messing operations of the regiment.

MILK PASTEURIZATION BECOMES COMPULSORY IN MUNICIPALITIES

Compulsory pasteurization of milk becomes effective today in a new group of Ontario municipalities, extending the area in which this health law as applied in October, 1938 by the authority of an Act of Legislature, passed in February of that year.

Included in the new list are Millbrook, Norwood, Marmora, Bancroft, Omemee, Cannington, Deloro Frankford, Hastings and Orono.

Many other villages throughout the province have been brought within the scope of the legislation making compulsory the pasteurization of milk.

MARCH USHERED IN LIKE LAMB

Regardless of what tradition may have to say on the matter or of what unpleasant things may be in store for us during the latter part of the month, Belleville residents welcomed with open arms the March "lamb" which was ushered in this morning with a promise of milder weather ahead. All thoughts of the old adage, "in like a lamb out like a lion," were dispelled by the beautiful sunshine and although the air was raw this morning, the water was running at noon and once more thought of spring being not far away presents a cheery aspect.

PRECIPITATION IN FEBRUARY LESS THAN YEAR AGO

The total precipitation during the month of February, 1940, lacked exactly 2.96 inches of equalling that of February, 1939, according to the record kept at the filtration plant. During the month just passed only 1.022 inches of rain fell as compared with 1.38 inches of one year ago. The fall of snow was also considerably less this year than last, with February seeing nineteen and three tenths inches as compared with thirty-seven and three tenths of a year ago. The total precipitation during the month was 2.15 inches as compared with 5.11 inches during February, 1939.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE ON FRAUD CHARGE

Peter Johnson, Tyendinaga farmhand, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's police court facing a charge of fraud. Johnson pleaded guilty to an attempt to pass a worthless cheque, amounting to $10.81.

Acting Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson informed the court that it was Johnson's first offence of any description. A year's suspended sentence followed.

An assault case, that resulted in the parties concerned being bound over to keep the peace, and a drunk constituted the remainder of the court. Robert Pringle, Ormonde Butler and Alan Sprague, all local barristers, appeared on behalf of clients today.

TO CONTINUE GARBAGE DUMPING IN RACEWAY

City Council took things mildly at committee meeting last night the only recommendation being passed for approval by council as a whole being that garbage be continued to be dumped in the old Walker raceway that parallels the Moira river along its east bank, until April 1st. This has been approved by the Board of Health following a request of City Engineer Charles Mott.

C. H. Simpson is Appointed Organist Of Picton Church

Picton — Miss Marguerite LaValle has resigned as organist of St. Gregory's R.C. church here and will be succeeded by C. H. Simpson of Picton. Miss LaValle's resignation was accepted with regret as she has given very freely of her time and talent in this and other capacities. Mr. Simpson will begin his new duties the first Sunday in April. He is well known in musical circles and gives instruction in music in twenty county schools.

Mrs. Howard Break went to Ottawa this week to be with her aunt, Mrs. T. G. Raynor, who has just returned from the hospital where she received treatment for a broken ankle.

Safety first was the topic of films which were shown to Picton public school pupils at the Regent theatre Thursday afternoon. They were shown under the auspices of the Ontario Safety League.

Picton Fair is to be held on September 28 and 29 this year. At a meeting this week the directors met to discuss a proposal that the fair dates be changed to include a Saturday and the directors were favorable to the change. A contract was signed to engage a larger midway than before.

Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Reycraft are in Toronto for a few days this week.

Miss Dorothy Culmer has returned after spending a few days with her father, Sgt. C. Culmer at the Infantry (Rifle) Training Centre in Quebec.

Mr. M. V. Dow has returned after a few days in Toronto where he attended a convention.

There are a number of cases of measles in the local regiment at the armouries, but so far there are no cases outside. The men are quarantined.

Mrs. John Reycraft is attending a hairdressers' convention in Toronto.

Mrs. W. W. Clow was surprised Wednesday even when friends gathered at her home to mark her birthday. Bridge preceded the serving of refreshments.

Mrs. Henry Williams is visiting relatives in Toronto.

Miss Mary O'Connor of Kingston, is a guest of Miss Freda Healey.

Louis Hollingsworth of the R.C. A. F., Trenton, is spending a week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hollingsworth.

Fire Dep't Honored By Prevention Assoc.

A beautifully embossed certificate from the headquarters of the National Fire Prevention Association, emblematic of honorable mention awarded to the Belleville Fire Department for outstanding work done here during Fire Prevention Week last October, was received today by Fire Chief William Lynch.

The certificate records the fact that the Belleville Department through its high efficiency and ability was awarded "Honorable Mention in Class C," in the record of merit for educational activities carried on during the week set aside.

A large red seal affixed in the lower left hand corner gives the document an official dignity. Accompanying the certificate was a letter of congratulation from the office of the Ontario Fire Marshal, Toronto.

PRESIDENT EXPECTED TO SIGN

Aboard U.S.S. Lang at Sea, March 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt nearing the end of a 15-day cruise in which he studied Panama Canal defences, expects to affix his signature tomorrow to the bill which adds $100,000,000 to the export-import bank's lending authority.

He advised lending administrator Jesse Jones to that effect today. The measure will make available to Finland $20,000,000 for non-military purposes.

March Fires Winning Goal To Defeat Rangers in N. Y.; Leafs Defeat Red Wings 3-1

Boston and Rangers Now Tied for First Place With Bruins Two Games in Hand

CANADIENS DEFEATED

Habitants Lose Last Chance to Make Playoffs by Dropping 4-2 Game to Boston

By JACK CALDER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

In this day of frantic scrambling and sudden change in the big business of hockey there stands out the remarkable career of Harold (Mush) March, whose entire time as a professional has been spent with Chicago Black Hawks.

The moon-faced right wingman from Silton, Sask., jumped to the National League from Regina's Dominion junior champions of 1928. He has been at Chicago ever since, always a steady workman and sometimes sensational. The biggest stroke he ever accomplished was a goal that brought the Hawks the world championship in the last game of the Stanley Cup series of 1934 against Detroit.

At the age of 32 he is still punching important ones, like the goal he fired last night to give Chicago a 2-1 victory over the Rangers at New York.

March whizzed in to pick up Bill Carse's pass through the defence and sink the winning goal late in the second period. Earlier Bill Thoms had scored for Chicago and Neil Colville for the Rangers.

Goodman Stars in Net

Through the third period goalie Paul Goodman rounded out another in his long string of sensational performances, nullifying the Rangers' pretty passing plays. His goaltending and the determined backchecking of the Hawk forwards kept safe their fourth victory in seven starts against the Blueshirts.

Boston Bruins leaped back into a first-place tie with the Rangers by defeating the Canadiens 4-2 at Montreal, their Sauerkraut line breaking loose to score twice in the final period. The Canadiens' sixth straight defeat left them almost without hope of a playoff spot.

In the first two periods the hapless Habitants matched goals by Dit Clapper and Roy Conacher with a couple by Tony Demers and Louis Trudel. Then Woody Dumart spent away on a lone rush to put Boston ahead with less than eight minutes to play and Milt Schmidt completed the scoring with the aid of his linemates, Dumart and Bobby Bauer.

Leafs Show Power

The Maple Leafs, gaining new life and confidence with the return of Sylvanus Apps to their lineup, defeated Detroit Red Wings 3-1 at Toronto. Magnificent rushes by Nick Metz and Wally Stanowski for goals in the second and third periods were the main Toronto blows. Lex Chisholm got the other Leaf goal and Cecil Dillon scored for Detroit.

Things started to look up for the Leafs when Apps came back after an almost continuous absence since Christmas through injuries. Sweeney Schriner, out for three weeks, may return to the lineup Saturday night.

RENEWS CONTRACT

Quebec, March 1 —(CP)— Del Bissonnette, who led Quebec Athletics to the Provincial Baseball League Championship last season, has renewed his manager's contract with the team, it was announced yesterday.

Bissonnette, formerly with Montreal Royals in the International League, signed last night during a meeting with the club's directors.

Detroit Red Wings

By Central Press Canadian

In his first few National league games Sid Abel, centre with Detroit Red Wings, was the centre of more than the usual amount of newspaper statements, claims and arguments. This all took place at the beginning of the season before the present one. Sid started off with Pittsburgh Hornets, Detroit farm, but injuries to Red wing players caused Jack Adams to bring him up to the major league. His first game was the first N.H.L. game he had ever seen and after a few tilts the enthusiastic Detroit manager was labelling him one of the greatest prospects to come up in years—later "refusing an enormous sum" offered by an unknown team for his services. About a month later Sid was back at Pittsburgh and since then, both this season and last, he has juggled back and forth, although Manager Adams hasn't backed up on his statement about Abel's potentialities. The hustling centre is only 21 years old and may yet make a prophet out of Genial John. Sid was born at Melville, Sask., and played his amateur hockey with Saskatoon and Flin Flon Bombers before turning pro with Pittsburgh, this being his second piece-meal N.H.L. season as well as his second pro season. With the Hornets last season he bagged 21 goals, with Detroit he got a goal and assist, both in league play and in the playoffs. Shoots left, weighs around 165 pounds.

New Haven Eagles Have Slim Chance To Catch Providence

(By The Canadian Press)

New Haven Eagles chances of catching the first place Providence Reds in the International-American Hockey League's eastern division are pretty slim but the Eagles are not going to quit trying without a fight. And the same thing goes for the Reds who are determined to hold on to the top spot it took them so long to gain.

Eagles and the Reds played a 5-5 overtime tie last night, making it two deadlocks in a row for the teams. Another tie went on record last night as Indianapolis Capitals and Philadelphia Ramblers waged a see-saw battle that ended 4-4.

The Eagles were ahead most of the game but Providence kept cutting down the margin, finally evening the score in the third period on veteran Jack Shill's goal. George Patterson scored twice for New Haven while Wilf Starr did the same thing for the Eagles.

Thirteen penalties including three majors, marked the rugged game that saw high-sticking among the players from start to finish. Eagles' business manager, Jacob Podoloff, said after the contest he would file a protest over the way it was handled by referee Shaver.

Cambridge Favored To Win Over Oxford

London, March 1 —(CP—Cable)— The eve of the Oxford-Cambridge boat race arrived today, almost devoid of the excitement traditionally attendant on the rowing classic in times of peace. But there was nonetheless a feeling of unostentatious pride that the race is being carried on despite the war.

This feeling was mirrored in the Times which said with the suggestion of a whoop in its usually sober editorial voice: "It is most reviving to the spirits that there should in spite of all be a boat race if only an ersatz one."

There has been little public interest in preparation for the race which will be rowed over the Henley course of something more than a mile and a half instead of the 4 1-2 mile course between Putney and Mortlake.

Cambridge which have won 48 of the races rowed since 1829—one was a dead heat and Oxford won 42—are favored to win tomorrow. The light blues have shown more life and drive in training and have only two freshmen in their boat against Oxford's four.

However the Canadian cox of the Oxonians, Henry Hicks of Bridgetown, N.S., pointed out his oar swingers have shown a longer sweep and smilingly expressed his confidence in the outcome: "It's in the bag."

NORWOOD BEATS ALBERT COLLEGE IN FIRST GAME

Albert Rallied in Middle Stanza to Score Four Consecutive Goals.

SCORE IS 8-6

Puffer, Star of Norwood Team, Accidentally Falls and Breaks Collar Bone

Rallying in the last few minutes of play Norwood High School defeated Albert College 8 to 6 in the first game of the Bay of Quinte hockey finals in the senior C.O.S.S.A. playdowns at the Hume Arena last night. Norwood now enjoy a two goal lead in the return game on their home ice Saturday.

The victory came rather costly for the "northerners," however, as they lost the services of their star player, "Mickey" Puffer, who fell as he scored his fourth goal of the game early in the last period and fractured his collar bone. Puffer was a driving force and leading feature with the Norwood kids and will be badly missed in his team's hunt for a provincial senior interscholastic hockey title.

Albert Rallies

Norwood led at the end of the initial frame by a 2-0 score, but Albert College rallied in the middle session and scored four consecutive goals as they held Norwood scoreless until Puffer scored late in the frame to leave Albert leading 4-3 at the end of the frame. Norwood out-scored the Alberts five to two in the last stanza, as the result of some poor goaltending and clearing on the part of the loser's goalie.

Puffer was undoubtedly the best player on the ice, as Johnson, Buck and Nelson stood out for the winners. "Lefty" Lougheed, Alf Moulden, Partridge, Wooley and Bailey looked the best for Albert. Norwood showed more willingness to play combination, while Albert College resorted to individual efforts for the greater part.

The line-ups:

Norwood High—Goal, Bongard; defence, Puffer and Gardner; centre, Johnson; wings, Buck and Green; subs, Morris, Nelson, Cole, Lobb and Lemon.

Albert College—Goal, Christian; defence, Lougheed and Francis; centre, Partridge; wings, Moulden, Latimer; subs, Downing, Crouch, Bailey, Wooley and Powell.

Referees—Carson, Belleville; Innis, Norwood.

Summary:

First Period

Norwood, Puffer (Nelson)	6.45
Norwood, Buck (Puffer) ...	11.15

Penalties—Lougheed, Nelson.

Second Period

Albert, Partridge	3.10
Albert, Lougheed	5.05
Albert, Bailey	7.30
Albert, Lougheed	12.45
Norwood, Puffer	15.55

Penalties—Cole, Johnson, Francis, Puffer.

Third Period

Norwood, Puffer (Nelson) ..	4.00
Norwood, Puffer	5.05
Albert, Moulden (Partridge)	10.10
Albert, Bailey	11.15
Norwood, Buck	14.35
Norwood, Buck (Johnson)	18.25
Norwood, Morris	19.10

Penalties—Lougheed 2.

Garcia Puts Title On Line For Armstrong

Los Angeles, March 1—(AP)— Seeking to advance still another rung up pugilism's ladder of fame, welterweight champion Henry Armstrong climbs into the ring today and faces Ceferino Garcia, claimant of the world's middleweight crown and one of the deadliest punchers in the business.

The fighters, clashing for the second time, are slated for 10 rounds with Garcia's New York-California recognized 160-pound title at stake, is to begin around 10 p.m. PST.

Promoter Charlie MacDonald predicted a crowd of 35,000 would jam Gilmore Stadium if the weather remains clear as expected, and gate receipts would flirt with the $100,000 mark.

On Being Well Dressed

AVOID WAISTLINE GAP

Your shirt should never show between trousers and vest. Wear full cut trousers cut high, and vests should always be long enough to cover the waist. Belts should find support above the hipbones, and not rest on them. Suspenders are not only made to hold up trousers, but today should be chosen for appearance as well, as with the growing favor of vestless suits, they are often seen.

STAN ROBERTSON WINNER OF MOST VALUABLE AWARD

Centre Star of Cornwall Flyers Voted Best by Experts Covering League

McCONNELL SECOND

Montreal, March 1—(CP)—Stan Robertson, centre star of Cornwall Flyers of the Quebec Hockey League, has been judged the player most valuable to his team and 1940 winner of the Kenneth Stewart trophy, it was announced here Thursday.

The announcement, made by league secretary Jim Foley, said that Robertson was awarded 47 points in the selections, made by sports writers assigned to Q.S.H.L. games in Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa and Cornwall.

Robertson, who won the league scoring championship, gained eight points more than Russ McConnell of Montreal Royals, winner of the trophy last season while playing with McGill Redmen.

Robertson came into the news at mid-season when he was sought by Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League but was refused permission by his coach to sign a pro contract.

The Cornwall ace and McConnell out-distanced the field. Tied in third place with 25 points each were Stan Pratt, Ottawa defenceman and Laurent Laframboise, Montreal Concordia centre star. They were five points ahead of Peter Jotkus of Concordia.

Here are the runners-up:

Jimmy Foster, Quebec, 17 points; Paul Bibeault, Verdun, Ulric Tondreau, Quebec and Paul Raymond, Royals, 13 each; Buddy O'Connor, Royals, 9; Bill Touhey, Ottawa, 8; Jack Brunning, Ottawa, 6; Bert Janke and Johnny Acheson, Royals, Jean Paul Elie, Verdun and Ray Malenfant, Quebec, 3 each; Lester Brennan, Quebec, Leo Lamourex, Cornwall, Trevor Higginbottom, Ottawa, and Roger Gaudette, Concordia, 2 each.

Recommend Concordias Be Suspended

Montreal, March 1 (CP)—An executive meeting of the Quebec Senior Hockey League will be held Saturday to decide what action will be taken in the case of Montreal Concordia, whose withdrawal from the ice during a playoff game Wednesday has brought a recommendation that the team be suspended from the playoffs.

President George Slater of the Q.S.H.L. said he had recommended Concordia be dropped from the playoffs. It was reported unofficially that another club, possibly Ottawa Senators who finished the season a point away from a playoff position, might be named to take the Montreal team's place should the Civics be barred from further play.

Coach Sylvio Mantha withdrew his team near the close of the first period of an opening playoff game with Verdun Maple Leafs. He claimed a goal making the score 3-2 in favor of Verdun was offside.

When the Civics refused to return officials faced off the puck and when Verdun had scored into the empty net awarded the game to the Leafs by a 4-2 count.

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

It was gratifying to observe the marked improvement shown by Bill Dennis' Belleville juveniles in their second appearance in the O.J.H.A. on Wednesday. The local kids showed a vast improvement over their initial effort here last Monday, all departments functioning in a more synchronized manner. Bill McBride and Ross Row set up a sturdy defence; this pair show a willingness to bodycheck and have stepped into the opposition with more gusto and sound legitimate bodychecks in their two O.J.H.A. games than was seen by all of the local O.H.A. squads combined this season. At present McBride seems to be more adaptable to rushing but Row will doubtless improve as he learns the game. Along the front lines, however, about two more speedy forwards are needed, although the initial line of Robertson, May and Barrett is beginning to take shape, while Goyer, Kellar and Rosebush are marking their checks stronger each time out. Incidentally Vern Goyer is but 14 years of age, but shows plenty of promise.

Like the majority of juvenile teams, however, the locals are weak on the scoring end, but it is while playing juvenile hockey the kids are expected to learn these tricks of the trade. Of course every person likes to win, but in juvenile hockey it is not always how many games are won but rather the knowledge gained and the improvement attained by the individual player that is primary. Their ability to profit by their own mistakes, coupled with the player's ability to absorb hockey knowledge as he progresses, is the secret of the success in juvenile hockey. In its first year of operation there is little doubt but that the Belleville Juvenile League has filled a long-needed vacancy in the sports set-up of this city. Another year more attention should be afforded these kids, the future hockey players of the community. In the meantime the Belleville kids will practice twice before meeting Regiopolis College (Kingston) in the second round O.J.H.A. playdowns here on Monday night.

Although the Winnipeg "Blue Bombers" won the Grey Cup, emblematic of the Canadian rugby football championship, last fall, the prospects of the continuance of the Grey Cup series is very remote today. The Western Canada Rugby Football Union refuse to accept the Canadian Rugby Union's recent suggestion of compromise regarding playing rules. The West have introduced the American style of wide open football, blocking and throwing passes anywhere behind the line of scrimmage. The C.R.U. met recently and asked the Western moguls to discard their unrestricted forward passing rule and the C.R.U. would increase the interference in the Canadian game to five yards in advance to the line of scrimmage. Joe Ryan, manager of the champion Winnipeg squad, openly stated he was in favour of retaining the present Western rules and the abandonment of the C.R.U. finals. "Our fans like our game and I don't think we can afford to give it up," prophesied Ryan.

Wm. A. Fry, of this city, was again appointed to the executive of the O.R.F.U. under the new leadership of President Rev. Father Lynch. Bill has been labouring for some years in the interest of rugby football in the Eastern Ontario district and well deserves the faith which the parent football body has placed in him. For instance no later than last week Bill was endeavoring to organize a junior O.R.F.U. group and has the support of Kingston sport scribe Bill Walshe in that community. "It begins to look as though we'll have to be satisfied with Interscholastic football for another year, but we are endeavouring to bring the secondary schools within the jurisdiction of the O.R.F.U." explained Mr. Fry as he added that the Kingston schools seemed to favour the idea. Efforts to interest the Belleville Collegiate and Albert College are the latest brain-child of Mr. Fry. Just how the C.O.S.S.A. mentors will accept the idea remains to be seen.

Do you remember when a scant 10,000 fans watched 270-pound heavyweight boxing champion Primo Carnera, win a 15-round decision over Tommy Loughran at Los Angeles six years ago tonight? The giant Italian was pushed off his throne three months later by Max Baer, and never really threatened again. Worn out, he now lives in Italy.

Victory came rather costly to the Norwood High School last night when they won 8-6 over Albert College in the C.O.S.S.A. senior Interscholastic hockey game here. The Norwood team lost the services of "Mickey Puffer," their star defenceman and leader, who sustained a fractured collar bone as the result of accidentally falling to the ice after shooting in his fourth goal of the game. The fracture was purely accidental but the loss of Puffer will be a serious blow to the "northerners." Some poor clearing and bad goal-tending lost the game for the Alberts. However, with Puffer out the Albert squad have an outside chance of beating Norwood in the return game. Norwood play a much better passing game, however.

SPORT SPICE — Be careful a rank outsider doesn't win the rich Santa Anita handicap on Saturday...Seabiscuit surprised the early-risers with a fast workout in the mud and "The Biscuit" does not usually like the heavy going....At least a dozen horses will face the barrier tomorrow... Tonight's Pastor-Savold heavyweight scrap was postponed as Savold is suffering from 'flu...Toronto practically cinched third place in the N.H.L. and it looks as though Les Canadiens will be the team left out of the Stanley Cup series. ... Henry Armstrong can make ring history if he can beat Ceferino Garcia for the middleweight title tonight. ... Armstrong held three titles at one time...Armstrong has a decision over Garcia, gained in the welterweight ranks of 1938... If the major leaguers are swatting the spheriod down south, can spring be far behind?

Joe Shortt 'phoned in today to say that the intermediate L. O. B.A. play-offs would get under way at the "Y" on Saturday night when the Belleville "Y" girls would meet the Peterboro district winners in the first round L.O.B.A. playdowns.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

LOCAL BAKERS TROUBLED BY OUTSIDE FIRMS

Meeting to discuss possible action to offset the low prices being made available to rural users of bread by itinerant peddlers, bakers of Belleville failed to arrive at a decision in the Y.M.C.A. last night.

Metropolitan bakeries are making inroads in retail trade in a large number of the smaller provincial centres, it was brought out, but the chief trouble lay in the fact that trucks placed on the road by small outside firms which "cut prices" to an alarming degree is having a detrimental effect on business of local bakers.

"We cannot compete with these prices and something should be done about it," a prominent city baker said. However, after lengthy discussion, the meeting closed with no definite action being taken.

Police Blotter

Clothesline thieves were reported active in the city during the past 24 hours. Yesterday city police were informed that five shirts had been removed from the family clothesline at 104 Catherine St. No other articles of the family washing were disturbed, however.

While patrolling his beat early today P. C. Ellis found a rear window leading into the Deacon Shirt Company premises, had been broken open. Mr. F. S. Deacon was notified of the damage and police investigations failed to establish whether or not a robbery had taken place until an inventory of the company's goods and stock had been taken today.

Only seven transients sought shelter at the police station last night.

Halifax Millionaires Favored to Win Maritime Titles and Maybe Allan Cup

Millionaires Confident of Victory Over Halifax Wolves in the Provincial Finals

(By Central Press Canadian)

Halifax, Mar. 1—Halifax Wolves, repulsed a year ago by Sydney Millionaires in their drive towards the maritime championship and the Allan Cup that hasn't been held in the east since Wolves won back in 1935, are ready again to meet the club that is hailed in many quarters as the greatest amateur hockey machine since Moncton Hawks.

In winning the championship of the Cape Breton Colliery league, Millionaires, coached by the old Moncton defenceman, Bill Gill, finished so far out front the other two clubs needed binoculars to see them. And in the playdowns for the Cape Breton championship they showed just as convincing form in knocking off Glace Bay Miners.

The Cape Breton circuit is essentially another Big Four. The local boys haven't been able to compete with the high-priced imports brought in from all parts of the dominion and the result is that at the close of the schedule only two native Cape Bretoners were still in the league.

Millionaires are paced by Tony Graboski, the league's leading scorer, who last year played with Hershey Bears of the Eastern United States Amateur league. Graboski and Doug and Roy Fritz who hail from Listowel, Ont., have been standouts among a collection of star performers all season.

Not Worried About Wolves

With the Cape Breton title tucked away, Millionaires are pointing for the machine title held last season by Saint John Beavers. After that it's on to the Allan Cup. Millionaires aren't worrying about Halifax Wolves.

Last year the speedy but youthful Wolves, handled by Jimmie Lortie of Montreal, were crushed 9-0 by Millionaires in the opening game of the Nova Scotia finals. Wolves showed a reversal of form in the return game, holding Millionaires to a 7-7 draw but went under on the round 16-7.

Wolves started out with much the same team this season. But the need for reinforcements was seen. Harry Butler, associated with the Wolves in the heyday of their fame took over the team. Pop Lawlor, a New Glasgow boy, who last year played at Noranda, was brought in to take a defence berth, and Charlie Copus, a local boy, was brought back from Cape Breton.

In their first game of the season, an exhibition affair, Wolves knocked the experts for a loop by taking the Millionaires into camp 4-1.

Subsequently they were beaten by North Sydney in exhibition contests but there was no erasing the memory of that win over the Cape Breton league leaders.

Ever since, Millionaires have been waiting to get another crack at the Halifax team. They hoped, they said, that Wolves would win the mainland championship and qualify for the provincial finals. That wish should soon be realized. Last week Wolves eliminated New Glasgow bombers and this week they eliminated the youthful Acadia University team. The heavier and more experienced Wolves had no great difficulty disposing of the collegians who were the champions of the Valley.

Then Halifax and Sydney fans can look forward to a series that should set box-office records. But though the scrappy Wolves will undoubtedly put up a better fight than they did last season, only the Pollyannas can see them taking the measure of the Millionaires.

Sydney Millionaires should make the maritime provinces' greatest bid for the Allan Cup since 1935.

AS ST. HYACINTHE'S DEFEATED BOSTON OLYMPICS

This photo of a fast hockey game between the Boston Olympics and St. Hyacinthe's of Quebec at Boston, Mass., was obtained by the amazing new light process invented by Professor Harold E. Egerton, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Between 1-30,000th and 1-100,000th of a second light exposure was used in snapping this and other photos of the game. Action was stopped completely, yet all the details of the subject were brought out. If you're interested in the score it was 5-2, in favor of the Canadian team.

On Second Thought

By J. A. WALDRON

The varied lights, the garnish colors, the vocal buzz and the jazz were there. As the evening wore loudness increased, and here and there the gaucheries natural to the class that had made the Great White Way a naughtily descriptive phrase were noted.

John Blount and his wife, from the hinterland, like so many others who have made this metropolitan locality profitable to caterers and their hangers-on, were guests. They had finished a dinner in some details strange to them and, seemingly bored by each other, were watching the mildly exciting scene from a small table that had two empty chairs opposite them. While the Blounts were sipping mild drinks ordered to insure their places—for although they took no pleasure in each other's company they found entertainment in the place—a waiter placed another couple at the table.

As the four began to scan one another a surprise developed. Blount blushed as he sought recognition in the second woman's face and bowed to her with an air of embarrassment.

The other man also showed confusion, for Mrs. Blount had recognized him, and he smiled weakly as he held out his hand to her.

A clumsy introduction followed, imitated by the woman, who nervously in turn made the men acquainted and included each other by incidental gestures.

The newcomers were the Ramsays.

And then embarrassment settled in all four.

Blount and Ramsay eyed each other guardedly, with a suggestion of antagonism, yet tried to make conversation on subjects not related to the situation. The women, more adept, disguised a possible hostility under superficial smiles, and chatted aimlessly.

But the immediate matter absorbed the men, and Blount returned to it.

"Seems we know one another—in a fashion," he said, "or rather that I know your wife and you know mine!"

"So it seems," replied Ramsay uneasily.

The women saw that the situation rested with them.

"Oh, I knew Mr. Blount in Chicago ages ago!" said Mrs. Ramsay.

"Yes," confirmed Blount, "we met in Chicago."

"And I knew Mr. Ramsay in Pittsburgh," volunteered Mrs. Blount.

"The lady is correct," Ramsay admitted. "That was the place, all right." And then to Blount: "So you're from Chicago?"

"Not lately. Used to live in the Windy City, as they call it. We're from Kalamazoo. That's my headquarters if I have any steady place. I've made a little money and like to look around. Do you like Pittsburgh?"

"Oh, I don't live in Pittsburgh now," returned Ramsay. "Located in Kansas City. I've got a few iron men, too. We're here on a little vacation."

"Same here. We all come to the big town."

"New York's all right, eh?" Ramsay cracked a smile.

"For a few days—yes, but not permanently unless you've got loads of money. Millions. Nothing less will do here. I'll take Kalamazoo for mine with my stake."

"What's the idea? A man can get along all right here on a fair income."

"Perhaps—in a way. As a piker. I'd rather be a big toad in a smaller puddle, as they say."

The woman had failed to negotiate mutual subjects, and tried to seem satisfied with things as they were, but unsuccessfully. Mrs. Blount was timing the music with an air meant to be unconcerned. Mrs. Ramsay, who had her vanity case out, was inspecting her latest powdering, forgetting that it was but a minute old. She seemed to doubt Mrs. Blount's detachment. Women have subtle ways, but these two could not summon ease.

The band crushed freshly, mauling an old dance melody into approved jazz.

Ramsay pulled himself together. "Perhaps you'd like to dance?" he ventured to Blount, indicating Mrs. Ramsay as a possible partner by a nod.

"I don't dance," replied Blount. "But Mrs. Blount lives on it. She's been ragging me about it. Want to renew old acquaintances?" he asked his wife.

"Do I? Why not? It'll be a pleasure I hadn't expected!" Mrs. Blount was on her feet at once.

"It's my middle name—dancing," said Ramsay, swinging around and taking Mrs. Blount's hand. "Excuse us, please!"

And the pair slipped into the dancing throng, while Mrs. Ramsay and Blount were a bit flustered at the suddenness of it.

But Mrs. Ramsay quickly recovered presence of mind. She took the seat Mrs. Blount had vacated. It was nearer Blount.

"So you're married again, John?" And she hitched a little closer, scanning the passing dancers.

"It appears you'll have to plead guilty too, Mary!" Blount encouraged her proximity by feeling for her hand.

"Yes. I married Ramsay a year ago. It seems an age!"

"So?"

"You know I took my maiden name when you and I were divorced and moved to Kansas City."

"And he doesn't know you were married before?"

"No. Why should I have told him?"

Now she moved a little nearer.

"I think he's a little jealous of you—thinks you're an old beau of mine?"

"Think so?"

"Yes. And you were a little jealous of him. You both showed it."

"But isn't dancing with my wife a funny way for him to show jealousy?"

"There are various ways of showing jealousy. You used to know a lot!"

Some of my guesses were wrong, Mary. I admit that in sorrow. I used to be more foolish than I am now."

He looked at her admiringly.

"Gee! You look good to me!"

Mrs. Ramsay's gratification sent the blood to her face. She tried to hitch a little nearer.

"Do I look as good to you as Mrs. Blount does?"

"Better! Beyond words. No comparison. But I wonder where they knew each other?"

"Pittsburgh. Didn't you hear?"

"I mean I wonder how well they knew each other?"

"Pretty well, I should say! Ramsay is a thirty-third degree philanderer."

Mrs. Ramsay looked again at the passing dancers.

"Just see 'em!"

Blount looked. Mrs. Blount and Ramsay glided past. They danced with the grace and intimacy of professionals—or lovers.

"They're enjoying it all right! Did Ramsay ever tell you he had been married before, Mary?"

"Yes. But I had to corkscrew it out of him. No detail. He may have been married more than once when I met him. He admitted having been divorced. But he wouldn't tell me who got the decree. Whenever he's angry he's a nagger. Says his first wife was more congenial than I am. And that she was better looking."

"She must have been a peach then!"

'John! Don't flatter me!"

"I'm not flattering you! As I've said, you look good to me!"

"Do you think Mrs. Blount is better looking?"

"Haven't I said the contrary? And I mean it. Tastes differ, of course. You used to say I was homely — when you were angry!"

"John! Please don't. We say things we don't mean when we are angry. I always thought you were an upstanding man. And you and I were so congenial — when you weren't jealous of me!"

"Then you and Ramsay aren't congenial?"

"Not so congenial as we used to be, John—honest!"

"Do you mean that?" Blount sighed. "Seems like old times — good old times—Mary, to be sitting here with you!"

He squeezed her hand. Her fingers closed on his. She hitched a little closer, looking furtively at the passing dancers.

"To tell the blessed truth, John—dear John — I've wished many times—"

"And I wish now. I know what you're thinking! And I wonder! Do you know, Mary, I feel like picking you up and running away with you!"

"John!" She sighed and looked again at the dancers. "John! If we only could!

Their hands remained locked. Both scanned the dancers. Mrs. Blount and Ramsay were not in sight. In fact they were not dancing. They had just emerged from the cloak room with their wraps.

"Isn't it lucky, Billy, that I always keep my check? It's a habit with me." Mrs. Blount was excited, and looked behind her nervously.

"A commendable habit, I'll say!" responded Ramsay. "Things are coming our way!" And then to a porter: "Did you get a cab?"

They hurried to the street, both looking behind and entered a taxi.

"I'm a little frightened, Billy!" said Mrs. Blount, as she settled back and felt for his hand. "And yet—"

"And yet what? We both wish we had never been divorced. What follows? Don't worry! We'll fix this up in some way. And didn't they look chummy, too?"

TORONTO STOCKS.

Toronto, Mar. 1 (CP).—Gold and Western Oil shares posted minor gains on Toronto Exchange today but golds turned soft later. Industrial and Base Metal stocks were narrowly lower at mid-day.

East Malartic, Preston, Wright-Hargreaves and Coniaurum weakened 5 to 10 cents. Among the penny golds Bidgood-Kirkland and Madsen were up. In the base metal group Nickel and Noranda were weak issues. Steep Rock was slightly stronger.

Food, senior oil, beverage and miscellaneous industrials recorded minor losses. Papers and banks were dull and steady.

In the western oil list narrow gains were boarded by Home Oil, Okalta and Calgary-Edmonton.

WALL STREET

New York, March 1—(AP) — A vanguard of rising shares lost direction today and the whole market slipped by fractions. Minus signs were plentiful toward the fourth hour when an initial small stream of buying orders for elected issues dried up. Moving downward were U.S. Steel, Sears Roebuck, Douglas, Martin, Consolidated Edison, DuPont, Allied Chemical Anaconda Chesapeake and Ohio, Electric Power and Light and Standard Oil of N.J.

Bonds and commodities tended a bit lower. Wheat at Chicago was on the decline.

Canadian issues were erratic. Dome mines and Canadian Pacific edged higher and Hiram Walker lost a fraction. Distillers-Seagrams was unchanged and Canada 4s, in the bond market, dipped 1-2 point.

Wm. A. Morgan, Veteran Engineer, Retires This Week

Engineer Wm. A. (Pierpont) Morgan, 47 Strachan Street, and veteran Canadian National Railway engineer, stepped down from his engine in the Belleville C.N.R. yards for the last time this week when he brought Train No. 404 to a stop and with reluctance descended from the "iron horse" only to be welcomed by a number of veteran engineer friends. Mr. Morgan was placed on the Canadian National retirement list on his 65th birthday, Wednesday last, having made his last run on that day.

Wm. Morgan, who was known all along the C.N.R. lines as "Pierpont Morgan", commenced his railway career in Belleville 33 years ago when he became a fireman on the old Grand Trunk. A railroader by love and heart Mr. Morgan fired the old type of hand-fed engines for nearly four years before he became a classed engineer in 1911, and ever since has driven in the freight service of the C.N.R., being in charge of the fast night freight service trains. He now joins the fraternity of retired C.N.R. engineers.

GERMANY IS AMAZED AT NORWAY'S VIEW

Berlin, Mar. 1 (AP). — German spokesmen expressed amazement today at the insistence of Foreign Minister Halvdan Koht of Norway that Germany cease her mine warfare.

"That's barking up the wrong tree" was the burden of the comment. "It was England which started the sea warfare. Let the neutral nations look to England for remedy.

"We have at all times favored strictly sticking to international law, but if the enemy constantly breaks this law we must devise counter measures."

The Norwegian foreign minister yesterday said Norway plans a new protest to Germany against attacks on Norwegian ships.

Weekly Livestock

Toronto, March 1 (CP)—Trade in cattle on the Toronto Livestock Market was fairly active this week with prices firm on all grades. After a firm opening good veal calves eased 50 cents per cwt. Hogs held steady. Good lambs sold steady with last week's closing sales.

Weighty steers sold at a top of $7.40, with most sales of good at $7.25-$7.35. Common sold downward to $6.50. Good butcher steers and heifers brought $7-$7.25, with common selling downward to $6. Butcher cows closed at $4-$5.25, with canners and cutters selling at $3.25-$3.75. Good weighty bulls brought $5-$6.25 with some light butcher bulls up to $5.50. Bolognas sold from $4.50-$5. Fed calves were steady at $8-$9 for good to choice with mediums selling downward to $7. Milkers and springers ranged from $50 to $80.

The calf market opened steady but eased about 50 cents during the week to close at $10.50-$11.50 for good to choice vealers, with common light vealers selling downward to $6.

Hog sales were about evenly divided between the live and dressed basis. Sales on the live basis were made at $9 off-trucks for bacons and on the dressed basis from $12-$12.15.

Sheep and lamb receipts were mostly westerns and sold about steady with last week's closing sales. Good lambs brought $9.85 with common selling downward to $7. Good light sheep sold at $5.50-$6, with heavies selling at $4-$5 and culls selling downward to $3.

Improved Demand Raises Butter Price

Toronto, March 1—Revived buying caused another increase in butter prices on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, while a steadier tone appeared in eggs.

Good demand cleared available supplies of the first-grade Ontario product at 26 1-4c per pound in morning trading on the butter market. Later business was transacted at 26 1-2c and even at this mark offerings were not heavy. Prints moved through retail channels at the improved range of 27 1-4c to 27 3-4c for top grades.

A little better inquiry was reported on the egg market, which helped to steady prices. Government inspected lots, packed in new cases continued to command the higher figure of the price-spread in the graded section. Receipts arrived in sufficient volume to satisfy local needs.

H. Acres Claims King Gov't Ignores Rights of Farmers

Charges King Approved Huge Import of Pork at Low Duty — Lowered Cheese Bonus and That Calling of Election Now Hinders Rural Voting

ONTARIO SNUBBED

Speaking in the interests of Mr. George Stokes, National Conservative candidate for Hastings South, Mr. A. Holly Acres, Conservative member in the Ontario Legislature for Carleton County, fired the first gun for the National Conservative party here in the Federal election campaign at Frankford Thursday evening when he denied that Dr. Manion intended to enforce conscription if elected, or that he favoured amalgamation of Canada's two premier railway systems.

"I sincerely regret, that we are having an election at all during this time of stress," began Mr. Acres, as he launched into the campaign with all the fiery eloquence that has earned for him the title of being the opposition's most accomplished debater in the Ontario legislature. "Not only should the country be in complete accordance while the nation is at war, but the election is being brought on at the very worst time for the rural population. Bad roads are common during the month of March, but Mackenzie King has always ignored the rights of farmers and one of the reasons, that he has brought the election on at this time is that Mr. King feels sure of the vote of urban factory workers and hopes for the possibility of blocked roads to keep the farmers from the polls. But now is the time for united effort, so get behind the National Government and support the government that will support you.

Claims Mr. King Has No Policy

"Mackenzie King has no policy whatever in this election," declared Mr. Acres, "and he has only one plank in his platform—and that's Manion. But company after company has been getting war contracts and if Mr. King is re-elected we'll never know what these contracts were."

The Liberal Government turned down the combined proposals of Mr. Drew and Mr. Hepburn, when they offered the entire resources of the Province of Ontario in a united effort towards winning the war and under these circumstances he (Mr. Acres) didn't know how anyone could vote for a Liberal. Ontario pays 50 per cent of the Federal Government's entire revenue, and produces 70 per cent of the Dominion's cheese, 50 per cent of the bacon, 95 per cent of the tobacco and 65 per cent of the condensed and evaporated milk, yet when Mr. King chose his Minister of Agriculture he ignored Ontario entirely. When the recent War Loan was floated, over three hundred and twenty millions were subscribed and Ontario subscribed 50 per cent, but if Mr. King had advertised the dissolution of parliament he was not sure that 200 million dollars would have been subscribed because the people would have wanted to know who was going to be their government.

Many Answer Country's Call, Few Are Taken

"What has Mr. King done for the unemployed?" questioned Mr. Acres. "He would not listen to the suggestion of the British government in regards to establishing an air training scheme in this country. When voluntary recruiting was recently resumed, over 57,000 men had answered the call, not for the love of Mackenzie King, but for the love of Canada and democracy. They wanted only 2,000 of them however, and sent the rest of them home. Mr. King refused to bear any share whatever of the cost of guarding our power plants against sabotage and this in spite of the fact that Ontario pays over 50 per cent. towards running the country, so why could not the government have taken these men, trained them and have them ready for any emergency?"

"King tries to instill into the minds of Canadians that Manion will enforce conscription if elected" continued Mr. Acres, "but that is not right. No class of people in the world are more loyal than Canadians. He is also saying that if Manion is elected, there will be an amalgamation of the railways, thus endeavouring to draw the railroad vote, but Dr. Manion has always been against amalgamation. Even when he was Minister of Railways under the Bennett government when the depression was at its height, Dr. Manion had opposed amalgamation.

Speaks on Imports

"Mr. King has always been a friend of the industrialists as was shown by the fact that he had made favourable trade agreements with the United States allowing their pork to come into Canada at a duty of only one and a half cents per pound and with two companies only being allowed to import pork. Over 25,000,000 pounds of pork had been imported since the start of the war, making hundreds of thousands of dollars for the packers" stated Mr. Acres.

"During the Bennett government the cheese bonus to farmers in one year had amounted to $1,370,000. but last year this bonus had been almost one million dollars less. Fisheries in the Maritimes had been bonused with P.E.I. fishermen being allotted $14,000, Nova Scotia $23,000, New Brunswick $45,000. Manitoba had received $462,000, Alberta $3,000,000 and Saskatchewan $30,000,000, but Ontario, although paying 50 percent of the Dominion revenue, had received only $400,000.

"Nine weeks before it was disclosed that there would be an election, Mackenzie King gave instructions to get bills printed, and this in spite of the fact that the decision to go to the polls was supposedly made after Parliament had been sessioned. The King Government was elected to power by 42 per cent of the voters in Canada and he was constantly ignoring the other 58 per cent, therefore, let us stand as true Canadians, go out and tell your friends to vote for their National Conservative candidate, and elect a national government that we may win this war as quickly as possible," Mr. Acres concluded.

Mr. George Reid, of Belleville, wanted to know why, if Mackenzie King wasn't afraid of criticism, did he dissolve Parliament at a time when the country was so in need of leadership. Mr. Chamberlain has nothing to cover up and he is leading England fearlessly, but Mr. King scuttled the ship rather than divulge what the government had been doing.

When England declared a state of war to exist between herself and Germany, South Africa, India, Australia and other dominions of the Empire wired to Mr. Chamberlain "We are with you to the very end," but what did Mr. King do? Mr. King did nothing.

Time for Unity Says M.L.A.

"It is time for national unity," stated Mr. R. D. Arnott, M.L.A. for Hastings West, "there should be no local prejudice in the riding, there should be no politics and no question about religion. The main issue at the present time is that the country is at war. The war is serious, just how serious nobody knows. Canadians can't conceive the magnitude of what the war can possibly develop into. The people of Europe realize the seriousness of the situation but people of this country who are fortunate in being away from the scene of conflict cannot so fully realize the situation. If we allow the present conditions in this country to ride, however, we'll have to fight the same condition over here that is prevalent in Europe. Canadians don't stand for the attitude "you'll come with us or else—that's why we fight."

"Mr. King refuses to divulge what his government has done in regards to the prosecution of the war. He declares that the Liberal party only has a chance to obtain a clear working majority in the House. Vote Liberal, Mr. King urges, don't change horses in the middle of the stream."

Mr. Arnott argued a truly national government should have been formed, but King scuttled Parliament and shut off free speech, Democracy doesn't mean a thing.

"Mr. King refused to form a national government with Dr. Manion for the duration of the war. He denied the right of free speech—the very thing which we are fighting for. So vote for the party that has the interests of the country at heart and for the preservation of democracy over here."

Mr. George Stokes, national Conservative candidate for Hastings South, regretted deeply the short notice, which had been given for the meeting in Frankford, saying that it was not certain until Monday evening that the guest speaker who had been asked for would be available. "He was satisfied," Mr. Stokes said "by the reception given to Dr. Manion, while he was speaking at Brockville a short time ago, that Manion will be the next premier of Canada."

Candidate Denies Statement

"Mackenzie King has stated that it was because of the resolution of the Ontario Legislature that Parliament was dissolved, but this was wrong," charged Mr. Stokes. "When war was declared, Dr. Manion proposed a national government for the duration of the war, but Mr. King did not want unity. King blames the unprepared state in which Canada was in at the outset of the war as being the fault of the Bennett Government and this in spite of the statement King had made showing he had been aware of the seriousness of the situation for some time."

In closing Mr. Stokes appealed to the audience as a candidate of the national government for their influence and support in the forthcoming Federal election.

For all the increasing strain both the people and the governments of the Netherlands and Belgium exhibit calm faith that they will escape direct entanglement in the conflict.

Growing Pressure Felt

To the low countries six months of war has brought growing pressure from the belligerents, mobilization of manpower, huge expenditures for defence, recurring periods of uneasiness over reported threats of German invasion, sinking of ships by German submarines and mines with casualties, increased living costs, numerous violations of neutrality by belligerent planes and dislocation of trade by blockade.

The most recent concern of the low countries was evoked by information of German military activity along Germany's western neutral border, including troops movements, construction of new barracks and continued strengthening of frontier positions.

In Berlin yesterday authorities claimed the reports grew out of "land ameliorization" work by labor corps and that no new fortification work is under way.

While the Netherlands and Belgian governments rely on the promises of Adolf Hitler to respect their territorial integrity the defences of the two countries including inundation lines are built to resist any invasion aimed at turning the flanks of the Maginot line or the seizing of North Sea ports.

PRIME MINISTER LIBERAL CHOICE

be well satisfied.

Although Conservative leader Manion "has been kind enough to remind you that I have not been here since the last election," he believed that fast mails, the airplane, radio and telephones had removed, in a large measure, the old time need of travelling and addressing meetings in order to keep in touch.

"Half the trouble we have in the world today is due to the publicity given every thought and action of government leaders. Each day they must say or do something new and startling, no matter what it is."

Reviewed War Effort

The Prime Minister reviewed the government's war effort and gave some details of the Defence Department's efforts which he said aimed at an efficient and reasonably generous scale of soldier-dependent allowances. This work has been under fire from Conservative campaigners.

In the present war, he said, dependents' allowances represent "a great advance in social responsibility."

Since establishment of the Dependents' Allowances Board, some 60,000 applications have been received, 37,000 families are receiving allowances and $9,000,000 has been paid out, $3,500,00 in the form of assigned pay and $5,500,000 at the government.

The regulations had worked hardship in some cases where unemployed men enlisted, but the Board was working night and day to catch up and regulations had been modified to meet needy and deserving cases.

Repeating his warning that the spring may well see a new war offensive, which will "bring us such agony of spirit as we have never known," the Prime Minister declared his belief that Canada would not embark upon an experiment with a mythical National Government when there was the alternative of an administration of proven "capacity, real and industry," which was united with its following from coast to coast.

Outlined Career

Mr. Mackenzie King outlined highlights of his career since 1900 and referred to his continuous leadership of the Liberal party since 1919.

"I have a feeling of particular pride," he said, "when I realize no leader of any political party in any part of the world today was leader of that party at the first. I was chosen Liberal leader in 1919."

During all his years as leader, no person could say he had ever betrayed any trust that had been reposed in him, the Prime Minister said.

In the long list of events which tied the Prime Minister to Ottawa, was the visit to Ontario, in August, 1938, of President Roosevelt.

Heard Lot of Criticism

"I have heard a lot of criticism of Premier Hepburn of Ontario because he was not there to meet President Roosevelt, but was off in Alaska or some place.

"There would have been even greater criticism of me if I had been in Prince Albert instead of there, to greet the United States President.

"There are those who chide me for being a friend of the United States. I am a friend of every country that is a friend of liberty."

An attack of sciatica, late in 1938, had brought a physician's order that the Prime Minister cancel a proposed visit to Prince Albert and take a sea voyage to Bermuda.

"I suppose that was wrong, but it put me in the shape I am in now and I was never in better shape in my life."

No Bitter Words Against Unity

Prime Minister King warned advocates of National Government that "bitter and contemptible" words would not make for unity and co-operation and declared his determination that no word uttered by him during the campaign would alienate the friendship and co-operation of any man or woman of any political party.

"I hope to be able to say at the close of the campaign that I have not used a word about any person of any political party which may make it impossible for that man or woman to join with me."

(Following his address, the Prime Minister said during a private conversation that this remark was not to be construed as indicating a plan to form a coalition government but that he wished to be free to call upon men and women of all parties to co-operate with the government.)

The Prime Minister said the purchase by the government of a residence for unmarried officers' quarters at the Vancouver air station was Dr. Manion's "only example of what he calls mal-administration."

Purchase Completed Before War

That purchase was completed before the war started and the property had been acquired on recommendation of air experts. The purchase was justified because there was need of good Royal Canadian Air Force quarters in Vancouver.

"Who can say what will happen there or what may threaten our security on that coast?" he asked.

Mr. Mackenzie King revealed that he had been partly responsible for the visit of Their Majesties to Canada last summer. He personally extended an invitation to the King and Queen at their coronation.

Then, when the Governor-General, the late Lord Tweedsmuir, visited England in 1938, he carried the formal invitation from the Canadian Government and returned with Their Majesties' acceptance.

THEFT OF GAS FROM UTILITIES BRINGS STIFF FINE

Patrick Farrara Pleads Guilty to Tapping City Gas Main

FINE TOTALS $40.35

Convicted of the theft of gas from the Belleville Public Utilities, Patrick Farrara, 151 Pinnacle St., was fined $25.00 and costs, amounting to $40.35 in all after the accused man pleaded guilty before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court.

Farrara was arrested at his home following a police raid yesterday during which time the authorities found an improvised stove in the basement of the Farrara home which was using gas taken from the city gas main and without the knowledge of the Public Utilities. The makeshift stove and 25 foot of hose, which was attached to the stove and leading from the city gas main, were all exhibited in court today. The police raid was conducted by Chief Kidd, Sergeant H. Thompson, O.P.P. and Detective Fred Isard.

In police court today Farrara was charged with the theft of gas, during the months of January and February, from the Belleville Public Utilities. The accused elected summary trial and pleaded guilty. Harold Arnott, Utilities employee, told of dismantling the improvised stove and identified it in court.

Manager of Utilities Heard

Oswald H. Scott, manager of the Public Utilities, was also called as a witness. "We believe there are many cases of a similar nature in the city, but it is hard to ascertain just where our gas lines are being tapped, but thanks to the police we have this case in hand and I feel an example should be made in this case," suggested Mr. Scott as he added, that in a test given the hose used by Farrara it was found the capacity gas used would be about 80 feet per hour. No gas meter had been installed in the Farrara home in connection with the matter, Mr. Arnott revealed. Farrara paid his fine.

FREAK EGG

An eight-months-old Plymouth Rock pullet owned by G. L. Gauthier, 51 St. Charles Street, celebrated Leap Year Day yesterday in fitting style. In her nest was found an odd-shaped egg, that resembled one of the captive balloons used in the defence of London. Of a slightly bent oval shape the egg, had a cylindrical growth extending from its small end down its entire length. The growth was approximately a quarter-inch in diameter and looked something like a worm or caterpillar.

RUSSIANS ONLY MILE FROM VIIPURI

(A Red army communique today said the Russians were a little more than a mile from Viipuri and were closing in from the south and east in a "developing" offensive. It reported the nearest force at Ysalnio, on Viipuri Bay just south of the city, and the vanguard of the column approaching from the east at Pero, a railroad station about five miles away.

(In its advance, the communique said, the Russian army captured 270 more Finnish fortifications—including 66 iron and concrete forts—and, besides Pero, occupied Heinjoki and Ayrapaa, all on the Viipuri Valkjaervi railroad. Heinjoki is about 14 miles east of Viipuri and Ayrapaa about 12 miles further east).

Cope With Air Raids

While the Finns struggled to stem the Russian tide on the western side of the Karelian Isthmus, they coped with flames and casualties from air raids which struck many cities.

Fleets of Russian bombing planes, which raided some cities in waves, blazed a trail of death and flames over a wide area.

Many civilians died and many were injured. At least 10 men were killed at Savonlinna, island town in Komonselka Lake 80 miles north of Viipuri, which Finns said was defenceless. Dozens of fires devastated the town, site of the medieval fortress of Olavi, hitherto one of the best preserved relics in northern Europe.

One person was killed at Turku, much-bombed Gulf of Bothnia port, two at the little village of Inkeroinen and one at Hamina. Defence planes prevented a bombing of Kaajani by 64 Russian craft.

Claim Russians Violate Rules

(Two Finnish notes to the League of Nations charged last night that Russia had violated the rules "even for this kind of war" in [illegible] ways:—

'Bombardment and machine-gunning of civilian areas outside the fighting zone, "misuse of the flag of truce" to break up Finnish attacks and then counter-attack "immediately afterwards;" shelling and bombing of hospitals and refugees: use of incendiary bombs outside the war zone; bombardments of the neutralized Aaland Islands; declaration of a blockade without ability to enforce it; use of explosive machine-gun and rifle bullets.)

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. ROSE E. HINES

The funeral of Mrs. Rose Etta Hines took place from her late residence, 13 Foundry Street, this Friday morning. The service in the home and at Belleville Cemetery where entombment was made was conducted by Major Alderman of the Salvation Army.

The bearers were Messrs. George Nobles, Fred Mattis, William Sharpe, C. Deline, W. Brant and "Ted" Biwo.

Robert Donat, Hollywood's Man Of the Year

Hollywood, March 1 — (AP)—Robert Donat, talented British star, is Hollywood's man of the year.

But for Mr. Donat, who turned in a magnificent performance in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," the current sensation, "Gone With the Wind," would have swept the field last night in the motion picture academy of arts and sciences' 11th annual selection of premier film accomplishments.

"G.W.T.W." did all right, anyway. It took eight of 18 possible awards, including those for the best production. Only Mr. Donat, among the principal contestants, survived the big gale. He edged out Clark Gable as the outstanding actor. The industry—from producer to obscure electrician—named him for his masterful portrayal of 50 years in an English schoolmaster's life. Donat at present is in England.

Vivian Leigh Chosen

Vivian Leigh made the top acting awards a sweep for England. The British girl, who came here almost unknown and skyrocketed to stardom as the fiery southern Scarlett O'Hara, was on hand to accept her "Oscar," as film folk refer to the gold statuettes.

Victor Fleming, whose direction of the film brought him top honors in that class, was ill with influenza. But smiling proudly was producer David O. Selznick, who made Margaret Mitchell's novel of the civil war into a picture, as he took the Irving Thalberg memorial award for "the most consistent high quality of production achievement by an individual producer."

Hattie McDaniel, memorable "Mammy" in "Wind," captured the prize as the best supporting actress, and became the first Negro ever to be honored by the academy. Other awards given those connected with the production included:

The late Sidney Howard for the screen play; Lyle Wheeler for the art direction; Hal Kern and James Newcom for the editing; Ernest Haller for the color and William Cameron Menzies for special color effects.

TONY

—BY ELIZABETH VERNON—

CHAPTER XV

Hyacinth leaned on the back of her chair and bit her pen and gazed at her mother. "Mother, I have something to ask you, too."

Mrs. Querne smiled dimly. "Nothing to disturb our peace, I hope."

"Mother!" There was something a little desperate in Hyacinth's voice. "Mother, I'm in a hole. You've got to get me out."

"What do you mean?"

"Just this: I've got to have two thousand pounds."

Mrs. Querne laughed. "My dear Hyacinth—'got to have'; most of us would like that sum. I haven't got it."

Hyacinth said, "I owe the money to Bob Cheavely."

"I am sorry for you."

It was Hyacinth's turn to laugh. "Oh, you don't understand, Mother. It's serious. It began two years ago, before I got my income. You know I was always short of money. You know how you kept down my allowance." Abruptly she rose from her chair and crossed the room "I dare say I was a fool—that doesn't matter now. I was seeing a good deal of Bob. We were friends. I got my car through him, and I paid for it with—"

"I don't want to know about this." Mrs. Querne half rose from her chair. But Hyacinth stood before her. She sank back.

"You must know. You gave me those jewels to take care of—those that Father left to that little snake. And I wanted money to tide me over till I got my own income. I wanted a good time. How did you suppose that I paid for that world cruise?"

"I didn't inquire. You were twenty-four. Your affairs were your own."

"You guessed. You must have guessed. You've never asked to see the jewelry."

"Where is it?"

"I gave it to Bob as security."

"You have been very foolish." Mrs. Querne raised her gold, highpiled head. "You know that I cannot help you. I have no capital; merely an income. It all goes."

"You could sell something. Bob must have the money, or—"

"So there is an alternative?"

"He wants me to marry him."

"Well, my dear, you were going to marry him before. Weren't you?"

"That is all over."

Again Mrs. Querne laughed. "Why? You are very—lovely, Hyacinth, but you are too unsteady. You'll never get settled—married—if you continue like this. Engagements—there was the Ruste boy. Then, you admit now, you were half engaged to Major Cheavely. You threw him over for Alan. Now the Alan business is over too—" Mrs. Querne did not look up. If she had done so she might have paused. Instead she patted the mass of her curls, so carefully arranged.

"Are you suggesting that I should marry Bob Cheaveley?"

"Why not? I always liked him."

"Have you seen his house? The sordidness—"

"Oh!" Mrs. Querne smiled. "A little messy, perhaps. You would soon cure him of that."

"If I didn't owe him two thousand pounds," Hyacinth's voice was low, "would you suggest my marrying him?"

"Really, I don't know. In other circumstances—"

"Mother! It isn't such a large sum—"

Mrs. Querne rose, and now she pushed passed her daughter. "I haven't got it! I have nothing—my income is all spent.

Hyacinth looked round the rich room. She looked at the rings on her mother's hands.

"You could sell something," she repeated.

Swiftly Mrs. Querne glided to the door. She turned. "No. You and Bob Cheaveley could get on very well on his little income and yours. It is your fault, and only yours, that you have put yourself into the degrading position where so poor a marriage is one of convenience."

"Only two thousand pounds. Then you won't—"

"I have told you. I cannot help you."

x x x

The winter day had turned towards its close.

Tony had paused to greet the lodge keeper's wife who stood on her doorstep. "Is—is Mr. Fleming any better?" she asked.

"No, Miss, 'e's not, poor gentleman—nor never will be, I don't suppose."

"No. Dreadful—" Tony had murmured the word to herself, but Mrs. Slack took it up.

"Well, Miss, it seems when Doctor Pye come to see 'im a fortnight ago, 'e says to 'im, 'Doctor,' 'e says 'I'm a 'opless case aren't I,' 'Well, yes, since you asks me,' says the doctor,' Very well, then', says Mr. Fleming, 'I know what to do.' And within the hour, Miss, believe me, 'e'd dismissed the nurses. And 'e won't 'ave the doctor to see 'im no more. Yes. 'Is man, Roberts, looks after 'im now. Well, my 'usband—that was a gamekeeper, you know, Miss, 'e says 'e'd as soon see an 'awk in a cage as see poor Mr. Fleming lying there. Mr. Fleming was always such a sportin' gentleman, you know."

"I know," Tony muttered, and saw again that tall and gallant figure gallop by on the splendid chestnut.

Rather quickly, Tony moved. Then she turned her head to smile. "Well, good-bye, Mrs. Stack."

"Good-bye, Miss."

Tony had turned up a narrow track. It petered out, squelchy underfoot, and now she was on Alan Fleming's land. It was dusk. She sat down on the trunk of a felled tree. There was something in loneliness—even if you had chosen it—that took everything from you and left you with only imitation courage......

"Yes," she thought, "I will go. After all, he can only snub me—"

The room was dim, lit only by the lamp that stood on the high chest.

Alan lay back on the cushions of the chaise longue. There were books and a lamp beside him, but he preferred the dimness—had preferred it for many days. Strange how one shrank from the thought of people. One was cut off from normal men—one was just an object of pity now. Well one would see to it that no one was given the chance to show pity.

Time: his thoughts returned to it. In the years ahead—probably soon—one would hear of Hyacinth's marriage. And who would the bridegroom be? That Cheaveley fellow? Darn him! darn him! No. He wasn't a good enough match.

"Oh, God, why couldn't she have left him his memories? In that last interview, it was as if she had poured acid over them, they were as vivid still, and lovely no longer.

An hour passed. He had lain motionless. But now at an unexpected sound he turned his head.

Slowly, slowly, the tall door opened—only a little way—enough to let someone slim and small slip into the room among the shadows and close the door behind her. She came forward under his stare into the circle of the light. "Oh, hullo, Alan." How desperately that voice strove after casualness!

He still stared at her. Red-gold head, long eyes, her hands deep in the pockets of her big tweed coat—the sight of her brought back many memories; the last few minutes of his life as a man, galloping across pasture, the dining room at Oaken, and that good breakfast before a day's hunting.

She said casually, "I thought I'd just look in."

"Unfortunately, I am not seeing visitors."

"I know. You mustn't be angry at Roberts." Calmly, she sat down on a chair not very near him. "He tried to stop me. I only came because—it was rather cold outside. And I hadn't seen you for weeks."

He felt a pang, and it was strange to feel anything that had not to do with his own crippled state and ruined hopes.

"Good-bye," she said, and held out her hand.

He didn't take it. "Now that you are here, you had better stay for a little."

She shook her head. With a little smile that helped to keep her laboriously won composure, she went towards the door.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was starting to get in back of the sporting page with his cigar and ma said, I dont mind spending money in a good cause to keep it in circulation, or giving it away of my own free will, but one thing I do object to is delibritly being overcharged. Just the day before yestiday I went into Hookbinders in the best of faith and bought a zippered French house dress for 4 dollers and 89 cents, she said.

How much are they at the other stores? pop said, and ma said, No other store has them, and that's always been Hookbinders reguler price.

Then I await further details, pop said, and ma said, Well imagine my innermost feelings today when I walked into Hookbinders and had my unbelieving eyes greeted by a sale of those same French house dresses for 4 dollers and 29 cents each, and believe me I didn't lose any grass under my feet in demanding to see the head of the department, and I must say he listened to my story politely enough, but his only comment was that the sale was not radio-active.

Retroactive he must of said, pop said, and ma said, Perhaps. Anyways, I assured him that it was only by meer chance that I came down town 2 days ago because I fully intended to put it off until today, when of course I would of found the house dresses reduced in the first place, so as a matter of principal as a reguler customer I was entitled to a refund of 60 cents, she said.

Dont tell me he came across? pop said, and ma said, Well practically. I mean he gave me inside information about a half price sale of china that's starting next Monday, and even though I dont need any china he pointed out that I can get much more than 60 cents worth of good will by giving my friends a secret tip on the sale, so I feel more than sattisfied, she said, and pop said, Then I feel less than surprised.

West Huntingdon News

West Huntingdon — Mrs. J. C. Sills entertained the young ladies and their mothers at afternoon tea on honor of Miss Marjorie McInroy on Thursday afternoon prior to her marriage. With Miss Jean Farrell presiding a short program was enjoyed. Community singing was led by Mrs. W. J. Fitchett with Miss Georgie Pitman at the piano. Complimentary addresses were given by Mrs. Geo. Post, Mrs. T. E. Fleming, Mrs. Thomas Emerson and Mrs. W. Fitchett, each paying high tribute to the guest of honor. Miss Betty Foster gave a solo, Miss Georgie Pitman read an address wishing Marjorie every happiness and Miss Annie Cook presented her with several Wear-ever kitchen utensils. In thanking her girl friends for their gifts and good wishes Marjorie also expressed her appreciation for kindness shown her at this time by Mrs. J. C. Sills. She also extended an invitation to all to visit her in her new home near Thomasburg. Afternoon tea was served in the living room. Mrs. T. E. Fleming and Miss Mary Farrell poured tea. The Misses Marjorie Hammond, Betty Foster, Phylis Tweedy, Ethel Hagerman and Annie Cook assisted the hostess in serving.

Birthday Party for Mrs. Geo. Cooke on Wednesday Evening Feb. 21st.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cooke entertained to supper: Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Wright, Marjorie and Eleanor, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Stapley and Donna of Madoc Junction, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Purdy of Belleville, Miss Violet Cooke of Harold, Miss Ethel Hagerman of Minto, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cooke, Annie and Dan. Mrs. Geo. Cooke was the guest of honour celebrating her 57th birthday. The supper table was adorned with the usual birthday cake with 57 candles. At the conclusion of the banquet, Mrs. Cooke was presented with a number of presents among them a lovely blue botany wool sweater from the family and birthday greetings from the grandchildren.

The remainder of the evening was spent in playing games and social chatter. Citizens here join in wishing Mrs. Cooke many more happy birthdays. Although Mrs. Cooke was not born at West Huntingdon she has spent the past 26 years here and is always ready to help in every good cause such as W. M. S. and Ladies Aid work. She is the mother of six children.

St. Andrew's Guild

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Sills of Church St. entertained the members of St. Andrew's Guild on Friday evening for their regular midweek meeting. There was a good attendance of members present. Miss Margaret Wright took charge of the opening ceremonies with community singing followed by the usual Worship service. Miss Jean Thompson read the 121st Psalm. The Roll Call was responded to by a verse of Scripture. Mrs. Milton Shaw took charge of the program. Mrs. William Shaw continued her talk on the book of Ephesians. Miss Lorna Wright gave a humorous reading. Mrs. John Wallace read a story entitled "Little Jim." Miss Jayne Gay read an interesting story. During the recreational period, Mrs. J. C. Sills conducted a game which was a humorous stunt. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Rain Needed Badly

The continued snow storms are much appreciated by the farmers, but a good rain would also be a welcome guest. A large number of wells have failed to supply the needed water for the livestock. Wells that have never been known to go dry before are very low. Cisterns also are dry.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Smith of Glen Ross spent the dinner hour with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cooke on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Carr spent a couple days last week with Mr. and Mrs. Eli Brummell of Keene.

Appointed Clerk

A special meeting of Huntingdon Council was held on Saturday evening and Mr. Matt. English was appointed clerk of Huntingdon Township succeeding the late Samuel Kilpatrick. Mr. English was one of the councillors for Huntingdon and due to his new appointment a new councillor will have to be elected. This will mean that a nomination day will be set by the council at their March meeting.

Gordon Donnan spent Wednesday evening with Glen and Donald Wilson.

Miss Violet Cooke of Harold visited her aunt, Mrs. Howard Cooke last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Goldie McInroy were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Campion at Marmora.

Mr. William Dean held a successful auction sale on Thursday. Mr. Arnott of Frankford was the auctioneer.

Mr. Dan. Cooke spent the weekend at the home of his sister, Mrs. Lee Purdy of Kingston Road, Belleville.

Miss Ethel Hagerman of Minto spent a couple of days recently with her friend, Annie Cooke.

Mr. and Mrs. Don. Fargey were Tuesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cosby.

While attending the Dairymen's Convention at Ottawa, Messrs. Geo. Cooke and Clayton Wright attended Lord Tweedsmuir's funeral.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thompson, Jean and Muriel, Mr. and Mrs. Sandy McCurdy and family were Saturday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Don. Haggerty.

Mr. and Mrs. Goldie McInroy, Mrs. W. J. Fitchett, the Misses Annie Cooke, Reta, Mary and Jean Farrell attended the Blakely-McInroy wedding in Stirling on Saturday.

Mrs. Jas. Sharpe of Mount Pleasant has returned home after spending the past week with her daughter, Mrs. Melville Donnan.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Green and sons of Sine have taken up residence on the farm they purchased last fall. The community extends to them a warm welcome.

Mrs. Melville Yateman and Frank spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. William Hammond.

Miss Annie Cooke is spending this week with Miss Ethel Hagerman.

An extra large number of logs have been landed at the Emerson saw mill and sawing operations will start in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hammond and family spent Friday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Burrell of Evergreen Street.

Building permits have been issued to Messrs. Don. Haggerty and Chester Sills. They are preparing to build additions to their barns in the early Spring.

The Stars Say

For Saturday March 2

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

DESPITE the menace of trickery, duplicity and subtle pitfalls, this should be a day of very definite progress and great personal happiness. A determined effort to succeed by hard work, perseverance and sound principles will be crowned with prosperity, stabilized fortunes and the recognition of elders and superiors. But be wary, discreet and sagacious every step of the way as treachery menaces. Much personal happiness also obtains.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year in which there may be very decisive steps in the direction of putting the affairs on firm foundations through industry, sound initiative and practical principles. This will give much stability to the fortunes, increase the possessions and gain the attention of superiors. But in all be alert to deception and fraud, and discreet in all particulars. Sign papers cautiously.

A child born on this day may be industrious, responsible, deep and shrewd. It may have high principle and sound character. Practical, capable and earnest it should make a fine success of its life Social and affectional qualities should not be missing

TRY A LIQUID SEASONING

For Your Next MEAT LOAF

WHEN making your next meat loaf we suggest that you try this new recipe given to us by a mother noted for her cooking. She uses minced beef, bread crumbs, a little grated onion, some salt and pepper and a teaspoonful of H. P. Sauce. "In my opinion," says this lady, "it is the H. P. Sauce which gives this meat loaf such unusually delicious flavour." That's why H. P. Sauce may be called a liquid seasoning for meat loaves, meat pies, soups, stews, gravies, macaroni and many other dishes.

This thick, fruity sauce has great flavouring strength. Only a little is required in cooking or when served with meat, fish, fowl, salads, sandwiches and so on. H. P. is the Empire's Appetizer from Old England.

AT THE BELLE

"The Light That Failed"

Rudyard Kiplin's vibrant action romance "The Light That Failed," a best-seller since its first appearance as a novel in 1891, opens next at the Belle Theatre, with a cast of over four hundred, headed by Ronald Coleman, Walter Huston, Ida Lupino, Muriel Angelus, Dudley Digges and many others.

Often called Kipling's most virile and meteoric work, "The Light That Failed" covers a full generation of English life at the close of the last century and includes in its broad sweep the brilliant Sudan campaign of the 90's which conquered that wild country. The action is built around the career of Dick Heldar, his childhood sweetheart, Maisie, and a street waif named Bessie who comes to play an important part in his life.

Coleman Plays Heldar

Heldar, portrayed by Colman, is separated from Maisie, played by Muriel Angelus, after they pledge eternal love as children in England. The boy finds his way into newspaper work where he is "discovered" and encouraged by Torpenbow, hardriding war correspondent of the Richard Harding Davis tradition. Under Torpenbow's guidance, Heldar becomes a famous artist and the sensation of the London art world.

At the height of his fame he again meets Maisie, who also has become an artist. Somewhat jealous of Heldar's success, she refuses to marry him until she makes a name for herself. She is working on a painting called "Melancholia," which is severely criticized by Heldar, who, in a fit of pique, decides to show her up by making a picture with the same theme. For his model he selects the street waif, Bessie, played by Miss Lupino. Bessie falls in love with Torpenbow and when Heldar breaks up the romance she swears revenge. In the meanwhile, an old wound which he suffered while saving Torpenbow's life during a battle in the Sudan begins to affect the artist's vision. When he discovers that he has only a few weeks left before he goes completely blind he sets to work furiously to finish "Melancholia."

Bessie Ruins Painting

Just as he finishes it, he goes blind. Bessie, seeking her revenge, ruins it; his friends never tell him about it. It is when he discovers that his painting, which was to be his monument, has been completely ruined, that the picture reaches its climax, a point described as one of the most potent and powerful in motion picture annals.

Walter Huston, star of many motion picture successes, and recently in the New York stage production "Knickerbocker Holiday," plays the role of Torpenbow. More than two hundred mounted members of the New Mexico National guard and an equal number of natives were used in the battle scene, some of which are the most ambitious ever attempted by a motion picture production.

The popular Belle British newsreel and a swell color cartoon "Little Lambkin" will be exhibited on the same program. On the weekend matinee a new and thrilling chapter of "The Daredevils of Red Circle" will be exhibited.

Smart Show

Walter Wanger's new comedy romance, "Eternally Yours," is now being presented at the Belle. Loretta Young and David Niven are the starring duo, and both of these top-notch actors turn in grand performances. The supporting cast is enhanced by such well-known performers as Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts, Broderick Crawford, Billie Burke and Ralph Graves.

The companion feature, "Bad Little Angel,' is an exciting fun-packed comedy-drama with the heart throbs of "Boys' Town."

Can Stalin help Hitler and does he really mean to help him? This big question in the public's mind today is discussed with first-hand information and "inside" pictures in the new March of Time,, presented on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"SOUTH OF THE BORDER"

Inspired originally by the phenomenally successful song from which it derives its title, Republic's "South of the Border," which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre to capacity crowds now promises to become as popular as the song itself.

Seldom have we viewed a more expertly rounded out western production, replete with every element that makes a good film "good." It has songs, it has laughter, it has thrills, and it has a thoughtfully contrived story with a timely angle which creates an illusion that the audience is witnessing actual events dramatized from the daily newspaper headlines.

Mexican oil concessions, coveted by one of the European belligerents, provide a focal point on which the action revolves. Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette, as special investigators of the Federal government, are sent to Palermo, south of the Mexican border, to investigate operations which may result in a "border situation" which will threaten the peace and neutrality of the United States. They have "woman trouble" in the form of (a) a small waif who claims Gene as her Daddy, (b) an older and more guileful waif who ensnares the unsuspecting Smiley into her net—a net fabricated by the international spy ring, and (c) a beautiful maiden who wins Gene's heart.

The story moves entertainingly to a fast and satisfying climax, with action and thrills in every foot of film. We may safely say that 'South of the Border" is one of the best Autrys to date.

You will love Mary Lee, winsome newcomer to the screen who makes her debut in a "kid" role in "South of the Border," is an import from New York. She was discovered by a talent scout while singing with Ted Weems' orchestra on a New York theatre stage.

The added attraction brings you farther thrilling adventures with Tailspin Tommy in "Sky Patrol." John Trent and Jackie Coogan are the stars, The 6th chapter of the thrilling detective serial "Red Barry" and a colored cartoon complete an enjoyable bill for both young and old.

GRANDSTAND—AND IT'S ALL MINE

The rising generation in England does not scare easily. As witness this little chap listening to what wild waves are saying somewhere on the east coast. He is squatted comfortably (we hope) atop a marine mine that had been washed ashore. For your piece of mind, however, we hasten to explain that the detonator has been removed and the infernal machine, potent enough to sink a ship, is virtually harmless.

HEGEMONY OF C. EUROPE, FREEDOM OF SEAS HITLER'S PRICE FOR PEACE WELLES IS TOLD

Fuehrer Demands Dismantling of Fortresses, Report

German Chancellor in Ninety-Minute Talk With Welles is Said to Have Named Among His Demands as Price of Peace Guarantees That Britain and France Would Not Stir Up Balkans and Scandinavia

COLONIES WANTED

Welles is Said to Have Been Informed That Germany Feels Moral Obligation of Permanent Leadership Over Central European Countries, Bohemia-Moravia, Slovakia, Poland and Hungary

Berlin, March 2.—(AP)— Adolf Hitler was authoritatively reported today to have informed Sumner Welles that Germany's price for peace includes permanent German hegemony over Bohemia-Moravia, Slovakia, Poland and Hungary.

This, with Germany and the former Austria, would give Hitler control of a total population of about 130,000,000. It was reported he also asked guarantees that Great Britain and France would not "stir up the Balkans or Scandinavia".

These points, it was said, made up only one, but an important, phase of the "information" given to the United States under Secretary of State who conferred with Hitler for an hour and a half.

Freedom of Seas Insisted on Another was his insistence of freedom of the seas, it was said.

Informed persons said Hitler asker Welles what the United States would do if, say, some Asiatic or European power tried to stir up trouble in Mexico.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Spring warming! As winter loses its vigor, the air and the earth's surface warm up under the increasing power of the sun as it mounts higher and higher with advancing spring. Ground surfaces warm up at different rates, depending upon their physical characteristics, whether light or dark, loose or compact, and how much water they contain Dark ground absorbs the sun's rays more readily than does light soil and therefore heats up more quickly. Compact soil as a rule conducts heat better than loose soil, and therefore the lower layers of the former become heated more quickly than the latter. Bare soil also heats more quickly than one with a plant cover.

SHIPS SUNK THIS WEEK

(By The Canadian Press)

Three more vessels of Germany's diminishing merchant fleet were accounted for this week, one foundering as a result of war navigation conditions, a second captured by British warships and a third reported scuttled when intercepted by a British warship.

The 4,707-ton Wahehe, a new ship went down off the coast of Norway while venturing too close to the rocky coast. The vessel was attempting to avoid interception by using Norwegian territorial waters. The 4-354-ton Orizaba was captured and brought into port by British warships while the Troja, 2,390 tons, was intercepted by a warship off the Dutch West Indies and said to have been burned by its crew.

The British Merchant Marine, for the first time in some weeks, lost more than the combined losses of neutrals, which were comparatively light. German mines, aircraft and torpedoes accounted for nearly 35,000 tons of British shipping in the week ending March 1.

A summary of losses announced during the week, as compiled by The Canadian Press, follows:

Nationality	No. of Ships	Tonnage
British	7	34,240
French	2	9,145
German	3	11,451
Italian	1	5,340
Swedish	1	3,840

BRITISH CRUISER CAPTURES VESSEL

German Freighter Heidelburg Being Towed to Trinidad for Internment

Aruba, Dutch West Indies, March 2—(AP) — The German freighter Heidelberg has been captured by a British cruiser and is being towed to Trinidad, it was reported today.

The prize was the second loss for Germany's merchant fleet in this vicinity in two days, the 2,390-Troja having been set afire yesterday rather than surrender when intercepted by a British cruiser.

The Heidelberg left Aruba at the same time as the Troja in an attempt to slip through the British blockade.

S. S. SOUTHGATE IN NO DANGER SAYS U. S. NAVY

Naval Planes Locate British Vessel Which Broadcast Sub Attack Late Friday

NAZIS SCUTTLE SHIP

German Freighter Troja Attempting to Run British Blockade Scuttled by Crew

(By Gregory Hewlett)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, March 2—(AP)— The navy was advised today that United States naval planes had located the British steamship Southgate, which reported a submarine attack yesterday, and said the vessel was in no apparent danger.

The first news of the vessel's fate since her cryptic "SSS" signal late yesterday was contained in a brief wireless message from the Caribbean saying "Southgate located by planes, no apparent danger."

Three destroyers and a coast guard cutter were dispatched from Puerto Rico yesterday to the position given by the Southgate about 130 miles northeast of Puerto Rico.

The navy vessels had planes aboard and had planned to use them at daylight.

New York, March 2.— (AP)— A dynamic game of hide-and-seek between warships apparently had been touched off today in American waters by reports of a submarine attack on a British freighter near Puerto Rico and a British interception of a Nazi cargo carrier.

From the S.S. Southgate, a 4,862-ton vessel flying the Union Jack, came this message last night:—

"Attacked by submarine".

After that nothing but silence.

Three hours later came word that the German freighter Troja, 2,390 tons, was in flames off Aruba, oil refinery island of the Dutch West Indies. Attempting to run the British blockade, she was cut off by a British cruiser and, in the Nazi tradition, her crew fired her rather than surrender. What happened to the crew could not be determined.

TO MOVE WILL ROGERS' BODY.

Claremore, Okla., Mar. 2 (AP).— Will Rogers is coming here, to rest on a green slope he chose as a good homesite for the old age he hoped to spend among his own folk. The widow of the cowboy philosopher has agreed to removal of his body from California to his native Rogers County in Oklahoma.

SORE FEET HELP RUNNER.

State College, Pa., Mar. 2 (AP).— Norwood (Barney) Ewell blames his speed which smashed a couple of world's records on a pair of sore feet. City of Prague Ablaze With Light Description Given by R. A. F. Pilot

London, March 2 (CP)—A description was given today by an R.A.F. pilot who took part in a leaflet dropping flight over Prague, capital of the former Czecho-Slovakia.

"The whole town was a blaze of light," he said. He contrasted the brilliant illumination of places in Bohemia with the strict blackout in effect in Germany.

"Our particular objectives that night were Prague and Pilsen," the pilot said. "The weather was excellent, a good moon providing visibility over a region of 30 miles. This is not always the case.

"We were carrying a crew of six, comprising pilots, navigator, gunners and wireless operator.

"As we reached the German frontier it was difficult not to believe that the eyes of every German on the ground must be looking up, but nothing happened. Just then no searchlights were trained on us, no guns were fired and no enemy fighters came up to try to intercept us.

"Sometimes on these flights it is intensely cold and one needs all the kit one can possibly put on. This night, however, was comparatively warm and no one needed his heavy flying clothing.

"From the frontier our course lay over the Rhine. Soon Frankfurt passed beneath us, then Nuremberg was slipping past under our wings.

"After a time we noticed that the rigid blackout which had been maintained in Germany was diminished, and we knew that we had now crossed another frontier into Czecho-Slovakia.

"Our next excitement was when the navigator warned us that we were approaching Pilsen, home of the great Skoda armament works.

"We slowly lost height as we approached and then, levelling out, we flew across the town and dropped a couple of parachute flares to announce our arrival to residents and visitors.

"There was no reply, and the navigator set us on a new course, heading northeast for Prague.

"There was no mistaking Prague, the whole town was a blaze of light. Houses, street lamps and factories were all lit up. Even the ornamental light on a bridge was aglow. We again flew over the city while two of the crew began scattering many thousand leaflets we were carrying.

"Without interruption we completed our job and when the last leaflet had vanished astern we swung around and began the long and monotonous flight back to our base."

Ribbentrop's Contention Termed "Nonsense" By New York Times

New York, Mar. 2 (CP).—The New York Times today termed 'nonsense' the contention of Joachim von Ribbetrop, German foreign minister, that Great Britain has a "stranglehold" on world economy.

Ribbentrop was reported to have told Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's fact-finding envoy, in Berlin yesterday that the breaking of the "stranglehold" is Germany's war aim. The Times said editorially von Ribbentrop "is talking nonsense" adding:

"For the plain fact is that in times of peace Britain's reserves of all these things — British oil and British rubber, British sugar and British copper — are available to the merchants of every nation at precisely the same price that is paid by Englishmen themselves.

"Moreover, British capital with which to develop the resources of other countries can likewise be purchased at prices which make no discrimination between nations as such. For example: in the post-war years a great many millions of pounds sterling of British capital went into Germany to help rebuild that country. And there much of it was trapped."

URGES NO MERCY IN DESTROYING THE NAZI·REGIME

Benes, Former President of Czecho-Slovakia, States Allies Must Punish Germany for Crimes Committed

NATIONS PLUNDERED

London, Mar. 2 (CP). — Eduard Benes, former President of Czecho-Slovakia, said last night that the Allies must not fail in their duty "mercilessly to do away with the Nazi regime," for which the Germans "as a nation" must accept responsibility.

"There are millions of Germans who do not agree with nazism, but history teaches us that every state and nation is responsible for its government," the exiled statesman said.

"It is impossible to conceive international ethics in which a government destroyed its neighbors, robbed and plundered smaller nations, committed the worst crimes, killed hundreds and thousands of its opponents, and finally, when the arm of justice intervened and satisfaction and guarantees were demanded, the new government announced that only members of the former regime were responsible for everything, and that now everything was all right."

Benes said he "proudly" acknowledged the Czecho-Slovak government's responsibility for what went on in the ill-fated Central European country during the twenty years of its existence.

The former Czech President declared peace could be ensured only "if it is understood that freedom is indivisible". He called for a new system of European solidarity, including guaranteed freedom of the smaller Central European States, federal units in the different parts of Europe, a recreated League of Nations, and a fresh system of economic collaboration.

"Events show it was impossible to live at peace with Germany," he said. "Czecho-Slovakia made the terrible sacrifice which it today regards as its great and fateful task in this war."

Negotiations With British Government Left to Gandhi

Patna, India, March 2 (CP-Reuters)—Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, former President of the All-India Congress party, said at a public meeting here today that Mohandas K. Gandhi always had negotiated with the British government and always was prepared to do so.

Referring to the resolution of the Congress party's working committee that India's goal should be complete independence, he said this would call for preparation.

Vallabhbhai Patel, Chairman of the party committee, said in case the right of Indians to frame their own constitution by a constituent assembly is granted there would be nothing dishonorable in a peaceful settlement. The committee's resolution hinted at a new civil disobedience campaign in an effort to further the party's aims.

TWO GIRLS DIE IN QUEBEC FIRE, THREE INJURED

Bodies Found Badly Charred—One Girl Was to Have Been Married Today

3-STOREY BUILDING

Two of Injured Persons Injured When They Jumped From Top Storey

Quebec, March 2 (CP) — A 20-year-old girl who was to have been married this morning and her 22-year-old sister were identified tentatively today as victims of a three hour fire which left three other persons in hospital after racing through three lower town buildings.

Dr. Paul V. Marceau, district coroner, said it was believed the two charred corpses taken to the morgue early today were those of Bertha Pilote, the bride-to-be, and her sister Delvina, of either St. Malachie or St. Edouard de Brampton, Que.

The younger girl was to have married Private Jean Morin of the Chaudiere Regiment in St. Jean Baptiste Church. Morin was injured in making his escape from one of the flaming structures.

Leaped from Building.

Hospital authorities, meanwhile, described as serious the condition of Noel Kirouac, 26; Morin, 28, both of whom suffered fractured legs, and Beatrice Ward, 27, who suffered burns and cuts The two men were injured in leaps from the third storey of one of the houses.

"The two dead girls probably were killed by smoke rather than burns," Dr. Marceau said. Their identity has not yet been definitely established, but the authorities are getting in touch with the parish priests of the towns from which they are thought to have come.

Breaking out in the early morning hours, the flames spread quickly through a three-storey stone building containing three stores under lodging quarters and to two adjoining stone houses. About 20 persons were forced to flee the buildings.

It was believed damages would total several thousand dollars.

EIGHT PERSONS ESCAPE FLAMES

Fire Destroys Home at Hallocks Five Miles West of Brockville

Hallocks, Ont., March 2—(CP)— Eight persons, including five children, escaped in night attire, when fire destroyed their home here early today. Hallocks is five miles west of Brockville.

Occupants of the house were Mr. and Mrs. Buell Andress, their five children, ranging from five to 11 years in age, and P. W. Andress, 77, father of Buell.

The fire was discovered by Evelyn Andress, 10-year-old daughter of the tenants of the farm residence. It was started from an unknown cause in the ceiling of the kitchen. She awakened the other seven members of her family .

While his wife, children, and father were only able to don a little of their clothing, Andress managed to save a table, a desk and a small battery radio. The remainder of their possessions, which were uninsured ,were consumed with the residence. The upper part of it had never been finished for occupancy.

The family was given shelter from the 10 below zero weather at the home of a neighbor.

Oxford University Honors Memory of Lord Tweedsmuir

Oxford, March 2.—(CP Cable)— Oxford University honored the memory of Lord Tweedsmuir in a Memorial Service at the University Church today.

The chaplain of Brasenose College, of which the former Governor-General of Canada was an Honorary Fellow, was assisted by the Dean of Christ Church in conducting the service.

The new Lord Tweedsmuir was unable to attend and was represented by his brother, Hon. William Buchan. His sister, Hon. Mrs. Brian Fairfax-Lucy, also was present.

Among the large congregation were many Fellows and Honorary Fellows of Brasenose.

GERMAN PLANES DRIVEN OFF BY R. A. F. FIGHTERS

Residents of Berwick Report Gunfire Near Firth of Forth

SHIP ATTACKED

Air Ministry Announces Another Flight by R.A.F. Over Berlin Last Night

London, Mar. 2 (CP).—Two black German airplanes were driven out to sea from the Scottish coast today by Royal Air Force fighters.

At the same time residents of Berwick reported hearing gunfire occurring northward toward the Firth of Forth.

The firing continued for more than an hour.

The crew of a steamship that reached port said their ship was attacked by a German bomber in the early morning hours.

Two heavy explosions were felt on board their vessel, they said, and machine-gun fire followed. Warships replied before defending planes arrived and drove off the Nazi raiders.

Residents as far as twelve miles inland were awakened by the rumble of blasts rolling in from the sea.

DUE TO ELECTION OTTAWA IS QUIET POLITICALLY

J. S. Woodsworth Sure Conscription Will Come Despite Pledges of the Leaders

McLARTY HEARD

(By the Canadian Press)

In the hustings clamor over the spectacular features of the war effort—fighting men, guns and machines—farm problems have been skimmed over lightly in another peculiar twist to this unusual election campaign.

But agriculture makes all-important contributions to the sinews of war and there are indications now that the place of the farmer in the conflict will be of growing concern to vote-seeking public men.

Making a definite break from the more controversial topics of the war election, Conservative Leader Manion last night at Niagara Falls, Ont., meeting dealt extensively with his farm program.

He talked of prices, tariffs and marketing boards and returned to the old familiar ground over which so many Canadian elections have been fought.

"Vigorous encouragement" of all forms of co-operative marketing, regulation and distribution of farm products were promised by Dr. Manion. Farm marketing board would be set up with the provinces, overseas agencies expanded and measures taken to increase preferences in empire markets.

ALLIED PATROL BOATS ATTACK GERMAN U-BOATS

Paris, March 2—(AP)— French artillery dispersed several German patrols operating in the muddy fields west of the lower Vosges and in the Lauter section, military sources reported today.

Bad weather grounded air forces on the western front.

The French also announced that Allied patrol boats had attacked several German submarines, but that results had not been determined.

This morning's communique on the western front activities said only: " a quiet night on the whole."

SWEDISH WORKERS LEAVE FOR FINLAND

Stockholm, March 2—(CP—Havas)—Several thousand Swedish workers registered today for non-military service in Finland. They will replace Finns called to the front in certain categories of civilian work, particularly in the building and mechanical trades.

The first group of 1,500 will leave next week and 9,000 are expected to go in all.

One Belgian Plane Shot Down in Air Battle With Nazis

Belgian Gov't. Makes Announcement of Incident Which Occurred Over Belgian Territory

OCCUPANTS KILLED

Three Belgian Planes Went Up to Drive Off Similar Number of German Machines Flying Over Neutral Territory

Brussels, March 2—(AP) — The Belgian government announced today that a Belgian plane had been shot down in an air fight between a number of German and Belgian planes over Belgian territory.

"A Belgian plane was shot down this afternoon during a battle between Belgian planes and German planes," said a brief communique. "Another communique will be issued tonight."

German Ambassador Calls

Shortly after the government's announcement the German ambassador arrived at the foreign office to seek an interview with foreign minister Paul Spaak. He was kept waiting while Spaak, who was absent, was called.

Government officials viewed the incident, the first of its kind since the war started, in a serious light.

The number of Belgian dead was unknown, but one report said three Belgian pursuit ships had been attacked by German Do-73 bombers and that two Belgian airmen had been seen parachuting to earth. The German planes disappeared unharmed.

In recent months Belgian anti-aircraft batteries have fired frequently at foreign planes which have appeared over the country, but no hits have been scored.

The German Ambassador, Vicco Von Buelow-Schwante, conferred 10 minutes with Spaak after a 45-minute wait. He appeared pale and disturbed as he left hurriedly for the Embassy.

PRESIDENT OF C. P. R. EXPRESS COMPANY DIES

T. E. McDonnell, 68, Rose From Wagon Boy to Head of Vast Organization

LIVED IN NEWBURG

Toronto, March 2 (CP)—T. E. McDonnell, 68, who rose from a wagon boy to the President of the Canadian Pacific Express Company, died at his home today following an illness of several months. The presidency he held at death was awarded him in 1926 on the 41st anniversary of the day on which he entered the service as a wagon boy.

Mr. McDonnell, son of an Ontario-born farmer was placed in charge of Canadian Pacific subsidiary express operations in the United States in 1910 and in 1918 was appointed Vice-President and General Manager of the company with headquarters in Toronto. He was well-known to railroad employees and business associates from coast-to-coast.

Parents of Mr. McDonnell resided at one time in Newburg, Ont., but later moved to Chicago where their son was born. Funeral services will be held here Monday.

FINED FOR WILFUL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY

Brockville, Ont., March 2—(CP) —Edward Hughes, Brockville member of the Royal Canadian Air Force at Montreal and Leonard Giffin, Brockville dental technician, paid $11.90 each in fine and costs in court today for wilful damage to property. The pair ignited paper towels in a metal wall container in the washroom of a hotel after consuming some liquor. Damage was slight. They spent about eight hours in the cells following arrest before the case was heard.

SHOT TO DEATH

Amber Carter of St. Mary's, Ontario, was shot to death as he stepped from his motor car at the rear of his farm home. James Crawford was arrested at his home at Prospect Hill, one mile from St. Mary's, in connection with the shooting.

LIGHT BLUES ROW STRONGLY TO WIN OVER OXFORD

Cambridge Wins by Five Lengths in "Unofficial" Varsity Classic

USE HENLEY COURSE

Henley-on-Thames, England, Mar. 2 (CP).—Cambridge, three to one favorites, defeated Oxford in the "unofficial" rowing today of the intervarsity classic.

Cox Henry Hicks of Bridgetown, N.S., could not get the Oxford sweep swingers to match Cambridge who surged into the lead soon after the start and increased it steadily to win by about five lengths.

The cantabs beat up a stroke averaging 32 to the minute most of the way and covered the Henley course of 1½ miles in nine minutes, 26 seconds.

The light blues rowed strongly to the finish while two of the Oxford pullers appeared distressed and the others fagged.

"Unofficial" Race.

The victory, expected due to Cambridge's more experienced oarsmen, increased the light blues' bag of wins to 49 against Oxford's 42 since the Varsity oar duels were started in

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. MAUDE DUVALL

The funeral of Mrs. Maude (Kellar) Duvall, wife of Mr. John R. Duvall, took place from her late residence, Cannifton Road, on Friday afternoon, March 1st. After a short service in the home conducted by Major Alderman of the Salvation Army, the funeral cortege proceeded to the Belleville Burial Co. Funeral Home, Campbell Street, where service was conducted in the chapel by Major Alderman, assisted by the Rev. L. S. Wight.

Entombment was made at Belleville cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. W. Cox, G. MacDonald, Richard Flagler, E. Brown, W. Vittler and C. Smith.

LATE DR. A. E. HUNT
Ottawa

Ottawa, March 2 — Rites for Dr. Alfred Edward Hunt, former registrar for Carleton County were conducted by Rev. J. Richmond Craig at the Hunt residence, 309 First Avenue.

Dr. Hunt died unexpectedly on Monday shortly after a sudden illness affected him on the way to his dental office at Somerset St. and Bronson Ave. He was 67.

Chief mourners were his widow, the former Violet Hodgins; a son, Bruce, at Belleville, and a daughter, Miss Marjorie Hunt, Reg. Nurse, at home.

Among the many floral tributes were those from the Woman's Association, St. James United Church, members of the Ottawa Dental Society, Ash-Temple Company, the Old Bridge Club, employees of the Coca-Cola Company at Ottawa, Kingston, Peterborough and the staff at the Belleville plant.

Entombment was in Beechwood Mausoleum.

WILLIAM T. WINTER
Selby.

Empey Hill, March 2 (Special) — After an illness of seven months' duration William Thomas Winter passed away at his late residence at Selby on Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 28th. in his 65th. year.

The late Mr. Winter was born at Selby and lived all his life on the farm where he was born. His parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. David Winter. In religion he was a member of the United Church at Empey Hill and fraternally he was a member of the Masonic Order. In the community he was held in high esteem and his death has brought sincere regret to many friends.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Olive Russell; three sons, Mr. Harold Winter and Mr. Walter Winter, both of Richmond Township, in Lennox and Addington County; Mr. Wilfred Winter at home; two daughters, Mrs. James Sullivan, of Belleville and Mrs. William King at home; one sister, Mrs. Alice Penny, Napanee, and a half brother, Mr. David Winter, California.

The funeral took place from the family residence on Friday afternoon, March 1st., the service being in charge of Rev. W. Merrick. Entombment was made at Riverside Cemetery, Napanee.

The bearers were Messrs. Frank Amey, Arthur McKnight, Allen Wood, Clifford Abbott, Elijah McQuaig and Bert Martin.

Esquire Grill Reopens After Undergoing Extensive Renovation

Established for some years' past as one of Belleville's leading restaurants and closed for renovating for the past two weeks, the Esquire Grill, reopened this morning, presenting an entirely new interior from the front door to the kitchen. Gay and inviting in a smart colour combination of primrose with blue formica trim and blonde primavera wood, the new interior immediately invites closer inspection. Seating accommodation has been more than doubled and the deep blue leather seats in the cosy booths are an inducement to linger. A spotless modern kitchen has been installed and the quick service bar at the front of the store with its accompanying swing chairs adds much to efficient service and comfort.

WARDENCHURCHER OPENS NEW DAIRY

Pasteurizing Plant Installed in Modern Building at Bancroft

Bancroft, March 2 (Special) — Mr. J. L. Churcher, Warden of Hastings County, and Reeve of Dungannon Township, who moved into Bancroft Village from his farm some time ago, retained his thoroughbred herd of Ayrshire cattle. He had since that time supplied many customers in the village with a daily delivery of milk, cream and dairy produce. Since pasteurization of milk became compulsory beginning March 1st., 1940, Mr. Churcher still stays in the business in a big way by installing a modern pasteurizing plant at his village home.

Mr. R. L. Clarke, plant superintendent of Walker-Wallace Limited, Toronto, was in town this week assisting with the installation of the pasteurizing plant. Mr. Churcher's plant will be recognized by the name of "Bancroft Dairy Farms" and he has an up-to-date truck for his delivery. The Bancroft citizens received their first delivery of pasteurized milk Friday morning March 1st.

Mr. George S. White, Barrister, of Madoc, National Conservative candidate for Hastings-Peterborough was a visitor in Bancroft Thursday calling on a host of his friends organizing for the coming election.

Mr. F. Correll, of Belleville, was a business visitor in Bancroft Thursday.

Madawaska Indians motored to Bancroft Wednesday evening and engaged the Bancroft Bears in a fine exhibition of hockey. The score remained 2-0 for the Bears until the latter part of the third period when each team scored a goal making the final decision 3-1 for the locals.

Judge Madden of Napanee, was in Bancroft Thursday and disposed of several cases at the Division Court sitting.

Mr. and Mrs. James Maxwell, Teddy and Muriel, accompanied by Mrs. Wilfred Maxwell, returned home Thursday after spending the past month in Florida.

The home of Raymond Armstrong of New Carlow, situated 22 miles north east of Bancroft burned to the ground Thursday afternoon about 5 o'clock. Nearby neighbors turned out but their efforts were fruitless to stem the flaming dwelling. It was a total loss with no insurance. Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong and the six small children got out with just what clothing they had on. They were all able to stay at the home of Mr. Armstrong's brother's place Mr. Ebert Armstrong, last night.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, March 2 (Special)—Held in custody in the Belleville jail for two weeks, a trio of young men appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler in police court here yesterday and pleaded guilty to charges of vagrancy. The three vagrants were sentenced to two weeks in the common jail the penalty from the day of arrest, which gave the offenders their liberty. All were ordered to get out of town as quickly as possible and the Magsitrate insisted that each go in different directions, one went east and the other two headed west for Toronto. "Judging from their past records these men are bordering on desperadoes acting Crown Attorney Robertson observed. The government finger-print service showed that the three men had spent a great deal of their time behind the bars in prisons and jails in Canada and in the United States. Victor Kolis alias "Victor Kilis," Raymond Johnston, alias "Victor Cole," Gordon Anderson, and Jack Miller alias "Louis Male" were the men who faced the vagrancy counts. They were arrested by Trenton police.

Thick Ice in Bay Here

The ice in the Trent River is believed to be the thickest in years and in some places is over 30 inches. Out in the middle of the Bay of Quinte six weeks ago the ice measured 22 inches and the weather has been good for making ice most of the time since. Local residents have no fear of floods as the strong currents of the Trenton river usually sweep the break up well out into the bay before it has a chance to jam at the mouth of the river and hold back the Spring flood waters. Nevertheless yearly precautionary measures will be taken at the dams up the river to prevent any disturbance that could result from ice packing behind the runways.

Conservatives Dance

Under the auspices of the local organisation a goodly number of young Conservatives enjoyed themselves at a dance last night in the Conservative committee rooms above the A. and P. store on Dundas street. The young Conservatives are very active in this community and have planned a meeting to discuss business on Tuesday night.

Two Liberal Committee Rooms Here

Liberals supporting the South Hasting's candidate Mac Haig of Belleville are congregating in the Front street committee rooms opened earlier this week. One block away on King street followers of Harry R Cory (Independent) are opening committee rooms to conduct their campaign in this locality.

Police Blotter

While investigating a hurried call to the vicinity of Albert College shortly after midnight Constables Wright and Taylor apprehended a woman, who today was charged with intoxication and remanded until Monday for trial.

Albert College officials complained to the police that three men were seen loitering about the rear of the school premises and near the school garage. Police investigations revealed the parties had disappeared when the authorities arrived, however.

Daniel Flannigan, transient, was arrested last night on a charge of intoxication. Chief Kidd today revealed that this was not Flannigan's first offence of this nature. He was remanded until Monday.

Ten transients shared the police cell block with Flannigan last night, but the "weary travellers", were allowed their liberty today.

Collegiate Band To Supply Music at Conservative Rally

The Belleville Collegiate Institute band will supply music at the Conservative rally in the institute tonight where the Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, National Conservative leader will address the electorate of three counties, instead of the Public School band, as was formerly reported.

Fighting Germany As Well as Hitler Bishop Declares

Toronto, March 2 (CP) — The British Empire, with "the cubs answering the lion's roar," has weathered many storms and "will weather this one too," Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, director of Recruiting for Canada in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, said here last night in an address to the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario.

Air Marshal Bishop, who brought down 72 enemy planes in the last war, contrasted the calibre of Allied airmen with German fliers and declared: "We beat them then —as we will beat them again."

He warned against underestimating the strength of determination of the Nazis. "We are fighting Germany," he said. "Let us no longer believe that we are fighting only Hitler and not the German people. Thirteen million people bow to Hitler as their god. If we are fighting Hitler, we must also fight those who believe in him."

He compared present day air training with that given during the last war. Under the present scheme pilots will have about 200 hours of flying time behind them when they are posted for war duty. He recalled that he had only 15 hours flying time "the night I was flying near the mouth of the Thames looking for zepps."

Air Marshal Bishop said that he knew from experience that German fliers are "superb." He forecast defeat of the Nazi air force because "our force is a voluntary one as opposed to the robot-like principles of Prussian conscription."

TWO NEW PLANES FOR C.C.A.

New York, Mar. 2 (CP).—Canadian Colonial Airways will take delivery on two new 21-passenger Douglas Transports for use on their New York-Montreal route this spring, it was announced today.

ALLIED AIR CHIEFS AT AWARD CEREMONY

DUE TO ELECTION OTTAWA IS QUIET

A seasonal tariff protection scheme for the home market was advocated and the return to 1926 price levels was set as the party's objective. The Canadian Farm Loan Board would be expanded to provide long-term mortgage money at low interest. Price spreads would be under continual scrutiny.

Ottawa Quiet Politically

With practically the entire cabinet out of the city on election tours, Ottawa is quiet politically. Work in the various war departments continues unabated but there is scarcely any activity on Parliament Hill. Usually deep in a session at this time of year. Busiest political spots in the city are the Liberal and Conservative headquarters.

At Beausejour, Man., J. S. Wadsworth, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation leader and veteran of five other Dominion election campaigns, opened his speaking tour of the present one last night. He said Canadian soldiers should be insured sufficiently to cover rehabilitation after the war and to care for dependents of those who do not return.

Conscription will come to Canada in spite of the pledges that it would not, made by Dr. Manion and Prime Minister Mackenzie King, he said. Equality of service could only be achieved if wealth was conscripted first.

Turn Over War Profits.

Through the excess profits tax, a large proportion of war profits will be turned over to the Dominion treasury, Labor Minister McLarty said in an address to a Liberal nomination meeting at Brantford.

The convention gave unanimous endorsation to the selection of W. Ross Macdonald, Liberal member of the last parliament, as candidate in Brantford City.

The War Purchase Board and the Wartime Control Board are proving effective in preventing profiteering and hoarding, Mr. McLarty declared. Of eighteen boards named since the war started, none was chosen through previous political affiliations.

"Which is better, a brain trust of men selected for their qualifications or a brain trust of the cabinet?" he asked.

Outlines Achievements.

Hon. T. A. Crerar, Federal Minister of Mines and Resources, outlined the achievements of the Mackenzie King Government since it took office in 1935 in a speech at Deloraine, Man.

Mr. Crerar said that in 1935 Canada had no air defences, no serviceable military planes, no artillery protection and only two destroyers to protect the country's coastlines.

Four years later, when war broke out, the Dominion boasted six destroyers, a flotilla leader and several mine sweepers. In addition, up-to-date coastal defences guarded the Atlantic and Pacific shores.

Last year Canada was fourth among the world's exporting nations. National parks and roads, together with increased tourist trade and gold production, were described as constructive policies increasing Canada's national wealth.

Reads Passages of Address

Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, read to a Federal election campaign meeting in New Toronto passages which he said were censored from a radio address which he delivered Thursday over a network of Ontario stations.

"I submitted my speech to the radio station with instructions that they should take whatever steps were necessary to let me know exactly what I should say," he said. "I received the copy of my speech back with the information that the deletions had been made by the radio censor.

Col. Drew cited one deletion as showing "perfectly clearly the political nature of the censorship which is now in force." It reads: "On your shoulders rests the full responsibility for the fact that our defence forces have practically no modern weapons of any kind."

Another had to do with the weapons of Canadian infantry and artillery, which Col. Drew said were brought back from the first Great War. Another said that "incompetence in the Department of National Defence" was responsible for an insufficiency of propellors for airplanes manufactured for the Royal Canadian Air Force by the National Steel Car Corporation, Ltd.

Other References

Other references which he said were deleted were:

"The peace establishment of our land forces in six divisions."

"Our mechanized cavalry was without mechanical equipment of any kind."

"Others are drilling with only a half or a quarter of the number of weapons they require."

"You are aware that the only pursuit ships we had in Canada then were five ancient Sopwith-Siskins which had been obsolete for at least ten years and had a top speed of 145 miles an hour These were the machines with which you were going to give advanced training to men who would be called upon to handle fighters with a speed of 400 miles an hour."

Censor Protects King is Claim

Col. Drew said that Prime Minister Mackenzie King was "not only permitted" to criticize the extent of defence preparations under the last Conservative administration, but his words "received headlines in many papers."

"When I gave exact facts to show how incorrect his statement was and pointed out that it was in fact his responsibility, then the political censor stepped in to protect Mr. King," Col. Drew asserted.

"It should be remembered that there have been dictatorships under the British flag before this. And it should also be remembered how those dictatorships were established and maintained.

"The last dictatorship under the British flag was that of Cromwell. It may be worth remembering that the method by which Cromwell established his dictatorship was to dissolve parliament and deny the right of criticism. Obviously Mr. King has been studying history."

Postmaster-General C. G. Power in an address at Brandon stated as proof that Canada entered the war "on an even keel," that the cost of living in the Dominion advanced only 3.4 per cent during the first six months of war.

Canada is organized on an economic and civilian basis that will direct every effort toward winning the war, Mr. Power said.

Civil Servants Praised

He gave great credit to the civil servants carrying the bulk of the work under direction of cabinet members. Two years before the outbreak of war, when world events indicated it was coming, the Liberal government had set the proper machinery in motion to prepare Canada for such a catastrophe.

Emergency legislation was prepared, air defence plans outlined and other steps taken to assure the Dominion's entry into conflict without disruption of essential services.

Revenue Minister Ilsley said at Windsor, N.S., that no government could have raised large amounts by taxation for purposes of national defence in Canada between the years 1931 and 1936. From 1936 to 1938, he said, $94,000,000 had been spent on defences. Of this amount something over $50,000,000 were spent for maintenance, repairs to buildings, transportation and training camps. A considerable sum was also spent for other purposes such as civil aviation.

That left a little more than $32,000,000 which was spent on construction and equipment. He listed some of the equipment as including three destroyers, 300 airplanes, defence works and additional naval stores.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, March 3

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a most propitious one for making headway through much energy and initiative, with the hearty support of those in power and prestige. The faculties and forces are under excellent stimuli for achievement, especially with new projects of an ambitious but practical nature.

Those whose birthday it is are under splendid auspices for a constructive and progressive year, with superiors and those in power ready to lend support to practical propositions.

A child born on this day may be enterprising, have splendid initiative and creative ability, skill and ingenuity, winning support from its superiors.

For Monday, March 4

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a day of startling and intriguing events, with sudden visitations filled with dynamic and thrilling episodes. These are heightened by elements of intrigue and subtlety, a perplexing combination calling for more than ordinary dexterity and sound judgment in order to overcome dangers. The health and domestic situation also call for attention and discretion.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of breathtaking events, causing commotion and excitement as well as perplexing and baffling situations. This combination, while critical and extraordinary, may be turned to fine advantage and thrilling adventure by restraint, sagacity, stratagem and ingenuity.

A child born on this day may have extraordinary talents, originality and ingenuity, with shrewd and subtle depths, which should land it in the spotlight.

WANTS GARTER SNAPPED.

Lawrence, Mass., Mar. 2 (AP).—Beatrice V. Clarke, who had her garter snapped in a theatre the other night, is going to make the rounds of the shows and see if it will happen again. She said she received numerous complaints from women who have been annoyed in theatres and intended to do something about it. The lady is a policewoman and the man who snapped her garter was fined $25.

U.S. Grants Loans to Norway and Sweden

Washington, March 2—(AP) — Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator, announced today the export-import bank had allocated $20,000,000 for an additional loan to Finland, had made a $15,000,000 loan to Sweden, and also had made a $10,000,000 loan to Norway, which previously had been tentatively announced.

Jones said the trustees of the export-import bank acted after President Roosevelt had advised him that he would sign a bill increasing the bank's capitalization by $100,000,000.

Proceeds of the loans may be used for purchases in the United States only and no part of the money may be used for arms, ammunition, or implements of war as defined in the President's proclamation under the Neutrality Act.

The money may be used for purchase of commercial aircraft.

Number of Accidents Reduced In Construction Industry

Compensation Rates Lowered as a Result of Efforts of Construction Safety Association of Ontario

TO MEET HERE

Accidents in the construction industry of Ontario were substantially reduced last year as a result of the persistent campaign of the Construction Safety Association of Ontario and the enforcement of Workmen's Compensation regulations, according to a representative of the Association, in an interview with the Ontario Intelligencer. The lower accident rate has brought about a reduction of the assessment rate for Workmen's Compensation in certain construction classifications. The rate for general construction, including, brickwork, stone masonry, concrete and cement work, carpentry was adjusted for 1939 to $4 per $100 of wages as against the previous rate of $5.

The methods employed by the Association to bring about this satisfactory result include measures against all the ordinary hazards as outlined in an enlightening booklet entitled "Safety Code and Regulations Governing the Construction Industry." This booklet has been placed in the hands of all construction employers and many employees, and gives specific detail for accident prevention in building scaffolds, handling ladders and every possible factor entering into construction. In addition, graphic circulars illustrating accidents that actually have occurred are posted on all construction jobs.

Under the Workmen's Compensation Act it is obligatory for construction employees to contribute and mostly they have shown readiness to cooperate with the Construction Safety Association which works under direct authorization and with the full co-operation of the Workmen's Compensation Board of Ontario. The association has three inspectors visiting works in progress for the purpose of ensuring that all possible safety precautions are taken. They are: Mr. William G. Self of Toronto, Mr. Reg. Jackson of Hamilton and Mr. W. Collins of Toronto—all capable and experienced personnel in the construction industry.

A series of meetings are being held throughout the province which are addressed by Mr. H. J. McGough, general manager of the Safety Association. Contractors, sub-contractors, employees and the general public will have an opportunity of hearing Mr. McGough in his illustrated talk in Belleville on Wednesday, March 6th at 8 p.m. at the Quinte Hotel. Mr. John Harold, chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board of Ontario will be present. This meeting will include Trenton and the Bay of Quinte District.

Mr. McGough will provide answers for such questions as:

Who pays for accidents?

Do accidents increase cost of construction work?

Who creates accident hazards?

What does a "good mechanic" mean?

Are you interested in Workmen's Compensation?

Attendance at this meeting should be of great assistance to both employers and employees in preventing accidents and ensuring further reduction in construction compensation rates. The Belleville committee organizing the meeting is under the chairmanship of Mr. E. Rutherford.

Point Anne

Point Anne—Miss Emma Winters of Oswego, N.Y., is visiting her cousin, Mr. Geo. Winters.

Mrs. A. E. Pepper and Mrs. W. C. MacDonald of Tweed spent a day recently with Mrs. Manson MacDonald.

RADIO CENSORSHIP UNDER FIRE BY HON. DR. MANION

Right in Tune With "Gagging" of Parliament by Dissolution, States Conservative Leader

SPEAKS IN TORONTO

Toronto, March 2—(CP)— The type of radio election censorship being "imposed" on the people of Canada by the King government is right in tune with its "gagging" of parliament by sudden dissolution, Conservative Leader Manion charged here yesterday.

This "gagging of radio" was taking two forms, he said: Allowing only a certain number of hours of election time on the national net work of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and not allowing the broadcasting of election meetings.

Dr. Manion told 1,800 supporters whom he addressed at luncheon, that if meetings were broadcast, as in past elections, electors would be better able to vote intelligently when election day came.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King had made local radio stations responsible for what was said on the air, resulting in such situation as that yesterday in which, Dr. Manion said, Lieut. Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader, had been "partially cut off."

Leader Asks Question

He said a radio address of his own over a local Saskatchewan station had had to be approved by the head of that station who had been "forced into the position of public censor."

"Is that freedom of speech?" he demanded. In eight speeches in the West he had had addressed probably 25,000 or 30,000 people but that number would have been multiplied if he had been allowed to broadcast and the people would have been better acquainted with the issues before them.

He agreed with the Prime Minister that most soldiers' dependents now being cared for but, he said, for the first four months of the war even wives were not getting their legal right.

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, who presented Dr. Manion, said the "peekaboo session" of parliament was a flagrant denial of the right of the people to have their executive account for money they had spent. No shareholders in a company would tolerate such conduct for a moment.

Ferguson Gives Opinion

"There is one fellow I know who is going to say and do as he likes as long as he keeps within the law," Mr. Ferguson said on the censorship angle. There was a law of libel and a law of slander which had been generally sufficient, he said.

"I don't know that it helps to have some civil servant in Toronto or Regina or some place else say that I'll be reckless in my statements. Is he in any better position than I am in that regard. It's an intolerable situation.

"If I can't speak over the radio without having someone tell me what I can say, I'll hire a hall."

Deloro Plant Adds Several New Buildings

Deloro—Several new buildings are being constructed at the plant of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company and an addition to the Cobalt Oxide Plant is well under way. This building will be used to treat the Cobalt residues from South Africa which will be treated at Deloro.

There is also being installed a considerable amount of new equipment in the present Oxide Plant which will allow the Deloro Company to increase their output of Cobalt Oxide.

A further building is being constructed for the treatment of Cobalt metal which the Deloro Company will in future be required to produce.

The new buildings and additions are being rushed to completion as the Deloro company has to be in operation on their new process in the early summer.

This increased activity at Deloro means much to the Marmora district as a large number of the Deloro employees reside in this village.

Mr. J. Arnold Thomson, Belleville is the architect on the new building and the firm of M. Sullivan and Son Limited, Arnprior, Ontario, is the contractor.

Entertain Hastings Club

A very enjoyable evening wat spent in Marmora Town Hall Wednesday evening when Marmora Badminton Club entertained the Hastings Club. Marmora rather excelled themselves in the tournament but in most cases the scores were close and they will need to show the same skill in the return game.

After the play all retired to the Council Chamber where tables were set and nicely decorated, and a lovely lunch was served. Mrs. Baker thanked the Marmora Club and extended an invitation to return the game next Wednesday night which the Marmora Club readily accepted. Dancing was enjoyed for about an hour with Mr. and Mrs. G. Davies, H. Auger and H. Linton supplying music.

Following are the results of the tournament:

Ladies' Doubles:

Mrs. R. Neal and Mrs. K. Armstrong won from Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Hohn.

Miss Turner and Mrs. Davis won from Mrs. Baker and Miss D. Kerr

Miss G. Lumsden and Miss E. Henry won from Miss Phillips and Mrs. Quink.

Mrs. F. R. Wells and Miss W. Sabine won from Miss K. McKee and Mrs. Bonds.

Mrs. W. Hickey and Mrs. J. Reynolds won from Miss M. Collins and Mrs. Hess.

Men's Doubles:

F. R. Wells and K. Armstrong won from F. Crate and J. Jones.

R. Regan and D. Prentice won from J. Walsh and W. Whitred.

H. Auger and G. Davis won from G. Bonds and C. Baker.

A. M. Jones and H. Linton lost to J. Jones and F. Crate.

R. Scott and R. Neal won from J. Walsh and W. Whitred.

Mixed Doubles:

Mrs. J. Reynolds and C. Brady lost to Miss Collins and C. Baker.

Miss L. Turner and R. Regan won from Mrs. Baker and J. Walsh.

Mrs. Hickey and D. Prentice lost to Miss Kerr and A. Thompson.

Miss G. Lumsden and F. R. Wells won from Miss Phillips and E. Hohn.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Davis won from Mrs. Hess and J. Jones.

Miss W. Sabine and H. Auger won from Mrs. Hohn and W. Whitred.

Miss E. Henry and R. Scott lost to Mrs. Thompson and G. Bonds.

Mrs. Wells and C. Brady won from Mr. and Mrs. F. Crate.

Miss L. Turner and A. M. Jones won from Miss McKee and A. Thompson.

The regular meeting of the C. G. I. T. was held at the parsonage on Friday with a good attendance. The president, Keitha Tandy conducted the worship service, the subject being "The Christian Church—A World Wide Community". Plans were made to hold an Indian Mela in co-operation with the recently formed W.M.S. at the parsonage on Friday evening, March 8th, where a program of Indian songs, games and poetry will be given. This will be followed by a lunch of delicacies of India. After the business period songs and games were enjoyed and Joyce Kouri told a very interesting Folk Story. The meeting was closed in the usual manner.

Mr. Bernard Finnegan is visiting his brother Mr. John Finnegan in Perth.

Mr. Charles Hollingsworth visited his parents Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Hollingsworth at Odessa over the weekend.

Mrs. Eugene Brady was in Toronto last week looking after the affairs of her mother, the late Mrs. William Archer who passed away so unexpectedly.

Mr. Harry Loveless, Deloro is one of the few who celebrate their birthday on February 29th and will not have an opportunity to celebrate the exact day again for four years.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Nobes visited their daughter Mrs. R. Varty at Campbellford last week.

Bob Wright of Marmora Youngest Soldier in C.A.S.F.

Passed His 17th Birthday on Sunday, February 25th According to Parents

NOW AT ALDERSHOT

Marmora, March 2 (Special) — In the daily press and over the radio considerable attention has been given to Earl De Forge who it was claimed was Canada's youngest soldier. Daniel Alexander Earle De Forge, to give him his full name, enlisted at Sault Ste. Marie and went overseas as a member of No. 1 Platoon, Employment Battalion, Canadian Active Service Force. He is now at Aldershot, England, and the question of his age came into prominence as a result of receiving a package addressed to the youngest soldier in the Canuck forces.

Earl De Forge joined the Navy League at the age of 11. When he was 16 he left the Navy League and joined the Sault Ste. Marie and Sudbury Militia Regiment. When war broke out the regiment was called to mount guard on the Sault ship canal and Earl reported for duty. Later he enlisted for service overseas. Coming of a family in which most of the men have served as soldiers it seemed only natural that he should enlist at the earliest opportunity.

Not Youngest Soldier

As a matter of fact Earl De Forge is not the youngest soldier in the Canadian army in England by several months. As far as can be learned that honor belongs to "Bob" Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Wright of Marmora. "Bob" celebrated his 17th birthday last Sunday (February 25, 1940) at Aldershot Camp, England. A year ago he was attending school here, quitting shortly after he reached the age where school attendance is compulsory. While his father is a veteran of the Great War, Bob apparently took no interest in military life previous to the appeal for recruits for the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Answered Appeal

When the appeal for recruits was made he was one of the first to offer his services and enlisted at Madoc. The recruiting officers must have followed Nelson's example of turning a blind eye, when he gave his age, as he did not look to be eighteen years old at the time. After joining he developed very rapidly physically, becoming three or four inches taller and broadening out proportionately. When he went overseas he was over six feet tall and looked like a real soldier. He also appeared three or four years older than at the time of his enlisting.

Wanted to go With Chums

Mrs. Wright naturally objected to "Bob" going overseas at so young an age, but when he was given the option of waiting for a later unit to go overseas he asked to be allowed to go with his chums and his request was granted. His father, outwardly indifferent, but we imagine secretly proud, insisted that he be allowed to go with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment or he might skip out and enlist some place else and they wouldn't know where he was.

His older brother "Bill" is also in uniform. A couple of years ago he spent months in Belleville Hospital with a lame hip and it was feared that if he survived he would be lame for the rest of his life. He enlisted soon after war started but was sent home later as it was feared he would be unable to stand the strain of army life. However he has shown such improvement that he has again been accepted for service and is now training at Picton.

2nd Thurlow—Mrs. C. Mitchell, Front Road, and sister, Mrs. Fortune of Galt spent Tuesday with Mrs. R. Mitchell.

Mrs. Dent is visiting her sister who is seriously ill near Ottawa.

VITAMIN B-1 FOR PLANT GROWTH
I need my Vitamins too!
5-inch Rose buds, Daffodils as large as a salad plate, Hyacinth blooms over 1 foot long, Snapdragons nearly 7 feet high, seedlings maturing in half the usual time, plants in full bloom and growth transplanted without root-shock or set back, and sickly plants reinvigorated into strong and healthy growth. This is only part of the story, in October issue of "Better Homes & Gardens," that has electrified the horticultural world by its description of the marvellous results obtained through scientific study of the newly discovered effects of Vitamin B-1 on plant growth.
VITAMIN B-1 GIVES NEW VIGOR TO THE WHOLE PLANT
Not a plant food or fertilizer but imparts new vigor to the roots so that the plant obtains the maximum benefit from the soil in which it is growing THUS PRODUCING THESE ASTONISHING RESULTS IN SIZE AND RATE OF GROWTH.
EASY—SAFE—ECONOMICAL
FOR PLANTS INDOORS AND OUTDOORS
We supply Vitamin B-1 in a new convenient powder form, specially prepared for plant growth. No complicated weighing or measuring whatever. Using measuring spoon which we supply, just add a little powder to each gallon of water and pour on soil once a week. Package will prepare 2,000 IMPERIAL GALLONS of solution (enough to last the average gardener a whole season). With directions, $1.00 postpaid (special half package 65c postpaid). NO ASTROLOGICAL PREDICTIONS ALLOWED IN GERMANY

Germans are not allowed to read astrological calendars and "year books" for the year 1940. The Nazis have said so. Documents presuming to forecast events are being seized by the German police. The reason given is that the Germans are too busy with the war to spend their time reading predictions of coming events.

It is not to be wondered at that the people in that country are anxious about portents and predictions as to the future of the war. It is said that lurid predictions have been made in astrological calendars of disturbing occurrences to come.

The Nazi view is that the present responsibilities are too great to have the people spending their time and interests to allow "foolish superstitions destroy their tranquility of spirit."

It has been said that Hitler himself is interested in astrology but that is probably another thing in which the leader has the right to those things of which he deprives the people.

The very fact that the police are seizing calendars of this kind, with predictions of events and so on shows that the Germans are interested and that their interest in this might well be calculated as interfering with the supreme effort of Hitler's life.

MENACE OF NAZI YOUTH

What can happen when youth is not truly taught is indicated in the German Reich. Lord Halifax the other day said that German youth had been deprived of "the elements of true judgment."

That is the very aim at which Hitler set out—to drill the youth of his country in Nazi ideals, so that at some day he might have a united mass of younger men and youth backing his principles to fight if necessary for these degraded anti-democratic principles.

Lord Halifax has pointed out that thousands of German youths were ready to shed their blood for these ideals, distorted though they be. According to Lord Halifax these ideals have been accepted as truth by the young Germans.

Against this the Foreign Secretary set the high idealism of British youth.

The Nazi youth carries so terrifying a challenge against civilization that civilization has to "resist it with force on the battleground."

He paints a picture of German youth under Nazi ideals which have thwarted their lives and which have made German youth an impenetrable barrier which somehow will have to be broken down "if the youth of Europe is to avoid always living in this waste land and if the European temple of civilization is to deserve and win a rekindling of lamps.'"

The tragedy of the German youth is that their natural ideals of self-sacrifice and devotion have been utilized in the development of a sordid philosophy of life and international politics. Now they have to pay the price for Hitler's terrible betrayal of them to a gross militarism and materialism. He has delivered them to the cause of the whirlwind and destruction. Unfortunately they have created a menace to the world.

ANTHONY EDEN ON THE WAR

Rt. Hon. Anthony Eden, Secretary for the Dominions, stated the other day that there is no parallel in all history of the world for the Empire Air Training Scheme to be centred in Canada. To this are joined the plans for personnel to be trained in South Rhodesia and also in the Union of South Africa side by side with young men of the South African Air Force.

In this gigantic testing, the Empire Air Training Scheme must play a mighty part. Mr. Eden says that from it will flow a continuous stream of pilots, observers and gun crews to be numbered not in thousands but in tens of thousands every year.

Mr. Eden also brought clearly to the front the vital lesson of history that, "in war, victory in the last phase means the defeat of the enemy."

The air forces of the combatants are to play a gigantic part in the war. The air services play a role not only from their standpoint alone but as auxiliaries. This means that armies and navies can accomplish so much more today than they did in other wars through the arm of the airmen. Their forces, too, have the vast possibilities in them of a new form of war if there should be a general use of planes in attack.

Many predictions have been made about the future, some forecasting general attacks by air on a vast scale, some seeing little movement likely on either side of the great lines which separate the Allies and Germans on the Western Front, others forecasting a spring offensive.

There is greater effort being put forth by both sides to gain that victory which they seek. This is seen in early rationing of the nations, in the intensification of sea warfare from the earliest days of the war, in air raids attempted by the Germans without success, British air raids over the entire country of the Reich, dropping pamphlets instead of bombs. This is a war in which organization is playing a vast part.

It is the supreme test the opposing Powers are making.

CANADA'S RESOURCES UTILIZED

The natural resources of Canada are helping to win the war. One of the latest pieces of news of interest as an index in this regard is the announcement that the Aluminum Company of Canada has sold to the British Ministry of Supply nearly all the crude aluminum output for this year and for the coming year. The program of the company is one of expansion so that this company alone can produce practically as much aluminum as Germany.

Canada's nickel and copper are already playing a great role in the cause of the Allies. Other base metals also play their role in the war.

This country is one of the richest countries in the world in metals of importance in war as well as in peace.

It is noted that the British Ministry is satisfied with the price in the order that there is no profiteering.

Thirty three years ago today Belleville was incorporated as a city. We have not, perhaps, made such strides as enthusiasts hoped for at that time, but the fact remains that Belleville was then and is now, one of the nicest places to live in on the footstool. People who live here get a fair run for their money, and many who have moved away would be glad to come back if they could. The thought comes to many a man when he gets time to sit down and think it over, that bustle, hurry and excitement are not always the things to be most sought for in this world. Far away fields may look green, but they do not always yield a big crop. No doubt, many an old boy, who will come back to the reunion next July could preach a sermon on this subject if he wanted to.

Mr. W. R. Ostrom of Trenton was in town today.

The storm of last night and today was the worst of the season. The heavy downfall of snow was whirled about by a stiff northwesterly wind which piled it up in great drifts. Roads are badly blocked and trains are greatly delayed. The flag staff over the city hall was broken shortly before noon today by the high wind. Stages due here early this morning did not arrive until late this afternoon. The mail train due here at 10.45 this morning did not arrive until three o'clock this afternoon.

Our joy at the relief of Ladysmith is tempered with regret at the news of the wounding of Lieut. Glencoe G. Hulme, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Croft Hulme of this city. He was one of the sturdiest and most efficient of Belleville's quota. It is reassuring, however, to note from Col. Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

In a warring Europe and surrounded by covetous neighbors Rumania apparently believes safety lies in strength. In any case, while seeking to hold an even balance between Germany and the Allies in the matter of oil shipments, King Carol's government is putting the nation practically on a war basis.

An additional 200,000 men now are taking their places in the armed forces bringing the strength of the army to 1,600,000.

Other new defence measures undertaken by the Balkan kingdom include an enlargement of the railway system for strategic and industrial purposes at a cost of $16,000,000, flotation of an army loan for $126,000,000 and enlargement of the air force.

The main force of the Rumanian army is believed concentrated in the province of Bessarabia, fronting on the Russian border. The Soviet regime looks upon this province, before the First Great War a part of Imperial Russia, as one of the territories which should be recovered.

Now that Russia and Germany are working in cooperation the danger is that Germany, which needs Rumanian oil, may agree to prompt a Russian move on Bessarabia if Rumania does not meet its demands for oil. This would be a way of weakening Rumania so far as Germany is concerned without running the risk of destroying the oil fields and shutting off all supplies by a direct German invasion of the country.

140 YEARS OF MASONRY IN BELLEVILLE

Moira Lodge No. 11 A. F. & A. M., Founded March 10th, 1801—Fourth Lodge Established in Canada—Belleville Named When Governor Attended Meeting

By CLARK LAPP

A corroded iron key and a gold Masonic tiepin are the visible links between Moira Lodge No. 11 A. F. & A. M., and its founders who met in Simpson's Tavern, at the corner of Dundas and Front streets, Belleville, some 140 years ago. The key operated the wooden lock of the first lodge room and came through the fire which destroyed the tavern in 1812. It was found by Miss Margaret Simpson, who afterwards succeeded her father as innkeeper, and was presented by her to the officers of the lodge. The tiepin belonged to Captain John Walden Myers, first master of the lodge, and came to the archives of Moira Lodge through his great, great granddaughter's husband, the late P. C. Jones, a life member.

Relics Kept in Bank Vault

These invaluable relics are kept in a strong box in a local bank vault along with several old minute books, records of members and other interesting material from the long and honourable history of the Masonic organization. For instance, there is an old seal of the lodge, used probably in the 1820's which bears Masonic emblems surrounded by the wording: "Belleville Lodge No. 10 U. C." That number adds to the confusion of numbers borne by the lodge which variously has been under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England, a dissenting English Grand Lodge, the United Grand Lodge of England, the Provincial Grand Lodge, the Grand Lodge of Canada and the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario. At one time it bore the number 496 under the English jurisdiction, No. 4 under the Provincial jurisdiction, then No. 10, No. 17, and finally the present No. 11 under the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario. Members insist that the rightful number in order of the Masonic Lodges formed in Canada should be No. 4.

The minute books have been preserved since some time in the late 1840's and bear evidence of master penmanship. As the records in the bank vault are under rigid regulations and cannot be removed from the building, it was not possible to give them more than a cursory glance, but they carry the story of the activities of the lodge in all phases down to the present day. These records were kept for many years by the late Arthur McGinnis, brother of Mr. Hope McGinnis of the city hall staff, and some twenty-five years ago were deeded in trust to Moira Lodge.

Loyalist Masons

Time and fire have deprived the Lodge of complete records of the early days, but circumstances point to the establishment of the nucleus of Masonry in this community about 1789. In that year some fifty Loyalist families came to Sidney and Thurlow. Masonry had been quite strongly rooted in the American colonies prior to the Revolutionary War—in fact, George Washington was master of a lodge in Virginia—and no doubt the new settlers included some who had been received in the organization. Additionally, Masonic Lodges were a feature of military formations in those days. Practically every regiment had its own lodge. From one of these military lodges it is quite likely that Captain John Walden Myers derived his Masonic connection and zeal.

In 1790 one, John Taylor, settled on Lot 5 near the mouth of what then was known as Singleton's River. Very soon after, Captain John Walden Myers purchased the north half of the lot from Taylor and immediately erected a dam and a mill. There were no goldsmiths in the rough settlement or within considerable distance, so it must be assumed that Captain Myers brought his Masonic tiepin with him. In any event, he was the first master of a Masonic Lodge in the settlement and is officially recorded as having been in that office during 1802-03.

Prior to that time, in 1796, John Simpson erected the first tavern located on the south-east corner of Dundas and Front streets. It became the meeting place of the Masonic brethren, no doubt from the time of its erection, for the application or a charter must have been made some time prior to the actual official opening of the lodge. Communications were slow in those days and it would require more than a year to get an answer back from England.

Walked to Kingston

According to a minute in the books of Ancient St. John's Lodge of Kingston, the officers of Thurlow Lodge were installed in that city after having walked the fifty miles from Belleville, and the lodge duly constituted on the 10th of March, 1801.

Let us consider for a moment the community then which now is the fine city of Belleville.

When the Township of Thurlow was surveyed in 1787 it was known as "Nuitte town." With the coming of the Loyalists the tiny settlement at the mouth of the river became known as Myer's Creek. The river had been called Singleton's River (after one of the first settlers), though it was known to the Indians as Sangon-aska.

In 1816 Governor Gore visited Thurlow Lodge and at that meeting announced the change of name of the community to Belleville, after his daughter, Lady Bella. Concurrently the lodge changed its name to Belleville Lodge. At that time there were less than 150 inhabitants.

Asa Yeomans, who was master of the lodge in 1820, became one of the first members of the Board of Police when Belleville was established as a separate municipality in 1836.

The original Simpson's Inn was destroyed by fire in 1812 and the first charter and records of the lodge were burned. The Inn was rebuilt and the Lodge resumed meetings there. The blacksmith shop of William Clarke on Front street, just below Dundas, is said to be a survival of part of the second Simpson's Inn.

Very little is known of the progress of the lodge after Capt. Myers turned over the symbols of office to Squire J. R. Bleecker for the year 1804. Fourteen years pass before the name of another master of the lodge is known. He was A. B. Couch, who presided in 1818-19, followed by Asa Yeomans in 1820. The lodge records show no master's name for 1821 but what appears to be a travelling certificate issued to a "duly qualified brother," Conrad Dafoe, in December of that year is signed by Benjamin Ketcheson as W.M., Belleville Lodge No. 17.

English Lodge Divisions

It is necessary to digress briefly if the circumstances surrounding the early days of this Masonic Lodge are to be comprehended.

For some fifty years prior to December 1, 1813, there had been a sharp division among Masonic Lodges in England. The seceding groups termed themselves the "ancients" while characterizing the main body as "moderns"—due to some trifling changes proposed in the ancient practices of Masonry. For many years efforts were made to heal the breach, this finally being accomplished in 1813 by H. R. H. Prince Edward, Duke of Kent, as grandmaster of one faction; and H. R. H. Prince Augustus Frederick, Duke of Sussex, as grandmaster of the other.

When Thurlow Lodge changed its name to "Belleville Lodge" there appears to have been a connection established with the dissenting group of English Masons, for the lodge apparently was under suspension for a time by the main English body, and then to have been chartered by the dissenting group. Possibly this explains the "No. 17" on Bro. Conrad Dafoe's certificate.

With the news of the union of Grand Lodges in England, the Belleville Lodge again was rechartered, but it appeared to have required some considerable time after the English union.

Old Names in Charter

The charter of Moira Lodge No. 11 as now constituted hangs on the lodge room walls and provides a clue to the earlier difficulties of affiliation. The charter bears the seal of W. M. Wilson, and is dated July 14, 1858. It reads, in part, as follows:

"We, William Mercer Wilson, Esquire, &c., &c., of Simcoe, in the county of Norfolk, Canada West, Grand Master of the Antient and Honourable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons of Canada, send greeting.

"Whereas a warrant or dispensation bearing date, February 5822, was granted by His Grace the Duke of Sussex, then Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of England to certain Brethren therein named, authorizing and empowering them and their successors to open and hold a Lodge in Belleville, Upper Canada, and which was then designated or known as Belleville Lodge No. 4 on the Registry of the Provincial Grand Lodge, U. C., and No. 496 on the Registry of the Grand Lodge of England, and which said Lodge was opened and held accordingly: And whereas the Brethren composing the Lodge, viz., William Henry Coleman, W.M.; William Hamilton Ponton, S.W.; James Fraser, J.W.; Frederick William Allport, John Bell, Alford Argyles Campbell, Andrew Ball Elmer, John Charles Franck, Lewis Grant, Henry G. Gillespie, Ej. J. Sisson, and others, have applied to Us for a Warrant of Affiliation and Constitution under this our Grand Lodge of Canada;

"Now, know ye, that We being well satisfied with the good conduct of the Brethren of the said Lodge, and in compliance with their Petition, do hereby grant this Our Warrant of Constitution authorizing them and their successors to continue to assemble and hold a Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons in the Town of Belleville in the Western Division of this Province, under the title or denomination of Moira Lodge, to be enrolled and registered in the Books of Our Grand Lodge, No. ——, and to be assembled and holden as heretofore or at such other times as may be resolved upon by the Brethren of the said Lodge from time to time........"

Division in Canada

Behind that charter lies a story of difficulties attending the establishment of Masonry in a new land under the British Crown. The Grand Lodge of England, little understanding conditions in this country, had refused to accede to a petition for a separate and autonomous Grand Lodge of Canada. Certain of the Lodges proceeded to form such a body and for many years there were parallel Grand Lodges—the independent group, and the Provincial Grand Lodge subordinate to the Grand Lodge of England. The union of the two bodies was effected on July 14, 1858—the date inscribed on the charter of Moira Lodge No. 11. So it is quite evident that Moira Lodge was one of those lodges remaining up to that date under the jurisdiction of the United Grand Lodge of England.

Another difficulty of that time was that the Grand Lodges of Ireland and Scotland had proceeded to charter lodges in Canada. Actually at one time Masonic lodges were functioning under five separate jurisdictions in Canada. Happily, that condition long since has been mollified.

Earl of Moira

The present name of the lodge is derived from the Earl of Moira, who with his family connections, contributed much in the names of this section. The family name, Rawdon, is borne by one township, as are the names of Hungerford and Huntingdon townships derived from his wife's maiden name and connections. As Lord Hastings he gave his name to this county. And, of course, the Moira River and Moira village derive their names from his first title.

Great tribute is paid by the Masonic chroniclers to the zeal of the Earl of Moira. This gentleman was born in 1754 as Francis Rawdon. In 1775 he proceeded to America as a lieutenant of the 5th Foot Regiment. He fought brilliantly in the Revolutionary War and later was invalided home. He was captured by a French ship on the way, but later exchanged. He fought in Flanders and eventually became a general. His interest in Masonry seemed to have developed from his initiation in Irish Regimental Lodges during the American campaign, and his return to England was followed by his gradual rise in Masonic councils. He became Acting Grand Master of England, this position being conferred upon him by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales (later King George III) who was Grand Master. The Earl of Moira carried this acting capacity for 21 years. As Lord Hastings he became Governor General of India and helped carry Masonry to that land. He died in December, 1836 on board H.M.S. "Revenge" at Naples and was buried in the ramparts of Malta.

During his period of Acting Grand Master, the Earl of Moira became patron of the first Moira Lodge in London, England, which was constituted in 1755 as No. 92 and is still functioning. It has a fixed membership of 50, and the only variation ever made was in conferring honorary membership on the late Col. W. N. Ponton of Belleville (then Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario) and W. S. Harrington of Napanee, when they carried fraternal greetings from Moira Lodge of Belleville.

A letter written by the Earl of Moira is framed and occupies an honoured position on the Belleville lodgeroom walls. It was presented to the lodge by Mr. Fred Ketcheson of Toronto.

Moira Lodge had only three meeting places in Belleville Following the period in Simpson's Tavern the lodgeroom was established in a building on Church street just north of the Bridge Street United Church. Between 50 and 60 years ago removal was made to the present Masonic Temple on Front street opposite the Upper Bridge.

Next Wednesday night will see the official visit of the District Deputy Grand Master for Prince Edward District to Moira Lodge, marking the commencement of the 140th year of its official existence.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

The "Freezing" Treatment of Cancer

Newspapers have been giving much space to the new method (freezing) of treating cancer, because cancer touches so many homes. The new treatment is just what its name implies. The tissues of the body are made so cold that the growth of the cancer tissues is prevented. As you know, cancer tissues or cells are not different from ordinary body cells except that they do not grow in the regular or orderly way of normal body cells. The "freezing" treatment, as originated by Drs. Temple Fay and Lawrence W. Smith, Philadelphia, and outlined in Medical World by Dr. Frederick C. Smith is as follows:

"An anaesthetic is given the patient so that he will not feel the cold. This prevents the shivering and discomfort which accompanies the start of the cooling process. After being given the anaesthetic, the patient is carried to one of the refrigerated rooms. Two patients are usually treated at once. The patient is placed on a rubber-covered mattress, stripped, and pieces of ice about an inch in diameter packed close around him. His temperature (taken by rectum or outlet from lower bowel) is recorded continuously on a huge dial thermometer beside the bed. A careful check is also kept on the heart beat and blood pressure. In about two hours internal temperature goes down to 90 degrees F. As soon as the needle on the big thermometer touches 82 degrees F., or temperature agreed upon, the ice is removed. From then on the chill of the room is depended upon to maintain the temperature. If the needle starts to drop rapidly blankets are placed over the patient. Feedings of food by the nose every hour and a half are given. For five days the patient is kept in this frigid or frozen state. At the end of the five days, he is brought slowly back to normal temperature. It required only two hours to cool him but about eight hours to bring the temperature up to normal."

I am passing along the above information so that the patient and his loved ones may know just what freezing treatment means and will not be afraid of pain and danger.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

J. BANKIER'S VOICE RECORDED FOR FRIENDS

So that relatives in Vancouver could hear his splendid tenor voice, James Bankier, well known soloist of this city, made six double phonograph records at the home of Leo B. Riggs last night, all of which were tested and found to be perfect recordings.

Mr. Bankier sang numerous Scotch songs and other well known ballads into the microphone for recording. "The results were exceedingly surprising when we played the records back on the phonograph. All recordings were very clear and quite audible," Mr. Riggs revealed today after accompanying Mr. Bankier last night.

The recordings were made by George Fralick, local radio and recording technician. Mr. Bankier had the recordings made to send to relatives in Vancouver, who are anxious to hear his splendid tenor shipped today. voice. The records were packed and

NEW NEON SIGN PLACED IN POSITION

Another flashing neon sign to brighten Belleville's "great white way", is being placed in its position above a local merchant's premises and will soon be flashing its message to pedestrians on Front Street. The huge sign, depicting the symbol of the Sherwin Williams Paint Co. was being placed over the local Sills' Book Store by employees of a Belleville electric wiring contractor.

Farewell Party Honors Mr. and Mrs. Tom Foley, Marmora

Marmora—Mr. Tom Foley, who has been employed by the Deloro Smelting and Refinery Company for several years has severed his connection with that firm and left on Friday for his home in Belleville, where he has accepted a position. On Thursday afternoon his fellow workers in the Stellite department presented him with a micrometer. The presentation was made by the superintendent of the Stellite department, J. A. Paquet.

On Thursday evening a number of Mr. Foley's friends met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Townson, Marmora, and presented him with a Schaeffer pen and pencil set. A social evening was spent and lunch was served. Tom has made a host of friends during his residence at Deloro, who regret his departure, and their best wishes will follow him in his new venture.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Elliott spent the week end in Toronto.

Miss Rita Shannon of Peterborough spent Friday at her home here.

Preliminary Voters' Lists in Mail Today

Preliminary voters' lists for Belleville and Trenton in the riding of South Hastings were completed yesterday and last night and are in the mails today.

Belleville electors received their copies this morning, while those for Trenton were forwarded to that place and will be distributed on Monday morning.

It should be remembered that the lists are preliminary and will be revised following the findings of the Court of Revision which sits here on March 12th-13- and 14th.

None of the three candidates for the riding have as yet deposited nomination papers with Returning Officer Colonel W. R. Rierdon, it was reported today, although candidates have until two p.m., on the official nomination day which falls on March 11th.

Mailing of the lists culminated long and tedious hours of labor on the part of the returning officer and his staff. This week they labored long into the night in order to get the lists in the mails in plenty of time to have revisions made.

FINLAND PLANS TO BUY SUPPLIES

Purchases to be Made in U.S. With $20,000,000 Credit Allocated to Her

Washington, March 2 (AP) — Finland sped arrangements today to buy gasoline, oil, grain and other vital supplies with the $20,000,000 credit which was allocated to her by the United States export-import bank yesterday even before President Roosevelt had signed legislation which made possible the loan.

Hjalmar J. Procope, the Finnish minister, said at a press conference that the supplies would be of great assistance to his country in withstanding the Russian invasion and that orders would be placed immediately.

Receiving the newsmen after a long distance telephone talk with Prime Minister Ryti in Helsinki, the minister assured them that Finland is far from defeated.

"When the war started most people thought we would be beaten within two or three days," he said. "We've been fighting three months now and we'll fight on, confident that help will come."

Procope disclosed that a considerable portion of the $20,000,000 credit would be spent for oil, gasoline, wheat, corn and lard. Most of the $10,000,000 previously granted, he said, has been used for needed supplies.

None of the export-import bank credit may be used for arms or ammunition.

Daughter of Oronytekha Dies At Tyendinaga Indian Reserve

Deseronto, March 2 — The sudden death of Mrs. Karakwineth Johnston, which occurred shortly before the noon hour Thursday, came as a great shock to her friends in Deseronto as well as to her many friends on the Tyendinaga Reserve and in her passing a link between the present and past has been broken.

Her father, the late Dr. Oronytekha, was one of the best known Mohawk Indians in the Province of Ontario and possibly in the Dominion of Canada, owing to the fact that he was the founder of the Independent Order of Foresters. Mrs. Johnston had planned to attend a meeting of the Women's Guild of Christ Church on the Reserve, Thursday afternoon, and Rev. Rural Dean Herbert Pringle, rector of Tyendinaga had called to take her to the meeting. She walked from her home to the car, a short distance and when about to enter the car collapsed and fell, passing away in a short time. Dr. W. C. Blackwell was summoned. The body was removed to the Gardner undertaking parlor.

Mrs. Johnston, who was 75 years of age, had not been in good health for some time owing to heart trouble, but had not been confined to the house. Residing with her were Mr. and Mrs. William John. She was a native of Tyendinaga Reserve and was christened Katherine Evangeline Oronytekha. However she always went by her Indian name, Karakwineth. In the early sixties, when the late King Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, visited Canada, among the many addresses of welcome which he received was one from the Mohawk Indians and the address was read by a young Indian, Oronytekha. So impressed was the Prince of Wales with this young Indian that arrangements were made to have him go to England to be educated and this was accordingly done, and it was at Oxford University under Dr. Ackland that young Oronytekha received a thorough education. Years later, when a son was born to Dr. and Mrs. Oronytekha, he was named Ackland Oronytekha who followed in the footsteps of his father and became a medical doctor.

The father of the deceased chose a medical career for some years, but gave it up after the founding of the Independent Order of Foresters as he was named Supreme High Chief Ranger, which position he held until his death in 1907. At the time of his death the train, which bore the remains to Napanee, was draped in black. The body was placed on a suburban train and was taken to Christ Church cemetery for interment.

Dr. Oronytekha during his many years with the Foresters did considerable travelling and visited the British Isles and Europe as well as Australia and other countries several times. On eight occasions he was accompanied by his daughter, who like her father, was exceptionally well educated. Dr. Oronytekha was a member of the Grand River tribe of Mohawk Indians, while his wife, who predeceased him, was a member of the Tyendinaga Mohawk tribe.

Many years ago when the Foresters decided to secure a suitable site for an orphanage, the island opposite Deseronto was secured and was later named Foresters Island. Some years later, it was found that it was not suitable and the children were removed to Oakville. The wigwam, which was sold by Mrs. Johnston years ago, is the only building on the island.

Mrs. Johnston was a devout Anglican and a prominent member of Christ Church on the Reserve. At the front of Christ Church is a beautiful memorial window, representing the Good Shepherd, which was given by the late Dr. Oronytekha. Other memorials were also given by the family. A hanging, beautifully embroidered, is in All Saint's Church, the gift of Mrs. Johnston. It occupies a prominent place in the chancel.

Mrs. Johnston was a member of the Woman's Guild, in which she took an active part and was also keenly interested in the annual Mohawk Fair, always sending considerable fancy work to be judged and assisting in the annual dinners.

Her brother, Dr. Ackland Oronytekha, passed away a few months after the death of his father. It is expected that the funeral service will be held in Christ Church, Saturday afternoon. There is a private plot in Christ Church cemetery for Dr. and Mrs. Oronytekha and family.

CARDINAL OPPOSES WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Lists Four Reasons Why He is Not in Favor of Proposal of Quebec Government

Quebec, Mar. 2 (CP).—Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve listed today in an official communique four reasons why he is "not in favor" of woman suffrage, which the Quebec government proposes to grant at the current legislature session for provincial elections.

Following are reasons:

"1—Because it goes against unity and hierarchy of families.

"2—Because its exercise exposes the woman to all the passions and adventures of electoralism.

"3—Because, in fact, it appears to us that the very great majority of the women of the province do not desire it.

"4—Because social reforms, economic reforms, hygienic reforms, etc., which are advanced to commend the right of woman suffrage can be obtained just as well thanks to the influence on politics of feminine organizations.

The communique, appearing over the name of the Cardinal, Archbishop of Quebec, said he believed he was expressing in the document "the common feeling of the Bishops of the province."

"To reply to numerous requests and to end divorce opinions attributed to us in connection with the project of a law according to women the right to vote in provincial elections, we feel bound to state our attitude," the communique said. "We are not in favor of political woman suffrage."

At the Quebec Legislature session opening Feb. 20, the Speech from the Throne announced the government planned to grant women the suffrage because under modern conditions they "play an all-important part and their cooperation has become indispensable in bringing about much needed social reforms."

The Legislative Assembly, provincial lower House, already has rejected such a measure more than a dozen times.

18 Months' Term Imposed in Car Theft

London, Ont., March 2 (CP) — Emery Gratton, 26 year old ex-convict was sentenced Friday to 18 months in Ontario Reformatory for car theft. He was arrested last night after a chase along downtown streets.

In 1934 Gratton received a two-year penitentiary term for complicity in a store robbery at Poplar Hill in which a stolen car was used.

Gratton took the automobile from a sales lot last night and in the ensuing chase five cars were damaged. When a constable riding on the running board caught up with him, Gratton jumped from his moving machine and fled down a river bank where he was finally apprehended.

FINNS BURNING CITY OF VIIPURI AS THEY RETREAT

Russian Losses Continue to be Heavy in Their Sustained Offensive

FINNISH STATEMENT

Helsinki, Mar. 2 (AP).—Air alarms kept Helsinki's citizenry in bomb-proof shelters an aggregate of 4¼ hours today as Russian warplanes roared over the outskirts of the city on numerous occasions.

The Russians flew at a great height bound for objectives farther north.

The air activity coincided with heavy fighting on the outskirts of Viipuri, southeastern Finnish seaport and key to the Karelian Isthmus.

(A Soviet communique said the Finns were burning the city as they fell back and that the Russians were in the southern suburbs.)

The Finns acknowledged that after three months of war, including a month of sustained assault against this objective, the Russians were moving on Viipuri from the south and east by land and from the southwest over the island-dotted ice of Viipuri Bay.

Russian losses continued to be heavy, the Finns said, in fighting along the entire isthmus front from the edge of Viipuri on the west to the fortress of Taipale on the east. Taipale, on the Lake Ladoga shore, is holding fast despite heavy aerial bombardments, they said.

Official Review.

An official Finnish review for February of the Russian invasion, which began Nov. 30, said:

"Abandoning our foremost positions is not of decisive significance in the defence system of the isthmus. In actual fact, the enemy has gained possession, after these bloody battles, which have cost him extremely dearly, of a relatively small area.

"One has every reason to ask whether the result will compensate for the sacrifices of power. Many examples from military history show that similar small results gained by great efforts may in the course of time prove expensive and even downright fatal for the attacker."

Russians Announce Capture

(The Russian communique said that since Feb. 11 Soviet troops had captured 922 Finnish fortifications, including 235 iron and concrete artillery forts ;and that the Finns had lost 506 guns, 2,732 machine guns, 19 tanks, 20,000 shells, 10,000 rifles and more than 14,000,000 cartridges.

(It listed capture yesterday of the towns of Heinjoki, Mannikkala and Tali, the southern outskirts of Viipuri, Cape Keijasneimi on the western coast of Viipuri Bay, and the Paakkolanokoski waterfall area on the Vuoksi River which roughly bisects the Isthmus.

(These positions would locate the battle lines generally from Taipale ,on the east only ,a dozen miles from the Russian border, up the Vuoski River to a point slightly northeast of Viipuri, and thence westward to Viipuri, which is about 50 miles from the nearest point on the Russian border

(The Russians said other sectors were quiet, but mentioned that the air force brought down 11 Finnish planes in combat. Since Feb 11, the communique said, 191 Finnish planes have been shot down while the Russians have lost 21.)

English Jury Dismisses Charge

Winchester, England, March 2—(CP)—A jury at the Hampshire Assizes today dismissed a charge of malicious wounding against a Canadian soldier, Gunner Bertram Atherton, 24, alleged to have attacked another Canadian Gunner, Phillip McLeod, with a broken bottle in a Farnborough Hotel, Jan. 30.

McLeod testified he was walking across a room at the hotel and when he was pushed from behind he stumbled and fell, and that a "general mix-up" followed.

Average Hog Yields 115 lbs. of Wiltshire Sides

From the information contained in the last two articles it will be seen that the average hog yields 115 lbs of Wiltshire sides, and a number of other products. The latter have a varying degree of value at different times, and at different points in Canada.

At present the Board is paying $17.70 per 100 pounds of A1 grade sizeable Wiltshires, delivered seaboard. Therefore, the Board is paying for 115 pounds of Wiltshires, the product of a 200 lb. hog:

$17.70 plus 115—$20.35.

In addition to the $20.35 received by the packers for 115 pounds of Wiltshire, he has for sale or manufacture into other products, by-products which have a value of about $1.60. Therefore, the total gross return is:

$20.35 plus $1.60—$21.95.

If, for example, the Packer pays $12 per 100 pounds for a carcass of 150 pounds hot dressed weight at Toronto, and in addition, pays $1.00 premium for an A Grade (Select) it would cost $19.00 at the plant, and $19.00 subtracted from the above return of $21.95 would leave a difference of $2.95. According to these calculations, the Packer has $2.95 with which to pay the cost of buying, killing, cutting, curing, holding baling Wiltshires; shipping, loading, paper, icing or heating; to provide for loss due to bruising and rejections; to take care of Plant Supervision and overhead, and to pay freight on the product to seaboard.

Some good lots marketed from the Belleville district during the week of March 1st., are as follows:—

Name	Address	No. of Hogs	Grade A	B	C	D	Premium
Foster Wilson	Stirling	8	5	3			5.00
D. Spencer	Belleville	6	3	3			3.00
H. Foster	Tweed	6	3	3			3.00
W. Booth	Tweed	3	2	1			2.00
D. Leinstaber	Tweed	6	4	2			4.00
R. Redner	Belleville	5	3	2			3.00
C. Wilson	Foxboro	5	3	2			3.00

Any farmer who experiences any difficulty in obtaining his premiums, kindly notify W. M. Gordon, Federal Dept. of Agriculture, Canada Packers Limited, Peterborough, Ontario.

Congress Party's Resolution on Indian Question

London, Mar. 2 (CP).—The "uncompromising resolution" adopted by the Indian Congress party seems to have dissipated hopes that a satisfactory solution of the Indian question would be found," the News Chronicle said today.

"Yesterday the executive committee of the Congress passed an uncompromising resolution demanding "complete independence and nothing less'," the newspaper said. "Dominion status is turned down and civil disobedience is threatened.

"This is a lamentable state of affairs. Nothing could do more harm to the Allied cause in the war than the spectacle of India in revolt for its independence and repressed by force. Our own conscience would rebel at such an outcome.

"The one bright spot in the situation is that Gandhi apparently prevailed on the Congress to keep the door open for a few days more. Those days should be the busiest that the Viceroy, and all in India who want agreement, have ever had."

THREE BODIES FOUND IN NORTH

Believed to be Three Airmen From Quebec Missing Since Sept. 12, Last

St. Johns Nfd., March 2—(CP)—Word received in St. John's Friday from Hopedale in northern Labrador said the bodies of three Quebec province men missing since last September had been found near there. The three were on an airplane flight in the Labrador area.

In the party were Pilot Joseph Fecteau of Montreal, G. H. Davidson of Montreal and J. C. Cote of Three Rivers, Que. They were reported missing Sept. 12 last.

No details of the finding of the bodies was available immediately.

Hopedale is about midway between Hudson Strait and the Strait of Belle Isle. The inland area is heavily wooded.

Livestock Board to be Established if Manion Elected

Toronto, March 2 (CP)—Conservative leader Manion will set up a livestock board to regulate and control the industry if he is elected to power in the March 26 general election, he said in a statement issued here yesterday.

Dr. Manion's statement:

"All over Canada, I get complaints from livestock men and particularly from hog raisers, that they are being unfairly dealt with in favor of the packers.

"This is a complicated question on which I naturally am not an authority, but I am very much impressed with these complaints which are far too widespread to be ignored.

"Therefore, I am determined that immediately after the election, I shall have a fair and very complete investigation made into the whole livestock industry and its relations to the packers.

"If injustices are found as claimed they will be rectified at once. In addition,

Mr. and Mrs. John Lafferty, Station Street, announce the engagement of their daughter Helen May to Mr. Clifford Elwin Bowler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clem Bowler, Victoria Ave. The marriage will take place early in April.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lewis, E. Bridge Street, entertained to dinner on Friday evening, Rev. Dr. and Mrs. James Semple, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Bottum of Belleville, and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lott of Sidney.

Mrs. John Vandevoort, Peterborough, formerly Beatrice Schryver and Miss Dora Schryver, Toronto, visited Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, Cedar Street. Mrs. Rogers, Mrs Vandevoort and Miss Schryver had not met in thirty-two years, when they were school friends together.

Mrs. Reginald Collis and her son, Mr. Reginald Collis, R.C.A.F. station, Trenton, are in Barrie, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Brown.

Little Miss Isabel Armitage, 241 East Bridge Street, was hostess to twelve of her friends on Thursday, in celebration of her eleventh birthday. An enjoyable afternoon was spent at the conclusion of which a delicious party lunch was served. A beautifully decorated birthday cake was the centre of attraction at the supper.

Flight-Lieut. P. G. Baskerville, who has been visiting with Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Bate, Ottawa, has returned to Trenton. Mrs. Baskerville will remain in Ottawa, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bate for some time longer.

Ackerman Hall, Albert College, was the scene of a brilliant social event last evening, when the Principal and Faculty were at home to the students and ex-students of the College. The function was in the nature of an Alumni Re-union and graduates from Timmins, Guelph, Lynden, Dutton, Picton, Sudbury, Fergus, Toronto, Ottawa, Western, Toronto and Queen's Universities were present for the occasion. The guests were received by Mrs. Bert Howard, Mrs. T. C. McMullen and Miss Jessie B. Tuite. Ackerman Hall was enhanced with the colors of the school which were used extensively in the decorative arrangements. Over one hundred couples were present and the lovely gowns of the ladies made the scene a picture of charm. Bud Haines and His Commodores provided an excellent dance program. Delectable refreshments were served under the direction of the staff dietician, Miss Ina Carthew, B.H.Sc.

A Young Favorite

By PRUNELLA WOOD ....

ALL OF US need two or more light coats including the all-around tweed topper which serves several seasons running. If this is your Spring to invest in a new model you're a lady in luck. For one reason, colors are plentiful; for another styels are becoming. The pretty coat sketched come in cherry red, orange, navy, cinnamon, carame, chartreuse, periwinkle, pale biege and pale yellow! Put the rest of your wardrobe down in black and white before deciding . . . the brilliant shade may be as practical to have and lots more fun.

Besides rounded revers and natural looking shoulders, this particular coat is notable for its six-gore back, features which encourage wearing it over afternoon as well as sports ensembles. The fabric is a soft Shetland type of tweed, buttoned in color and doubly at the waist.

Light Years

I

Silent, athrill, we stand before the gate
Of Mystery, unnumbered aeons long
Fast shut against the curious, questioning throng;
For now, to eager eyes that watch and wait,
Dim gleams of cosmic splendour emanate.
The stars their secrets yield; to us belong
The whisper-prelude of their spheral song.
Steeped in that wonderment, we walk elate.

Yet, mighty God! lest we should lose our way,
Loosed from our earthly moorings, in the vast,
Illimitable spaces, be our stay!
Grant us to know Thine arms around us cast,
Thy kindly light to lead us into day,
Thy love to bring us safely home at last!

II

I used to love the stars of evening skies;
They were God's buttercups in fields of blue,
Or golden daisies newly washed in dew;
Or they were angel children's laughing eyes.
I thought: "When I grow taller and more wise,
On tiptoe in some mountain path I'll view
Them very, very near!" In dreams I drew
Down with my small, frail hand a glittering prize.

To-day those "buttercups" have sterner names;
They have for petals terrible, swift flames.
Removed by light years infinitely far,
How inaccessible the nearest star!
In millions, billions, trillions stretch the miles
Between me and those twinkling angel smiles.

III

Oh, is there loss, or is there any gain
In lore that shatters olden dreams and sweet
And flings chaotic wreckage at our feet,
Of mansions we may never build again?
Is there a recompense for all earth's pain,
Some peaceful shore where friend with friend shall meet,
Where broken lives shall rise, glad, strong, complete,
And blessed immortality attain?

One only, He who set the rhythmic race
Of suns and planets whirling on their way,
Yet loves each violet in its lowly place,
Can answer all our questionings to day.
The loving heart shall know Him face to face.
And in His light all doubt shall flee away.

IV

Then gladsomely, on buoyant thought a-wing,
Through morning splendour or the evening glow,
Let us fare forth as far as dreams may go,
In faith and hope, for Truth adventuring!
Sublime sphere music, myriad-tongued, shall ring
Through cosmic solitudes; and we shall know
That ultimately only good can flow
From Him whose glory all the aeons sing.

Earth years are rich with wonder and surprise,
And beauty ever seeks the seeking eyes.
How overbrimming, then, light years must be,
The unit measures of infinity!
Nor can we lose ourselves, below, above,
For God is everywhere, and He is love.

Women Helpers Off To France

London, March 2—(CP)— Three hundred women and girls will leave England for France soon to serve at the many social centres and canteens being established in the British zone.

Following a "full speed ahead" order from G. H. Q., such organizations as the Salvation Army, the Y. M. C. A., the Church Army, the Church of Scotland and the Catholic Women's League are helping in this new drive for the welfare of the fighting forces.

In addition to the Y.M.C.A. centres to be set up the Association will soon have in operation in France their mobile canteens— or Tea Cars. The General Secretary, Z. F. Willis, reports a heavy demand from all commands for the cars. They supply the troops with tea, cigarettes, chocolates and other snacks.

A number of canteens will be set up in the Maginot Line for British troops serving there, but these will be run by men.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Well to Consult Doctor in Cases Relating to Illness

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 23, was engaged to a certain girl, with whom I had gone "steady" for three years. I had even purchased two rings. Then she was taken ill and had to go to a sanitarium. After she had been there for six months, friends told me I ought to give her up because she'd never be well. I did this, much to my sorrow. That was about a year ago.

Recently she returned home because of her mother's death and although she ignored me at first, she now tells me she still loves me, and I know I care deeply for her. Do you think it's wise to renew our friendship? She has improved a great deal and seems to be on the road to recovery. Please help me decide.
Al.

The person to consult in this matter is the physician who had charge of the young lady's case. Very often young people, especially victims of t.b., make a complete cure, and it's safe for them to marry. You haven't told me the nature of the young lady's illness, but in any case, it would be wise to consult her doctor.

Lost Him Because She Went Out With a Married Man

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a young man who lives in my neighborhood. We started going together soon after we met, and before long he told me he loved me. I wouldn't believe him at first but when he said we would get married as soon as he got a good job, I thought he meant it.

Now he has left me, telling me he doesn't love me anymore. The only reason I can see is that he found out I had gone out with a married man friend of mine, because soon after that he said I should forget him.

I think of him all the time. What shall I do, Miss Fairfax? Shall I forget him or try to get him back. I go out with other boys to pass the time, but he says he doesn't go with anyone, and doesn't intend to for a long time.
Lorraine.

If the man was a friend of yours, that is, a family friend, I can't see that going out with him a few times constitutes the unforgivable sin. And as he has not replaced you by going out with another girl, the situation looks hopeful.

Divorced Her Husband. Now Regrets it

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We could neither live together nor without each other, and when our boy was four and I didn't want to live in a house where constant arguing and quarrelling were going on, I suggested a divorce. My husband didn't want it. He begged for another chance. But I was so worn out with it all that I refused. And the divorce and the custody of our son was given to me.

Now I'm miserable beyond words. I saw my husband at the movies with another woman and I have been wretchedly unhappy ever since. We spoze as we left the theatre. He looked back at me and waved before he got into his car. I'd love to re-marry him and try again, but of course it would hurt my pride. What would you suggest?
Forlorn.

Pride butters no parsnips, my dear, as someone has said. Why not, before this affair with the other lady goes too far, write him a note and say you'd like to see him? You have this minor child who needs the help and influence of both parents, and if your husband agrees to re-marry you, why not do the simple thing and stop quarrelling? After all, it takes two to make a quarrel. Best wishes.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

When we put into the mail-box our letter of acknowledgment of an invitation, we should feel sure that it is correct in every detail. It should represent, with appropriate form, our courteous expression of the hospitality that is being offered us.

The most important rule to remember in acknowledging an invitation is that an invitation should be answered in kind; that is, a formal invitation by a formal acknowledgment, worded with the same formality and spaced as nearly as possible like the invitation; and an informal invitation by an informal answer.

An excellent rule to remember—when one is in doubt as to whether or not an invitation should be answered, is this: all invitations that "request the pleasure of your company" require an answer. And, of course, if R. s.v.p. or the English equivalent are written on them, they must be answered.

A polite habit, which is really easy for us to form and which will be a delight and convenience to our hostess, is the answering of invitations promptly, especially invitations to small parties.

Acceptances and regrets are always written by hand. An engraved form to be filled is in unspeakable taste.

When an invitation is accepted, the day and hour should be repeated, in order to avoid a possible mistake. When the invitation is regretted, it is not necessary to repeat the hour.

The reply to a formal invitation should be worded in the third person, as is the invitation.

A note of invitation should be answered by a note, either of acceptance or regret.

Four Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A mother and three daughters are invited to a church wedding and to the reception afterward.

1. How many separate replies are required?

2. What is the correct form of wording to these replies?

3. Which is the more formal wording of an invitation: "request the honor of your presence" or "request the pleasure of your presence"?

K.

1. Each invited guest should send her own reply to the invitation to the reception. (The invitation to the ceremony does not require an answer.)

2. (The acknowledgment of this invitation should be written on the first page of formal letter-paper, white and double-sheeted, and should be worded as nearly as possible in the form of the invitation. Like this:

Mrs. Arthur Jones Brown
accepts with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's Parents)'s
kind invitation for their daughter's wedding reception
on Tuesday, the first of March at five o'clock
Two Home Place

If the invitation is to be declined, this is the form:

Miss Edith Allen Brown
regrets that she is unable to accept
Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's Parents)'s
kind invitation
for their daughter's wedding
reception
on Tuesday, the first of July

It is unnecessary in the "regret" to repeat the hour and the place, since this is, obviously, now not in point.

3. The difference between the phrases "request and honour of your presence" and "request the pleasure of your company" is that "request the honour of your presence" is used for the invitation to the church ceremony, and "request the pleasure of your company" is used for the invitation to the reception or wedding breakfast, and also is used for the invitation to a house wedding.

And, by the way, in a marriage invitation or in any formal invitation that has to do with a wedding, honour is spelled with the u. Also, if the word favour is used, as in "the favour of a reply is requested", it too is spelled with the u.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Infectious Diseases

I am glad to find that diphtheria is another of the rapidly disappearing diseases of childhood. It is still a very treacherous disease if we don't take advantage of the serum at our disposal, but when we do it can be treated successfully.

Diphtheria is a serious menace because children who contract it don't seem very ill at first. The result is that sometimes they are allowed to go without treatment by their parents until they become so weak that there is little hope of saving them. There is no dramatic onset of symptoms as there is in many children's diseases; no sudden rise of temperature or convulsions.

The disease settles most frequently about the throat, and yet the child may not complain of having a sore throat even after he has become pale, slightly feverish, drowsy and dopey.

All the time this stage is being reached, membranes are forming inside the throat. They grow and grow and then the child may cough and dislodge some of this thick, chunky material and have it slip down the wind pipe. When this happens the child will die in a few minutes if something isn't done at once.

Sometimes these membranes continue to grow without being dislodged. They increase in size until they actually shut off the air passages by their thickness. Under these conditions, the child will choke to death if he gets no relief.

Diphtheria is accompanied by severe damage to the heart as well, and frequently after a child has recovered from an attack of diphtheria, he must spend long periods in bed to give the heart a chance to recover.

These are the dangers of diphtheria, a disease that can be stamped right out of existence today by the use of serums. This hasn't been the case long. A few years ago when the serum was bulky, it cost about $25 for enough to give a child the proper amount of immunity. It was hard to get too, in more isolated areas. In those days I saw five and six children in a family wiped out by the disease.

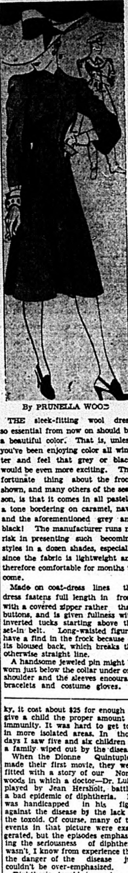
When the Dionne Quintuplets made their first movie, they were fitted with a story of our North woods in which a doctor—Dr. Luke, played by Jean Hersholt, battled a bad epidemic of diphtheria. He was handicapped in his fight against the disease by the lack of the toxoid. Of course, many of the events in that picture were exaggerated, but the episodes emphasizing the seriousness of diphtheria wasn't. I know from experience that the danger of the disease just couldn't be over-emphasized.

Diphtheria toxoid is made by extracting poisons from organisms which produce the disease and mixing them with materials which prevent their being effective. These mixtures are injected into the child's body to build up immunity. Usually three doses are given, in the arm.

Early in their lives the Dionne Quintuplets were toxoided. In those days diphtheria would likely have been fatal to some of them.

Mothers are advised to see that these innoculations begin at the age of six months. In most communities today provision is made for the administration of toxoid free of charge. An inquiry addressed to the local county or state board of health will bring information about these.

Coat Frock



By PRUNELLA WOOD

THE sleek-fitting wool dress so essential from now on should be a beautiful color. That is, unless you've been enjoying color all winter and feel that grey or black would be even more exciting. The fortunate thing about the frock shown, and many others of the season, is that it comes in all pastels, a tone bordering on caramel, navy and the aforementioned grey and black! The manufacturer runs no risk in presenting such becoming styles in a dozen shades, especially since the fabric is lightweight and therefore comfortable for months to come.

Made on coat-dress lines the dress fastens full length in front with a covered zipper rather than buttons, and is given fullness with inverted tucks starting above the set-in belt. Long-waisted figures have a find in the frock because of its bloused back, which breaks the otherwise straight line.

A handsome jeweled pin might be worn just below the collar under one shoulder and the sleeves encourage bracelets and costume gloves.

WALLBRIDGE W.I.

The Wallbridge Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. L. Ketcheson on Wednesday, February 28th with the president, Mrs. S. Nicolson presiding. During the business period it was decided to sponsor a pot luck supper, the proceeds to be used for Red Cross work. The Red Cross Committee reported 26 pairs of socks, 1 pair of wristlets and 9 pyjamas finished. The program was in charge of Mrs. R. Noyes and consisted of community singing, a reading "Lord Tweedsmuir" by Mrs. B. Hinchcliffe, a solo "The Bridge" by Mrs. C. J. Massey, a piano solo by Mrs. C. Smith and an excellent paper on "Pioneer Women" by Mrs. Roscoe Vanderwater in which she described the many phases of work of pioneer women, such as sewing, dyeing and rug making, weaving, making of butter, bread, soap, candles, etc. When we consider the work of pioneer women we wonder if women today are making good use of time saved by modern conveniences. Relics of pioneer days were exhibited. The singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting, followed by the serving of lunch.

Prof. Vlastos Speaks To Young Women's Guild

"The Christian in this Social Struggle" was the topic of a talk by Prof. Vlastos of Queen's University to the Young Women's Guild at their last regular meeting. Between fifty and sixty members met at the home of Mrs. Bews, Albert St., where supper was first served at 6.30.

Prof. Vlastor stated that he was dealing not so much with the economic nor political problem as with the human problem.

A few centuries ago enlightenment was considered the great need of humanity. Voltaire said "So long as men believe absurdities so long will they commit atrocities." But look now at our civilized, enlightened world.

Many an average man whose thoughts a few months ago dealt only with trivialities is now either inflicting death or suffering death. We who are not in an environment where we are tempted to brutality deal still in trivialities. As an example the speaker cited the fact that the day the Nazis entered Prague, English newspapers gave more attention to the results of an international cricket match in South Africa. We often speak of primitive man as living in an unreal world. It is we who are living in an unreal world of trivialities.

The speaker defined Fear as a panic in which all else than one's own life ceases to matter. The essence of the Christian theory of Love is just the opposite to this. Lives that can share or complete each other's life as in the case of the Good Samaritan exemplify this.

Love is the natural way to life. It is our environment, our organization of life that isolates man from man, so that in difficult places he becomes actually brutal.

If we say Hitlerism is the cause of the war we have to go back and enquire what caused the rise of the Hitler party. This was due to the period of unemployment in Germany coupled with the wealth of great industrialists, who fooled themselves by spending vast sums to help Hitler. Germany was not able to provide her unemployed with a sop like England, France, United States and Canada.

Here was the great absurdity.—There stood the machinery, the means of producing food and all good things, but it could not be worked unless to the profit of private owners. In order to make better economic conditions, and hence the way of Love possible, such means of production must be put to work for the good of all.

The facts of our economic system do more than agitators. As examples of such facts the speaker quoted $518 as the average annual income of over 50% of Canadian wage-earners in 1931. Gifted students, for example, sons of farmers, are being pushed out of University because of increased fees and decreased home revenue

Here is a job to be done. The leaders in such cases will be the people who suffer most, for example farmers and workers. The task of a group of women such as Prof. Vlastos was addressing is to study Labor movements and help by defending the democratic system so that by legitimate means, through it, rather than by revolution, in the long run the majority will gain their needs.

In the period of confusion after the war will come the step towards greater democracy or else the breakdown of these institutions. Democracy, the speaker defined as, the equalizing of opportunity.

Some six years ago a "Fellowship of Christian Social Order" originated and is growing rather rapidly. Its aim is to find reality in a world of hypocrisy and to dispel the complacency of our society.

Prof. Vlastos congratulated the Young Women's Guild as an unique group gathering to think of and discuss seriously the issues of life.

In a brief informal period allowed the members for asking questions Prof. Vlastos recommended for reliable reading studies by the Brookins Institute of Washington and "Canada Today" by F. R. Scott.

After the speaker had left to return to Kingston a business meeting was held.—Contributed.

FRIENDS IN NEED.

Clarinda, Ia., Mar. 2 (AP).—Ralph Lyman crawled painfully to the telephone. "This is Dr. Burnett," the voice in the receiver said, "I want you to come up and look at my furnace. It's on the blink."

"I think you'd better come and look at me first," Lyman replied. He had slipped, broken his leg rushing to answer the phone call.

The doctor obliged, set the leg.

Sparkling Assets

IS YOUR jewelry becoming? Some faces and hands are flattered by the gleam of gold, others by silver. The bright stone brings out the beauty of certain shades of eyes and hair and skin, the pale stone doing equally well by other shades. The only way to find out is to try on whatever you're considering purchasing, whether it's a dollar clip which amuses you or a precious piece of decor you'll love wearing indefinitely. Often the advice of another in invaluable; you may get a suggestion you wouldn't think of in a lifetime. The beautiful evening accents pictured are in line with the current vogue for pale stones. The gold, flexible bracelet is banked by diamonds and studded with one gigantic pink zircon, the clip with rose tourmalines. Diamonds are also set in the rosebud earrings. Painting an Expression in Lips

By HELEN FOLLETT

YOU HEAR is said that beauty fads are transients; they come and go like gadding women. What about the lipstick? Mama wielded it when papa went away to World War No. 1, more than 20 years ago. She was surprised at her courage; some of her friends pursed their lips and curled their noses, fancied mama wasn't a very nice girl.

As a means of portrait decorating, the little crimson pencil is a humdinger. Even the great-grandmothers get away with it. Very pretty with white hair and the transparent, delicate skin that develops with the years. Small girls can't wait until they are granted the privilege of touching up their mouth portals.

While the rosebud mouth—the Gish girls have it—is not the pattern strived for by the lassie of 1940, it does become the mousie one who puts on the naive line and stays, oh! so girlish! The exotic lady who wears clothes with splendor and is always six miles ahead of the fashion parade gives her lips a wider outline. No Cupid's bow for her.

This business of marking out a lip pattern is important. All the facial features must be considered. Don't forget that the wide application makes the cheeks look gaunt. This preacher of pulchritude believes that in all cases the coloring should do a fadeaway at the lip corners. If it doesn't, one may take on a down-in-the-mouth expression.

SUSAN HAYWARD . . . forms a neat pattern when applying lipst[illegible]

Neglect your hands, and there's no telling what they'll look like. Keep them fair of surface by applying lemon juice. Keep half a lemon in the kitchen, plunge the finger-tip into the pulp after preparing vegetables. Stains are easily removed when treated right away.

Get a tube of toilet lanoline, use on your hands after you have massaged your face with fragrant cream at night. The oily substance will keep the hands from looking old before their time.

Avoid strong cleansing agents; they raise the dickens with feminine mitts. Extremely hot and extremely cold water are bad for them; too much hot water will cause the flesh to swell, then fall into fine lines.

Sweet Bells Jangled Out of Tune

Hysteria or nervous exhaustion has marred the life, as well as the beauty, of many a charming woman. Nothing so quickly brings the care lines and wrinkles of age as the worry, irritability and ill-temper which are associated with exhaustion of the nerves.

There is a way to overcome this condition effectively and that is by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You, of course, know of this medicine but perhaps you have failed to realize what great good it has in store for you. Why not change your condition of unhappiness and win back good health and the beauty and joy which goes with it?

ONE WOMAN WHO KNOWS ELECTIONS

Helen Doherty, Director of Speakers' Bureau for Liberal Party, is Daughter of Former Belleville Resident

By MURIEL ADAMS
OTTAWA.

All is calm in the nerve-centre of Ottawa Liberal co-operation here when Helen Doherty, feminine mainspring of the National Federation of Liberal Women of Canada views the pre-election scene with smiling serenity.

In Miss Doherty's office the telephone rings constantly. Messenger boys come one after another with urgent telegrams from all parts of the country. Still there is no confusion.

Miss Doherty, director of the speakers' bureau for the Liberal campaign, although still in her 30s, meets an election with the composure of a veteran. It is her special duty to arrange speakers for keynote gatherings throughout the Dominion.

Since she was a slip of a girl, Miss Doherty has had her part in Liberal party activities in Canada. She attended her first political meeting at such a tender age she had to be held up by one of the listeners to hear Sir Wilfrid Laurier speak.

A chain of women's Liberal clubs across the country flourish year in and year out due to Miss Doherty's energy and direction as federation secretary. "We are delighted to think we have stepped ahead of the men", she confided, perhaps a little proudly. "Unlike the men, our women's clubs are active whether an election is near or not and we are proud to say we do our own financing".

An earnest advocate for women's causes, Miss Doherty nevertheless keeps on the right side of the capital's men. It may be a dress-up evening affair. Again it may be an intellectual gathering or just a quiet spot for morning coffee. She makes it a point to be there.

"Women gradually are gaining the recognition they deserve," she said. "We are allowed to serve in an advisory way on auxiliaries but we should be beside the men in national schemes with a definite voice in the country's needs."

All is not work for Miss Doherty, nevertheless. Just over five feet she was an ardent skier and swimmer until a few years ago when an operation forced her to abandon strenuous sport. Now she plays hookey from the grind once in a while and just plain relaxes, leaving things to an efficient secretary.

Miss Doherty is the daughter of the late Michael Doherty, native of Belleville. Mr. Doherty was transferred to Ottawa division of the railroads, and made his home in that city until his death.

Mrs. John Fitzgerald, 356 Bleecker Avenue, and Mrs. P. Flagler, 344 Bleecker Avenue, are aunts of Miss Doherty.

Preview of Spring
By VERA WINSTON

DELIGHTFUL SILK prints to reveal a flash of color under a dark fur coat make a welcome preview of Spring. Here's one of the newest models, a crisp, youthful affair of cinnamon-colored silk, printed with tiny black hearts. It has a black patent leather belt. There is plenty of interesting detail, including self-cording around the high, round neck, which has a little bow in back. Cording also defines the yoke; gathers from neck to yoke soften the bustline. Skirt is amply flared.

Backs to the Front

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE are thousands of beautiful backs that have never been discovered by the women who have them. They have paid no heed to posture ,so the spinal column has taken on the wrong pose. Shoulders are rounded. By pulling oneself up tall, extending the chest, holding the abdomen in, there will appear a neat nip-in at the rear of the waistline. That turns the trick.

Strong back, young body; weak back and one looks like 60, even though one may not yet be 30. Get the muscles strong and resilient and the silhouette takes on pleasing lines. We trust this may catch the attention of the Young Person who trails around as if she were a piece of chiffon trying to be arty.

Hold the hands high above the head, fingers spread wide apart. Sway from side to side, moving the arms with the body, pivoting at the waistline. Tuck in your hips. When a hand goes up, give yourself a hard pull at the equator. Muscles were made to be used. If you don't use them, they go to sleep and fat cells catch them napping.

Another exercise: Place the feet far apart, clasp the hands together bring them down between the knees. This is known as the wood chopping exercise. Good for normalizing the arms and slimmering down the waistline.

Natural blushes seem to have disappeared. Shouldn't do. We know more about hygienic living habits, nutrition and food values than our mothers did and we go in for outdoor sports in a big way. But we tear around nights and life is hectic. That puts on the wan look.

Use ice freely on the face; it is a wonderful cosmetic. Do a five-minute massage with cream every night. Do deep breathing exercises every morning. It's easy to dip the ruby glow out of the rouge pot, but no cosmetic chemist has ever produced an exact duplicate of natural flesh coloring. You have to grow it.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today

Unforgiving Love Little Better than Unfaithful Love

Dear Miss Chatfield:

During a recent summer vacation my husband and I met a charming woman fourteen years younger than we are. A month after our return I opened a letter from her which gave away the secret. At first I resolved to destroy it and never let him know it had come. But in second thought I was afraid he would hate me for this if he suspected me.

I passed the letter over and waited for him to explain which he did as best he could. He said he must have been crazy; he loved me and the children. He had thought he could cover up but he was glad he was found out and now we could go on as before. At Christmas she sent him what would have been an acceptable greeting card, if I hadn't seen her former letter. As it was, my Christmas was ruined.

What can a woman do when she has counted on her marriage to be the great and glorious adventure of life for her and her husband and he ruthlessly destroys her confidence in him and fills her heart with bitterness and suspicion? A greater problem than I can solve!

Mrs. A. K. L.

ANSWER

Here's the way to solve that problem, lady; get your mind off what you've lost and put your mind on keeping what you've got: namely, a husband who loves you and the children and means to stay with the ship even if he did lose his head and almost founder her.

Unfortunately boys will be boys and many of them seem never to attain the degree of moral perfection which their wives expect them to attain. Put temptation in their way and they slip and slide and sometimes fall. Now every wife thinks that her husband's love for her should hold him steady in the face of temptation. Such is not the case; for a man's love for his wife is no better than he is. If he's weak, the other woman can entice him temporarily. But the ties of wife and children and home jerk him back eventually.

The more letters I read from wives whose husbands have two-timed them, the more sure I am that wounded vanity is the principal cause of their anguish. Even when they are assured and reassured that their husbands love them, a good part of these wounded women persist in harping on the fact that their confidence is destroyed, their hearts broken and their lives wrecked. Nine tenths of it is the vindictiveness of wounded vanity masquerading as martyrdom.

I wouldn't say a word to add to the woes of these wives. But I would say that a woman's love which is not a forgiving love is just as far from perfection as a man's love that slips and slides in the face of temptation. Neither would I excuse a man for tricking his wife. If there is anything in life more contemptible, I don't know it. Only this I would say, the average decent husband wants to be faithful and when he falls he's as much surprised and pained as his wife is—only in a different way.

Dangers Ahead of Child Losing His Desire to Eat

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Should children be ignored when they show a distaste for food?

No. The technical name for distaste for food is "anorexia". It may be part of many real diseases and is a far more serious symptom than at first appears.

Functional anorexia occurs without any demonstrable organic disease. Functional anorexia accompanied by functional vomiting is very common in children up to the age of 12 to 14 years. It is due to a nervous physical makeup. These children are very susceptible to suggestion and unless they are persuaded out of their condition, malnutrition may result.

Parents are sometimes surprised to find that they have a case of malnutrition on their hands due simply to functional anorexia.

In adults a serious state of malnutrition can follow upon anorexia. This occurs in the condition called "anorexia nervosa." To call it loss of appetite—anorexia—is but feebly to characterize the condition. It is rather an annihilation of appetite, so complete that it seems in some cases impossible ever to eat again. The antagonism to food grows into a spasm at the sight of food.

This extreme form, "anorexia nervosa" follows on a finicky appetite in childhood. Children should be persuaded out of such feelings in the early stage.

What is normal blood pressure?

While it is usually said that normal blood pressure should be 100 plus your age, this statement has obvious limitations.

The study of Robinson and Brucer, in 1939, has tended to revise downward what are generally called normal blood pressure levels. Systolic blood pressure is the pressure when the heart is in contraction. Diastolic blood pressure, which is the pressure when the heart is in relaxation, is about 40 points below this

Robinson and Brucer made a study of 7,000 men and 3,000 women, none of whom did hard work and whose economic position was sufficiently assured that each could afford a thousand dollar insurance policy. Eighty-six per cent of the men had systolic blood pressures between 90 and 130, and 89 per cent of the women had systolic pressures between 90 and 130. Twenty-five per cent of the men and 44 per cent of the women had blood pressures below 110, no matter what age.

In following the blood pressure of normal individuals over a period of 10 years, it was found that blood pressures which were low did not show as much change from year to year as those which were high. Systolic pressures of over 140 and diastolic pressures over 80 are, therefore, considered abnormal.

The popular notion that low blood pressure has any danger connected with it is fallacious. Longevity is based on three factors—low weight, low pulse rates and low blood pressure.

Bank Your Beauty Energy

LYNNE CARVER . . calmness, she knows, pays grand dividends.

By HELEN FOLLETT

ARE YOU highly energized? Do you tear the house to pieces and put it together again? Do you fly hither and yon and back again, keeping the household in a flurry of excitement? Calm down, little one; soft pedal. You'll get just as much done if you slow up a bit.

When life is a frantic scurry, the feminine countenance takes on tense lines. The nervous system gets tangled up and yells like everything. Frowns appear, and frowns are no jokes, let me tell you. Try to get rid of them and you're in for a long-term job.

Look about you when you're marching in the shopping parade. You'll see women with heads forward, shoulders hunched, hustling along as if seven devils were after them; women with facial muscles drawn, as if they had never known a happy moment. It won't do. Time gives us enough beauty swats without our dealing out a few by devastating living habits.

If one keeps up too swift a pace, one loses the power to relax. Hurry becomes a habit. Dizzied with the day's activities, a woman falls into bed too tired to rest. Racing thoughts fly through her brain. She crowds out next morning looking like the breaking up of a hard winter.

The woman who knows how to love, tries to get something out of existence, is the one who stays young in looks and spirits until she is old and grey. She is a restful companion.

Doesn't every woman hate gooseflesh? Powder won't hide it. But vanishing cream will if you friction it in until it disappears.

To rid yourself of these speckles, bathe the skin surface briskly with warm soap suds and a heavy brush. Rinse with clear water, apply compresses that have been wrung out of hot water, dry gently with soft towel.

Palm in cocoa butter, rubbing up and down with light pressure. Atop the oil sprinke borated talcum to form a pack. Let remain on over night. In the morning use clear water, friction with alcohol.

It's a Grimy Job But She Likes it

By MURIEL ADAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, March 2—(CP)— Seventeen-year-old Eleanore Kipp, tall, blond, and with a yen for mechanics and flying, is the first woman to roll up her sleeves and get to work as a mechanic in the engineering room of a Canadian airport, according to officials of the Canadian Flying Clubs Association.

Now she is doing it every day out at Uplands Airport near here, getting her hands as grimy as any other mechanic, her clothes just as dirty and altogether having a whale of a time.

With four young men about her own age Eleanore is serving her apprenticeship as an air engineer. She spends her time servicing engines, checking individual parts, patching framework and tuning up planes for the eight provisional pilot officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force and civilian pilots who are being trained at the Air Field by Flying School Instructors.

With Eleanore, dancing comes next after messing around with airplane engines. And one other thing she is particularly fussy about is the "e" on the end of her first name, it's just one of those things, she explained.

Miss Kipp is the daughter of a well-known Ottawa newspaperman and her family used to live in Winnipeg. When she left school last October nothing interested her much except airplanes. She found her way to Uplands and joined forces with the engineer-aspiring mechanics. It means getting up early to drive the 20 miles or so to the airport on time, but ever since the first of the year she has been on the job.

So far there is no pay in it for her but in a few weeks she hopes to get on the payroll and in another two years she will be able to apply for her engineer's licence. By that time also she hopes to be applying for a flying licence too.

Dresses Her Part

At the field Eleanore sports black slacks, a black crew-neck sweater and heavy moccasins. She rolls her sleeves up in down-to-business fashion just as the other engine tinkerers do. "Most of the time I look pretty dirty," she said, wiping a grimy hand on a piece of waste. "But it doesn't matter to me as long as I have an engine to fiddle around with and the boys wouldn't care if I dressed like an Eskimo."

At first her youthful male colleagues looked a little disdainfully on a girl messing around engines. Now, however, they have become used to it. One of them termed her a "pretty good guy" which means she "belongs" out there at windswept Uplands.

"I take my turn with the others, splicing skis, tuning up engines, taking them apart and cleaning them, patching holes in the air plane frames, sweeping and keeping the shop clean and all sorts of odds and ends that turn up in a day's work," she said.

Eleanore's hands are her biggest worry. She's still pretty feminine and spends plenty of time getting her fingernails back into shape for special occasions.

Ten Rounds of Bloody Combat Between Garcia, Armstrong Ends in Draw at Los Angeles

Welterweight Champion Gives Eleven Pounds to Garcia, Middleweight Title Holder

$65,953 GATE

Garcia's Manager Claims Hammerin Henry Waged a "Dirty Fight"

(By Robert Myers Associated Press Sports Writer).

Los Angeles, March 2 (AP) — Welterweight champion Henry Armstrong's quest of Ceferino Garcia's middleweight title is still a 50-50 wager and take your pick.

The two fought to a standstill in 10 rounds of bloody combat last night before a paid attendance of 16,226, and referee George V. Blake called it a draw. The fight drew a gross gate of $65,953.

The draw decision may have spelled the end of Hammerin' Armstrong's hope of acquiring a fourth title in his career, although a rematch might be made some time later.

Garcia, the Filipino who is recognized as the middleweight champ in California and New York, weighed 153 1-2 and Armstrong 142.

Arguments raged today over the outcome. George Parnassus, the Filipino's manager, openly charged that Armstrong waged a "dirty fight," and said illegal use of his shoulders and head robbed Garcia of a chance for a clear-cut victory.

Many ring-siders thought Garcia earned it with his clean, staggering uppercuts to the head that twice had the negro lad reeling backwards, but just as many gave the fight to Armstrong for his usual relentless, ever-punching aggressiveness.

Blood flowed from the third round on. Garcia suffered an eye cut—his corner claimed he was butted — and Armstrong's mouth was cut in the same round and his left eye was shut tight for the last three frames.

The two lost no time getting to work. They started in a few seconds after the first bell and 10 rounds later they were standing in Garcia's corner, toe to toe, still whaling away with all the power and punches they could muster.

Shoulder Tactics Hurt Chances

Referee Blake said afterward that Armstrong's shoulder tactics counted heavily against him.

Garcia landed the hardest punches of the bout when he was able to shake Armstrong loose from his infighting style. Once in the third and again in the eighth his looping uppercuts seemed to have Henry in distress, but each time Armstrong rallied, rushed him and pinned him to the ropes with a steady barrage of chopping lefts and rights.

Twice the referee warned Armstrong for using his head illegally in the clinches and once he took away a round for low blows.

LOCAL JUVENILES MEET REGIOPOLIS

Second Round in Playdowns of Juvenile Hockey Played Here on Monday

For the second time in the history of the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association a Belleville team has advanced into the provincial playdowns. In the first round of the O.J.H.A. playdowns the Belleville juveniles eliminated the Picton kids, champions of the Prince Edward County League, in successive games. The local teen-aged pucksters played the Picton lads to a 2-2 draw here and added to their hockey prowess with a 4-1 victory in Picton to advance themselves into the second round.

On Monday evening the Belleville Juveniles meet the Regiopolis College kids in the first game of the second round O.J.H.A. play-offs with the second game scheduled to be played in Kingston on Wednesday with goals to count on the round. Coach Bill Dennis announced today the Belleville sextette held a strenuous practice at the Hume Arena last night at which time all fifteen players were on hand. "There will be one or two changes in our line-up for Monday night as Stan Reid and Bennett may be given a chance to show their wares,' stated Coach Dennis after last night's workout.

The Regiopolis College juveniles advanced to the second round of the O.J.H.A. playdowns by winning the Kingston Juvenile Hockey League and are reputed to have a strong sturdy team, which will give the locals ample opposition.

GOODYEARS BEAT PORT COLBORNE; SAINTS STILL IN

Sailors Pass From Senior O.H.A. Playoffs by Losing 7-2 to Tiremen

HAMILTON WINS

Fifth and Deciding Game With St. Catharines Will be Played Monday

By The Canadian Press

Port Colborne's last-ditch stand to remain in the running for the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" series failed dismally last night as Toronto Goodyears blasted the Sailors from further competition 7-1. Victory gave Toronto, defending champions and leaders of the group at the conclusion of the regular schedule, the best-of-five semi-final by three games to one.

Hamilton and St. Catharines will continue their best-of-five dispute in the Garden City Monday. As a result of Hamilton's 6-4 victory at home last night the teams are deadlocked with two triumphs each.

Fifteen-hundred disappointed home fans looked on as Toronto turned on the heat against the Ports in the second frame. The teams finished the opening period even, Inglis scoring first for Goodyears and Fitzgerald squaring matters. Early in the second Imlach sent Toronto ahead and O'Flaherty practically clinched the game with a brace of points three minutes apart.

Toronto widened the margin by three in the last chapter as the desperate Ports threw defensive caution aside. Imlach scored his second tally early in the frame and in the closing minutes Inglis and Cooper raced in for goals.

Saints Fade on End

The Saints wiped out a four-goal advantage Hamilton ran up on them in the first 25 minutes but didn't have enough left to hold off the final charge of the winners.

Conick and Barlow shot the home team ahead with cleverly executed goals in the first period. Walker added another for the only point of the second frame and Hamilton went four up when Miocinovich scored early in the third. The Saints attack began clicking at this juncture and three quick goals went into the Hamilton net from the sticks, of Buell, Mocha and Pinder. After some tight checking Pinder broke through to knot the count four-all with his second marker However, in the last minute Conick and then Miocinovich beat the Saints defence for the goals which sent the teams into a fifth game.

The winner meets Toronto in the final and the right to continue in the Allan Cup playdowns.

CORNWALL TEAM WINS FIRST GAME

Farrand Gillie Scores Winning Goal Against Montreal in Third Period

Montreal, Mar. 2 (CP).—Beaten 2-1 in their first bid in defence of the Quebec Senior Hockey League title, Montreal Royals returned here today from Cornwall, Ont., hoping for better things in their next encounter with the Flyers.

Cornwall's Flyers took the measure of the Royals last night in the opening game of their semi-final league playoffs. The teams will meet again here tomorrow in the second game of the best-of-five series.

Farrand Gillie, who has been playing in amateur leagues for close to twenty years, was the hero of the game for the more than 3,000 fans who jammed Cornwall's community arena to the rafters. With the score tied 1-1 in the third period, Gillie banged a slap shot through the Royals defence. The puck caught goaler Andy Goldie on the elbow and dropped into the cage for the winning goal.

Closest Game of Season.

Up to that point the teams had played on even terms in one of the closest games here this season. The Royals started the scoring on Russ McConnell's goal in the first period but Stan Robertson equalized for the Flyers less than a half minute later.

Once Gillie had sent the home team into the lead, Flyers threw up an impregnable defence that even six forwards that Royals had on in the closing minute could not penetrate. Winner of this series will meet either Verdun Maple Leafs or Montreal Concordias for the league title.

In the second to last Provincial Senior League game of the season, Boston Olympics gained second place by trimming Verdun Bulldogs 4-0 in Boston. A crowd of 15,500 saw the Olympics move ahead in the first period and stay there throughout a dull game.

Junie Allen and Gerry Desrosiers shared the Boston goals. The teams will meet again tonight.

LEAGUE WINNERS TO COMPETE FOR ROBERTSON CUP

Four Districts Will be Represented in Playoffs to be Staged at Hume Arena

TWIN BILL WEDNESDAY

Zion Hill Will Meet Roslin and Foxboro Will Tackle Wallbridge

Representative teams from four district rural hockey leagues will compete in a district post-season hockey series for the rural hockey championship and the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy at the Hume Arena next week. Teams representing the Prince Edward County, Central Hastings, East Hastings and Frankford Town leagues, convened in Belleville last night and drafted opening schedules for the post-season series, similar to the district play-offs which proved most popular in Belleville some eight years ago.

The clubs competing in the series are Glen Miller, Roslin, Wallbridge, Mountain View, Foxboro and Zion Hill. Regulations as to the operation of the series were agreed upon last night and the series will open with a double-header at the Hume Arena on Wednesday night next when city hockey fans will have an opportunity to witness the calibre of hockey as played in the district rural hockey set-ups.

The draw for the opening games Wednesday night are: Zion Hill versus Roslin and Foxboro versus Wallbridge. The second set of games in the series will be played on March 8th when Glenn Miller and Mountain View will make their initial appearance in the series versus two of the winning clubs of the initial games. Belleville referees will be in charge of all games played.

The team representatives present at the meeting were: Glen Miller, George Wickens and C. Patrick; Roslin, J. Mattis; Wallbridge, Barton Hinchcliffe; Mountain View, Vic Rowbotham; Foxboro, Jack Stewart and Zion Hill, R. Dulmage.

CANADIENS MUST BEAT AMERICANS TO BE IN PLAYOFFS

Habitants Have Lost 24 of their Last 28 Games in the N.H.L.

DESPERATE PLIGHT

Rangers Have Tough Week-end Playing Toronto and Chicago on Successive Nights

Montreal Canadiens dig in tonight for a last-ditch stand in their attempt to gain the sixth and last place in the National Hockey League playoffs for the Stanley Cup.

The Canadiens, who have lost 24 of their last 28 games, oppose the Americans at Montreal tonight and again at Montreal tomorrow. If they lose both those engagements with the sixth-place club, they will be nine points down with only five games to go.

This has been the most disastrous season of all for the Habitants, who managed to rally at the last minute in 1939 to struggle into sixth position. If they miss this time, Montreal will not be represented in the post-schedule series for the first time in the modern history of the league.

The Canadiens' attempts at a return to form, after a promising opening last fall, have been desperate. In recent weeks they have signed three Montreal district amateur stars, Smiley Meronek, Tony Demers and Gordon Poirier, without result in their statistical outlook.

Blake and Young Steady.

Still going all out along left wing is Hector (Toe) Blake, the dogged scoring star who was voted most valuable player in the league last year despite the Canadiens' lowly position. Doug Young, with Detroit until this season, has held the club together on defence.

But only a tremendous reversal of form can save the Canadiens now. They are up against an experienced set of battlers in the Americans, who feature money players like Nels Stewart, Earl Robertson and the one and only Eddie Shore. It's a tough spot for the Frenchmen.

New York Rangers, tied for first place with Boston, undertake the stiff assignment of playing Maple Leafs at Toronto tonight and the Black Hawks at Chicago tomorrow.

Boston will play only once during the week-end, against the Red Wings at Detroit tomorrow, but the Bruins will have played three games fewer than the Rangers. They will have six games left and the blueshirts only three in the struggle for first place and the league championship.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

Los Angeles — Henry Armstrong, 142, Los Angeles, world welterweight champion, and Ceferino Garcia, 155½, Los Angeles, recognized as middleweight champion in New York and California, drew (10).

Milwaukee—Billy Marquart, 134½, Winnipeg, outpointed Joey Silva, 133½, Los Angeles (8).

Milwaukee—Sammy Angott, 138½, Louisville, Ky., outpointed Quentin Breese, 136¼, Manhattan, Kas. (10).

Minneapolis—Dick Demaray, 140½, Bismarck, N.D., outpointed Harvey Woods, 139½, St. Paul (10).

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By the Canadian Press)

Fort Myers, Fla., March 2—(AP)—Rapid Robert Feller is training too fast for Manager Oscar Vitt of Cleveland Indians. Vitt not only has cautioned the speedball specialist, but has ordered the coaches to slow him down.

"He probably needs less work than any man in camp," growled Vitt. "He's always in condition, but he thinks he isn't getting any good out of exercise unless it leaves him dripping wet."

Tampa, Fla.—A seven-man battle for Cincinnati Reds left field berth started today with an announcement by Manager Bill McKechnie that it would go to the best player.

Vince Di Maggio and Myron McCormick are believed out in front but other candidates include the veteran Wally Berger, who was posted there most of last season.

Lakeland, Fla.—Sore muscles in Detroit Tigers camp are pleasing to Manager Del Baker.

"Look at 'em limp," he chirped. "Everybody has sore dogs. Boy, we're tearing into our training this year."

Winter Haven, Fla. — Manager Bill Terry took a look at Nick Witek in one practice session of New York Giants and endorsed the rookie enthusiastically.

"From what I've seen," he declared, "I think we've come up with a real second baseman."

St. Petersburg, Fla.—Maybe you would think New York Yankees would be satisfied with Babe Dahlgren at first base. He is one of the flashiest fielders in the game, batted in 89 runs last year and the champs could afford to carry a light hitter if any club could.

But Manager Joe McCarthy is giving a lot of attention to Johnny Sturm, a first sacker up from Kansas City, and in addition has disclosed Mike Chartak, an outfielder for the Newark farm, would be tried at first.

Dean Up to His Old Tricks Running at the Chin Again

Chicago, Mar. 1.—Jerome Herman Dean left town recently without getting any closer to settling his salary differences with Chicago Cubs than another telephone conversation with President P. K. Wrigley — a talk freely sprinkled with dollar signs.

Ol' Diz, big right-handed pitcher who cost the Cubs $185,000 and three players two years ago, received $20,000 last season, wants $15,000 this year, and since last Friday has been offered $10,000.

Today he phoned Wrigley at the club's owner's Lake Geneva, Wis., residence.

"Mr. Wrigley, what would I be worth to you if I won 22 games next season?" asked Mr. Dean.

Wrigley's reply:

"Why, Diz, I guess you'd be worth about $25,000."

"What would I be worth if I won 15 games?" said Ol' Diz, warming up to a favorite subject.

"Why, I guess you'd be worth the amount you received last year," Wrigley answered.

"Now, Mr. Wrigley, what would I be worth if I won 10 games—and lost 15?" said Diz, whipping in a fast one.

"Well now," returned the Cub president slowly, "that's hard to say, Diz. Maybe you wouldn't, under those circumstances, be such an attraction—and maybe not worth so much."

Whereupon Ol' Diz headed for a train for Jackson, Miss., where he'll serve as professor of pitching in a baseball school for six weeks.

"Boy, am I in great shape," he yelled. "So long, fellows, next year I'll win . . ."

NEUTRAL ROCKS TO BE USED IN BRIER BONSPIEL

Dominion Competition for Highest Honor in Canada to be Played in Winnipeg

'SPIEL OPENS MONDAY

Bert Hall's Kitchener Rink Will be on Hand to Defend Title Won Last Year

Winnipeg, March 2—(CP)—Neutral rocks will be an innovation of the 14th annual Macdonald's Brier Bonspiel opening here Monday, first time the Canadian curling classic has been played outside Toronto.

The stones will be placed on each of the five sheets of ice laid out in the amphitheatre rink and will remain there for duration of the round-robin series. Only one rink, number nine in the draw, will play the same set of rocks twice.

The rocks, of standard weight and club style, replace the former practice of individual stones selected to each curler's idea of weight and type. One set on each ice will be painted blue, the other red.

General etiquette of curling demands that the oldest club always play blue rocks but rinks entering the brier automatically lose their identity as club or association rinks and become a provincial entry only. Therefore the color of the stones each rink will use will be determined by the draw.

Crowds of 2,000 and 3,000 generally attend final matches of the Manitoba bonspiel and with Brier interest keen, the classic is expected to attract the largest galleries since its inauguration in 1927. The amphitheatre seats 5,000.

Bert Hall's Kitchener, Ont., rink is intact for defence of the tankard won last year in Toronto but two other competing skips, Cliff Manahan of Edmonton and Howard Wood, Winnipeg, are former champions.

Jack Kearns, who'll be through in Detroit after the Pastor-Burman bout (if it goes on) is considering an offer to move into St. Louis. . . . The national indoor tennis championships which have taken lickings at the gate for years, will cut prices next season. . . . Hum, it took Charlie Retzlaff, the old heavyweight four heats to stop a wrestler the other night.

TRENTON JUNIORS LOSE FIRST GAME TO COBOURG KIDS

850 Fans See Home Team Beaten 8-6 in Fastest Game of Season

TWO GOALS DOWN

Trenton, March 2 — (Special)— Trenton Rotarians suffered an 8 to 6 setback here last night at the hands of a fast skating sextette from Cobourg in the first game of the junior "C" O.H.A. semi-finals for Eastern Ontario honours. The game the first of a goal-to-count series was the fastest match seen here this season and the largest attendance this year—850 paid customers were on hand to see the smart aggregations fight it out in a pastime that saw Trenton leading by four goals at one time before the Cobourg line of Maher, Coogan and Bird started clicking right in front of the locals' net. A large crowd of Cobourg supporters followed the Kinsmen to Trenton last night and as many Trenton fans will go to Cobourg on Monday night when the second game is to be played.

Open Scoring

In the opening period Trenton were quick to take the lead, Vic Burtt scoring on Cain in the Kinsmen's net on a pass from wingman Mac Watson. This score was registered before a minute of play had elapsed and one minute later Mac Watson outguessed Cain with the local's second tally. The trio of Maher, Coogan and Bird combined nicely for the visitors at this point with the result that Cobourg's first goal was tucked in behind Frost by Coogan on a pass from Maher. The play raced up and down the ice until the four minute mark when Clarence Inglis, starry Trenton centreman, banged the biscuit into the visitor's cage from a wild thrust. Trenton continued to press with power play after power play and then Mac Watson put the Rotarians three up on a solo effort.

Another Trenton ganging attack culminated out in front of the Cobourg net when Inglis registered Orser's ring wide assist at 11.46. There was no let up until the period ended. Joe Reid, the local wingman who broke his hand in the game at Lansdowne last Friday night, started for Trenton, but was not seen on the ice again after the first period when his injury gave him trouble. It is definite now that Reid will be out of service for the remainder of the season. Defenceman McColl was put off at the beginning of the second round and Trenton was a man short when Maher scored from Coogan at 1.11. The Rotarians played hard enough but the speed of the Cobourg wingmen was too much for them and Coogan scored his second of the period three minutes later at 4.35. No matter how hard Trenton fought back the invaders held them off and even had the edge on the play when the locals attempted to press. Coogan dented the twine with Cobourg's fourth score at 8.33 and there was no scoring on either side for the remainder of the period which ended Trenton 5, Cobourg 4.

On the play in the final frame the Kinsmen were heads and shoulders above the home-town crew although the Rotarians did manage to pull themselves together and tally when the Kinsmen were surging all over Frost in the net. Maher and Coogan and Bird were standouts in this round and planted the four Cobourg goals. Maher was on the end of each score while team mate Coogan collected three assists. Bird passed to Maher for Cobourg's seventh goal.

The Kinsmen applied the pressure as the period opened, but Frost held them off the scoresheet until 8.38 when Maher scored the equalizer from Coogan. Five minutes later Maher and Coogan combined again to put their team ahead for the first time and this pair of clever forwards partnered near the close of the game for Cobourg's eigth and final score. The only Trenton thrust in this session came when Weller and Burtt broke away to skate through the entire Cobourg team and deliver the mail at 16.26. The Rotarians were organizing a ganging attack as the last bell sounded to end the game.

Summary:

First Period
Trenton, Burtt (Watson) ..	.55
Trenton, Watson	1.45
Cobourg, Coogan (Maher).	2.05
Trenton, Inglis	4.28
Trenton, Watson	7.33

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Marc T. McNeil, sports editor of the Montreal Gazette, covered Thursday night's Boston at Canadien N.H.L. game in a manner which many sports editors have been tempted to try for years, but none had the nerve until McNeil wrote exactly 19 words covering the game. During the past O.H.A. season we entertained the same feelings which McNeil openly published, and used the conventional full 20 inch column with an eight column banner and under his own by-line. The Canadiens lost, leaving them with a record of 24 losses in their last 28 games and still without a victory on the home ice since Dec. 14th last and the loss marked their sixth straight defeat. After leaving over a half-column blank under his by-line, McNeil wrote: "Hohum, folks, it's the same old story (we told you a few weeks ago); here are the summaries." The "story" carried the usual eight-column streamer and decks and at the bottom the line-ups and summary. Such sarcasm is sometimes essential, as it is no pleasure sitting nightly in a press box trying to think up ideas which will tend to make a poor local team look at least passable. "Thanks, Mr. McNeil for the best hockey story of the year, at least the truest."

Thanks to George H. Campbell, sports editor of the Oshawa Times, for assistance in today's column for George penned the following interesting paragraph apparently for our express benefit. George says:

"Good Old Belleville By the Bay!" Friend Ken Colling can use this one. They haven't got a curling rink in Belleville but every year there's one "rink" of curlers that comes to Oshawa for a session and Wednesday they made their annual trip. Steve Flintoff, well known locally, Jimmy Boyle, interior decorator, Walter Belair, demon of the broom and "Silent Bob" Wray were the four curlers who came to Oshawa Wednesday for their annual joust with "Plumber" Garrard, "Hank" Morrison, "Alf" Parkhill and Art Germond, the Oshawa Curling Club representatives. A little out of practice, the Quinte quartet went down to defeat in the afternoon match but apparently the Belleville boys digested the Oshawa roast beef easier than the Oshawa boys digested the Belleville ginger ale, for when they clashed in the evening's half of the double-header, the "crows" flew high and wide over their Motor City opposition, Of course, "Plumber" Garrard and "Hank" Morrison insist that they didn't finish the last game because they wished to remain the perfect hosts and allow their guests to win at least once. One thing is certain, whether the Oshawa four or the Belleville visitors get the credit, there should be lots of green grass around the local curling rink this spring."

Incidentally Scribe Campbell had better stick to his pen-pushing and sitting in the press box in the future. Only this week "Soup," as the Motor City scribe is known to his intimate friends, took to the ice in a courageous effort to play scrub hockey in Oshawa. When he was about to make one of his super-spectacular rushes Campbell's left under-pinning folded up and Georgie dropped to the frozen aqua pura sustaining a painful knee injury. "Pal, it is a good idea to 'tell' others how to play hockey, but poor practice to try and 'show' them"—hockey confucius do say. We hope George will be hobbling around in time to take in the odd ball game this summer, however.

The Ottawa ball club in the Canadian-American league will definitely operate this summmer, according to Business Manager Vic Wagner. The Ottawa "Bisons" will alterate their home games between the Capital City and Ogdensburg, N.Y., the latter city relinquishing their franchise some weeks ago.

SPORT SPICE—Some 20 classy feminine swimmers from Toronto will entertain the R.C.A.F. lads in an exhibition swim meet at the Airport tomorrow. ..Looks as though the Petes are as good, or maybe better, than the usual run of intermediate "A" clubs in the province. Last night Frank Buckland's charges beat Kitchener 5-2, with Honey Tompkins in on three goals....The Petes' real test will come when they meet Owen Sound or Collingwood, however...Coach Burt's Trenton kids ran into a surprise versus the Cobourg juniors at home last night, losing 8-6 in a thriller. ...Toronto Varsity went through the International Intercollegiate puck loop without a loss, winning eight games and we lost a good cigar to "Goldie" Mullholland, star with the B.C.I. gridders, on the matter. ...The Belleville juniors just won't look at the result of the Kingston-Brockville series. Kingston won both games, 6-0 and 8-5 and now on to Oshawa.

The week-end sports agenda locally includes the intermediate L.O.B.A. game here tonight between the Peterboro district winners and the Belleville "Y" lassies at the "Y". Pete Beach's Albert College senior interscholastic pucksters journey to Norwood today for a return game and facing a two-goal deficit, but the big sporting event is the Regiopolis College (Kingston) at Belleville O.J.H.A. game here Monday night. The strength of the Regiopolis sextette is unknown, but the fact they won the Kingston juvenile league honors stamps the Limestone City "students" as strong opposition. Fred Reid and Bill Dennis had the local "juves" out to a lengthy practice last night following which it was announced that at least one new face would appear with the Belleville kids on Monday night.

Bill Fritz, crack Queen's University middle-distance runner, will compete in the 600-yard run at the Knights of Columbus track meet in New York one week from tonight. Fritz will run against Jim Herbert, to whom he placed second in the 600-yard race at the Melrose Games and Charles Belcher of Atlanta, who edged Fritz out in the 600 at the national championships last week. Fritz is still considered a top-ranking runner.

Local hockey fans will be afforded an opportunity to see and compare the class of rural hockey played throughout the district with that played in the city in a post-season district hockey series which will open at the Hume Arena next Wednesday night. Representative teams from four district rural leagues are included in the series for the district rural hockey championship and include Glen Miller, Roslin, Wallbridge, Mountain View, Foxboro and Zion Hill. Also there is a possibility that the third game between the Kingston and Oshawa juniors will be played in Belleville next Friday night if the teams split their home and home series.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, Mar. 2 (AP). — You should have seen Col. John Reed Kilpatrick (president of Madison Square Garden) personally giving two gamblers the bum's rush from the hockey game Thursday night. . . . Here's old Jim Londos starting another farewell tour. . . . The Maemere Farm Stable horses will resume running after the funeral tomorrow of DeWitt Page, the late owner. (But they'll run under a different name for a time.)

The Yanks just can't resist taking digs at the National League. . . . When Lefty Grissom reported at St. Pete, Gomez said: "Be nice and quiet now, dimple head . . . remember this is your first year in the major leagues."

Today's guest star:

Henry Vance, Birmingham Age-Herald: "Elaine Barrymore has asked waivers on John three times . . . and each time he was waived out of the league she has reclaimed him."

BORROW MONEY TO SAVE

There are times when it pays to borrow money, and especially in these days when the inclination is towards rising prices.

Perhaps it is that new furniture or other household items that you have been waiting for the money to purchase. Buy them now before prices go up.

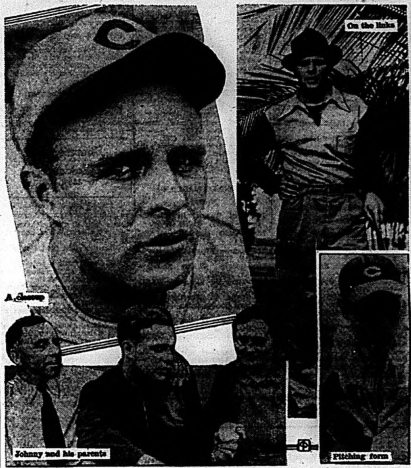
DIAMOND METEORS

Vander Meer Just Another Hurler Until He Pitched No-Hit Game



Johnny Vander Meer skyrocketed to baseball fame in a single dazzling week.

The success story of the boy wonder from Midland Park, N.J., is the latest classic saga of this series.

Vander Meer's break came in 1933 when a big league publicity man went a-hunting for a "Typical American Boy" to add lustre to a major league training camp in Florida. The man picked Johnny.

Scouts Like Him

Vander Meer's expenses were paid. He went south an an onlooker. But a couple of days after he reached Sunny Florida, Johnny got his hands on a baseball.

"Whew!" said a scout. "The boy has stuff." Over the protests of his unemployed father back at Midland Park, Johnny got a real tryout. Even as he started his baseball career, Johnny's father raised objections. "Baseball is not a business," he said.

He does not say so today. Johnny's talented left arm, his sweeping curve ball and the star-dust of fame have changed Father Vander Meer's mind completely.

The year 1933 found him pitching for the Dayton club of the Middle Atlantic league. There he won 11 and lost 10 in the class C circuit, but the scouts who watched him, and the manager of the team said the fellow didn't have a chance ever to become a major leaguer. That's how he managed to shift his allegiance to the Scranton team of the them New York-Pennsylvania league.

At Scranton in 1934, Vander Meer showed great indications of promise. He won 11 and lost eight, increasing his percentage against tougher opposition. He remained with the Miners in 1935 and slipped considerably.

He won seven and lost 10, and then, after his contract was selected by the Boston Bees through the medium of a working agreement, he received what looked like a tough break.

He applied to the Boston club for treatment for a sore arm, and the Bees, mindful of his poor 1935 record, and the possibilities of his having a sore arm, included him in a deal with the Nashville club, in which the Bees obtained Tiny Chaplin. Of course, the Nashville club was advised of his condition, but Jimmy Hamilton had seen the boy before, and was willing to gamble on him, sore arm or no sore arm.

Goes to Durham

He didn't last long there, being shifted optionally to Durham, a Cincinnati farm, about the first of June, Johnny became an immediate sensation at Durham, winning 19 and losing six, and fanning 295 men in the 214 innings he worked. This caused the Cincinnati club to purchase his contract from Nashville, which recalled him from Durham, of course. The purchase price was $7,500 down and $17,500 more if retained. The deal was consummated during 1937.

With the Reds in 1937, Johnny won three and lost five. He then was optioned to Syracuse, where his record was even worse, five wins against 11 setbacks.

Baseball fans got a hint of Vander Meer's powers when he shut out the New York Giants on May 20, 1938, with five hits. Three weeks later he stunned them with a feat unduplicated in the history of baseball.

"No hits, no runs," yelled the crowd. Vander Meer had set down the Boston Bees at Cincinnati without a single bingle or a solitary run. Twenty-eight men faced him. Three reached first, on walks. This was the afternoon of June 10.

Five nights later, under the floodlights in Brooklyn, Johnny Vander Meer pitched another no-hit, no-run game and marched into the ranks of baseball's all-time heroes. The Cincinnati Reds' boy wonder gave up eight walks to the Dodgers. Not another man reached first base.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball's high commissioner, sought Vander Meer out and waggled a stern finger.

"Remember, young man," said Judge Landis, "two games don't make a ball player!" John Vander Meer nodded, promised to remember.

Pro Puck Personalities

Rangers.

Youngest, largest and most athletic of the Patrick clan, that is so much a part of the National Hockey League — or of hockey itself, for that matter—is Murray, more familiarly known as Muz. Next to Lionel Conacher, Muz could possibly be called Canada's greatest all-round athlete. He won the Dominion amateur heavyweight boxing championship, he was good enough at basketball to play on a Dominion championship team. He's been an ardent bike racer and taken part in six-day grinds, been better than fair at soccer, rugger, track and field and dabbled in about everything else. But this is supposed to deal with hockey, so how has his ice career gone? He first played on the Pacific coast, where the Patricks lived, later in Montreal when the family moved east, and made a preliminary move into Ranger circles by joining the amateur Rovers five years ago (they were called the Crescents then). After a couple of seasons with them he moved up in the usual Ranger fashion to Philadelphia Ramblers and first saw N.H.L. action two seasons ago, although most of the season was spent at Philly. For the past two winters now, he's been a full-fledged Ranger, teaming with the veteran star, Art Coulter, to form a pretty tough pair to get by. Twenty-five years old, he stands six-foot two, and makes the scales quiver around the 210 mark. He's not a polished all-round defenceman yet, but he's constantly improving.

KI-Y LEAGUE

One goal in the second period proved the winning margin for the St. Mike's over the O.S.D. lads at the Hume Arena yesterday afternoon when these two teams hooked up in a Ki-Y, Bantam Series, hockey game. The first and last periods were scoreless and Bone's counter in the middle chukker proved the only score of the game as the St. Mike's sextette hung up a shutout.

The teams: O.S.D.—goal—Hall; defence—Hazlett and Lines; centre—Moore; wings — Barrow and Scott; subs—Leduc and Sands. St. Mike's—goal—Whalen; defence — Upper and Boyle; centre—Meagher; wings—Galbraith and Briand; subs—Bone and O'Brien.

Documents in Evidence

By JANE SNOW

"I trusted you, only to find that you had frittered yourself away on other women—I, who had saved my lips for my husband and had lived like a nun—"

Althea was going good, Don Morgan reflected.

"Bad daddy! Make mudder kwy!" Donny puffed out his chest and stamped his small feet.

Althea reached out, drew the indignant little figure to her and said, between sobs:

"Darling son! He'll take care of mother, won't he?"

"Of course, Althea,' Don's voice carried a bored note, which gave her an inward wince, "such scenes always mean that you want something. This time, I suppose, it is the new roadster, which I told you I cannot afford. You will probably win, because Id go bankrupt to escape this sort of melodrama, though you have found it lucrative. But you might at least keep the baby out of it."

In his youth Don Morgan had been too good looking and too susceptible. First he had succumbed to the appeal of Myrna Lewis, he being a handsome and romantic 18 and she a mysterious, alluring 32, who needed a satellite pending a divorce she was seeking.

No harm had been done, for Myrna had other plans, and after receiving Don's attentions for several months sailed away to a titled marriage.

Later on he became engaged to peppery Sally Will. But many of the other fellows had done the same thing. That affair ended, as most of hers did, with about her third tantrum.

When Althea came upon the scene Mabel Parsons had him almost landed—her stronghold was the serious, big-sister pose. But after he laid eyes on Althea there were no more affairs for Don, nor for Althea, either.

They were happy, except that Mabel Parsons took her spite out by telling Althea about Don's affairs in an increasing ratio. Althea took her spite by referring to these exaggerations when she wanted to manage Don.

This last scene, with three-year-old Donny taking part, was too much, Don told himself many times during the five or more miles he walked before he came back to his own door.

The next morning Don left before Donny and Althea were awake. He did not phone during the day and at night turned homeward with lagging steps, for he knew the hostilities would not end until the roadster question was settled. Dropping into a porch chair under the vine, he opened his paper.

"Whoo-oo-oo!" It was the whistle that went with the postman's outfit he had bought Donny the day before.

"Whoo-oo-oo! Mail, daddy!"

"A-a-all right, sir! How many letters today?"

"Four, free, leben!" The man held out his hand for them abstractedly. "Gotta hurry! Big hurry! Lotta letters, all down stweet!"

After a few minutes Don glanced at the letters. The first one was without an envelope and began, "Althea, My Own Angel."

A half-hour later Althea looked up from her reading, an injured aloofness in her manner, to see a husband whose mien was neither placating nor contrite, but rather that of a stern judge.

"You told me last night, Althea, between sobs, that you had saved your lips for your husband. Yet, before you knew me there was one Mike Wickham who said that your kiss was like wine to him!"

"Don, are you crazy!" she cried wildly. The stern judge went on.

"There was a poet, one Leon, who insisted that with his arms around you and his lips on yours the sorrows of the world were blotted out. He believed that you were going to marry him. And there was a Bobby James who went into a football game with your glove beneath his sweater; next to his heart, and with your kiss upon his brow. He called it life's accolade; so his team must have won."

"Are you trying to lie about my character?" bluffed Althea, angrily.

He held up the mail Donny had given him and announced sternly:

"Althea, you have taunted me with my early foolishness for the last time. Also, there will be no more of the 'virgin mind,' 'innocent girl' or 'living like a nun' stuff. So far as your past and mine are concerned we will call it a draw!"

"You have been spying upon me!" She snatched at the letters.

Donny, perspiring but happy, burst into the room, an empty mail-pouch over his shoulder.

"Well, mudder," he beamed, "I was postman, and I d'livered all de letters out of dat big box back in your clset—'vybody got one. Didn't you like yours, daddy?"

"Mine were just what I needed, son," replied Don, zestfully, while Althea sobbed into her best satin cushion.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Mar. 2 (AP).—Buyers renewed their interest in aviation stocks today and the resulting lift, joined by a few other issues, steadied the stock market.

Trends were irregular as the close approached. Transfers were about 300,000 shares.

Among issues on the plus side were Douglas, Martin, United Aircraft, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Macy, Eastman, Union Carbide, General Electric, Loft, General Motors, Bethlehem, and Standard Oil of N.J.

Bonds moved forward a bit.

Dome Mines, Canadian Pacific and Distillers Seagrams, in the Canadian group, were steady. Hiram Walker held unchanged while Canada 4s, in the bond market, dipped ¼-point.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, March 2 —(CP)— The Toronto stock market concluded the week with a firm to strong tone in the industrials and a moderate display of weakness by the mining issues. Madsen Red Lake was the only feature. It traded in heavy volume on a rise of 6 cents to 50. Western oils were dull.

Better prices ruled for the steels and papers and the foods and utilities were off narrowly. Canada Wire Cable B advanced a point to a new high for the year at 21. Cub Aircraft firmed slightly and National Steel Car weakened about a point.

Soft spots in the foods were Canada Packers, Canners "A", Loblaw B and Western Canada Flour. The Abitibi issues tightened up and other papers were firm.

Nickel, Falconbridge, Noranda and Hudson Bay were all minor gainers in base metals.

Secondary golds developed an easy tone. Lamaque was off 30 cents, Hallnor 35 cents and losses of about 5 cents were netted by Wright-Hargreaves, Teck Hughes, O'Brien and Perron. Along with Madsen, Buffalo-Ankerite, Hollinger and Pamour improved.

Butter Continues Upward Trend

Toronto, March 2—Butter continued to move through wholesale channels at a good pace on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, extending the previous day's price advance. A steady tone prevailed in eggs.

Buyers purchased consistently and in good volume on the butter market, which kept offerings of both Ontario and the Western make fairly well clear. Supplies were on the light side. No. 1 Ontario creamery solids turned over in morning dealings at 26 1-2c per pound, but dealers later raised the price 1-4c per pound to 26 3-4c, at which level the market closed firm. Prints to the retail trade followed solids higher. Top grades traded at 27 1-2c to 28c per pound.

Lighter offerings and a shade better inquiry held the egg market steady. The market this week had to absorb two cars from British Columbia in addition to its usual domestic shipments, but this was offset to some extent by carlot and l.c.l. shipments to the Maritimes. Inspected lots to Northern Ontario points continued light.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, March 2—(CP)—Produce market prices here as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 27 1-2c to 28c, first grade solids, jobbing price, 27c to 27 1-2c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 24c; A-medium, 22c; A-pullets, 21c, B, 20 1-2c; C, 19c-19 1-2c; B-large, unquoted. Receipts: 1,319 cases.

WAR BRIEFS

London, March 2 (CP)—Sinking of the Norwegian steamship Vestfoss, 1,388 tons, was disclosed today with the landing of 19 of her crew at a northern British port. It was not stated whether there was loss of life, or how the ship went down.

Rome, March 2 (CP-Havas) — Army authorities announced today that special leaves given to Italian troops during the winter no longer will be granted. This step was ordered, it was stated, because most of the men now under the colors are of the younger classes and their training should not be interrupted.

Previously rejected and partially trained men of four conscript classes now on leave were recalled to the Italian army today for a new training period. There was no indication of the number of men called.

London, March 2 (CP)—Reuters News Agency reported today from Oslo that the 1,259-ton Norwegian steamship Silja, with a crew of 16 aboard, had been unreported since Feb. 16 and was feared lost.

Wellington, N.Z., March 2 (CP-Reuters)—Defence Minister M. F. Jones announced today that in order to assure the comfort of New Zealand soldiers a staff of New Zealanders for hospitals and convalescent stations is being sent overseas.

Glasgow, March 2 (CP)—An appeal to the public not to "play Hitler's game" by yielding to discouragement because of long "inactivity" was made today by Harold Nicolson, M.P., in a speech at a National Labor party meeting here today.

In war as in peace, he said, the policy of the Nazi leader is based upon use of a "war of nerves", sapping the morale of his opponents.

With strong and highly civilised peoples such as the British and the French, Mr. Nicolson said, such methods could not succeed.

FRENCH DECREES REDUCE MENUS

Beef, Alcoholic Drinks and Bread Chief Items on List

Paris, March 2.—(AP) — French civilians, taking stock of the Government's new belt-tightening program, tonight found themselves facing sharp restrictions on what they may eat and drink six days out of every seven.

The restrictions, announced in 17 decrees covering public sale and consumption, will affect the Frenchman's diet every day in the week except Sunday — and even then there are limits on the amount of certain foods which may be consumed.

The weekly calendar of war-time prohibitions stacks up this way:

Monday—No beef, mutton or veal dishes.

Tuesday—No beef, no pastry, candy or ice cream, and no spirits or the cordials which the French call apertif. Wine is not yet mentioned in the restrictions.

Wednesday—Still no pastry, candy or ice cream.

Thursday—Another drinkless day so far as spirits are concerned.

Friday—No meat and no pastry or sweets.

Saturday—Pay day, but no alcohol.

Although there are no prohibitions on the kinds of food or drink which the Frenchman can obtain on Sundays, he is limited to two main dishes and each meal and only one of these can be meat. Restaurant will limit the amount of bread he can get — if he has a bread card after rationing starts.

These general restrictions also forbid the serving of side dishes of butter, unless they are a regular part of the main dishes.

The regulations on that already are in effect. The remaining regulations will become effective when Government officials issue necessary orders to restaurants, cafes and stores.

Restaurant menus will grow smaller. On days when there is no meat prohibition, the menu can list only two soups or hors d'ouevres and not more than four different kinds of the latter; one egg dish; three kinds of fish, oysters or snails; two kinds of vegetables or macaroni, spaghetti or noodles, and three kinds of meat.

Cafe proprietors are not yet informed as to whether the three-day weekly alcoholic drought will start tomorrow. They are figuring, however that on dry days they will still do a good business in popular fruit juices, mineral waters and coffee—if it is available.

As a prelude to the issuing of ration cards, a generous census was ordered completed by April 1. It was expected that the first ration cards would cover bread consumption.

Other decrees provided for rationing of gasoline on a monthly basis and ordered prices maintained at the level of September 1, 1939.

GERMAN PLANES DRIVEN OFF BY

The Air Ministry announced R.A.F. planes had flown over Berlin and northwest Germany again last night —the seventh successive night of British aerial reconnaissance in Germany.

"Operations by the Royal Air Force over northwest and central Germany proceeded throughout last night," the ministry's communique said.

"Our aircraft were again over Berlin. This is the fourth time this week that our aircraft have visited the enemy capital."

The flight was the sixth over Berlin during the war, continuing a series described in London as "nuisance" raids carried out to accustom pilots to flying over the enemy's territory.

"We have had it all our own way and have gone where we wished," one British authority stated, adding that "would-be German raiders have been discouraged at every attempt".

German Report.

Berlin, Mar. 2 (AP).—The sinking of one ship and the possible destruction of four others was reported by the German high command today.

They were among British warships and convoyed vessels, it said, apparently referring to attacks reported yesterday by DNB, German News Agency.

The communique:

"In the west no special events.

"The air force carried out reconnaissance flights over the entire North Sea up to the Orkney Islands. German planes at various places successfully attacked English warships and merchantmen in English convoys.

"One ship sank immediately; on another, extensive fire was observed.

"In addition, four ships were so seriously damaged by bombs that their loss is probable.

"After a night flight over northwest Germany, an enemy airplane yesterday morning returned to Dutch territory at Nymwegen."

Leaflets Scattered

Thousands of leaflets were scattered over the Berlin area, the communique added, and parachute flares were dropped "to drive home the fact that our aircraft were once again over the capital of the Reich."

The communique said the British scouts reconnoitred "important towns" in northwest Germany and "kept watch" on seaplane bases at Borkum, Nordany and Sylt.

The returning pilots reported their appearance over Berlin caused "intense activity" as pale blue searchlights stabbed the darkness in a vain effort to spot them.

The intense gunfire which greeted the German raiders in the early morning North Sea mists led Berwick residents to believe a naval engagement was occurring to the north near the Firth of Forth.

Four Aberdeen trawlers which reached port this morning reported they had been bombed yesterday. The trawler Strathclovra said a submarine had fired on her several days ago, but had missed as she rolled in the heavy seas.

FUEHRER DEMANDS DISMANTLING OF

It was not disclosed whether Welles replied.

Hitler's thesis was said to be that the seas never can be considered free as long as Britain has military control of all the important trade lanes of Europe and Asia, and can at any time choke off "aspiring young nations" such as Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany.

In this connection, Hitler was said to have asked Welles how the United States would like some non-American Power to have control of the Panama Canal.

Hitler's argument was said to have run to this effect:

Just as the United States, largest and most powerful nation of the western hemisphere, has assumed obligations for all of America so far as interference from European or Asiatic powers is concerned, so Germany considers it her moral obligation to see that central European living space be guaranteed from the interference of Britain and France.

Hitler was reported to have claimed that Germany is unbeatable economically because of her arrangements with the Soviet Union.

Colonies Wanted

He was described as stating that Germany wants colonies as a matter of justice.

On the question of disarmament, the Fuehrer's view was described reliably as being that, first, such British fortresses as Gibraltar, Malta and Singapore must be dismantled.

Defended Autarchy.

If Welles asked Hitler why Germany was embarked on autarchy and whether the Reich was ready to go along with the United States on trade policies, the answer was said to have been given almost a month ago by an article by Karl Megerle of the Boersen Zeitung, chief editorial mouthpiece of the foreign office.

He defended autarchy as "the most social system of international economy in the 10th century."

Hints of impending military action were current in the capital as Welles came to the climax of his Berlin visit in his first meeting with the leader of a warring nation on his tour of European capitals.

President Roosevelt's investigator was well prepared for his interview with the Fuehrer by thousands of words of inspired press comment and by his meeting yesterday with two of Hitler's closest advisers on foreign affairs.

Questions Thrashed Out.

Political circles, according to the authoritative Dienst Aus Deutschland, were "especially impressed", with the length of time Welles spent with Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Baron Ernst von Weizsaecker, State Secretary in the foreign office.

"The questions handled apparently were threshed out very thoroughly and carefully," it said.

Welles conferred for 2½ hours with von Ribbentrop and later for an hour with von Weizsaecker. The Undersecretary arrived yesterday from Zurich, where he had stopped en route from Rome after seeing Premier Mussolini.

A striking utterance of one authorised commentator was placed by members of the United States Embassy on Welles' desk.

"The German air force, ready for action," it said, "is waiting for a decisive blow. Nobody knows just when it will come, but one may be sure that it will put in the shade all previous conceptions of military effectiveness."

Shipping Trade Is Gone.

London, Mar. 2 (CP).—The Press Association said today Sumner Welles' forthcoming visit to London might be prompted by United States hope of finding Europe's warring countries "less divided than supposed".

The Press Association's political correspondent wrote:

"America's shipping trade with Europe is gone, as have her great exports of motor cars, tobaccos and other things.

"In their place is an armaments boom that will break on the day war ends. So for these and other reasons, there is a very genuine American desire for peace and freer trading between nations."

S. S. SOUTHGATE IN NO DANGER

The submarine attack report sent the United States Atlantic fleet in action. The coast guard cutter Unalga, based at San Juan, Puerto Rico, and three destroyers—The McLeish, Satterlee and Mason — headed for the scene, about 130 miles northeast of Puerto Rico and 1,100 miles southeast of Miami, Florida.

Berlin and London authorities would not comment on the reports.

London is Home Port

The Southgate is a 4,862-ton freighter, owned and operated by Turnbull, Scott Shipping Company, Ltd., of London, with London as her home port. She was last reported on Dec. 1, when she was listed as arriving at Montevideo, after clearing from Buenos Aires on Nov. 30.

These new instances of warfare within the so-called American neutrality zone came after weeks of rumors that Nazi U-boats were being sought by the Royal Navy on this side of the Atlantic.

In Washington, it was said the position given by the Southgate was near the area where the United States' Atlantic Squadron is engaged in manoeuvres.

At least five submarines capable of trans-Atlantic cruising, some reports said, were prowling Central and South American waters in quest of British and French cargo vessels loaded with grain, wheat, oil, and other materials.

U.S. Navy Presses Search

On the trail of the undersea craft the American and West Indies squadron of the Royal Navy, it was understood, has been pressing a relentless and ever widening search.

The British command is particularly on the alert against any Nazi effort to avenge the loss of the pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee which was beaten by three British cruisers, Ajax, Exeter and Achilles, off Montevideo, Uruguay, last December.

On Jan. 25, the Associated Press was informed authoritatively of the imminence of a German U-boat campaign against "life lines" linking Caribbean, West Indies and South American ports with Great Britain. A spokesman at the White House in Washington called this information "mere reports," but no United States Government source issued a specific denial.

U-Boat Report Disabled

Last night, following the reports of the attack on the Southgate, well-informed sources went into greater detail on the hide-and-seek game being played.

So detailed was this information that it was learned one U-boat had been troubled repeatedly by breakdowns of its Diesel engines, the power plant for surface cruising, but was able to conduct diving operations on her batteries.

The submarine flotilla's tender ships, it was said, might be able to make the needed repairs—if the U-boat could find a safe spot to hole up. The tender ship was described as heavily armed, with a speed of about 16 knots.

Possibility of a fight within the "peace zone"—the area outlined by the 21 American republics at the inter-American Neutrality Conference in Panama City last October but not accepted as such by the belligerents—prompted the United States' navy to order all vessels in the 10th naval district, with headquarters at Puerto Rico, to stand by and give such assistance as their positions permitted.

Airplanes Aid in Search

San Juan, Puerto Rico, March 2 —(AP)—The United States Navy air patrol sent four planes today to search for the British freighter Southgate, reported attacked by a submarine 130 miles of here.

Since the vessel sent out her original distress call late yesterday efforts to confirm her plight have been futile.

Washington, March 2 —(AP)— Dawn today was the signal for the United States Navy to begin an aerial search for the British Southgate, which advised last night that she had been attacked by a submarine near Puerto Rico.

It was assumed that a coast guard cutter and three destroyers had reached the position given by the Southgate, about 130 miles northeast of Puerto Rico. Official silence here was taken to mean that none of these vessels had found a trace of the freighter.

Experts here suggested two explanations of the Southgate's failure to send further messages.

Either she sank swiftly, they said, or her officers hesitated to use the wireless again for fear of betraying their position to enemy craft.

BROILERS SELL AT $1.00 A PAIR

Other Prices of Chickens, Butter and Eggs Generally Firm

Choice young broiler chickens for the second consecutive week stole the buying limelight at the city market today where a small offering of produce was displayed by vendors. Of good quality, although slightly under the average weight of this table delicacy, the birds sold rapidly at $1 the pair.

June and July birds were also in fair demand with weighty roosters bringing from $1.10 to $1.30 each. A few seven-pound chickens were sold at 20c the pound. Fowl brought up to 75c each and a few ducks found buyers at $1 the bird. A lone turkey, of excellent quality, and which weighed in the vicinity of 15 pounds was offered at $3.75, but up until a late hour no takers had put in an appearance.

Eggs 25c Dozen

Other prices were generally firm. Egg quotations were steady with Grade "A" selects selling at 25c the dozen. Stocks were much heavier than those of a week ago with buying tones being generally bright. Mediums were quoted at 22c the dozen.

Farmers' butter sold at 30c the pound, with two-pound rolls going at 55c. Four-pound quantities of honey were sold in pails at 36c. Sauerkraut was quoted to 10 cents the quart.

Farmer-vendors today reported a plentitude of potatoes which sold at $1 for 75-lb. baglots. "There will be plenty for Spring consumption," one vendor remarked, prophesying a further decline in price. Other vegetables, however, maintained their high levels of the past two weeks, with parsnips offered at $1 the bushel and carrots, beets and turnips ranging between 80c and 90c for the same quantity.

Northern Spies $1.45

Said to be at the peak of their "tastiness," Northern Spy apples were offered today at $1.45 for ring packed hamper-lots. Stark Delicious sold at 10c less for No. 1 grade, while domestics in both varieties were offered at $1 the bushel. Tolman Sweets, Russets and a few cooking varieties sold at the same prices.

Whitefish was fairly plentiful, selling well at 20c the pound. Fresh mudcats brought 15c the pound, while fresh pike demanded 10c. A few lake herring sold at seven fish for 25c.

Farmers again offered their young pigs in profusion with prices ranging between $5 and $6 each.

LIGHT BLUES ROW STRONGLY TO WIN

1829. One race was a dead heat. As the race this year was "unofficial", it may not be counted in the list of wins and losses of the two universities.

The race this year was held over the short Henley course instead of the usual 4¼-mile Putney-Mortlake run on the Thames in the London area. War conditions made use of the latter course impracticable this year.

Lead In Quarter Mile.

Swinging into stride from the start at the foot of Temple Island, Cambridge had taken a slight lead after a quarter mile.

The light blues increased their lead to a length and a half at the three-quarter marker and opened up water steadily between the shells until they had swept past the finish boom.

Banks Lined With Spectators.

While interest in the 'Erzats' contest was dead before the race, a touch of spring in the air brought out a crowd somewhat reminiscent of the peacetime throngs which turn out yearly for the classic over the regular course.

The banks of the Thames were lined with cheering spectators for the full length of the Henley course.

Oxford won the toss but made a doubtful selection in choosing the Berkshire shore lane and may have thrown their chances there and then. They had to struggle against Cambridge's wash until the light blues were so far in front that it made no difference.

Hicks lifted the crew to a 36-stroke beat at the start in an effort to overcome the advantage the Cantabs assumed early. That the Cambridge pull was stronger and smoother was soon apparent. It was the light blues' day.

Keep Bundled up, Folks, Spring is Not Here Yet

Despite Sunny Day of March First, the Month is Likely to Bring Plenty of Cold Weather

COLD TODAY

This war-stuff is getting to the weather man. Like the Finnish Arctic patrols who don white suits to fool the enemy, so did Old Leo, who opposes the fleecy Lamb for the honor of ushering in the blustery month of March, "pull a fast one" on gullible John Public.

Shedding a white fleece of gentle snowflakes that fluttered down from a greyish sky, the canny Lion, suddenly swept aside his cloud-coat and brought out Old Sol in a blaze of comparative warm glory as an unsuspecting populace smiled smugly to itself, and believed that the omen was true. Winter was gone, and the Lamb reigned supreme.

But today Leo smacked his lips in grim satisfaction. His ruse had worked perfectly. In his true colors he flicked his tail and sent thermometers down to near-zero temperatures, while a lamb shorn of its honors lay in the wings of the weather theatre to await another cue.

In direct contrast to the sunny sky of yesterday afternoon, temperatures this morning hovered about the five-above zero mark. A wind that found its way through the heaviest clothing caused early morning workers to shiver on their way to various occupations, while Mr. Householder renewed his attacks on the family coal-bin.

However, it's an ill wind that doesn't dry somebody's washing, and because the Lion has won the first round of the weather tournament, it is no sign that the Lamb will not come into his own by the time March 31st, rolls around.

But two swallows do not make a Spring, as someone once remarked, nor by the same token do little blobs of flowers on poker-chip hats now on display in some of the shops that cater to Milady's vanity, necessarily mean that the elusive maiden garbed in diaphanuous raiment, and who is supposed to represent the coming season, is hovering in the vicinity.

It's a little early yet for shorts and shrubbery, and according to weather reports there will be snow before snowdrops, winds before wildflowers, and coal-bills before cauliflower plants.

TWEED NOW IN LEAGUE SEMI-FINALS

Defeat Roslin 2 to 0 in Sudden Death Game at Home

Tweed, March 2 —(Special) — Tweed advanced into the semi-finals in the East Hastings Rural League by defeating Roslin by a score of 2-0 last night in a sudden-death game at Tweed Arena. They will meet Farnsworth in the next round on Tuesday night to decide who will try conclusions with the league-leading Plainfield team for Dr. H. E. Welsh's trophy.

With both teams facing elimination, careful hockey, with close checking kept the score down. There was no score in the first period, although both goalies had several hard stops to make. Tweed opened the scoring half way through the middle session with Shanque netting the puck. This boy was a member of Tweed intermediates several years ago, giving way ultimately to younger players, but he has not forgotten some of the tricks he learned at that time. He still retains much of his speed and outskated his check without difficulty. Tight defensive work in front of McIlroy enabled him to keep his opponents off the score sheet. Harte and Mattis worked hard in this frame, but were outlucked around the net.

The final period was a repetition of the second, with Shanque again scoring for Tweed and Roslin being held scoreless. Although outscored and practically out of the running, Roslin fought back gamely and were swarming around Tweed goal as the final gong sounded.

Bailey in the visitors' goal turned in a good game despite the defeat, while McIlroy in Tweed nets, earned his shutout victory. Vance and Tracy also played well for the visitors, while Wood, Thompson and Sinclair were effective for Tweed.

Roslin—goal—Bailey; defence —Chumley, Vance; centre—Mattis; wings—Harte, Chisholm; subs — J. Chumley, E. Burleigh, Tracy, Bellis, Slingerland, H. Harte, Mills.

Tweed—goal— McIlroy; defence —Emerson, Woods; centre — Sinclair; wings—Cronk, Thompson; subs—Labb, Hayes, Courneyea, Shanque, Prout, Sherry.

WANT NAME CHANGED

South Bend, Ind., March 1 (AP) —Four Worms are seeking to turn—their last names. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley W. Worm and Mr. and Mrs. Everett A. Worm filed a petition to change their names to Warren because their present monnickers "have constantly exposed us to ridicule and embarrassment." The male Worms are twins.

The War This Week

(By Don Gilbert Canadian Press Cable Editor).

The Finnish army's defence of Viipuri dominated developments in the 26th week of the war. A month after beginning its great offensive on the Karelian Isthmus, the Red army reached positions one mile from the battered port-city of eastern Finland and brought up fresh divisions to press the attack.

Neutral military opinion as to the ability of the Finns to hold the city, now that part of the Mannerheim line directly protecting it has been pierced by the Soviet forces, was not available, but it seemed certain the Reds could count on nothing more than a pyrrhic victory as the Finns continued to take a terrific toll in Soviet killed for every few yards of territory yielded.

Not Heralding General Retreat

While loss of the city would make the Finnish army's task more difficult, it is not believed it would herald any general retreat, since the fortifications of the Mannerheim line are laid in depth, protecting the coastline to the west as well as to the east of Viipuri.

British volunteers left London early in the week, but will need considerable seasoning before they are ready to join the Finnish forces. The command of these troops was given to Major Kermit Roosevelt, son of the late United States President, Theodore Roosevelt. The United States Congress finally completed action on its $20,000,000 credit for Finland.

Intense aerial activity, aided by clear weather, marked the war between Germany and the Allied powers. A new batch of German U-boats also was apparently at sea, since the British merchant marine lost some 35,000 tons of shipping. The Germans themselves lost two ships aggregating 9,000 tons, one of them falling into British hands intact. In addition four enemy submarines were believed to have been accounted for by Allied naval forces.

Scouting Planes Over Berlin

The Royal Air force sent its scouting planes over Berlin three times during the week and German ports such as Hamburg and Bremen were thoroughly reconnoitred—a warning perhaps that Britain's long arm of retaliation can, and will, strike if German aircraft raid British cities in force.

Sumner Welles, United States Undersecretary of State, touring European capitals seeking information for President Roosevelt, visited Rome and Berlin. In Rome he saw Premier Mussolini and was to see Adolf Hitler on Saturday. From Berlin he will go to Paris and London.

Winston Churchill contributed a notable addition to the speeches of the war leaders when he reviewed the naval war in the House of Commons. While foreseeing difficult days, he drew a convincing picture of the navy's ability to weather the storm. He announced the battleships Nelson and Barham had been damaged by enemy action but soon would rejoin the fleet fully repaired.

France Tightens Belt

France tightened her belt in an effort to cut down consumption of foodstuffs while at the same time augmenting production to meet the increased needs of the war. Rationing will be introduced at an early date and severe restrictions were imposed on the sale of alcoholic beverages and some other commodities. The gold holdings of the Bank of France were revalued.

Glancing back 25 years—

Strong offensives were launched by the Allies on the Western Front in the week February 25 to March 2, 1915, particularly in the Champagne where French troops made a notable advance. In the east the Russians halted a German drive on Warsaw. Stormy weather interfered with operations of the Allied fleet at Gallipoli.

Childhood sweethearts who grow to become rival artists are Muriel Angelus and Ronald Coleman in Rudyard Kipling's, "The Light That Failed," thrilling love story that you'll long remember, featuring Walter Houston and Ida Lupino, coming next to the Belle Theatre.

TONY

— BY ELIZABETH VERNON —

CHAPTER XVI

Alan watched her cross the room and suddenly, shatteringly, the controlled rage, the misery, the hopelessness of these last dark weeks surged up in one blinding wave.

"Darn you!" The words broke him in concentrated fury: "Do as I say! Come back here!"

She jerked round then. She looked lost and uncertain enough. At sight of her face he felt shame. But he could not recall the anger from his voice. "Will you please sit down?" he said.

She did as she was told. There was a long silence, and gradually the causeless fury died in his heart. "I am sorry that I swore at you, Tony," he said.

"Oh, that's all right." She smiled. It was a real smile. But she left the talking to him.

"Well—what have you been doing lately?" he asked.

"Oh ,nothing much. I've hunted a bit." She brought out that word quite plainly, not as if there were anything about which to be tactful or careful. And that he found soothing.

"You took your fences well," he told her, "that last day I was out."

She flushed a little.

"I'm glad you think so," she said gravely. "You would know.

"Would I? I came a good cropper, myself."

"It wasn't your fault," she replied. "A strand of wire in a fence —that would bring down the Archangel Gabriel."

He smiled. Curious to realize that he was smiling for the first time in many weeks, at a mention of his deadly accident. Strange child, who could somehow calm the flare-up of his tortured nerves—

There was silence. It didn't evidently trouble Tony .

"And how is Jacky?" he asked.

"She's home again. But she isn't very strong yet." Tony's brows puckered.

Suddenly, from somewhere in the house, there came the sound of men's angry voices.

"What the—" for one second Alan had made a movement as if he could rise, and Tony's eyes slid away from his face as he sank back on the pillows.

A man's tread came swiftly down the passage. There was noisy expostulation outside the door. It opened. Robert's harassed voice said, "Sir Matthew Lake, sir. I told him you weren't receiving—"

"Nonsense!" said another voice.

A man stood frowning in the doorway. He was tall and fair. His looks were spoilt by the diagonal scar that ran across his face.

"Matt!" Alan stared at him. "I thought you were in Kurdistan."

Sir Matthew shook his head. And it was then that Alan saw that his friend, standing motionless there, was looking not at him, but at Tony.

She sat in the circle of light from the lamp, her red-brown beret on her red-gold-brown hair. her pointed face, rather timid again now, turned towards the stranger.

On Sir Matthew's face was the expression seldom seen—the look of a man who, in one unpredictable second, has found all of which he has ever dreamed.

x x x

Sir Matthew Lake had finished his long examination of Alan. His mind had been filled with considerations of Alan's injury But now as he gazed out into the darkness, his thoughts slipped for one moment to that slight girl with the burnished head—Tony Querne.

His mind jerked back to the broken man in the bed behind him. His heart pricked him as if, in that moment of unexpected thoughts, he had failed his friend. Before he could turn, Alan spoke

"Well, I suppose the verdict is the same as before?"

To Matthew Lake that careful, even voice was more pathetic than the crying of a lost child. He paused before he made his reply, and, in that pause, Alan spoke again.

"I expect I'm a cripple for life?"

"Alan, any doctor whom you ask will tell you so."

"You need hardly," said Alan, and his voice held the controlled anger of a man who has been thrust back into darkness, "have forced your way in here to tell me that."

"Quite true," said Sir Matthew.

"Sorry, Matt, I'm not myself these days. No doubt I shall become so."

Matthew Lake could not speak of what he felt, for his feelings ran too deep. It was more to break that silence than for information that he asked, "Who was that girl, Alan? She had an unusual little face and manner." He had, he reflected, no need of information about Tony. Nothing that he might learn could alter his strange longing to see her again.

"Tony? She is the young sister of my erstwhile financee."

"Is she? Well, she's been bullied, made unhappy at some time in her young life," said the world famous authority on nerves.

Nonsense. She was a darned difficult child, I happen to know. But she's all right with me."

"And you look on her as a child? Well, she's more than that."

"Don't do your 'famous psychologist' turn with me." Alan's smile, so different, so weary nowadays, lightened his face for a moment. "I know Tony better than you do. We're friends."

"I see. When was your engagement broken off?"

"When I became paralyzed of course, you fool." There was no doubt now of the anger in Alan's voice.

"So your girl didn't stick to you?" asked Sir Matthew, imperturbably.

"Of course not. What woman would?"

"Some woman would." And as he spoke, Matthew Lake saw again the thin timid face which he nad seen for the first time an hour ago.

Hyacinth sat in her bedroom, the door locked, the ivory-white telephone at her ear. "Hullo!" said a deep voice at the other end of the line. At sound of it, she gave a little sigh.

"Bob! I've been trying for an hour to get you. Your housekeeper said you were out."

"Well, I was busy. Comes to the same thing."

"Does it? Well, I've rung you up on business, you'll be glad to hear. It's about those—that security that you hold."

"Yes. What about it? You know, Hyacinth, I need my two thousand pounds."

"You'll have the money next week. I've managed to get it. But I must have the jewels back for a few days.

There was a laugh; no other answer.

"No, you don't understand, Bob." While she spoke, her small white fist rose. Soundlessly it came down on the table. But her voice was calm. "That little swine, Tony, has written to the lawyers, and they've told her that the jewels will be hers when she's eighteen. She'll be eighteen quite soon. She wants to see them. If we can't show her the heirlooms she'll smell a rat—if I can ever do her down, I will."

"You've done what you can in the past, haven't you?" Cheaveley's smile was almost audible.

"Will you let me have back the jewels?" Hyacinth felt suddenly anxious to be off the line.

"Yes, my dearest. But you must write me a letter."

"What do you mean?" she asked sharply.

"Just a letter. In it you must tell me that you gave me the jewels as security. That by law they belong to your young sister. And that she informed me of that only after I had had them in my possession for some time."

"Why should I?"

"Just because I tell you to." How much more smooth than usual was Bob Cheaveley's voice. "If the letter is correct—perfectly clear, no tricks—you may have the jewels for a day or two to show to your sister. As to the money, if I receive it by next Friday you will avoid a great deal of trouble for yourself."

"Friday. A week—"

"Yes. A week. Time enough." His laugh sounded somehow as if he knew of something important —but what could he know?

"Now look here, Hyacinth—" his tone sharpened. "I'm going away tomorrow till Tuesday. If I send you the jewels, I must have them back on Tuesday evening."

"Oh, yes, Bob." Hyacinth's voice was meek enough. But her face, suddenly was not. "Good-bye."

"See you tonight, I expect."

"Tonight?"

"At the Hunt Ball. But you'll be dancing with young Lord Raften, I suppose."

"I don't know."

"Don't you? I do, m'dear."

She hung up the receiver. She rose, and raised her white hands—the fingers scarlet-tipped—above her head. Sweetly, she danced away down the long room, humming the latest tune, her feet soundless, sliding, gliding.

CHAPTER XVII

A narrow, not much frequented little street. The shop too was narrow, and one could not imagine that it was often visited. The jewels, glittering in the small window, protected by bars and steel netting, were too wonderful for that.

Hyacinth, quiet and exultant, stood at the old counter. A man, colorless, silver-haired—he might have been as old as the counter — slipped the notes on to the dark wood across which so many hundred thousand pounds had in a century changed hands.

"And that, I think, is correct, Madam."

"Thank you." Hyacinth smiled. But the smile really was for herself. She had done well, and even in little things. She had thought specially of bringing a large vanity bag! something that had a handle and could hold safely the packet of notes. And which could hold also the larger packet that Mr. Ortreum was handing her now.

"Beautiful copies, Madam. We have never made better ones. No one will know that they are not real."

"One day soon I shall come back. And you must make me up the real jewels again—"

"Of course, Madam. Exactly the same as the originals." The old jeweler did not smile though. To how many women had he said that? And how many had come back? One—two—in sixty years.

Hyacinth walked down the street to her car. On her face was a happy smile, carefree; it added to her beauty. Now with her troubles over she could have pirouetted down the street. "Hyacinth Raften", "Lady Raften"......"Coming events cast their shadows before." And had not various moments with Philip Raften at the Hunt Ball been "shadows cast"? Yes, she thought so.

She opened the door of her car and put the precious bag on the floor. She started the engine. She hummed a little tune. And she did not see what she was not intended to see; the little furtive tout in the blue raincoat who leaned against the entrance to an arcade and surveyed her and her bag and her car.

x x x

"Good evening." Major Cheaveley had opened the door himself. He looked down at Hyacinth as she stood on his doorstep. "At the eleventh hour? You will lose your reputation, coming to Fallows so late."

"I shall not come again," Hyacinth replied.

"Come in," he said.

They entered the sitting room. It was a little changed. Some attempt had been made to tidy it. The wall paper was patched where before it had sagged, and the new paper stood out in startling brightness against the older, faded colors. The ceiling, which had been dark with lamp black, was newly whitewashed.

"You have been brightening things up," Hyacinth said. But somehow, she thought, the attempts at improvement had not succeeded. The room gave her the same sensation as on her last visit, though this time she came in triumph.

"Yes," Bob Cheaveley was answering her. "We're improving the place — gradually. I've got a — friend—coming to stay. I thought I ought to smarten things a bit."

Hyacinth laughed.

His voice went on, doubly quiet after that laugh. "I'm a solitary chap, and I'm getting tired of it. But I shan't change my ways much."

Hyacinth sat down on the rickety arm of a chair. Hands in pockets, she gazed up into his face, a hard smile on her own. And, his elbow on the chimney-piece, Bob Cheaveley looked down at her as if she were acting in some sketch whose lines he knew.

"Well, Hyacinth, the securities?"

She had meant to play him a little longer. Instead, she jerked the packet of notes from her pocket and flung it down on the table.

"Ah!" He picked it up. One by one he counted the notes. "Clever girl," he said. "So you found the money after all?"

"Yes. And your game's finished, blackmailer."

He took no notice of the word. "And how did you get the money?" he asked amiably.

"Mother came forward of course. Did you think she'd let me be dunned by a crooked cad?" She rose.

"Won't you thank me," he asked, "for financing you all this time? You don't know your luck in dealing with a gentleman."

"Gentleman!"

"Yes, Hyacinth." He did not touch her. He put out his arm and she could not pass. "You have your own free will, as your car outside there, proves. My housekeeper is in bed. She's stone deaf. You have called me a crook. Shall I behave as one now?"

She glanced up. In a mirror she caught a sideways smiling view of him. She felt as if the solid ground shifted under her feet.

"No, no. Don't be frightened," he said, "You can go."

At the door he slipped his arm through hers. He pointed at a print on the wall.

"Look at that," he said.

She looked. The print was called "Ferreting."

"Have you ever watched that sport?" he asked.

She shook her head. She thought, "He has been drinking"; and her courage, lost for a moment, returned with her contempt.

"Ah," he said, "very interesting. You put the ferret in there. Ferret runs down the burrow like that. Rabbit hears him, knows of a better little bolt hole and bolts for it. That's the moment. You shoot him then."

"Really?" said Hyacinth.

Bob Cheaveley opened the door for her.

"The only thing is," he said, "to know how to wait."

x x x

The snow was whirling down. The darkness of the winter evening was thick and blind. Even with a torch one couldn't see more than a foot or two, but Tony didn't need to see far. She knew each step of the way, each roughness of the ground that lay under the blanket of snow. She felt happy—"really happy", she said to herself. So much, she thought, had friendship done for her.

The fury of the wind and snow ceased abruptly, cut off by the mass of the house as it rose before her. She stumbled up the snow-clad steps. Her hand was raised to the bell when suddenly the front door opened.

Sir Matthew Lake stood on the threshold.

"Come in," he said. The words sounded irritable, even angry. He took her arm and led her in as if he thought that she might wish to stay out longer in the howling weather. He slammed the door against the wind. In the sudden silence his voice was loud: "So you haven't brought your little sister this time?" he said. "You have that much sense."

"It's Jacky's bedtime," Tony replied mildly. "And I wouldn't let her walk through this snow, anyway."

"You have no business to walk through it yourself," Sir Matthew said. "It was a darned silly thing to do."

Tony contemplated him. She liked him. He had been kind to her. Each time lately that she and Jacky, or she alone, had walked over to Holme Dacey, he had escorted her back to the gates of Oaken, either in his car or walking with her.

"Oh," she told him now, "I don't mind weather."

Sir Matthew looked at her —at the snow melting on her little cap and one of the curling ends of her short hair, at the big tweed coat that hid her slimness.

"I don't know how the devil," he grumbled, "you expect to get back. I can't take you. I've got to catch the London train."

She flushed at that. "I can walk back. I don't need to be taken." And then with a little flare of temper, "I wish you wouldn't interfere." She turned to go upstairs.

"Won't you take off your wet coat?" he asked. The words were oddly stifled.

She spoke quietly and clearly. "You see, I've got some apples for Alan in the pockets, Sir Matthew. I'll take off my coat upstairs."

"Tony," he said, "don't call me 'Sir Matthew'; call me 'Matt' as my friends do."

"All right." But he saw the slight surprise in her eyes. "Yes," he thought, "she thinks of me as middle-aged—old." And he remembered the women in many capitals who had shown themselves anxious for his notice. But those memories were of no comfort to him.

Tony was moving away from him, up the stairs to Alan.

Brantford Expositor Owned by Prestons For Fifty Years

Brantford, Ont., March 2.—(CP) —Members of the staff of the Brantford Expositor gathered with former members at a banquet last night in honor of W. B. Preston, president and managing director of the newspaper, marking the 50th anniversary of the day on which the publishing concern was taken over by the Preston family.

Fifty years ago today Thomas Hiram Preston, returning from the west after being managing editor of the Winnipeg Sun, became proprietor of the Expositor. His son, W. B. Preston, is a former president of The Canadian Press and of The Canadian Daily Newspaper Association.

Among speakers at the dinner were two former members of the Expositor staff, W. Rupert Davies, president of the Kingston Whig-Standard and of The Canadian Press and E. Roy Sayles, editor of the Renfrew Mercury.

STABILIZED FARM PRICES IS AIM OF HON. DR. MANION

Co-operative Handling of All Farm Produce Means to That End Says Manion

CARRY ON RESEARCH

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 2 — (CP) Stabilized farm prices through stimulation of co-operative handling of all farm produce will be aimed at by Conservative Leader Manion if he forms a government after March 26.

Dr. Manion pledged himself to that course here last night as he outlined a program of agricultural assistance designed to restore that industry to a "reasonable level of prosperity". Continuing his campaign through Eastern Canada, he speaks in Oshawa this afternoon and in Belleville tonight.

In addition to encouragement of co-operatives, his program included use of seasonal tariffs to protect Canadian farmers from foreign competition during Canadian production. However, he would also take steps through export board to shield domestic price levels of important farm produce from the influence of prices on world markets.

Wants 1926 Price Levels Restored

"If the 1926 price levels were restored, the problems of the farmer would largely vanish and with them the problem of industrial employment," Dr. Manion said. "The return of the 1926 price level, therefore, will be our constant objective." The program he outlined here included seasonal tariff protection for the home market, not only of the fruit and vegetable grower but also the dairy farmer and livestock grower.

"At the same time, steps will be taken through export boards to divest price levels of important agricultural products such as cheese, butter, etc., of their dependency upon price levels in the International market".

The Conservative Chieftain promised "vigorous encouragement of all forms of co-operative marketing, regulation and distribution of all farm products". With the provinces, his government would seek to set up marketing boards through which the farmer might become "master of his own destiny". Overseas agencies would be expanded and measures taken to increase preferences in Empire markets.

Set Up Investigating Boards

Machinery would be set up for the "continuous investigation" of price spreads, to see that neither producer nor consumer was exploited. On complaint of any producer or consumer organization, investigation would be made and steps taken to correct unjustified spreads and to eliminate combines operating unfairly to the producers.

Activities of the Canadian Farm Loan Board would be expanded to provide long-term mortage money at low interest. "Essential for the future agricultural development of Canada." The Board would also work closely with any provincial machinery of like sort.

"All measures necessary will be taken to ensure reasonable rates of interest on present loans," he said. Farmers would also be assisted in obtaining long-term loans for drainage and providing fertilizer necessary to rehabilitate their land.

Science would also be called upon to the fullest extent in experiment and demonstration with a view to efficient and economic production.

"Canada has lagged behind in development of research facilities designed to discover industrial uses for farm products," he added. Activities of the National Research Council in this regard would be increased.

Attacks Appointment

Norman Lockhart, member for Lincoln in the last parliament, attacked the appointment as Defence Minister of Hon. Norman Rogers whose chief qualification for such a post, he said, was his university background. Mr. Rogers "saw some active service during the Great War," he read from the Parliament Guide; all else there dealt with Mr. Rogers' degrees.

"Can a man like that handle a vital department like Defence in a time of war?" he asked.

Dr. Manion sharply criticized regulations preventing the broadcasting of political meetings, holding that a far larger number should be permitted to hear the arguments presented by the various parties and candidates. That course would make for broader understanding of the issue in an election and more intelligent voting.

ROME PROTESTS BRITISH DECISION

Note Now Being Drafted Against London's Decision to Seize Coal

Rome, March 2.—(CP-Havas)—The Italian Government announced today that a note of protest will be sent to the British Government tomorrow over London's decision to seize German exports to Italy, particularly coal.

The note is now being drafted, the announcement said.

Four Vessels Return

Amsterdam, March 2—(CP-Havas) —Four Italian ships loaded with German coal left Rotterdam this morning for Italy but returned to port on receiving instructions directly from Rome.

The coal would have been liable to seizure by Allied contraband control authorities, under a British government decision announced yesterday.

AT THE McCARTHY

"MARRIED AND IN LOVE"

To be presented next at the McCarthy Theatre the following is a review on "Married and in Love" as reviewed by staff writer Frank S. Nugent, in the New York Times, published Friday, February 2nd.

"Tidy little domestic drama is "Married and in Love", with Alan Marshall and Barbara Read, at the Palace.

A slight, sentimental and rather pleasant drama of domestic harmony and acrimony registered at the Palace yesterday under the name of "Married and in Love", which is RKO's arch title for "Distant Fields" the S. K. Lauren play that opened and closed in London a few seasons back. Mr. Lauren, who handled his own screen adaptation, seems to know something about people, how they talk, the things they might reasonably be expected to do, and, under John Farrow's unconventional direction, a tidy little cast has contriubted its freshness and sincerity to a theme which may be considerably less than startling, but has proved none the less responsive to gentle treatment.

In the fewest and bluntest words, it is the story of a triangle that fails to break up two marriages simply because the fourth, and least-consulted, angle refuses to recognize its existence. In this case she is the ingenue of the piece, the innocent and childishly trustful wife of Leslie Yates who, after many years and many trials finally has acknowledged Mrs. Wilding's contention that the love they once bore for each other still burns bright. Mr. Wilding claims his right to join in their exposure; his wife and her uncomfortable affinity want to reserve themselves the distinction of announcing their secret to the world. But little Mrs. Yates hushes the mall and has them stay to dinner—which would have been a foul feminine trick unless you recognize the rightness of her analysis; the affinities weren't affinities at all.

If this outline sounds unpromising, it is because it is a synopsis merely of the immediate incidents of the film, which constitute only a fraction of its material. The bulk of it is devoted to recalling the things that happened before, the things that illuminated the lives and the crisis in the lives of the Yateses and Wildings. In telling them, Mr. Farrow has reverted to the old technique of the flashback, which used to be a nuisance, but has real value when its employment is so clearly in order and has been handled so well. It has been rather well played all around, by Alan Marshall and Patric Knowles as the husbands, by Helen Vinson and Barbara Read as the wives, by Frank Faylen and Carol Hughs as a pair of cocktail-loungers. Miss Read's Helen Yates, is of course, the commanding role and she has interpreted it splendidly. Quite a pleasant surprise, in fact, from every angle including the triangle."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Rose Marie"

Belleville will thrill anew to the special return showing of "Rose Marie." New audiences will hear its haunting melodies for the first time. Remember this will be the last opportunity for all to see this spectacular romance when it comes to the Capitol Theatre as its next attraction.

By special arrangement with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios the management of the Capitol Theatre is privileged to present a limited engagement of America's singing sweethearts Jeanette Mac Donald and Nelson Eddy in the colorful musical romance "Rose Marie."

For your added entertainment the Capitol will also show "Oliver Quade", that popular fiction detective identified as "the human encylopedia," on the screen for the first time in Paramount's thrilling new comedy mystery "Death of a Champion." None other than Lynne Overman, who scored recently in "Union Pacific" creates the character for the screen, while Virginia Dale, Joseph Allen Jr., Donald O'Connor, Susan Paley and Robert Paige have featured supporting roles in the picture. The story gets under way when Overman and O'Connor, selling encyclopedias at a society dog show, witness the mysterious death of a champion Great Dane, owned by an eccentric millionaire. Then, in quick succession, three persons who might have known why the dog was killed, are murdered. Robert Florey directed the picture.

Universal news of the world will complete the bill.

AT THE BELLE

"THE LIGHT THAT FAILED"

Rudyard Kipling's "The Light That Failed", starring Ronald Colman, now on the Belle Theatre screen, and it's all that can be expected from a picture boasting its author, its elaborate cast and its direction.

As a result it is thoroughly satisfying romance, well spiced with action, and replete with thrills and drama.

Faithfully following the narrative which made of the famous Kipling novel a best-seller for two generations, "The Light That Failed", recounts the romance of Dick Heldar, artist, and his childhood sweetheart, Maisie, played respectively by Colman and Muriel Angelus, the latter one of Paramount's famous "Golden Circle" girls.

After promising themselves to each other as children, Fate separates them. Dick becomes a newspaper artist attached to the British army in the famous Sudan campaign of the last century. There he saves the life of one Torpenhow, a hard-boiled war correspondent who takes him back to London and makes him the sensation of the art world. At the height of his career he meets Maisie again. She, too, is an artist, but not a successful one.

She resents his success and is cool toward him. This drives him to despair and he decides to show her up by painting a portrait of a woman upon whose face he intends to portray all the woe to which the human animal is heir. For his model he selects a guttersnipe named Bessie. An old wound causes him to go blind just as he completes the picture. Bessie, infuriated at him, for breaking up what she believed to be a romance between herself and Torpenhow, destroys the painting.

His friends do not dare to tell him what happened to the painting, but he finds out—through Bessie. This brings the picture to its powerful climax, one which will long live in the memories of those who have seen it for its sheer drama and force.

The role of Bessie is played by Ida Lupino and it is the best role this accomplished actress ever played. Torpenhow is portrayed by Walter Huston, who handles it with his usual skill and fine feeling. There are more than four hundred soldiers and natives and some two hundred horses used in the picture's two big battle scenes, which are among the most ambitious and finest ever caught by a motion picture camera. "The Light That Failed", was directed by William A. Wellman, to whom much credit is due for bringing to breathing life this greatest of all the Kipling stories.

Wellman megaphoned many high-mark hits including "Wings", "Nothing Sacred," "Men With Wings" and "Beau Gueste."

The popular British newsreel with its gist of important news happenings "over there" and at Home, and a clever and funny color Cartoon "Little Lambkin" will be presented on the same program.

Centenary

Centenary—The Red Cross unit of Centenary held an all-day quilting at the home of the President, Mrs. F. Aikens, on Wednesday. A pot luck dinner was served at noon by the hostess and was much enjoyed. It proved to be a most successful meeting and a great deal of work was accomplished by the ladies. This unit is doing splendid work and has already supplied material and completed 14 pair of pyjamas, 3 pair socks, 3 pair wristlets, 1 scarf. These have been turned in and more work will be sent next week.

The many friends of Mrs. Mercer, who recently underwent an operation in the Belleville General Hospital, will be glad to know she is steadily improving and expects to return home on Saturday, March 2.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Garrison and little son of Frankford spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Garrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Ray spent the week-end in Sunderland with their daughter and family.

The Y.P.U. met at the home of the Misses Coza and Anita Calvert on Tuesday last when a social evening was enjoyed.

Miss Georgina Sutherland attended the leap year dance at Thomasburg on Wednesday.

Hutton Martin in Serious Condition At Picton Hospital

Picton (Special)— Hutton Martin, 17-year-old Collegiate student, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Martin of Greenbush, who was injured at Picton rink on Tuesday evening, is in a serious condition, in the local hospital, a slight fracture of the skull is feared while his one leg was badly broken, and his left hand crushed. The lad fell 35 feet from a steel girder in the roof in doing a hand-over-hand stunt, on a dare. He fell with his skates on. His hand came in contact with an electric light during the feat, and it is thought he received a slight shock that caused the fall. The case is particularly sad as young Martin has been a cripple from birth, until the past few years, when after continued hospital treatment in Toronto, he was cured.

'ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL RELATIONS' BETWEEN ROME AND LONDON ENDANGERED IS REPORT

Italy Sends Strong Protest to Britain Over Blockade

Britain is Reported Reliably to Have Made Counter Protest Over the Way Matter Has Been Handled in Fascist Press

STRONGLY WORDED

British Authorities State Coal Blockade Was Announced Many Weeks Before Rome - London Trade Negotiations Suspended

Rome, Mar. 4 (AP).—Italy, protesting against the British blockade of German coal shipments to Italy, has told Great Britain that "economic and political relations" of the Rome and London governments are endangered.

Britain is reported reliably to have made a counter protest over the way the matter has been handled in the Fascist press.

The Italian note of protest, delivered yesterday to the British Embassy and published today, went beyond a formal protest against the London admiralty's order to halt the coal shipments. It struck at contraband control generally and charged that interception of mail at sea was a violation of The Hague convention of 1907.

Manifestly Abusive.

The submission of all maritime traffic of non-belligerent countries to contraband control, the note said, "is manifestly abusive".

Britain is understood to have complained against alleged insinuations that the blockade was an attempt to exert economic pressure on Italy to make her agree to exchange armaments for British coal.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Lakes cause late springs! Spring near large bodies of water always lags behind that of the interior parts of the country at the same latitude. This is because the water at the close of the winter has reached its lowest temperature, and the subsequent warming is a slow process. The surface water of 32 degrees gets constantly warmer until it reach 39 degrees which is near the temperature and density of the lower layers. With further warning it gets lighter and therefore can not sink. The interchange between the top and lower layers is very slow as the lower layers become warmer due to warmth from the earth's interior and rise very slowly.

Text of Italian Protest to Britain

Rome, Mar. 4 (AP).—Following is the text of the Italian government's protest to Great Britain over the British blockade of sea-borne German coal shipments to Italy:

The Fascist government refers to the communication of the British government according to which every ship loaded with coal from Germany which leaves a port of loading after Mar. 1 is subject to measures of control.

In the face of such a measure, which seriously injures Italian interests, the Fascist government renews in firmest terms, the protest and reserves already formulated against the principles involved in the British government's dispositions for economic warfare and for the ways in which these are applied to non-belligerent states.

Contrary to Better Claim.

Measures taken by the British government in this field appear to be, and are, contrary to the letter and spirit of international law which establishes within well-defined limits the rights of belligerents in order to safeguard the interests of third states and the liberty of their legitimate commerce.

Mid-City Shenandoah in Pennsylvania in Ruins but No One Killed or Injured

WATER MAINS BROKEN

Shenandoah, Pa., March 4—(AP)—Mid-city Shenandoah sank slowly today, toppling homes and cracking business buildings, as abandoned anthracite mine workings below the town collapsed after a 24-hour rain.

Residents, awakened by the rumbling that warned of the cave-in, fled from a 16-block area that settled slowly and steadily. Police Chief Frank Alinsky said no one was reported killed or injured, but property damage was heavy.

700 Canadians, Including Aviators, To Assist Finland Against Russia

Toronto, March 4 (CP)—Col. Fraser Hunter, Toronto announced today that a force of 700 Canadians, including many aviators, will join approximately 250 Finnish volunteers and leave for Finland in the near future. Many details remain to be settled.

"We are now making arrangements to take advantage of Winston Churchill's offer to convoy all ships," said Col. Hunter, member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto St. Patricks. He said he was arranging the force as a private citizen.

"We can only take those who are willing to go in a spirit of high adventure," the Colonel added. "It will be a few weeks before they go. We only found our details of pay, equipment and so on the other day.

Public Appeal

"We can now make public appeals for volunteers. We cannot recruit Canadians but we can advise them and assist them in transportation and other details. Our greatest fight now is against the impression that Finland cannot carry on much longer. So far as I can see she can hold out indefinitely if she gets a force of 30,000 men, and even without help she could hold out for many months.

"I expect even that the Royal Canadian Air Force will soon provide facilities of some kind to give advance training to Canadian fliers before they leave for Finland. Now that $30,000,000 has been granted to Finland by the United States, I think we in Canada should start some issue of Finnish bonds."

Working With Finnish Assoc.

Mr. Lackstrom said today that 250 Finnish-Canadians, exclusive of the Canadian volunteers, will be ready to sail later this month and that these will be joined by about 200 more from the United States.

He also revealed that about 12 men a day have been leaving for Finland for some time and will continue to do so until the main body goes.

Col. Hunter was a former member of the British army in India and served during the first Great War. He had a distinguished military career. He has knowledge of 10 languages and has served in executive positions with many clubs, including several veterans' organizations.

LONDON PAPERS SUGGEST CHANGES IN LEADERSHIP

Suggestion Comes After First Bombing Raid by Nazis in English Channel

MERCHANTMAN SUNK

8,441-Ton Liner Domala Bombed and 108 Persons Including Captain Killed

London, March 4—(CP)— Two leading London newspapers today suggested changes may be necessary in Britain's war leadership, concurrently with reports of the first German aerial attack in the English Channel.

A Heinkel bomber swooped on the 8,411-ton liner Domala with bombs and machine-gun fire, probably killing 108 persons— the heaviest toll aboard a merchantman since the Canada-bound Athenia was torpedoed with a death list of 113 on the first day of the war, Sept. 3.

The attack, the first by a German warplane west of the Straits of Dover, occurred about dawn Saturday, but it and other weekend attacks on British shipping became known amid widespread discussion over the course of the six-month-old war.

Although the Daily Mail found "proof of our supremacy" in the activities of the Royal Navy and Air Force, it warned of the necessity of knowing "we have the right men" in the government.

FRENCH REPORT GREAT ACTIVITY AT THE FRONT

Fresh German Divisions Enter the Lines—Several Raids Made

2 NAZI PLANES DOWNED

(By Henry C. Cassidy, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, March 4—(AP) — French military dispatches reported fresh divisions were entering the German lines amid mounting activity today on the western front.

Reichswehr reinforcements of "several" new divisions trained during the winter were said to be arriving behind the active front while aerial feints back and forth across it intensified over the weekend.

Other German units were reported moving into the region facing Switzerland.

The Germans simultaneously took the initiative in a series of Scores Relief Policy and Touches on Tourist and Agricultural Policy Which He Advocates — "We Must Have Proper Tariff Policy to Maintain Our Standard of Living"

"A united war effort with all the resources of the country behind it should be placed above party policies, and that is what I am suggesting in a National Government," the Hon. Dr. Robert J. Manion, Dominion National Conservative leader, declared here on Saturday night.

Speaking before an enthusiastic crowd of fifteen hundred cheering supporters, that overflowed into the corridors and adjoining rooms from the Collegiate Auditorium, the gray-haired Conservative leader, showing signs of a strenuous cross-Canada campaign, lashed out at peace time and wartime policies of the King administration, and outlined the three vital issues of the election, parliamentary institutions, the record of the King Government and his National Government policy.

The last fifteen minutes of his address were devoted to agriculture, which he termed was the "most important industry in the Dominion, and in which a good foundation must be laid, or national life will be doomed to failure."

DECLINES TO BAR 'CONFUCIUS SAYS' FROM U.S. BROADCASTS

Washington, March 4—(AP) — The United States Communications Commission declined today to bar "Confucius says" jokes from the air.

The Commission, in reply to a letter from a Pittsburgh man asking that such jokes be banned, said it did not have authority under the law to direct radio stations to broadcast or to refrain from broadcasting such programs.

LIBERAL LEADERS SWITCHING FROM DEFENCE TACTICS

Go on Defensive Against Manion's National Gov't. Proposal

THREE WEEKS TO GO

Justice Minister Lapointe Calls Makeup of Manion Cabinet "Darkest Blackout of War"

(By the Canadian Press)

Switching from defensive tactics to a more aggressive attack, government speakers during the weekend concentrated on an offensive against Conservative leader Manion's national government proposal.

During the first phase of the Dominion election campaign, Liberal cabinet ministers generally based their electoral appeals on outlines of the government's war record but there are signs now that national government will be fought more vigorously in the remaining three weeks. One week from today is official nomination day and the campaign will become much keener as the March 26 voting day approaches.

In Vancouver Saturday night, Justice Minister Lapointe said Canadians have a right to know just whom Dr. Manion proposes to include in his national government. They were not going to vote "for a number of ghosts."

Have Right to Know

"The collection of brains" which the Conservative leader says will make up his cabinet is "the darkest blackout of the war," the Justice Minister continued.

Canadians had a right to know just whom Dr. Manion proposed taking into his government, Mr. Lapointe declared in an address in which he appealed for unity, defended the government's war effort and termed the present government the only possible truly national administration.

The Justice Minister said he had heard some sponsors of a national government suggest it would be the best way for parliament to adopt unpopular war measures. He declared that was main reason why he opposed such a form of government, adding: "We do not want anything which the people do not want."

SLIGHTLY COLDER WEATHER AHEAD

Kingston Has Heaviest Rainfall of Two-Thirds of an Inch

Toronto, March 4 (CP)—A 22-hour drizzling rain which began about 9.45 a.m. yesterday made Sunday a bleak and miserable day all over southern Ontario. Sleet made walking difficult and motorists ran into a multitude of difficulties with traction and visibility badly impared.

Rain and ice formation washed out all air schedules in and out of Toronto and the air "blackout" was still in force today and will remain so until weather improves.

Rainfall wasn't heavy, but the drizzle was driven before a 20 to 23-mile east wind all yesterday. In Toronto the rain didn't let up until about 7.15 a.m. today.

Kingston had the heaviest rainfall, two-thirds of an inch, Toronto and the rest of the area affected had around .42 of an inch. All day the temperature here hovered just above freezing.

In Georgian Bay and in Eastern Ontario there was a mixture of rain and snow.

Colder weather is to replace the comparatively mild spell by tonight, though it will continue cloudy with light rain most of today. Tuesday is to bring colder weather with light snowflurries.

Finns Repel Drives Aimed at 3 Sides Of City of Viipuri

Finns Also Report Heavy Fighting Near Petsamo, Where it is Said, 1,200 Russians Were Killed—Russians Attempt to Cross Ice of Viipuri Bay

HEAVY ARTILLERY FIRE

Russian War Planes Active, Supporting Troops on Isthmus and Bombing Areas Behind—No Civilian Casualties Reported

Helsinki, March 4—(AP)— The Finnish High Command announced today that its forces, fighting invading Russians almost at the gates of Viipuri, had repelled attacks aimed at the city from three sides.

In addition the Finns reported fighting in the Arctic region far to the north, near Petsamo, and northeast of Lake Ladoga, where they said 1,200 Russians were killed.

The attacks against Viipuri were beaten back yesterday, according to the daily army communique, as the Russians attempted to advance across the ice of the Bay of Viipuri, at a second point between the bay and the Vuoksi River, and at a third point near Ayrapaa, a few miles farther to the northeast.

Aerial Onslaught

As the Russians continued to pour a heavy land fire into deserted Viipuri, the Soviet Air Force backed up the attack with an aerial onslaught.

The Finns for their part said their own air force bombed "enemy columns and sites of assembly."

On the eastern flank of the Isthmus front the Finns reported heavy artillery exchanges in the Taipale sector, but made no mention of new Russian attacks. The communique mentioned "heavy" Russian losses in the fighting around Viipuri, but did not estimate the casualties.

In the far north, the Finns said, their forces had driven the Russians back about two miles from Nautsi, to which the spearhead of the Red Army drive penetrated last week. Nautsi is about 60 miles southwest of Petsamo.

BOMBS DROPPED NEAR STEAMER

Dutch Captain Says Unidentified Plane Flew at 200 to 300 Feet High

Amsterdam, March 4—(AP) — Captain G. Deruiter of the 458-ton Netherlands steamship Deruyter, which arrived in Flushing today en route from England to Antwerp, reported an unidentified airplane dropped three bombs near his ship Saturday night.

The attacking plane flew over at a height of 200 to 300 feet, the captain said, while his vessel was crossing the North Sea with two other Netherlands ships, the Nottingham and Frisco. The bombs caused no damage.

The Netherlands steamships Sint Annaland, 2,248 tons, and Schieland, 2249 tons, had reported on their arrival from England yesterday that they had been machine-gunned in the North Sea Friday by an unidentified plane.

Authoritative sources at The Hague said these incidents are receiving the full attention of the government, which is endeavoring to establish the nationality of the attacking planes.

Netherlands Vessel Bombed

London, March 4—(CP)— The bombing of the Netherlands coastal vessel Elziena in the North Sea was reported today with the arrival of three survivors at a northeast coast port after having spent 36 hours on a raft.

The survivors said the two others of the vessel's crew of five were killed. They said the Elziena was attacked by a German bomber early yesterday. A Danish vessel picked them up.

Brigadier Pearkes Is Seriously Ill

Calgary, March 4 —(CP)— Brigadier G. R. Pearkes, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., of Calgary, officer commanding the 2nd Infantry Brigade, First Division, Canadian Active Service Force, in training at Aldershot, Eng., is seriously ill in Aldershot from cerebral fever, according to cables received by Mrs. Pearkes and friends here.

First cable received by Mrs. Pearkes Saturday stated the Brigadier was "dangerously ill," but a second, received in the afternoon, said his condition was satisfactory and he was in no immediate danger.

52,000 Pamphlets Seized at Hamilton

Three Are Remanded on Charges of Breach of Canada Regulations

Hamilton, Ont., March 4—(CP)—A total of 52,000 pamphlets containing material of an allegedly subversive nature and said to urge support of the Communist party in the approaching federal election, were seized last night when Royal Canadian Mounted Police arrested two men and a woman.

In police court today, Grace Fugler, 24, Hamilton; Victor Guy, 37, and Robert Keays, 27, Toronto, were remanded one week on charges of breach of the defence of Canada regulations. They were taken into custody, police said, when an automobile containing the circulars was stopped on a Hamilton street.

Largest Seizure Yet Made

The seizure was believed to be the largest made in Canada since start of the war. The pamphlets were said to be similar to those seized at Ottawa last week when three men were arrested.

The charges against those arrested here read that they had in their possession documents likely or intended to prejudice recruiting, training, discipline or administration of any of His Majesty's forces.

Bail was set at two sureties of $2,000 each for each of the three accused. Assistant Crown Attorney Harvey McCulloch objected when the court suggested bail of $1,000 for each of the three and said that in Ottawa "where similar material was seized" the bail was $3,000 to $5,000.

6 Pages of Closely-Typed Matter

Police said the largest pamphlets of those seized covered six pages of closely-typed matter. There was a concentration of R.C.M.P. in this district during the weekend and several officers were present when the car was stopped.

London, Ont., March 4—(CP)—A large number of Communist flavored pamphlets appeared in London about 10 days ago, but the distributors escaped detection. At the request of Arthur M. LeBel, K.C., zone commander of the Canadian Legion, war veterans have been aiding authorities in the investigation.

Pamphlets lauded efforts of Russia to "liberate" Finland, and condemned the Finnish government.

TINY TERRIER IN DOG POUND

A tiny dog, part terrier and pomeranian, was found wandering at large by Thos. Thorne, local dog pound custodian over the weekend. The canine was wearing a new red studded collar, but carried no dog tag. The dog will be destroyed tonight unless otherwise claimed. City police revealed today that the annual dog license tags are now available at the police station, March 1st of each succeeding year being the date when city dog license are due.

OCCUPANTS OF HOUSE UNAWARE THAT BUILDING WAS AFIRE

Unaware of their danger, residents of a house near Highway No. 2 a short distance west of Trenton slept peacefully while flames ate through the upper part of their home on Saturday.

Don Lee of this city, and a party of friends returning from a hockey match in Toronto noticed smoke pouring from the structure and stopping their car, awakened occupants of the house who were sleeping in a first floor bedroom.

GAME INSPECTOR RESUMES DUTIES

Through the Department of Game and Fisheries it was announced over the week end that Inspector Herb McCabe had resumed his duties as fish and game inspector for this district. Inspector McCabe was indisposed for some weeks following an accident which resulted in an injured foot. He has fully recuperated and is back on duty today.

MANY CATCH-BASINS BLOCKED BY ICE

Heavy rains over the week end sent City Public Works employees racing to all parts of the city today as telephone calls reported blocked sewers and flooded catch-basins poured into the office of the city engineer. Fifty calls had been reported up to eleven o'clock this morning.

Snow disappeared as if by magic over the week end, due to rising temperatures accompanied by the consistent downpour of rain.

Large patches of water showed in the ice-covered surface of the Moira River, while the ice itself is reported to be rapidly "honey-combing."

In the rural districts, however, farmers viewed with appreciative eyes water that trickled into wells, creek-beds and low-lying places that have been devoid of moisture practically all winter.

MOTORISTS URGED TO BUY MARKERS WITHOUT DELAY

With less than one month to elapse before 1939 drivers' licences and auto markers will have to be discarded, only about twenty per cent of the normal number of licences ordinarily disposed of through the local office have been sold, according to Mr. Vermilyea, issuer of auto licences for Belleville and district.

Business has picked up considerably during the past week, however, stated Mr. Vermilyea, but unless we continue to sell considerable numbers every day, there is bound to be a rush just at the last minute. "Only about eleven hundred markers have thus far been disposed of, out of a normal quota of nearly six thousand. Added to this is motorcycle, Doctors' and truck licences and as it is impossible for the office to handle more than 500 each day, there is bound to be a lineup at the last minute in an effort to secure markers."

PEDESTRIANS SLITHER AND SLIP ON WALKS

Roadways and sidewalks throughout the city were in an exceptionally slippery condition this morning as the result of a drizzling rain which started yesterday morning and continued all through the night leaving streets and sidewalks with a liberal coating of greasy ice. The city sander was out early this morning doing what it could to remedy the trouble insofar as vehicular traffic was concerned, but pedestrians slithered and slipped as they warily picked their way over slippery sidewalks on their way to work.

SUNDAY'S RAIN HELPS TO FILL WELLS IN THE COUNTRY

Farmers of the district will most heartily welcome the rain which has fallen since yesterday noon. Although not in sufficient quantities to last for any length of time if a general breakup does not immediately follow, the water that is lying around in ditches and depressions as the result of the recent mild spell, will afford a welcome respite to farmers who have been forced to draw water for their stock throughout the winter months. This lack of water in farmers wells has resulted in a serious condition in many cases and it has been necessary to drive stock to water or in some cases to draw water from creeks and rivers some times many miles distant.

Pickpockets Active In City Saturday

Three Men Lose Total of $131 During Evening

Pickpockets are believed to have reaped a fairly good harvest during Saturday night's political meeting at the Belleville Collegiate, three persons to have attended the meeting later complaining to police authorities that sums of money had disappeared from their person.

John Kingston, of Tweed, lost his wallet containing $90.00, while John Striker, of Wellington, found himself relieved of $20.00 and W. J. Nicholls, 397 Bleecker Ave., lost the sum of $21.00 police revealed today. All three men are of the opinion their wallets were stolen by pickpockets Saturday night in Belleville. None discovered their loss, however, until they reached their respective homes.

In each case the missing money was in a wallet, all of which was apparently removed from the owners' pockets by nimble-fingered pickpockets. Unfortunately the thefts were not reported to the police until some hours after the crimes are said to have taken place. Today Chief Kidd warned citizens in general to be on the alert against such practices, which are prevalent whenever large gatherings are being held in connection with political meetings, especially where the public is interested in one particular subject.

POLICE COURT

Daniel Flannigan, transient, was given three months in the common jail after being convicted of intoxication before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court. Flannigan was charged with a third offence, under which there is no option of a fine and the minimum sentence is three months in jail.

"The last time I was here I only got 14 days," complained the accused. Chief Kidd then informed Flannigan he had been convicted of a third offence on his own admission.

Fined For Fighting

Kenneth Holland, farmhand, was fined $5.00 and costs after being convicted on a charge of disorderly conduct, to wit, fighting. Holland contended he was not fighting, but merely trying to protect himself from attack by one Melvine Thompson, who pleaded guilty to a similar charge in a previous court and was assessed a fine. P. C. Ellis told the court he saw Thompson and Holland down on the sidewalk on Front St. on the night of Feb. 24th last. "I believe you are kuilty," stated His Worship after Acting Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson had cross examined Holland.

A juvenile hearing, which was in camera, and a woman charged with intoxication, concluded the court.

$250,000 Appropriation For Byrd Expedition Refused by Committee

Washington, March 4—(AP) — The House of Representatives Appropriations Committee refused today to approve another $250,000 appropriation for the Byrd Antarctic expedition, saying that it had been misinformed last year as to the expedition's needs.

At the same time the committee made other cuts in the Interior Department Bill, to trim a total of $2,966,277 from President Roosevelt's requests for the Department.

The $250,000 fund for the Byrd expedition was refused on the ground that the committee was given wrong information last year as to how long it would be necessary to provide money for that project. Asserting that $350,000 already had been appropriated for the purpose, the committee left provision of further funds to future action.

TEXT OF ITALIAN PROTEST

Having regard to international law to which, in effect, it is manifestly abusive, the practice to subject all maritime traffic of non-belligerent countries to control frequently vexatious, to demand from them onerous and excessive documentation incompatible with the normal secrecy of commercial dealings, to raise to a rule the re-routing and detention of merchant ships for days and weeks in control ports, causing very serious damage to equipment, to regularity of service and movement of traffic and so hindering, limiting and frequently paralyzing supplies of non-belligerent countries with immediate and direct repercussions on industry and labor.

Provisions Eliminate Distinction

Provisions in force regarding merchandise declared "contraband" eliminate, in practice, the distinction between absolute and conditional contraband. This contrasts with international law which, by distinction, makes possible assuring normal trade for the requirements of civil life. Interception of mail bags on high seas and censorship of correspondence, even when from Italians to Italians, constitutes a flagrant violation of postal secrecy which the 11 page convention of 1907 intended explicitly to guarantee.

The provisions of the measures of Nov. 28 which strike at export of German merchandise destined for neutral countries are particularly incompatible with fundamental principles of international law and in particular with the Declaration of Paris of April 16, 1856.

Whatever may be the motives which inspired such measures they in no wise make legitimate the diminution of the rights of non-belligerent powers. The aforesaid measure presents an extreme seriousness from the point of view of its economic repercussions in that its application disturbs profoundly the mechanism of international exchange present sources of supply and reduces the opportunities of production of non-belligerent states.

Placed in Clearest Light

In particular, the Fascist Government wishes to place in clearest light the illegality and gravity of the decision taken by the British Government to subject to control the importation by Italy by sea of coal of German origin. The British Government knows the coal in question meets an indispensable need in the life and labor of the Italian people.

Under such conditions, the measure taken by the British Government is of a kind to disturb and compromise the economic and political relations established between Italy and Britain by the accord of April 16, 1938.

The Fascist Government, while renewing its formal protest, intends to note precisely from this moment, date and factual elements of the situation to show the responsibility for any future development arising out of it.

Donations of Clothing for Finnish Soldiers Should be Made at Once

Mrs. Neate and Mrs. Gribble, Regents of Local I.O.D.E. Chapters, Say Need is Great—Boxes Being Made Up Wednesday Morning for Shipment That Day to Headquarters in Toronto

An urgent appeal for donations of socks, sweaters, scarves, mitts, Balaclava caps, new woollen underwear and new blankets for the comforts of the Finnish soldiers in Finland is being made by Mrs. J. Neate, Regent, St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. This is in accordance with a province-wide appeal sent out by headquarters of the I.O.D.E. and at the request of their National War Service Department.

All donations of the above articles will be welcomed by Mrs. Neate, phone 1475M and donors are requested to make their donations not later than Wednesday morning as the boxes will then be packed. Mrs. A. B. Gribble, Regent, Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E., is supervising the packing of boxes at the Armouries, also, on Wednesday morning, and welcomes all donations. The appeal is urgent as arrangements have been made for the carriage of 50 boxes to leave Toronto on Friday, March 8th.

Letters From the Troops

Aldershot, Eng.,
Feb. 13, 1940.

Dear Dad:

I arrived in this country and had a good trip over. We got in Scotland on the 7th. I saw a lot of places. Went through Glasgow, Edinburgh. It sure is a swell country. The farmers are ploughing over here. Fields of turnips are just being taken in and put in pits under the ground. Everything is pretty dear over here, tobacco is 24c. an ounce. You can get a haircut and shave for 1 shilling which is 24 cents.

See if you can send me some tobacco because it's so dear over here.

We were 14 days on the boat, but didn't mind it. We had a very good trip. It sure is some country over here, but give me Canada anytime. It is hard to get on to the ways of English money. It is lonesome over here, but we have lots to do. We get pretty good meals. I would like to have you here to see our barracks. We are in rooms about 26 to a room. We are always on the go so it is hard to find time to write. So write me often and tell me all the news.

The folks in Toronto were there to see us off and gave us socks and soap which are coming in darn handy.

Well Dad take care of yourself until we meet again.

Your Son,
Pte. W. A. Murray R.C.O.C., No. Q.A.F.W., Reg. No. B94,295, c-o Base Post Office, Canada.

PARTY STALWARTS OF FOUR RIDINGS WELCOME MANION

Meeting at Collegiate Auditorium in City Attended by Estimated 1,500

P. A. SYSTEM USED

J. L. Churcher, Warden of County, Presides at Conservative Rally

Stalwarts of the National Conservative party and their supporters from the ridings of Hastings South, Northumberland, Prince Edward-Lennox and Hastings-Peterborough, paid tribute to their doughty leader, the Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion here on Saturday night.

Estimated at fifteen hundred, the crowd filled the spacious auditorium of the Collegiate Institute and overflowed into corridors where a public address system carried the messages of the speaker to those who could here but not see.

Upwards of one hundred party leaders including the candidates, George H. Stokes, Hastings South, Jamieson Bone, Northumberland, George S. White, Hastings-Peterborough, and George Tustin, Prince Edward-Lennox and R. D. Arnott K.C., M.P.P. and Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P., their wives and guests, were seated on the stage behind the leader and Mrs. Manion.

Warden John L. Churcher, of Hastings County acted as chairman and discharged his duties with the ability of one who has acted in a similar capacity for years. His brief address that opened the meeting was a masterpiece of brevity and fact. He paid signal tribute to Conductor Cooper and members of the Collegiate Institute Band whose lively melodies kept the large crowd in good humor for an hour before the official opening of the meeting. Prolonged applause greeted the youthful musicians as they filed out of the auditorium following the cessation of their duties.

In his address of welcome to the National Conservative leader, Warden Churcher stated that he had risen "from the sphere of petty politics to the realm of statesmanship." A national government, he felt, was the only solution to the country's problems during the present critical times, and Dr. Manion was the man fitted to lead such a government.

The official welcome of the city of Belleville was extended to Dr. and Mrs. Manion and party by His Worship, Mayor Glen E. Thompson.

"As Mayor of the Corporation of the City of Belleville, county town of historic old U.E.L. county of Hastings, it gives me pleasure to welcome Dr. Manion, M.C., Dominion leader of one of the great parties in the political life of the Dominion. His record as a physician and surgeon, his service to Canada during the war and afterwards has won for him the respect and gratitude of all Canadians, and we are especially honored with his presence here tonight." he said.

Introduced by the chairman, candidates of the various ridings received loud ovations as they arose to acknowledge the introductions. None of the candidates made speeches, because, as chairman Churcher put it "people are here who have travelled over one hundred miles to hear Dr. Manion, and we wish all available time to be given him."

Mrs. Marion Cockshutt, Brantford, formerly Miss Marion Chapman, daughter of Arthur Chapman, former clerk of Hastings County, and who received her early education here, delivered a brief address prior to that of Dr. Manion.

"Dr. Manion fulfils the hope of Canada, for not only is he a leader but a friend," she said, "one who has served his country overseas and who is well equipped to serve it again." She outlined the National Government policies and scored the King government in its neglect of the dependents of enlisted men. "This neglect is outrageous" she said, "and is a serious indictment against any government."

Sharply criticizing the King administration for its neglect of women's affairs, the speaker promised that the Manion Government would include a lady minister who would have the interests of the women of Canada at heart.

Mr. Geo. Tustin, Prince Edward-Lennox candidate, introduced the Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion.

Little Miss Barbara G. Arnott, Wins Heart of Dr. R. J. Manion

When winsome little Miss Barbara Grace Arnott, five year old daughter of R. D. Arnott, K. C., M. P. P., and Mrs. Arnott, presented Mrs. (Dr.) Robert J. Manion, wife of the National Conservative leader, with a handsome bouquet of flowers at the Conservative mass meeting in the Collegiate Institute Auditorium on Saturday night, she not only captivated Mrs. Manion and won the hearts of the capacity audience but touched a responsive chord in the heart of Dr. Manion himself.

"The little girl won my heart," he said, sincerity sounding in the voice, that has carried the policies of the proposed National Government across the length and breadth of Canada, "for she reminded me of our own little grand-daughter who is now in France. Of course," he added with a smile," we have two grandsons here in Canada, but as this lovely little girl presented her flowers to Mrs. Manion, my heart went across the seas to our own grandchild."

The presentation of the bouquet to Mrs. Manion took place shortly after the opening of the meeting. The dainty little miss tripped across the stage, beautifully garbed in a pale pink dress, and presented Mrs. Manion with the flowers. Then dropping a curtsey, that would have done credit to a lady of the Royal Court, she smiled up at Mrs. Manion who kissed her in appreciation.

The auditorium rang to the cheers of the audience as little Miss Arnott walked gracefully off the stage.

LIBERAL LEADERS SWITCHING FROM

Claims King Government Best

Mr. Lapointe declared neither the British nor French leaders had seen fit to form National Governments when the war began and said there was no need for one in Canada. The present Dominion government "trust one another, know one another and work in harmony and co-operation," and this government is one of the best governments the Dominion has known, he said.

He said there was only one issue in the campaign—the prosecution of the war—and expressed surprise at the bitterness of some opposition attacks.

"Hate flows everywhere in the world," he said. "Can we not here in Canada run against that tide and unite our various qualities? Are we to open wounds, wounds that cannot be healed....Let us be friends even if we don't agree on some questions and let us decide to do our share to keep Canada united."

Postmaster General Power spoke at Neepawa, Man., and opposed National Government too. He pointed to the Union Nationale government of former Premier Duplessis of Quebec, made up of both Liberals and Conservatives, as an example of failure of such a union. At Craik, Sask., Agriculture Minister Gardiner warned against placing in power those without legislative experience.

Won't Enter National Government

The National Chairman of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, M. J. Coldwell, said at Tyndall, Man., that he would refuse to enter a National Government and he was sure his party would maintain its independence. However, there might be policies advanced by such a government which would command C.C.F. support.

Effective conscription could be introduced in Canada without initiating any new legislation, Mr. Coldwell said.

He recalled the House of Commons debates last fall when the Militia Act was under discussion. He said former Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie had interpreted the act as meaning that able-bodied Canadians could be called out to fight in defence of Canada on any field it was decided the defence should be made.

Power in Militia Act

"The Prime Minister pledged his government would never introduce a conscription measure," Mr. Coldwell said, "but he would not have to introduce a new measure. The power is there in the Militia Act if the government chooses to say the defence of Canada is to be fought overseas."

"The C.C.F. party is opposed to war and believes it settles nothing," Mr. Coldwell said. "But now that Canada is in it we must do all we can to help the Allies win.

"That help can best be given by supplying Britain and France with war essentials but it must be done without profit to Canada and certainly without any individual profiteering."

After-war problems should be the immediate consideration of whatever administration takes office after the general election, Mr. Coldwell said. That problem should be anticipated and planned with the greatest care.

Traditional Conservative Policy

Before a Belleville, Ont., audience, Dr. Manion ennunciated the traditional Conservative policy of protective tariffs and said Canada needs moderate tariffs, sufficient to protect the home market and the Canadian worker. The farmers need protection as well as industry, he added.

The government's peacetime record, its conduct of the war and dissolution of parliament all came under Dr. Manion's fire.

Hon. Earl Lawson, Minister of National Revenue in the Bennett government in 1935, said in an Ontario network broadcast that he supported national government. He said it would be non-partisan and could administer Canadian affairs efficiently and prosecute the war effort intelligently.

Golden Thread of Hope.

Mr. Lawson said that "out of the confusion of charges and counter-charges, scant information, concealment of facts and babble of tongues, there glimmers a golden thread of hope and reason and solidarity for Canada with which can be sewn together a united Canadian people bent on conserving Canada's resources, efficiently administering Canada's affairs and intelligently prosecuting Canada's war effort."

Mr. Lawson said that "golden thread" was a non-partisan National government.

"No such government would have Canada's men fighting overseas for freedom and the government itself fighting at home to stifle freedom," he said. "No such government would scuttle parliament, because, being non-partisan, it would have nothing to conceal."

Mr. Lawson said the government's methods were those "of Hitler in 1936".

"We are limited by the bureaucratic creature of the government, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, in the length of time which we can have for broadcasting," he said. "We are prohibited from broadcasting from a public meeting. And we are throttled from giving you facts in connection with Canada's preparation for defence and war effort since the outbreak of war."

Main Issue is War

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Dominion Agriculture Minister, in an address at Craik, Sask., warned against placing in power those without Legislative experience.

The main issue in the March 26 elections, he said, was the prosecution of the war and those best able to carry on this work should be placed in power.

In his brief address the Minister declared Prime Minister Mackenzie King is the man for leadership during this time of war.

Hon. Maurice Dupre of Quebec, Solicitor-General in the Conservative Government of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, said at St. Boniface, Man., that if Prime Minister Mackenzie King really sought national unity he would form a national government such as in Britain.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King had made appeals for national unity but had rejected the idea of a national government and plunged the country into an election.

Mr. Dupre said government candidates were speaking on the questions of national unity and conscription, while being "careful not to answer the charges that they had seriously depleted public funds."

Japanese Minister Voices Complaint Against S. Army

Tokyo, March 4—(AP)— War Minister General Shunroku Hata declared before the Diet (Parliament) today that the Salvation Army must be placed under "proper regulations" for prevention of "espionage."

Hata said military authorities had started watching the organization's activities.

"Aside from questions of its dependency on Britain, or its religious beliefs," he said, "I believe that the Salvation Army must be placed under proper regulations in order to prevent espionage."

THREE ISSUES, SAYS MANION

Many "Buddies" Present

Goodnatured interruptions from a number of his former "buddies" of the 21st Battalion, who were sprinkled among the large audience brought smiles to the face of the speaker, and on occasions he digressed from his point and reminisced in a humorous vein of the days of the last Great War.

Asserting that parliamentary institutions was one of the issues of the campaign because "Mr. King made them so," Dr. Manion declared, that members of parliament have every right to demand enquiries, the appointment of commissions and every right to demand, that parliament deal with the public business.

"I offered Mr. King my assistance in advice and co-operation in September," he said, "but it was turned down. Mr. King told me positively that there would be no election, before another session of parliament. He was right. We met—for three hours. Then he deliberately scuttled parliament, torpedoed it and "gagged" the people of Canada because of a government charged with incompetency, extention of patronage and nearly everything a government could be charged with. He ran away," Dr. Manion declared amid cheers.

Reviewed Origin of Parliament

Reviewing the orign of parliament, the Conservative leader declared that England was "the mother of parliaments" from whom we inherited the freedom of speech, the press, worship, and meeting.

"The cornerstone of these liberties is freedom of speech in Parliament, and when Mr. King scuttled parliament he is doing exactly what Hitler is doing today in Germany. He deliberately shut me off from speaking to people, who could not hear me personally, another freedom of speech gone."

Attacking the radio censorship, Dr. Manion declared that he had been forced to submit speeches forty-eight hours before their presentation, "to some one I did not know, and who was paid to tell me what to say. This is a blocking of those liberties for which our forefathers fought one thousand years. If you do not vote for a National Government, you will be wiping out those liberties we love so much and which we will not give up unless our lives are taken first."

Charging that Mr. King's idea in dissolving Parliament was to secure a snap judgment from the people, the speaker declared that "he was afraid of an investigation and accordingly made a conspiracy of silence in parliament, over the radio and in speeches."

Scores Relief Policy

Lashing out at the King Government, the Conservative leader charged it with a record in which over one million people were on relief. "Boys, like vagabonds," he said, "were looking for jobs and wandering from door to door begging. If we do not give these boys and girls a chance, with all the resources Canada has at her command, then we do not deserve these resources."

The King Government, the opposition leader said, showed no sign of appreciation of these things, it did nothing about it, and with 100,000 Canadian boys who have never worked wandering about the country, Mr. King earned the nickname of 'Do-Nothing King,' and never was a name more justly earned. He showed no vision or foresight, and no action."

The statement that 188 millions of dollars had been spent on defence, made by Mr. King, had been "proved out of his own mouth to be wrong." Dr. Manion said, declaring that the Prime Minister had told western audiences that only one-half this amount had been spent. "He thought one-half would be good enough for the West" he smiled amid laughter.

Charges Soldiers Poorly Equipped

The Conservative leader charged that when war broke out there were not clothes enough in the country for one division of troops." Out of this so-called 188 millions of dollars spent Canada had four anti-aircraft guns—we needed 126—there were no defences on the coasts. The men who went overseas were not equipped at all. They had no artillery, no machine guns."

"I know this," Dr. Manion declared, "because I got it from the officers commanding the units. Let Mr. King deny that."

Since the war started, there has been nothing but a series of blunders, he declared, scoring the government's attitude toward soldiers' allowances. "Conditions were bad regarding the allowances of dependents. Nothing had been done about it, and many of these people were forced to go without because of the government's apathy. A few had their allowances but 7,800 mothers did not get a cent until two days before the opening of the last session."

Charging the "blundering King government with in effect discouraging recruiting by these conditions," the Conservative leader told his audience that "men who prior to enlistment were working, but now were on the streets because of medical examinations which originally permitted them to join the army, and then threw them out."

"These men," he said, "joined up and were found medically fit. They threw up their jobs, and in three or four weeks were given another examination and given their discharge. Now they are out of the army, out of a job and on the street."

Needed From All Walks of Life

Declaring that no one party can give the people proper government in these days of war, Dr. Manion, placing the policies of his proposed National Government before his audience, stated that "leaders from various walks of life are needed to give a courageous war effort, and prepare the country for the after-war periods."

"This government" he said, "will be composed of the best types of mind in the country. There are plenty in Canada, not confined to one sphere but in business, labour, agriculture and women's circles.

"There will be no difficulty in getting members of the Liberal Party to join the National Government. The National Government will place Canada first."

The National Government, the Conservative leader declared, will give an efficient wholehearted war effort, eliminate profiteering, and co-operate with Britain and not refuse to co-operate with her as Mr. King did, when as Dr. Manion charged, he refused the British Government permission to establish air-training bases here a few years ago.

"We will encourage recruiting and not discourage it," he continued, "and we will utilize the veterans of the last Great War." (cheers). "All over the country are these brave men, who would be an inspiration to the troops of today, and who should be in the army. We'll give them the chance, and see that the soldiers of this war get fair equitable treatment."

Must Plan For Future

"For," he warned, "following the war, there will be thousands of young men out of work, and we will have unemployment on a large scale unless proper plans are made for their future."

"In my cabinet," Dr. Manion declared, "will be appointed Minister of Youth Welfare, whose job it will be to take care of those who want and need work."

Turning to the tourist industry, the speaker pointed out that it is one of the greatest industries of the Dominion, one that brings into the country from 200 to 300 millions of dollars annually. The tourist bureau organized in 1934 has lain dormant ever since, he charged, the government not having improved it one whit.

"Canada is a paradise for tourists," he said. "We need good roads, a trans-Canada highway and 'feeders' leading to it from the U. S. A. The National Government will give the Tourist Industry the leadership it deserves.

Labor Should Have Say, Says Manion

Outlining further policies of his proposed National Government, Dr. Manion stated, that flood control measures would be introduced, in which "control works would be put up at the cost of one flood." Promotion of trade with all parts of the globe, and the setting up of volunteer committees, which would work on ideas for the betterment of the country and submit them to the government.

Referring to Labor, he said, "it is time Labor experts had a say in the government. In none of the commissions appointed by Mr. King to investigate labor conditions has a Labor expert been a member. This will be changed. Unemployment insurance, despite the fact that Mr. King says it cannot be brought out unless the constitution is changed, will be one of the government's policies, while a commission will be set up to look after social legislature such as Old Age Pensions, etc."

The Conservative leader said he believed in co-operation but not amalgamation or unification of the railroads.

Speaks on Agriculture

Turning to agriculture, Dr. Manion stated that it is one of the most important industries in the Dominion, and unless a good foundation is laid, then national success will be a failure.

The need today is for better markets both home and foreign, he said, which will result in better prices, "for no people in the country have suffered more from top and bottom prices than has the farmer."

"But," he added, "we must remember the best market is the home market. We must aim at fair prices and try to stabilize them. This cannot be done overnight, but that is the aim of my government. The agricultural population of Canada is so important that it must be given every chance to build up its home and lay something aside for the future."

Lessening of the spread between the primary producer and the consumer was necessary, Dr. Manion continued, while "if combines exist, they will be done away with."

Declaring that the British export markets were the best in the world, he charged the King Government with "wiping out the Empire trade agreements made by Mr. Bennett, to create trade with the United States. It seems the idea is to give two to the U.S.A. for one we get back. Two of the worst tariffs ever thrust on a country where foisted on Canada by Mr. King. The United States are hard-headed business people and should be treated in a hard-headed business way."

Proper Tariff Policy

"We must have a proper tariff policy if we are to maintain our standard of living," the Conservative chieftain declared. "Tariffs," he added, "are not to raise prices, as some people think, but to hold the market for the home producer. We need protection in three things, to hold the U.S. agricultural products out; build markets for our producers, and to hold the seasonal markets for Canadian farmers against the inroads of American out-of-season produce."

Will Appoint Boards

His National Government, he said, would include an Export Board, Research in agricultural products for industrial benefits, and Livestock Board. "Packers", he asserted, "have been charged with being in control and cheating the farmer. I will have a complete investigation and appoint a board that will include hog-raisers themselves."

In conclusion, Dr. Manion stated that his National Government was the only way to a successful prosecution of the war. "England," he said, "had had one since 1931 and England is the finest, noblest, and truest democracy in the world, above party and above politics, and placing country first."

EXPOSE 'MYSTERY' OF MAGNETIC MINE

If the Nazis have any secret weapon it will reveal its "mystery" to British experts. How this is was clearly indicated the other day when it was announced from official quarters in London that the secrets of the German magnetic mine had been laid bare and how proof had been secured that the Nazis were making such mines early in 1938. It was a dramatic story of four men ready to give their lives to get at the heart of the Nazi "mystery" weapon. They worked with extreme caution, though it might have been that each moment would be their last as they took the device apart and exposed its machinery. Incidentally the date of the mine was found stamped on the metal.

It is a story of British thoroughness that is revealed by the official statement. When the mine was washed ashore, care was taken that no one approach it. Special tools were at once made to tear down the device. A naval lieutenant after taking out one detonator went ashore to give what information he already had so that in the event of the explosion of the mine some knowledge would be available. Experts, after the removal of the detonator, crowded around and hammered the mine thinking it now harmless and when they had discovered a second detonator they realized what a narrow escape they had had, for the second detonator was the one controlling the magnetic mechanism. After that the work of dismantling the explosive device was easy.

With that knowledge known, the British are in possession of the secrets and as the First Lord of the Admiralty said the other day, the Admiralty was well on the way to mastery of the magnetic mine. With the secret known method will be found for frustrating the purpose of the mechanism.

So it will be with any mystery weapon the enemy will produce. Immediately such is used if such there be, there would be immediate study by engineers or chemists and the secret would be revealed.

FINLAND'S RESISTANCE

It seems impossible to realize in the fulness the heroism of the Finnish people, though the soldiers and the people of Finland have made themselves the admiration of the greater part of the world. The other day at Washington, Hjalmar Procope, the Finnish Minister to the United States, said that his country had only begun to fight. "Don't think that Finland is beaten because we've suffered a few reverses. Finland is a land of 70,000 lakes and we'll fight at every one."

The resistance of the Finnish soldiers, the generalship of Commander Mannerheim and his generals, the stability of a free people in the time of trial, the dauntless heroism of the women make the world wonder how so much strength can be found in so small a state. Finland must be as the knight of Sir Galahad "whose strength is as the strength of ten because his heart is pure."

NATIONAL HEALTH BOOKLETS

Several National Health books have been added to the list of publications of the Department of Pensions and National Health at Ottawa.

The books on 'typhoid fever,' 'sleep,' 'smoking,' 'holiday health,' 'hay fever and asthma,' and health axioms depart from the standard of type of government literature in that they were all written by editors of the Publicity and Health Education Division in consultation with department medical officers. The titles would indicate the range of interest of these little books.

The aim is to present health facts to Canadians in non-technical and readable form.

Much has been said regarding national health as an asset to the nation in time of peace and of war.

Copies may be obtained free on request from the Publicity and Health Education Division, Department of Pensions and National Health, Daly Building, Ottawa.

MUCH-USED BOOK

The dictionary, one of the most used books, deserves more care and a great deal more consideration than it usually gets from an indifferent world, according to the Ottawa Journal which says that on the whole it is sadly underestimated and misunderstood.

"Instead of being treated as a mere port of last resort by one seeking safety in a verbal sea, it should be regarded as a light ship, relying upon which for guidance, the seeker may find his way through well charted shoals of nouns, or unexplored archipelagoes of adjectives.

"Though no dictionary may have attained that prominence conferred by a place on the corner of the living room centre table Though often it may be backless, dog-eared, and otherwise marred, some few have reached high estate, and in libraries—public and private—repose in too seldom disturbed solitude on reading desks all their own. But whatever their estate, they will when taken into conference distribute good advice. Dipping into the secrets of a dictionary brings many a surprising discovery such as that the name "Maud" made immortal by Tennyson, means to the masterpieces of Webster and his kind, but a 'grey-striped Scotch plaid,' or 'a rug of this plaid.'

"Any casual encounter with the contents of a lexicon is almost sure to end in the unexpected. Ruffling its pages one finds the romance that may lurk in the words. But there is even more adventure for the prober in search of prizes, in its rival where the loot does not consist of nuggets but of finished articles each as smooth as the best advertised breakfast food. As somebody wisely put it when describing those compendiums of all knowledge, the encyclopedias, or rather one in particular given to the world long ago, 'it treats of everything that can be learned by man in this life'—and at that it almost does.

"A modern variety, in a score of volumes, overflows with facts important otherwise. But whatever its vintage it is a veritable store, a 'house of reference' and that is true from Pliny to the present day. They all answer the seemingly unanswerable. Francis Yeates-Brown probably voiced the popular opinion concerning works of reference when he said, 'To me the charm of an encyclopedia is that it knows—and I needn't.' The same is true of dictionaries and most persons."

Missing Airliner Sighted on Coast

New Delhi, March 4—(CP)—Imperial Airways announced today that wreckage of the Hannibal, its missing 42-passenger airliner, had been sighted by a searching plane along the coast of Iran (Persia), but that observers were unable immediately to learn the fate of its eight occupants.

Four passengers and four crew members were aboard the four-motored biplane, which disappeared last Friday 20 minutes' flying time from the Persian Gulf port of Sarja on a flight there from Jiwani, Arabia.

Some hope was held that the occupants may have extricated themselves from the wreckage and started overland toward Jask, but searchers were unable to alight there on the rugged coast. The plane came down about two miles east of Ras-Al-Kuh.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MARCH 4TH, 1920

The bay bridge may be taken over by the Government and made part of the Provincial Highway.

Notice is given that the order of the Board of Health closing all churches, schools, theatres, pool rooms and other places of public gathering owing to the epidemic of influenza, will be removed at midnight on March 6th.

Ald. Hanna, chairman of Public Works in the City Council, placed a gang of men at work today cutting a channel in the ice on the river below the railway bridge. It is the intention to run the channel up the river for considerable distance.

MARCH 4TH, 1910

People who should know say that the coming summer will be a busy one in this city. Let us hope so. To be sure the building of the new hospital wing will give employment to many men and others can put in time painting the bridges.

In a hockey match between the Picklers of the Belleville Vinegar Works and the Canners at Graham's evaporator, the former team won, the score being 9 to 5. The following composed the teams: Picklers, Benn, McCaskey, Shea, Wilson, Matthews, Orr, Canners, Buchannan, O'Brien, Connell, Harkins, Halley, Gerow. The referee was William Smith and he gave satisfaction.

The weather is fine; this is March, but it seems more like May.

Many citizens yesterday walked over to see the work that has so far progressed in the construction of the bay bridge.

Mr. R. W. Miller of Bridgewater was a visitor in the city today.

Mr. George A. Kingston of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, was in town yesterday.

After the usual services in Wesley Methodist Church, Sidney Township, on Sunday, Miss Lily Bonisteel, the efficient organist, was presented with a handsome silver watch accompanied by a highly complimentary address.

Mr. Henry Parker Thomas has been appointed a Notary Public.

At the annual meeting of the Belleville Gas Company the following officers were elected: President, Mr. John Bell, Q.C.; Vice President, Mr. John A. Phippen; Directors, Mayor G. S. Tickell, Mr. Robert Thomson and Mr. J. W. Johnson; Auditor, Mr. Thomas Thomson.

Bedroom of Gadgets Was Used by Fokker

It is not generally known that the genius of Anthony Fokker, the Dutch aircraft designer who died in New York recently, was sometimes applied to other things than airplanes. Oliver Whiting, who knew him, has described his chalet at St. Moritz:

"It was remarkable, filled with gadgets; it would have completely fascinated any boy. For instance, in Fokker's bedroom, beside the bed he had a low table on which was an instrument board like a complicated wireless panel. By pressing a button on this, he was able without leaving his bed to pull his curtains backwards and forwards. He explained that he never could sleep with the moon shining directly on him, and yet he liked its light.

Lots of Levers

"Another lever operated various electric fans, a third was for his radio set, and so on. It was like working an expensive set of model trains, the sort you see demonstrated in any Christmas store. The thing that fascinated me most was the device for opening and closing the window. In the first place, the windows were so large they filled practically the whole wall. But it was the way in which they opened that was so ingenious. Once again he touched a lever on the control panel. There was a slight whirring of machinery and the entire window, in a single piece, leaned inwards from the top and then wound itself up on the same principles you see used with large garage doors, until it was flat against the ceiling of his room. In this way, his bedroom had been converted in effect to an open balcony.

An Unusual Bath

"Adjoining the bedroom was a bathroom, scarcely less unusual. The bath was almost like a cup in a saucer—that is to say, it had a tiled saucer all around it to which ran the overflowing water One side was cut away six inches lower than the other. The idea was to keep the water running away the whole time, and overflowing over the low side into the saucer, and so the water was always kept fresh and free from soap suds.

"Oh, and the house was heated throughout with an elaborate thermostate device he had designed. Every room had a thermometer, and by adjusting a guage it was possible to control exactly the temperature of each room separately to any desired point. These were automatically compensated so that should you open a door the heating was turned on for a few seconds to balance the cold air admitted.—London Listener.

Germany Presents Complete Apology For Killing Belgian

Brussels, Mar. 4 (AP).—Germany presented a complete apology today for the killing of a Belgian army aviator in a clash between three Belgian planes and a German bomber on Saturday.

The Belgian foreign office said the German Ambassador, Vicco Karl von Buelow-Schwante, called on Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak and expressed "very sincere regrets".

German aviators again have been warned not to fly over neutral nations, it was reported. A German version of the Saturday incidents was that the pilot of the Dornier bomber thought he was over France and facing three allied fighting planes when he opened fire on the Belgians.

It was announced that Germany was prepared to examine any indemnity demand by the Belgian government.

The Belgian government denied that any German plane flew over Belgium today, apparently intending to spike reports that one had been seen, pursued by a British craft.

Seek Light-up For Gendarmes

Paris (CP)—Paris is in search of a luminous policeman for blackout. Several ideas have been tried out. White bands were put about the policemen's hats—but were discovered to be invisible in emergency. Then white gloves with sleeves to the shoulders were tried. The crowds found the effect decidedly spooky—for there appeared to be two spectral white arms floating in midair.

Then somebody had a bright idea. They tried it out at the Bond Point, Champs-Elysees, one of the busiest corners. In the middle of the street a policeman stood courageously, a white band on his hat, a powerful re-bulbed flashlight in his hand. When it was on the cars were supposed to stop, while a second policeman on the corner turned a second flashlight on his hatband. This system, it has been decided is too expensive, as it means two policemen armed with lights on every corner.

So the problem is not yet solved. Two ideas are yet to be tried—the luminous policeman, wearing a cap and gloves covered with phosphorous to glow in the dark, which may produce more mysterious effects—and the solution employed in London—long white capes which are large enough to be seen by both motorist and pedestrian.

Advice From Dr. Goebbels

That pellucid thinker, that good, gentle, tolerant, easygoing statesman Herr Doktor Joseph Goebbels, the Nazi Minister of Enlightenment and Propaganda, has just read the neutral countries another lecture. "It is not sufficient at all," he says, "if the government of one neutral state proclaims its neutral attitude in this war while public opinion has the freedom to insult. To be neutral means to hold oneself out of the conflict in every respect."

We can't assume that Dr. Goebbels was talking to us. We can assume that he was trying to bully some public man, some newspaper or perhaps some barber or milkman or housewife in Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium, Sweden, Norway or one of the weaker Balkan countries. He was trying to tell the governments of those countries that they mustn't allow statesmen, newspapers, barbers, milkmen or housewives to express the opinion that any informed and recent human being must have about Dr. Goebbels and his colleagues. Perhaps the German army will go out and prance up and down along the Belgian or Dutch border if Dr. Goebbels is not listened to. The inference as to German war aims is clear. There isn't going to be any free speech in Europe or elsewhere if the Nazis can help it.

Well, we are a long way off and quite safe. Our government has not urged us, as it did in 1914, to be neutral in thought. We can say what we like of Dr. Goebbels and his friends. But the truth is we can't insult them. No one can insult a government which is somewhere between 800 and 25,000 years behind the times in every attribute of civilization and human decency. It is a waste of energy to try.—N.Y. Times.

Mannerheim— The Man

It does not often happen that a man who has liberated his people from tyranny and built up a prosperous state, is again called upon in his old age to take the sword in their defence against an ancient enemy. Such, however, is the experience of my father, Field-Marshal Baron Carl Gustav Emil Mannerheim, commonly known as the "uncrowned king of Finland," writes Baroness Anastasie Mannerheim (daughter of Baron Mannerheim) in Hamilton Spectator.

At the end of May, 1937, I left England, where I had been living, for Finland, June 4 was to be a day of national rejoicing. It was my father's 70th. birthday, and on this great occasion the whole family gathered to see him honored.

I had seen him several times abroad, but I had no idea how deeply the people of Finland had taken him to their hearts.

Wherever my father went, my sister and I were in the carriage directly behind him. I shall remember him best as he stood in white fur cap and with his field-marshal's baton in his hand on the steps of the vast square while tens of thousands of eager faces gazed down at him from above, and the troops, the Lotta Svaerd (the women's organization) and the children of the provinces marched past him in an endless stream.

This was the proud and happy nation he had brought into being.

My father is very much the aristocrat. That stamp of imperial Russian days is indelibly impressed on him. But he is the kind of aristocrat who immediately calls for the affection and confidence of the people around him. That is, I suppose, the secret of his success. He is aloof, yet everybody feels that he is a friend.

He is a keen student of art, and in recent years he has become noted in the Finnish capital as a lavish and generous host. Until the war the Mannerheim entertainments were famous.

Every celebrated person, man or woman, who visited Finland knew the Mannerheim estate. Although he had never heard of Lawrence when he freed Finland from the Bolsheviks in 1918, he found when The Seven Pillars of Wisdom was published a few years later that Lawrence and he had minds which ran along the same lines.

Nearly a quarter of a century has elapsed since my father, already celebrated for his military exploits and leadership in the late Imperial Russian army, fled from Russia to escape the revolution. His reflections must have been bitter during that momentous journey in the disguise of a railway porter!

He thought his career was ended. Actually, it had not begun. Little did he think that the great work of his life lay ahead as he stood, tattered and dirty, on the platform at Helsinki. Still less did he think that the flag which he clutched in a grimy parcel under his arm would shortly become the flag of the country he was to create—Finland.

This blue and white flag was the emblem of the famous St. Petersburg Yacht Club. A very keen yachtsman, he had brought the old flag out of Russia as a souvenir of the days which were gone for ever, and in memory of his fellow yachtsmen who had been murdered in the revolution.

When my father arrived back in Finland the country was in a state of bewilderment and chaos. A deputation came to him: Would he create a Finnish army and lead it straight into the field? Finland herself then possessed no army. The remnants of the imperialistic force had scattered or turned Red.

My father called the peasants from the fields. They rallied round him. In these early days, what a pathetic show they made as soldiers, knowing nothing of drill or marching; with no uniform beyond an armlet or a colored rag tied round their hats

These were the men he drilled, equipped and formed into an army that finally drove the Bolshevist invaders out of Finland. These were the men who established the splendid Finnish military tradition which their sons are carrying on today, to the astonishment of the world.

On May 16, 1918, the Bolshevists having been finally driven out of Finland, my father rode in triumph at the head of his troops into Helsinki, now the capital of a new and independent Finland—a Finland liberated by him.

Much remained to be done before the country could be put on its feet. Again my father was to the fore; this time as a statesman, a capacity in which somewhat to his own surprise, he found himself no less capable than in military life.

One of his first tasks was to secure full recognition of Finland's independence. He also arranged for delivery of foodstuffs at a moment when Finland was threatened with famine. The populace, seeing white bread after so many hardships, used to dance outside the bakeries, shouting "Mannerheim's bullar" — Mannerheim's bread.

By the end of 1918 the Finns elected my father Regent. They would have liked to crown him king, but he would not have this

"I am only a soldier," he told them. "I am ready to serve the state, but not to rule it."

Then my father put aside his uniform and set himself to build up the Finnish nation. Under his guidance Finland became one of the most up-to-date and economically sound countries in the world.

Thus the years passed in peace and prosperity until, in November, 1939, the incredible happened. Without the slightest pretext or warning, the giant hordes of Russia flung themselves on this tiny peace-loving nation.

My father had become the "Father of Finland." He is an old man, but happily he is as vigorous as in his younger days and his iron will is as unbreakable as ever.

He thought his days of active soldiering were at an end. He is now employing the same tactics—with the magnificent, disciplined army which he created—as he used with such remarkable success when leading his hastily recruited levies against the Bolsheviks 22 years ago.

People always said that my father, with his keen, ruddy face and slim active body, never looked anything like his years.

I have not seen him lately, but I am told that today, faced in his old age with the supreme crisis of his life, he appears to the Finns more fresh and vital than when he first came to them from Russia.

LABOR WINS SEAT

Cardiff, Wales, March 3—(CP)—Ninety-seven thousand votes in favor of the British Labor Party's support of the war effort were registered yesterday, at a South Wales miners' congress. A Communist-sponsored resolution calling for an active campaign on the part of Labor to bring cessation of war received 30,000 votes.

Caesar is Growing Old

Comparatively little has been heard during the past few weeks from and about Italy as a factor in the European situation.

Some light is given by a writer in the American Mercury whose analysis would indicate that Italy has gone into virtual eclipse because of betrayal by Hitler.

With some strength of her own Italy is left practically isolated, without friends to whom she can turn and, in words credited to Mussolini, feeling that whoever wins the war "will not treat Italy well."

The same writer says that age and disappointment are beginning to tell on Mussolini and that he is far from the power that he was a few years ago, internationally or among his own people.

To condense, and in other cases directly quote, a few paragraphs from the Mercury article in sequence as given:

Mussolini has stopped his mad motoring dashes and his hair raising ski swoops. He receives only a few visitors and is more irritable than ever, even at home. He has taken staggering blows from "the wild man of the north," Hitler.

Italy reached her zenith after Ethiopia, but "thereafter Mussolini skidded rapidly from the position of world power which he thought within his reach."

Backed by Hitler, Mussolini could dominate Europe. He expected that backing and had several promises. He was to have had a Mediterranean empire, the Balkans divided with Germany. "At last Mussolini felt a real Imperial Romanum was in his grasp."

Rome re-echoed with shouts of "Tunisia," "Corsica," "Djibouti The fleet began concentrating. "Then came one of the biggest double crosses in history. Hitler had no intention of giving active support to Italy."

"Mussolini's Mediterranean Empire came crashing down. For four days in Rome he would see no one.... Alone he paced unceasingly up and down his gigantic room. No one dared go near him."

Ciano went to Hitler again and returned to Mussolini with Hitler's shriek, "You ass; you son of an ass," ringing in his ears.

"Mussolini's mistakes have cost him more than his dreams of empire-prestige at home."

Ethiopia, in terms of coffee, gold and promised raw materials, has been a great disappointment. The campaign in Spain was unpopular. The loss of life was heavy. Home-coming troops spread stories of execrable Italian generalship. The axis is unpopular. Jokes are being spread and Mussolini has no sense of humor.

"Above all, he has not friends. Even men like Dino Grandi and Italo Balbo complain that he treats them as nothing more than useful assistants. He often makes them stand in his presence.... He trusts no one, not even Ciano, who is completely devoted to him."

"He has had no cushion against the blows from across the Bremner, the blows which have shattered his ambitions. And he has no dynasty. 'I think,' he told Emil Ludwig, 'that there will not be a second Duce, or, if he appears, Italy would not put up with him.' And with that realization he is relaxing."

"Italy feels the slackening from one end to the other. Generals complain they are having difficulty getting supplies for the army for a conflict in the Balkans which they consider inevitable.... Competent observers in Rome think that Mussolini is just holding his hand until he sees the way to jump. But many who are close to Il Duce think otherwise—that Caesar is growing old."—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

Daylight Time Franklin Idea 156 Years Ago

By Gladys M. Arnold
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Paris — On February 25 France and Britain will go "daylight saving." Never since its adoption during the first Great War, have the clocks been set forward so early in the year. But if 1914-1918 found its adoption valuable, so present conditions have given it a special importance.

In setting the clocks forward "Passive Defence" precautions are facilitated. There is also a beneficial effect on the general morale of the people. It gives an added hour of daylight for shopping and for people returning home from work, relieving the painful impression of being plunged into the "blackout" early in the Winter evening.

Although the practice is not yet 26 years old, the origin of the idea of thus tampering with the clock so as to fool folk into getting up earlier, is very much older. The idea was first suggested in April, 1784, just 156 years ago when there appeared in the "Paris Journal" a letter by Benjamin Franklin, the famous American diplomat and scientist. He described having gone to bed in the early hours of the morning to be awakened by the tenants overhead. That was in Paris.

Old Sol So Early

"I was astonished to find my room very light and imagined for a moment that someone had lit a dozen lamps," he wrote. "I rubbed my eyes and discovered that my servant had forgotten to close the shutters and the sun was at that moment at the horizon. I looked at the clock. It was not yet six, and I thought it very strange the sun should rise so early. Upon consulting the Almanach, however, I made a second discovery—that it rose earlier and earlier just to the end of June when it appears at 3.15.

"This suggested a series of ideas to me. Had I not been awakened I should have slept four or five hours more—and many others do so too. Suppose there are 100,000 families in Paris and each consumes say half a pound of candles an hour, seven hours a day (average) over a period of six months. For Paris alone this amounts to 65,000,000 pounds of wax at four cents a pound—or $3,562,000 worth a year."

What a discovery and economy, said Franklin, if we could persuade Parisians to make use of only the day—rising earlier and going to bed earlier. But how to manage it?

It was then he proposed a universal earlier rising hour, but this proposition was not successful. On the contrary it was received with ridicule and amused the public as well as the authorities. They thought him mad or joking.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Concrete evidence that the United States regards the so-called American neutrality zone in the waters of the Atlantic adjacent to North and South America as more than a mere formula came when the American navy promptly went on the hunt for a submarine reported operating off Puerto Rica.

When the German pocket battleship Graf Spee played hide and seek with the British navy off South America and finally was cornered in Uruguayan waters, Uruguay, with no navy, was powerless to do anything about it. The despatch of American destroyers to look for a submarine which was reported to have attacked a British ship shows Washington is not content to sit back and accept refusal of the belligerent powers to recognize the neutrality zone.

Later news made it appear the reported submarine attack was a false alarm but reports of the presence of several German submarines and a warship in the South Atlantic persisted. Another lively naval engagement on this side of the water may be brewing.

While there have been a number of clashes of surface vessels within the neutrality zone, the most spectacular of which was the Graf Spee episode, so far no submarine operations have been definitely reported.

Owing to its nature the United States undoubtedly would object even more strenuously to submarine action than to the activities of surface vessels and in any case is no doubt ready to do all that can be done to compel the Allies and Germany to keep their fights away from American shores.

BOLDER POLICY URGED BY PAPER

Melbourne Herald Discusses Australian Government's War Policy

Melbourne, March 4 (CP-Reuters) — The Australian government "needs reconstruction and should enunciate a clearer, bolder war policy in order to teach the people the danger of the isolation fallacy," said the Melbourne Herald today in commenting on the Labor party's victory in Saturday's by-election at Corio, Victoria.

J. J. Dedman, Labor candidate, won the seat vacated by Richard Casey on his appointment as Minister to the United States. With several polls missing, Dedman had 25,207 votes against J. T. Vinton-Smith, government candidate.

This result, the Herald said, "must not be dismissed as due to minor issues." The electorate, it added, "voted for Labor's war policy, which would leave on others the burden of Australia's protection."

Menzies to Speak

Prime Minister R. G. Menzies is expected to make a statement on Wednesday on the government's war preparations.

While Australia's stand beside Britain in the war was not at issue in the election, the Labor party vigorously opposed dispatch of Australian troops overseas and any kind of military compulsion, maintaining that the strong defence of Australia and economic aid to the Allies were the best contributions the Dominion could make to defeating Germany.

John Curtin, leader of the Labor party, said Sunday night that an obligation now rested on Prime Minister Menzies to respect the "significant decision" at Corio. He held Labor's war aims had been endorsed.

Says Government Ahead of Opinion

Mr. Menzies said that while the election was fought mainly on local issues, the result "indicated the government was ahead of public opinion on the war." He added it was the government's duty "to proceed with vigor and determination."

A general election is due to be held this fall. Labor's by-election victory now makes it the largest party in the House of Representatives with 30 seats against 28 for Mr. Menzies' United Australia party.

UNIQUE AMERICAN FLAG UNFURLED

Used at Val D'or on the Occasion of the Visit of Mr. and Mrs. James Cromwell

Val D'Or, Que., March 4 (CP) — What probably is one of the most unique United States flags in existence was unfurled here yesterday on the occasion of the visit to this northwestern Quebec mining town of James H. R. Cromwell, United States minister to Canada, and Mrs. Cromwell.

Organizers of a luncheon for Mr. Cromwell found they lacked a United States flag to pin on the wall behind their guest of honor. They broadcast an appeal throughout the district and, to be on the safe side, asked the minister to bring one with him from Ottawa.

Mr. Cromwell did this but it was not needed for Mel Shaw of Val D'Or offered one he had stored away. This flag, seven feet long and three feet high, is just a bit out of the ordinary.

Native of Toronto

Shaw, a native of Toronto, lived for a time in the United States and one of his impressions is that some Americans know little of their country. He believed that by inscribing historical events on their flags, United States citizens might become better acquainted with the nation.

This idea developed into a hobby and Shaw embroidered in black thread on his flag important events in United States history, names of all the Presidents and the 48 States.

It was the first visit of the minister and his wife to Northern Quebec and they soon joined in the festive spirit. After landing on Siscoe Lake in the plane that brought them from Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. Cromwell were driven into town in an open sleigh.

They watched the finish of the Goldfields International Dog Derby and Mrs. Cromwell presented little Emile Martel, veteran driver from Quebec, with the Jack Hammell trophy he won for winning the 140-mile, five-day grind.

Six-Months Service Entitles Home Forces To 2-Weeks Furlough

Ottawa, March 4—(CP)—Orders have gone out from National Defence headquarters to headquarters of military districts that men who have served six months in the Canadian Active Service Force at home will be given two weeks furlough.

The furlough, with pay, will be granted at the discretion of the officers commanding the various military districts. The order applies to officers and men.

Many Young Americans Desire To Enlist in Fight Against Naziism

Ottawa, March 4—(CP)— From border to border and coast to coast young Americans have shown desire to engage in the fight against Nazism by joining the Canadian armed services, it was learned today.

A good number already have joined, some of them signing up with units now training in the United Kingdom. Others, running into the thousands and representing every State in the American Union, have applied for enlistment.

After the first overseas division of the Canadian Active Service Force reached England it was reported about 100 Americans were members of the first contingent. They had enlisted as Canadians just as many did in the first Great War.

With recruiting now confined to enlistment reinforcements or specialists, young Americans who apply, along with young Canadians, must figure on their applications going on a waiting list. Many battalions keep waiting lists, it was said.

No definite figure of American enlistments is available because, under existing regulations, only British subjects, including those who have been naturalized, may be taken on strength of the Canadian armed forces.

However inquiries have been received from Americans as far off as New Mexico.

Take Oath of Allegiance

An American citizen may come to Canada as a tourist, gain a Canadian address and enlist as a Canadian and take the oath of allegiance. In the handling of enlistment applications he might not be questioned too closely.

Once enlisted, it was said, some Americans have revealed their nationality, but, having taken the oath of allegiance, their status was that of a soldier of the King without British citizenship.

Many women in the United States have applied to join the army nursing service.

In the case of Americans living in Canada prior to the outbreak of war, enlistment has been comparatively easy. They had a Canadian address and were able to satisfy recruiting officers' queries with ease.

Bulk of the applications from young Americans have been for enlistment in the Royal Canadian Air Force, where the effect of an Order-in-Council published in the Canada Gazette Oct. 28, 1939, would seem to let the bars down completely.

Last September this R.C.A.F. reserve was created and under the October Order-in-Council those enlisting in the reserve were excepted from the birth and citizenship conditions necessary for regular enlistment.

All applications from young Americans receive close scrutiny. Those from persons with a German name are turned over to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who are on the watch for spies who might enter the country to join the army or seek to do so.

REITH DENIES CURRENT RUMORS

Says Steps Are Being Taken to Counter Reports About Mail

London, March 4—(CP)—Reports current abroad that United States mail is being opened by Great Britain for the purpose of learning trade secrets were denied in the House of Commons today by Sir John Reith, Minister of Information.

Arthur Henderson, Labor, asked whether steps were being taken to counter such propaganda, which he said was being widely circulated in the United States.

"Steps to that end are being taken," Sir John said, "and I am glad to have this opportunity of denying the allegation which has no foundation in fact."

Abandoned Lifeboats Evidently German, Sighted by Oiler

Washington, March 4—(AP) — Navy officials disclosed today that two abandoned lifeboats, apparently from a German ship, had been sighted by a United States Navy oiler late yesterday about 360 miles south and west of the Dominican Republic.

The Dominican Republic is in the West Indies.

The only identification on the boats was the nameplate, "Hapag" code name for the Hamburg-American Line and the North German Lloyd Line, which merged some time ago and together operated the Bremen, Europa and other ships.

One of the boats had capsized and the other, filled partially with water, contained sails, spars and oars.

42-Inch Gar Pike Sucked Into Well at Filtration Plant

Employees at the Belleville filtration plant, just west of the city, claim the honor of catching the season's first really worth while fish from the waters of the bay—but it was caught unintentionally and without the aid of a line. Sometime during the morning a huge Gar Pike, measuring fully 42 inches in length, passed through the pumps at the pumping station and on into the intake well.

2,000-Mile Trek Made by Motor By N. Rhodesians

Nairobi, Kenya, British East Africa, March 4—(CP)—After a motor trek of 2,000 miles —probably the longest made by any troops engaged in the war—soldiers from Northern Rhodesia have arrived at Nairobi with full fighting equipment, it was announced today.

They rode from Kusaka to Nairobi in 200 new trucks bought and equipped by the Northern Rhodesian government. The soldiers were in six units. Each carried its own equipment, stores, ammunition and gasoline, and each column was entirely self-sufficient during the journey.

Their arrival a month ago completed the concentration in Kenya of troops from every British east and central African territory.

CHINAMAN TAKES TERRIBLE BEATING

Lew Fee Beaten Over Head With Butt of Revolver and Robbed of $10

Toronto, March 4—(CP)— From a hospital bed, Lew Fee, 48, Toronto Chinese laundryman, told police today the details of a beating he took from a man who lured him into a vacant house on the pretext of having some washing. He was beaten about the head with a revolver butt and robbed of $10.

Fee said he was making collections on his bicycle Saturday when a man called from a house which later was discovered to be vacant. He went to an upstairs room, he said, and the man pointed a gun at him, demanding money. Fee took the cash from a money pouch and threw it on the floor. When the man went over to pick it up, the Chinese grappled with him and received several clouts over the head.

The gunman fled and Fee staggered from the house, blood streaming from his wounds. He collapsed and two citizens came to his aid. Police found some loose change scattered about the room where the assault took place. A revolver also was found.

Salvation Army to Open Campaign to Assist Soldiers

Stressing the social welfare of thousands of Canadian soldiers now serving their country in the cause of democracy and free living, the Salvation Army "Red Shield" campaign is again making its appeal to the public of Canada in the interests of the soldier lads.

The "Red Shield" of the Salvation Army was most efficient and effective during the last war and was looked upon as one of the most benevolent organizations to serve Canadian troops. It is with this background that Chairman B. C. Sisler, of the local Salvation Army Red Shield Campaign announced a local drive for funds today. Belleville's objective in this drive is $3,500 to be obtained through popular and public subscription.

In the last war the Salvation Army's effort was as follows: 157 refreshment and recreation huts, 77 hostels and soldiers' homes, 30 motor ambulances, 300,000 soldiers and sailors cared for each week of the last war, 100,000 men of all ranks who were given religious meeting each week as well as social and recreational help.

Since the present state of hostilities opened the "Red Shield" is operating in England and France with over 50 huts and rest rooms in France and England for the comfort of the country's soldiers. The Belleville campaign will be launched next week.

Port Hope Office of Provincial Police to be Closed March 15

Port Hope, Ont., March 4—(CP) —Effective March 15, the Port Hope office of the Provincial Police force which opened Aug. 1, 1939, will be closed and Provincial Constable James Sutherland transferred to Whitby. Pressure of duties in that area is reported to be the cause for the move.

Provincial Constable A. L. Mennie, who is stationed at Cobourg and formerly covered the territory now in charge of Constable Sutherland, will again take over this district.

CANADA HAS CREDIT BALANCE OF $209,000,000

Figures of International Payments $29,000,000 Higher in 1939 Than in 1938

GOLD EXPORTS

Ottawa, March 4 (CP)—Canada had a credit balance of international payments of $209,000,000 in 1939 compared with $180,000,000 in 1938, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said today in a preliminary report.

The Dominion had a credit balance in external trade in merchandise of $202,000,000 in 1939 exported goods exceeding goods imported by this amount.

Gold exports accounted for $184,400,000 of the Canadian credit balance in external trade and in the tourist trade the amount spent in Canada by visitors of other countries exceeded the amount spent by Canadians abroad by $165,000,000.

Interest and dividends paid by Canadians to security holders outside Canada exceeded the interest and dividends coming into Canada by $260,000,000. The miscallenous services account also produced a debit of $40,800,000.

Retirements of Canadian securities owned abroad continued to exceed sales of newly issued Canadian securities outside Canada. Net retirements in 1939 amounted to $234,700,000. New issues sold abroad totalled $144,500,000, producing a debit of $90,200,000.

However, sales of Canadian securities to other countries exceeded $311,000,000 and purchases $238,900,-$72,100,000 sales amounted to $311,000,000 and purchases $238,900,000.

Preliminary estimates of other capital movements in 1939 point to a considerably larger net debit than in 1938. The 1939 debit increased to $114,000,000 from $102,000,000.

GROUP OF PUPILS AGAINST TEACHER

Refuse to Go to School Until a New Teacher is Appointed

Toronto, March 4 — (CP) — A group of pupils of Dublin Public School, North York Township, said today they would not return to their classes until a new teacher is appointed. J. Fulford, head of the Dublin Ratepayers' Association said some parents support the stand.

"Only 17 of a class of more than 60 showed up Friday at the school," Fulford said. "Those who object to the present teacher are being kept at home until there is a change."

Approximately 25 pupils were in attendance at the schoolhouse today. Other groups of children waited outside and when the regular teacher appeared they returned home.

The present teacher has been at the school two years. Two petitions are being circulated. One asks that the present teacher be retained; the other that she be dismissed. Trustees refuse a statement.

WAR BRIEFS

London, March 4 (CP)—7 men and three women appeared before a police court today charged with obstructing traffic while selling pacifist newspapers and pamphlets at Marble Arch Sunday. Three were fined, one was released and the other six obtained a postponement of their hearings in order to seek legal advice.

Amsterdam, March 4 (CP)—A barrage balloon trailing 3,000 feet of cable and drifting from the direction of Britain was shot down in flames today by a Netherlands army plane twelve miles south of Utrecht.

Milan, Italy, March 4 (C.P.-Havas)—Italia, Milan Catholic newspaper, today called Russia a land which worships the gods of lying, hate and violence."

"In Italy," it declared, "we know what to believe about Russia which, after throwing its people into atrocious material and moral misery, has unleashed its imperialism and hurled itself against other peoples, sending Soviet fliers to announce with incendiary bombs the peaceful beginning of a reign of liberty and justice against the reactionary bourgeoisie."

Tokyo, March 4 (AP) — Masayuki Tani vice foreign-minister demanded today the return of 12 Germans still held by Britain of the 21 seized from the Japanese liner Asama Maru January 20.

Nine have been returned to Japan under a compromise settlement of Japanese protests over stoppage of the ship. The reply of British ambassador Sir Robert Craigie, to whom Tani made the demand, was not known.

Arms, Documents, Seized in W. Belfast

Belfast, March 4—(AP)—A large quantity of arms and documents were seized in a police raid today in West Belfast, a centre of Irish Republican army activity.

TRAFFIC CRIPPLED BY SLEET STORM

'Worst Ice Storm' in the History of U.S., Says Natural History Museum

New York, March 4 (AP) — A gusty sleet storm beat over the Middle Atlantic and New England States today, crippling traffic and disrupting routine in dozens of communities as trees, telephone and power lines broke under the weight of steadily accumulating ice.

The American Museum of Natural History called it "the worst ice storm" in the history of the Eastern United States.

Thousands of telephones were out of commission. Roads in sections were blocked by falling trees. Other roads were so glassy that driving was impossible. In one block in the Bronx, New York City, ten light and telephone poles went down.

Numerous highway accidents, most of them slight, were reported. Airplane travel was at a standstill, and trains were delayed on some lines. On Long Island's eastern tip the wind was blowing at a 70-mile-an-hour clip.

Says No Evidence 'Peace Proposals' Are Authentic

London, March 4—(CP)—Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, told the House of Commons today that the government had received purporter German "peace proposals" as published by the Press on Friday, but he said there was no evidence they were authentic.

Mr. Butler said the government had received the proposals through the Marquess of Tavistock, who he said was not acting "in any way" on behalf of the government.

Mr. Butler noted that Germany had repudiated the purported proposals, which, as published, suggested Germany would agree to an independent "reconstructed" Poland, freedom for reconstituted Czech and Slovak states and other such terms.

PHARAOH'S TOMB OPENED, DISPLAYS HUGE STORE GOLD

Mummy Exposed After 36 Centuries of Darkness—Possibly One of Solomon's Fathers-in-Law

JEWELS IN PROFUSION

Cairo, Egypt, March 4 (AP)—A king's ransom in gold and jewels that for 3,600 years had graced a Pharaoh's mummy shone in the fierce Egyptian sunlight today.

Archaeologists rejoiced in the discovery and exploration of a tomb some considered more important to historians than Tut-Ankh-Amen's—that of Psou Sennes, second king of the 21st dynasty and possibly one of Solomon's many fathers-in-law.

Discovery of the tomb two weeks ago and the opening of the royal sarcophagus on Feb. 28 in the presence of modern Egypt's ruler, King Farouk, crowned ten years of toil by the French Egyptologist Pierre Montet.

Working for Strasbourg University, Professor Montet grubbed patiently for a decade in the sands of San el Hagar, west of the Nile Delta site of the ancient City of Tanis built by Rameses the Second as a holiday resort.

There under the great temple built by Rameses, Montet found the tomb entrance, a shaft four feet deep, which led to an ante-room. A short passage led the scientist to the burial chamber, twenty-two feet long, nine feet wide and nine feet high, with walls of rose granite.

Head Encased in Gold.

Inside the huge sarcophagus, also or rose granite and carved with symbolic figures of the dead King and the god Osiris, lay the body of the man who ruled an empire which was old and dying when Homer sang of Troy, the head encased in a mask of pure gold and the body swathed in silver gilt.

The prize, sought in vain by such distinguished Egyptologists as Sir Flinders Petrie in the ruins of the city from which Moses is believed to have led the exodus, is a rich one. Inscriptions on the walls of the tomb and the sarcophage and one of the jewels will enable historians to fill gaps in their knowledge of this period in Egyptian civilization.

An inner sarcophagus is in the form of a statue of the king carved in silver. Adorned with the gold crowns of upper and lower Egypt the royal effigy lies with hands folded across the chest. One hand holds a golden sceptre, the other a flail. The royal face is that of a young man, leading archaeologists believe that the likeness was cast before the Pharaoh's death.

Large Tomb

The second and third sarcophage are of black granite and gold. The outer sarcophagus which fills half the tombJ—eleven feet long, seven feet wide and four feet deep—is in the form of a carving showing the Pharaoh lying on his back. Osiris watches over him and an unnamed goddess supports his head and protects him with outstretched arms.

The profusion of jewelry found in the tomb includes twenty-one golden bracelets, ten found on the right arm and eleven on the left. These are most important, as inscriptions on the gold furnish a record of the king's family and genealogical tree. A Pharaoh of the same name was one of Solomon's fathers-in-law. The marriage is recorded in the Bible.

A finely-wrought gold necklace strung with rubies and scarabs adorns the neck of the silver sarcophagus statue. Laid out on a gold table and altar were twenty gold vases of simple taste, and in a perfect state of preservation.

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., March 4—(AP)—Paul N. Sauerbrey, 59-year-old Chrysler Motors executive, died here last night. He was President of the Chrysler Corporation of California and Vice-President of Plymouth Motors.

Sauerbrey came here five weeks ago from his Grosse Point, Mich., home on a vacation.

GUARD HEALTH OF WORKERS IN BRITISH PLANTS

Government Will Continue to Refuse to Approve Employment of Women and Apprentices at Hours Harmful to Health

London, March 4 — (CP)—The British Government will continue to refuse to approve employment of women and apprentices in factories at hours harmful to their health, the Home Office said in a white paper issued today.

The white paper said that in war working hours which would not be acceptable in peacetime are necessary, and in the first five months of hostilities a system of longer hours, with two day crews and one night crew, has been applied to 2,914 factories. Sixty-two requests for permission to employ women workers and apprentices at night were rejected, the document said.

FEAR 6 MINERS TRAPPED BY BLAST

Rescue Crews Work to Reach Area Where Men Are Trapped

LaFollette, Tenn., March 4—(AP) —Six miners were believed trapped today in an explosion in Peabody Coal Mine, five miles north of here.

Company officials said details of the explosion, apparently from a gasoline engine, were not available.

Rescue crews went to work immediately in an effort to reach the trapped men.

300,000 Polish War Prisoners Work in Germany

Berlin, March 4 (AP)—Some 300,000 Polish war prisoners now are helping to do German farming, spokesmen said today.

Germany needs at least 800,000 more agricultural workers, and for this Polish civilians are being canvassed and arrangements made with neighboring states for hiring farm hands.

Already 140,000 Polish civilians, of whom about 40 percent are women, have signed up. From Italy there are to come 30,000 workers, from Slovakia 25,000, and from Holland about 3,000.

State May Prefer Kidnap Indictment Against Motorist

Chicago, March 4—(AP)—While funeral services were conducted today for five-year-old Beverly Joan Frank, the state announced plans to seek a kidnapping indictment against the motorist who had the girl in a garage after his car hit her.

Prosecutor Samuel Freedman said he would go before the grand jury tomorrow to ask indictment of Walter Bradshaw under the section of the Kidnapping Law dealing with concealment of an infant. The penalty is one year to life imprisonment.

A coroner's jury recommended that Bradshaw, 45, be held to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter. He testified at the inquest that after the accident Thursday he picked up the child and, believing her dead, hid her in the garage at the rear of his home while he went to his butcher store to attend to some business.

Bradshaw said he intended to call police later. A coroner's physician said death occurred between 15 and 20 minutes after the girl was struck. Police found the body three hours after the accident.

WEDDINGS

STINSON—HOOD

The marriage took place at Bridge Street United Church Parsonage on Saturday evening of Miss Claire Louise Hood and Mr. Lewis Brown Stinson, both of Trenton. Rev. Dr. James Semple officiated and the witnesses were Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hood. Mr. and Mrs. Stinson will reside in Trenton.

FRITZ—ORR

On Friday evening March 1st, at St. George's Church, Trenton, Marion Edythe, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Orr was married to Mr. Harry Raymond Fritz, second son of Mr. and the late Mrs. Harry Fritz, of Brighton, Ontario, by the Rev. G. G. Wright rector of Christ Church, Belleville.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white taffeta made on princess lines. Her veil which formed a train was of embroidered silk net held in place by a spray of gardenias. She carried a sheaf of white roses and wore the groom's gift a gold locket. Miss Nancie Jeanne Orr was her sister's bridesmaid wearing a "Gone with the wind" crinoline gown of orchid net over satin with sash of violet taffeta and a tiny hat of crushed violets and ribbon bows. She carried a colonel bouquet of yellow roses with white lace frill. The flower girl, who was also the bride's god-daughter was Miss Audrey Joan Smale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smale, of Belleville. She looked adorable in a floor length frock of sea green net over a hooped petticoat of yellow satin with yellow roses in her hair and her arms full of daffodils.

The service was choral which added greatly to the beauty and dignity of the ceremony. The processional hymn was "O Perfect Love" and during the service the choir sang the Deus. The soloist was Mr. Willis Jackson of Belleville who sang "Because" during the signing of the register. The organist was Miss Bernice Saunders of Belleville. Mr. Lewis Fritz of South Bay, brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Mr. Charles St. Hilaire of Trenton and Mr. Roy Chaltan of Brighton cousin of the groom. The bride's gifts to her attendants were, to Miss Saunders an engraved gold compact, to her sister, candle sticks, and to the flower girl a gold locket and chain.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Queen Street, Trenton, and later Mr. and Mrs. Fritz left for a honeymoon at Amherst Island, the bride wearing a cinnamon crepe dress with matching accessories and a sealskin coat. On their return they will reside near Kingston, Ontario.

MUNRO-McGINNIS

St. Thomas Church was the scene of a charming wedding at four o'clock on Saturday afternoon when Lorraine Hope, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hope McGinnis, became the bride of Robert W. Munro, R.C.A.M.C., son of Mrs. Munro and the late W. F. Munro, of Pembroke. Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne officiated.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely jacket frock of pilgrim gray romaine sheer, with lace blouse, and daffodil belt, French heart shaped hat of cornflowers and matching ribbons. She wore a corsage of Premier roses.

The bride and groom were unattended.

Following the ceremony the bridal party motored to Trenton where dinner was served at Firhurst Manor. Mrs. McGinnis, mother of the bride, was attired in Brittany blue romaine sheer with gray-blue blouse, French hat of robin red with navy blue daisies, and corsage of roses. Mrs. Munro, mother of the groom, wore navy blue sheer with touches of wine, matching hat and corsage of roses.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Munro left for Toronto where they will reside.

Guests at the wedding included Mrs. V. Massey of Toronto, aunt of the groom, Mrs. C. Keyes of Kingston, aunt of the bride and Mrs. W. R. Taylor, the bride's godmother.

Canadian Girls in Training Groups Attend Silver Jubilee Service

Commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Canadian Girls in Training, a silver jubilee jewelled with high achievement in the aim of the organization—purposeful Christian living, the C.G.I.T. of Tabernacle Church held an inspiring and deeply moving candle-light ceremony as a conclusion of the service carried out last night by members of the group.

White and blue crests were used in decorating the church, the chancel being ornamented with a large crest bearing the figures "25". The members of the C.G.I.T. entered in a body, and occupied the front pews, looking very smart in their blue skirts and white middies. The girls' choir assisted the regular chair of which Mrs. M. P. Duff is leader and Mrs. J. G. Bradley is organist.

History of C.G.I.T.

Miss Peggy Doolittle, president of the C.G.I.T. department of Tabernacle Church, had charge of the impressive service. An interesting history of the origin and growth of the C.G.I.T. movement was given by Miss Loretta Stark. C.G.I.T. came into being in the Dominion while the world was at war, and older brothers of the girls were fighting in the trenches. At home, the needs of the girl were being thoroughly studied by the Protestant churches in order that youthful enthusiasm and energy might be directed toward a high religious purpose. The importance of the education of the whole personality was being stressed by these leaders and from their experience and wisdom the church program known as the Canadian Girls in Training in 1915 emerged as a Dominion-wide movement whose practical methods were attuned to a lofty purpose.

Miss Nina Yeomans organized the first group in Belleville, at Bridge Street United Church and in Tabernacle Church the C.G.I.T. was organized by Miss Laura Bell, now Mrs. Adamson. No story of the C.G.I.T. work in Belleville would be complete without due credit being accorded Miss Robina Templeton whose leadership has been a source of inspiration to many groups. It was a privilege, the speaker said, to have Miss Templeton a member of Tabernacle C.G.I.T. Belleville has contributed much to C.G.I.T. and it is hoped that the work of the next twenty-five years will be richer for the activities of today. The offering was taken by four members of the C.G.I.T., Misses Marie Doyle, Norma Lawson, Joyce McLelland and Grace Firth.

Abiding Love

Rev. D. T. McClintock, pastor of the church, delivered an interesting sermon on the theme "Father Love Reigns Over All; Brother Love Binds Man to Man." Reflecting on these two lines, the first thought may be that they are simply not true. One only has to look at the world today, at the vast armies drawn up against each other, the hundreds of men out of work, on relief, on the verge of poverty, at the injustices of the industrial system, the corruption of political life, to doubt the truth of these two statements. Yet in spite of all this one cannot lay these great evils at the door of God. God's love is still there but man has not appropriated it, not lived up to or ventured on His love. A great harvest of wheat, of fish, of timber, of coal, last year was provided by a bountiful God. Yet through the selfishness and stupidity of others, many were starving and homeless or living, even in this city, in houses and slums not fit for habitation.

God has provided men with minds and souls so that they can appreciate the beautiful, can enjoy the wonderful things that radio now brings to their firesides. But above all, God has given to man the gift of free will. He has made man free to choose, free to deny or refuse God's will. God hasn't done so badly for man.

Good Will Active

In discussing the phrase "Brother Love Binds Man to Man" Mr. McClintock referred to Professor Shaw's words that the New Testament idea of love is "good will active" to those above, on the same level and below. There are many people whose ugliness of mental qualities and moral qualities makes it impossible to love them in an emotional way but one can always have good will active towards them.

The keynote of the C.G.I.T. has been adventure, so by venturing on in this business of active good will their activities will be crowned by great achievements.

Inspiring Ceremony

Following the service, the lights of the church were lowered, for the candle-lighting ceremony. The central anniversary candle was lighted, representing Jesus, the Light of the world and from it the candles of the girls were lighted. "Light of the World" was sung and the girls, still carrying the gleaming candles, filed slowly out, symbolizing the spreading of their light to others.

Keeping Life in The Tresses

PAULETTE GODDARD . . . shows results of careful hair grooming.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN the old glory mop, after standing up valiantly, starts to moult, there is sorrow in the heart of the beauty seeker. She should be tranquil. Human hair does a continual hail and farewell act. Every day some shafts will fall. The wool atop the human pate is house cleaning, getting rid of debris.

The life of a single hair is between two and seven years. Considering that it sometimes grows five inches a year, it could extend into yard lengths during a lifetime. When its time comes, it fluffs away, the papilla produces an understudy. It is when the hair-growing mechanism is dead that the case is hopeless.

Brushing brings away only the dead shafts. It should be done every day to remove surface dust and to stimulate the scalp. A five-minute friction now and then is helpful. Careless shampooing is harmful because soap is not thoroughly removed. Wetting the hair daily is a bad practice.

Hot oil treatments are recommended by beauty specialists.

The general health is a factor. Sleeplessness, worry, digestive disturbances and fevers have a deplorable effect upon the topmop.

With evening sweaters all the rage, there is more than ordinary need of the use of deodorants or deterrents in the armpits. Sweat glands are active there. Cosmetic counters offer preparations in various forms; if one does not correct the unpleasant condition, another one will.

Moist skin is often caused by nervousness. Nervousness is the result of physical ills or mental disturbances. Emotional control makes for a happier life; lack of it has a bad effect upon health and appearance.

The daily bath is a factor in treatment of excessive perspiration. Go over the flesh with clear water, before using soap.

HAVE YOU any beauty problems? Let the Beauty Box Editor help you solve them. Address all inquiries regarding beauty to the Editor of the Beauty Box, care of this newspaper. Be sure to enclose an addressed, stamped (three cents) envelope for reply.

Here's How to Relieve MISERY of COLDS Without Dosing

There's nothing to swallow. Massaged on throat, chest and back, Vicks VapoRub acts two ways at once to relieve misery of colds.

FIRST: VapoRub acts on the skin, stimulates like a warming poultice.

SECOND: At the same time, VapoRub gives off soothing medicated vapours that are breathed direct into irritated air passages.

THIS DIRECT, 2-WAY ACTION loosens phlegm, clears air passages, checks tendency to cough—also relieves muscular tightness and soreness.

Because it's external and safe, VapoRub can be used freely and as often as needed, for children and grown-ups. No wonder it's used in 1 out of 3 Canadian homes.

SERVED IN GREAT WAR

New York, March 4 —(CP)— Funeral services were held here today for Dr. John W. Begg, native of Kingston, Ont., who died here Saturday at the age of 78.

Dr. Begg, educated at Queen's University, Kingston, served in England in the First Great War as a captain in the Canadian Forestry

His widow, a son and a daughter survive.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Transferred His Love To His Fiancee's Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A certain young man was in love with my best girl friend. Before he met me they had an understanding that they would be married as soon as he could afford it. Now he has told me that he doesn't love her any more, but that his affections have turned toward me, and he wants to stop going with her..

He calls me on the phone and sends flowers and candy. I'm very much in love with him, but how can I break the news to my girl friend? Or do you think it's his place to do it, or shall we just let her find it out for herself? I shall be anxiously awaiting your answer.

D. W.

In these days, no sensible person is supposed to go on with an engagement when love no longer exists. That's the advantage this young man has over young men in his grandfather's day. Then you had to go through with an engagement, whether love had flown or not.

Decidedly it's the young man's place rather than yours to tell the girl he no longer loves her. It wouldn't be the right thing at all to let her find it out for herself. But she may have her suspicions, as love and a cold are hard to conceal.

Says Everybody is Looking at Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a boy in my late teens. I don't seem to be able to make friends. Everyone seems to stare at me. Is it because of my red hair? Please tell me what to do.

Jim

When we're young, we often imagine "everyone" is looking at us. It's just part of not being adjusted to life — self-consciousness and the thought that perhaps we really are not being appreciated as much as we should be. Red hair is very beautiful, and if you were only a girl and had those fiery locks, you'd have no difficulty in getting a job as a model or a mannikin. Red hair is supposed to denote intelligence, and lots of other Grade A things. Don't worry about it.

She Seems to Have Lost All Interest in Life

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My dearest friend lost her husband about a year ago, after only two years of happy marriage. She was devotedly in love with him and seems to have lost all interest in life. I'm the only friend she'll see, and her family and I are trying everything within our power to get her to brighten up again. She just sits at home looking at his pictures, books and other things he owned. We're so afraid she may lose her mind through melancholia.

I happen to know that her husband wasn't as true as she thinks, and I'm wondering if it would be allright to tell her this, in the hope of setting her free from a morbid grief, which is likely to wreck her sanity?

A Friend

Your girl friend may really be ill, and her depression of spirits may be due to some physical cause. Have you thought of talking to her family doctor about her case? I think it would be distinctly risky to attempt the remedy you propose, without first knowing whether she would be strong enough to stand such a shock.

You hope to help cure her by proving the man she loved was unworthy. You may be taking from her the last shred of comfort. A much safer remedy would be to move her into entirely new surroundings, and try to replace these reminders of her late husband.

Time May Adjust This Affair

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm very much in love with a young man of 22. I am 20 years of age. We were going together for almost a year, when his mother, seeing that we were getting serious, interfered. She told her son it would be best to stop seeing me, so he dropped me, but is very unhappy. His mother said it would have to be that way, or he would have to leave home, and in that event he would lose his job because he works for his father. I'm terribly blue about it, because we had such good times together. Miss Fairfax, please advise me what to do.

Janet

Things are looking pretty black in your little world right now, I admit, but they might be worse. I'm afraid you'll have to consider the matter closed for the present, as it would not be well to force things. A little later on his mother may feel differently toward you, especially when she sees that you are not inclined to make an issue of this affair. Time adjusted so many things.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Don't Be Proud of Being Frank

If we are wise, there is one thing that life very definitely teaches us: a sensible attitude about "being frank". One of the quickest ways of making ourselves a first-class pest is to go along the highway of life hurting people's feelings, being unkind and interfering, because of a ridiculous insistence on what we are pleased to call "being frank" — telling people what we think of them and of their actions. People who do this have little understanding of moderation and adaptability. And they usually have slight understanding of the importance of minding their own business. Knowing when to keep one's mouth closed is a golden wisdom!

Youth is especially apt to think that frankness is a sort of divine quality. Mature wisdom knows that another person's individuality is holy ground, that we should stop our footsteps at the threshold of another person's life — unless we are invited to enter. Gentleness and understanding are lovable qualities.

Theatre Manners

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When attending a theatre with a friend, is it necessary to thank the usher when he finds you the seats, and upon entering the aisle, should he say, "Pardon me?"

2. When anyone opens a door for you or holds it for you, is it polite to say "Thank you"? I always say thank you on these occasions, but I have watched others and they omit it, and take the courtesy as a matter of course. Who is right?

R.

1. Yes, if we are mannerly —— and your letter and the way you frame your questions show definitely that you are — we thank the usher for finding our seats And, when we pass in front of people as we take our places in the row, we say, "I beg your pardon", or "I'm sorry".

2. I'm sure that you disapprove as much as I do the impolite attitude of people who take courteous attention for granted. Such aloof disregard of expressing appreciation appears absurd to people who have right thoughts about human relationships. One wonders what possible reward they get from being so hard and so callous as to be willing to omit that gracious "thank you."

"Going-Away" Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a very dear friend who is moving away to another city and who has been married but a short time. She was married very quietly and due to that fact, I was unable to give her a shower, as I had intended. Do you think it would be all right to give her a going-away shower or a farewell shower, and could you give me some ideas

P.

I think that it's a very happy idea you have — and, under the circumstances, a thoroughly correct one, to plan a shower for your friend who has been recently married. Since apparently she had no pre-marriage showers given for her, you might make your shower a "miscellaneous shower" leaving the choice of gifts to your guests. Your centerpiece might be one of Spring flowers, and the gifts might be put into an ample box on a side table, the box covered with a very bride-y paper, say of white with gold or silver stars either in the paper-design or pasted to the box.

Did you ever really listen to how you say "Hello" over the telephone? There's a world of personality, good or bad, in the way you say it. Listen, carefully, the next time you answer the telephone.

BRITISH WOMEN NOW ORGANIZED FOR ANY PERIL

Fire, Sword or Drought—Come What May, Gentler Sex is Regimented to Take Its Full Part

By DILYS THOMAS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Mar. 4—(CP)—Total of 893,000 in national service shows that Britain's womenfolk have answered the country's call as readily as her menfolk.

Of the women's branches of the three services the Women's Auxiliary Territorial Service, headed by Dame Helen Gwynne-Vaughan, leads with more than 30,000. Originally the number aimed at was 20,000 but last October it was decided to double the strength.

The "ATS" uniform is khaki tunic, skirt and cap. These girls are attached to army training camps as cooks, clerks and drivers, and rank from volunteer to chief commandant.

A volunteer — equivalent to a private — gets 30 cents a day pay. Section leaders — sergeants' rank —wear three stripes, are usually in charge of platoons and earn $1 a day. Company assistants, like second lieutenants, wear a seven-pointed star and receive $1.68 a day. Company commanders have two stars, are equivalent to army captains, and earn $2.75 daily. Commandants correspond to lieutenant-colonels and earn $7 a day.

The Women's Royal Naval Service, has a membership of 2,500 and is up to strength. Led by Mrs. Laughton Matthews, daughter of Sir John Matthews, its members wear navy blue uniforms, with caps for rank and file and three-cornered hats for officers. "Wrens," as they are called, are enrolled for shore jobs only and work at naval bases as cooks, bookkeepers, ciphperers and drivers.

An ordinary Wren earns $7.50 a week while Chief Wrens, who correspond to naval petty officers and wear no badge of rank, earn $10 a week. Second officers wear a blue braid strip on the cuff and earn $20 a week. First officers wear two thick braid strips and receive $23 weekly. Chief officers, corresponding to naval commanders, have two thick and one thin strip and get $26.25 a week.

Popular Air Force

The Women's Auxiliary Air Force is also full up with membership of more than 8,000. The "WAAFS" have as their head Miss J. Trefusis Forbes, and they don't fly. This is the most popular of the women's services, probably on account of the snappy uniforms of air force blue.

The girls are employed as cooks, drivers, teleprinter and telephone operators and fabric workers. Airwomen 2nd class earn 30 cents a day. When promoted from airwoman 2nd class to airwoman 1st class a volunteer's rate of pay is increased to 50 cents daily. Sergeants, corresponding to R. A. F. sergeants with three stripes on the sleeve, are paid $1 to $1.30 a day according to duties. Senior sergeants, corresponding to flight sergeants, with three stripes and a crown, receive from $1.25 to $1.50 a day.

Assistant section officers, equivalent to R. A. F. pilot officers, with one ring on the cuff, get $1.80 a day. Flight officers, equivalent to flight lieutenants, with two rings on the cuff get $3 a day. Squadron officers, equivalent to squadron leaders, with two thick rings and one thin; earn $4.57 a day. Wing officers, corresponding to wing commanders with three thick rings on the cuff earn $5.60 a day. Rates of pay for Controllers and Air Commandants have not yet been fixed.

Fire and Hospital

The Women's Auxiliary Fire Service has a membership of 5,000 in London and roughly 25,000 over the whole of England. Their uniform is navy blue with "AFS" in red on the left breast pocket and red piping on the caps. They are allowed choice of skirts or trousers and work as cooks, clerks and telephonists. Their rankings are firewoman; section officers, who have one thick red band on the sleeve; company officers, wearing one thick band and one thin; group officers, with one thick band and two thin; and deputy commandant with one thick band and three thin. All receive $10 a week irrespective of rank.

British Red Cross nurses — The Voluntary Aid Detachment — has 67,000 members. With Dame Beryl Oliver as their directress they are under contract for the duration of the war, earn from $150 to $200 a year and serve in military and naval hospitals at home and abroad. V. A. D. nurses will not have the job of looking after civilian air raid casualties. This is the work for which the Civil Nursing Reserve was recruited. There are about 20,000 trained reservists and 100,000 more have been or are being trained as auxiliaries. They earn $10 a week.

Working on Land

The Women's Land Army, pay $7 a week, uniform dungarees, gum boots and raincoats, seems to be the biggest white elephant of the war. Out of the 25,000 enlisted, only 2,000 have been placed in employment. The remainder are carrying on their civilian jobs until the Ministry of Agriculture calls on them for service.

Biggest and best achievement of women in wartime is the Women's Voluntary Services with a membership of 570,000. Organized by the Dowager Lady Reading they receive no pay and their uniform consists of greyish-green overcoat and a chromium badge.

Both Lady Reading and Walter Elliot, Minister of Health, paid tribute to their work in evacuating women and children at the outbreak of war. Now part of their job is feeding, clothing and schooling the evacuees.

Among other tasks are such jobs as making bandages, nightshirts, stuffing mattresses, recruiting and classifying blood donors and transporting the transfusions.

Women's Voluntary Services was responsible also before the war for training 46,000 ambulance drivers now stationed at first aid posts throughout the country and paid $10 a week for standing by.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

The Cod Liver Oil Shortage

A couple of weeks ago I referred here to the shortage of cod liver oil here in North America. That is threatened because our European sources of supply are being cut off by war, and the alarming consequences it can have. Since that article appeared I have been besieged with letters from parents wanting to know what substitutes can be used if the present supply of cod liver oil becomes exhausted.

Well, I still hope that we may come through the shortage without having to resort to substitution. If we come through to spring, then we may be able to build up sufficient supply during summer to carry us through next winter again. Or better still, the war may be over before next winter.

There are various products which have some value as substitutes for cod liver oil. None is as satisfactory as the original, natural oil from the cod. Nevertheless they are beneficial, and when the oil isn't available, we should certainly use them.

The main reason we use cod liver oil, of course, is to provide an adequate supply of Vitamins A and D. There are substitutes which can be made to supply these just as well as cod liver oil. But they are not as balanced in vitamin content. And in addition to its vitamins, cod liver oil contains small amounts of various other important substances that the body needs. The substitutes lack all or some of these.

For instance, if we do not get about a five hundredth part of a milligram of iodine every day in our food we may develop a goitre—the small amount of iodine in an average dose of cod liver oil will prevent it. In districts where the food doesn't contain enough iodine, goitre is fairly common. But even in these so-called "goitre areas", we are unlikely to contract it if we take a teaspoonful of cod liver oil a day.

In most of the United States and Canada, as I have pointed out many times before, a child does not receive enough of the sun's ultra-violet rays in Fall, Winter and early Spring. Ultra-violet rays have practically no heating power, but the energy they radiate makes it possible for the cells of the body to take up the minerals from the food more easily and use them for building up strength and good health. A shortage of ultra-violet rays can be as bad for a child as a shortage of a necessary food element. Cod liver oil makes up for ultra-violet rays that children do not get in the cold months.

The most common substitutes for cod liver oil are the concentrates of the cod itself. The concentration causes the extra substances to be lost, but the vitamins are retained. Often the concentrate is a liquid of which a drop or two is equal to a teaspoon of the oil itself in the amount of vitamin content; sometimes it comes in the form of tablets or capsules. A doctor should be consulted about the proper dosage for your child.

Of course, if the shortage of oil becomes acute, these concentrates will run out, too, since there won't be oil to manufacture them. However, we may be able to get concentrates from Europe in sufficient considerable quantities, since they would be easier to ship than the oil itself.

Of the other fish oils that can be used as substitutes for cod liver oil, most have too much vitamin A and not enough vitamin D. This is the handicap of haliver oil, one of the most common substitutes. However, in processing the oil the manufacturers can add the extra vitamin D and give a better balance to the product.

The biggest trouble about the substitute is that parents are just getting to be cod liver oil conscious, and will have to be educated all over again if substitutes must be used to give their children the much-needed "bottled sunshine" in winter.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today

Male or Female, the Nagger is Self-Righteous, Stupid and Infantile

Dear Miss Chatfield:

I would like a discussion of the nagging husband. I know a lazy one who works eight hours a day in an office while his wife works ten to twelve hours at home. Yet he cannot look after the children half a day Saturday while his wife does the extra cooking for the week-end. He complains about the housekeeping, the meals, and howls if the biscuits aren't exactly like mother used to make.

His wife is a patient little soul who slaves to hear a kind word out of him and goes without clothes and pretty things for the house rather than hear him nag about money. He takes her out, not more than once a month, and sings his own praises for this; saying that not one husband in a hundred is as good to his wife as he is. I would advise this wife to leave her nagging mate if it weren't for the children but that's a big IF. What do you think of him?

Sister-in-Law

ANSWER:

I'd say his mother made a poor job of rearing him, that his wife hadn't helped matters much by continuing to spoil him; that it would be fine if some outsider could walk in and lay down the law to him as to how he should treat his family, put him on probation with promise to punish him if he didn't behave. Unfortunately this isn't practical, not even for a sister-in-law.

You remember that proverb, "He that meddleth with strife belonging not to him is as one that taketh a dog by the ears." If you know dogs, you know that means the meddler is likely to be bitten. And so sister-in-law, you'd better leave off meddling, withhold your advice and permit the young pair to work out their problem as best they can.

For some inexplicable reason the impression prevails that women have a corner on petty fault-finding and harping on the same old points in the home. It's all wrong; for men as well as women are self-righteous and stupid and childish in the relationships. All of which the nagger is.

He's so busy trying to make the other fellow come up to his standards that he hasn't time to take stock of his own shortcomings. Certainly he's stupid or he would learn by experience that he has never won a single point by the drip, drip, drip method but invariably has worked himself into a lather and worked the other person up to the point of weeping or cursing as the sex may be.

Whether it's husband or wife on the receiving end of a nagging tongue, I know of but three weapons to meet it and lick it; the hardened heart, the deaf ear and silence.

Canadian Divisional Signallers Praised for Help Given in Restoring System After Tieup

Aldershot, England, Mar. 4 (CP).—Officials of the Southern Railway Company have a special reason for regarding the Canadian soldiers as a "little bit of all right".

During the height of the recent blizzard which swept the country, the company's communications system was disrupted seriously. Snow, which later turned into a freezing drizzle, brought one of the worst tie-ups in living memory. Poles and wires snapped under the accumulated weight of snow and ice several inches thick and although every available company repairman was rushed into action there was little hope of restoring services quickly without emergency aid.

For reasons of national security details of the storm's havoc and dislocation were withheld at the time. But censorship restrictions have now been lifted, services are again back to normal—an achievement in which a group of Canadians played a leading role.

Respond To Appeal.

In response to an urgent appeal for assistance, a party of 24 expert linesmen from 1st Canadian Divisional Signals, under Lieut. H. S. Hadwin, of London, Ont., was despatched to the scene.

Through raw, foggy weather, and biting, cold wind, they slogged through snow and ice for more than a week, leaving their camp in Aldershot at five o'clock every morning and working until dusk, putting up poles, cutting trees and stringing new wire. They took with them a sandwich lunch, often consumed around a brazier in the open or munched right on the job.

Every man in the gang was aware of the importance of his task. From long experience in Canada they knew the very life of some community might depend on the speed of their efforts and the mending of signal channels was urgent from the standpoint of vital deliveries.

Altogether, the Canadians restored more than 25 miles of disrupted communications, which brought enthusiastic tribute from M. D. Lucas, sub-inspector for the railway company and a letter of congratulations from the regional officials.

Troops Heartily Praised.

"I only wish I could keep such an efficient gang on my staff permanently," the inspector said to Lieut. Hadwin. "I have never seen more thorough and hard-working men. Really I don't know what we would have done without them."

Lieut Hadwin accepted the tribute with a smile.

"It has been excellent practical training for the men," he said. "I know they have enjoyed the experience and we are only too glad to have been of some assistance."

Here are the men who made up the party: Corp. W. H. Overton, Woodstock, Ont.; Signalmen H. Coupar, W. R. Jewell, B. F. Phelan, W. G. Minnice, all from London, Ont.; F. Bullard, Kintore, Ont.; B. H. McDiarmid, Ingersoll, Ont.; M. A. Bell, C. McGhee, S. P. McKay, W. Thompson, J. Yule, E. S. Thompson, all from Toronto; A. Taylor, P. C. Giroux, W. J. Watling, from Ottawa; M. C. Murdy, Lucan; L. Griffin, Garden Hill; E. J. Hatton, Mount Dennis, Ont.; H. C. Humphries, Carp, Ont.; W. J. Trim, Beachville, Ont.; D. McArthur, Ailsa Craig, W. J. Bennett, Montreal, and J. Hayley, Charlottetown.

FRENCH REPORT GREAT ACTIVITY

week-end raids between the Rhine and Moselle Rivers.

A German raiding party succeeded in taking several French prisoners after an attack yesterday on the edge of the Vosge mountains apparently in a search for information on French troop assignments.

The French countered with an ambush in the Wissembourg gap on the eastern flank of the front where a German squad was trapped and several of its members captured.

A broader German assault on two French advance posts in the Nied River sector near the centre of the front also was reported repulsed.

French Communique

The French morning communique announced a "decided renewal of activity" on the front and intensified aerial operations

The text of the communique, one of the longest in the six months of war, follows:—

"A relatively quiet night on the whole.

"Two of our outposts east of the Moselle repelled a local attack.

"These last days have on the whole been marked by a decided renewal of activity on the part of contact units as well as patrols and reconnaissances on the entire front between the Rhine and the Moselle.

"During the day of March 3, numerous aerial flights took place in which two enemy pursuit planes were probaby brought down. All our crews returned safely to their bases.

"A German reconnaisance plane was brought down by British aviation in the zone of our advanced posts."

The aerial feints back and forth across the western front, or outflanking it to the north, stressed the belligerents anxious watching of each other for a hint of springtime tactics.

Acknowledged Loss of 2 Planes

(The German communique yesterday acknowledged that two German scouting planes were missing, but said one French plane was shot down in a battle between four German planes and 12 French over the Moselle River sector. Three French craft were said to have been brought down in other encounters.

(Germany reported also that on Saturday "Northeastern France as far as the Paris region was scouted," while Britons reported reaching Berlin Saturday night, the fifth such flight in six days.)

Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State and President Roosevelt's special investigator, travelled today from Berlin, en route to Paris and London, by way of Lausanne, Switzerland, to continue his fact-finding, after having talked with Adolf Hitler and the Fuehrer's three senior aides. He is expected to reach Paris Thursday.

HOMES TOPPLE, BUILDINGS CRACK

Seven hours after the subsidence first was detected many buildings had settled 18 inches and widening cracks streaked across factories and sturdier brick structures.

Homes Split in Two

Many homes were split in two. Gas and water mains were broken. Street pavements caved in.

Women sobbed hysterically among the hundreds of spectators who looked on from safe areas outside the section police roped off. Many saw their houses collapse.

State police from all nearby stations were summoned to help the Shenandoah police force maintain order and patrol the endangered section.

Telephone service to Shenandoah from nearby communities in the anthracite section was disrupted.

The ground began to settle and split open about 1 a.m., Alinsky reported. Several hours later it was still sinking slowly.

Residents Led to Safety

Policemen, warned by loud rumblings, aroused residents and led them to safety.

Gas and water lines were broken as the ground sank around them and police ordered valves of pipes leading into the area closed.

"Some of the buildings were split in half," Chief Alinsky said. "In some houses, doors jammed so tightly that the people had to crawl out of windows to get away."

Alinsky ordered the section roped off and stationed guards to prevent anyone from entering. Hundreds of persons, many weeping, stood outside the guard ropes silently, watching the houses settle.

Steady Downpour of Rain

A steady downpour of rain which fell for the past 24 hours, added to the discomfort of those who fled their homes.

In addition to private residences, the area included the junior and senior high schools, a hook and ladder fire house, a hotel, a shirt factory, a packing plant and numerous smaller business places.

"The Senior High School building is cracking now," Alinsky reporter at 8.30 a.m. He described the school as a two-storey brick structure and said huge cracks were appearing in various parts of the building.

The chief said the settling "probably would continue most of the day."

Police Blotter

Several inebriates fell into the hands of the police over the week-end, including one woman. All were charged under the L.C.A. in police court.

Late Saturday night local police hastened to a Mary St. address where it was said a man had frightened the residents at 130 Mary St. Upon the arrival of police an inebriate was found to have entered the home and was found reclining in a chesterfield chair quite unconcernedly. The man paid the minimum fine of "ten and costs" in today's police court, where he stated he "remembered nothing of the incident."

Otherwise activities in Belleville police circles proved uneventful over the week-end that saw 13 transients given shelter, five on Saturday night and the remaining eight last evening.

5 ITALIAN SHIPS LEAVE FOR HOME

It is Believed Allies Will Not Interfere With Ships Loaded When Blockade Went in Effect

Rotterdam, The Netherlands, March 4—(CP—Havas)—Five Italian ships loaded with German coal consigned to Italy sailed today and nine others now taking on cargo are expected to leave before the end of the week.

The Orata was the first to leave today. The collier, together with three others, had sailed from home last Saturday, but put back to port on orders from Rome following extension of British contraband control to German coal en route to Italy.

Italian quarters here believe the Allies will not attempt to stop the 14 colliers which had been already loaded or were taking on cargo here when London's blockade order went into effect last Friday night. The concession would not apply, however, it was stated to ships which arrived here subsequently.

FIVE BURNED IN STOCKHOLM FIRE

Communists Allege Headquarters Set Afire by Warmongers and Hirelings

Stockholm, Mar. 4 (AP). — Five persons are believed to have perished in a fire which destroyed the building housing the Communist headquarters for northern Sweden at Lulea yesterday.

Philip Forsberg, a communist editor known as "Red Philip", was injured leaping to safety.

Moscow, Mar. 4 (AP).—The Soviet Trade Union organ Trud charged today that a fire in Communist headquarters at Lulea, northern Sweden, yesterday was caused by an explosion planned 'by British-French warmongers and their Swedish hirelings'.

The paper said: "The Lulea provocation was the result of the impotent warmongers who know that the imminent downfall of White Finland means the failure of plans for conversion of Sweden into a new base for imperialist war."

Splendid Talent Featured in Program Belleville Chapt. O.E.S.

Excellent talent possessed by anyone whatever the nature of it may be, is bound to come to the knowledge of public at large, sooner or later, and this truth was very ably demonstrated in the varied program of entertainment which followed the regular meeting of Belleville Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, on Friday evening, March 1st.

The Belleville Public School boys' band, under the capable leadership of Mr. Cooper, showed one of the reasons for Belleville's reputation as a city with good bands, as they excellently rendered various numbers during the evening, with one of their number, Billy Shaw, giving a cornet solo. This is an up and coming band and a great credit to the city and to their instructor and leader.

Little Miss Ruth Hanks was able to demonstrate that all the talent is not possessed by the boys, as her nimble feet carried her through a very fine exhibition of tap dancing.

An artist on the piano in the person of Mr. William Connor, gave two numbers which were very greatly enjoyed and appreciated. Mr. Connor also acted as accompanist for Mr. J. H. Lazenby in his song during his impersonation of a lady soprano soloist, and so good was Mr. Lazenby as a glamour girl that many male hearts were fluttering at the prospect of a new star.

Miss Arbuckle gave a number of readings and her portraying of the various characters was excellent, and greatly enjoyed and appreciated by everyone privileged to hear her.

Another artist, of whom we have not heard much, outside of his regular work as an insurance adjuster, was Mr. L. Fozzard, who gave a very smart exhibition of sleight-of-hand, and which proved very entertaining to those present, particularly the boys, who were very much interested in trying to see if they could discover how each act was accomplished.

Mr. Arthur Snare entertained the members with various numbers on his piano accordian as his contribution to the enjoyable evening.

The appreciation of every one present was voiced by Mr. Clarence Clapp and conveyed to the artists by the chairman, Mr. Thos. Law.

Refreshments were served by the refreshment committee, to bring the evening to a close.

WHO INVENTED THE MOUSETRAP?

You've often heard the old adage: "Let a man make a better mousetrap, and the world will make a beaten path to his door."

But have you ever happened upon that path, or even looked for it?

Why SHOULD you, when the people who today have things to sell beat a path to YOUR door to tell you about them?

Every newspaper that comes into your home brings you a new list of WHAT you can get, and WHERE. You can do your shopping in the advertising pages — instead of beating a path from store to store to find what you want.

Make it a habit to look over the advertisements, and you'll find many fine values you might have missed . . . many exciting and useful things you otherwise might never have known about!

Rangers Within Shooting Distance of N.H.L. Title by Win, Draw Over Weekend

Have Three More Games to Play, Two of Which Are With Boston

CANADIENS OUT

Americans Tie and Win Over Habitants to Eliminate Montreal Club

By JACK CALDER

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Everything points to a terrific impact when New York Rangers and Boston Bruins stage two meetings next week—easily the two most important games of the National Hockey League schedule.

The Rangers pulled up their socks during the week-end, after a series of in-and-out performances, and moved three points ahead of the Bruins in the fight for first place by tying the Maple Leafs 1-1 at Toronto Saturday and defeating the Black Hawks 2-1 at Chicago Sunday. Those tidy happenings left the Broadway blueshirts well within shooting range of the title, despite the fact that they have only three games to play and the Bruins six.

Title At Stake.

So the N.H.L. championship which goes to the club finishing on top, will be at stake when the Rangers and the Bruins collide at Boston a week from tomorrow and again at New York two nights later.

The Rangers played snugly against the Leafs before a throng of 13,846 customers, realizing that no team had been able to win games both in Toronto and Chicago on successive nights this season. Pete Langelle, rising rapidly to big league stardom, punched a Toronto goal in the second period and the Rangers opened up only between that time and the moment Bryan Hextall tied the score in the third.

At Chicago the Rangers caught the Hawks minus Mush March, Art Wiebe and Les Cunningham and made sure of victory before a season's record attendance of 18,114. Earl Seibert sent Chicago ahead in the second but Kilby MacDonald levelled the count late in the same period. Wilf Hiller shot the winning goal midway through the third.

Wings Help Rangers.

Meanwhile the Red Wings helped the Rangers' cause by defeating Boston 6-3 in a wild affair at Detroit. Woody Dumart gave the Bruins an early lead but Alex Motter scored twice, Mud Bruneteau made good on a penalty shot and Cecil Dillon tallied soon after the third period began to give Detroit a 4-1 advantage.

Misconduct penalties to Milt Schmidt and Johnny Shewchuck for arguing against minor sentences had knocked some of the starch out of the Bruins in the second period. Roy Conacher scored twice for them in the third but Joe Sher and Ken Kilrea kept the Wings well ahead with their fifth and sixth goals.

While the battle for first place remained studded in deep doubt, the struggle for sixth and last playoff place was considerably clarified. The sixth place Americans tied the Canadiens 3-3 at Montreal Saturday and then defeated them 3-0 at New York Sunday.

Amerks Seven Points Up.

That left the Americans seven points up on the last-place Canadiens. Each team has five games to go.

The Habitants fought desperately both times, only to wilt in the face of rallies. At Montreal Pat Egan and Harvey Jackson gave the New Yorkers an early 2-0 lead but goals by Bill Summerhill, Armand Mondou and Louis Trudel had the Canadiens in front by the time five minutes of the second had passed.

Then Johnny Gagnon, traded by the Canadiens to the Americans early in the campaign, came back to haunt his teammates with the tying goal. The rest of the week-end was disastrous.

For more than half the game in New York the Canadiens fought against the seemingly inevitable. Murray Armstrong finally put the Americans ahead late in the second period and Tommy Anderson and Hooley Smith completed the humiliation in the third.

GAME AWARDED TO VERDUN LEAFS BY OFFICIALS

Montreal Concordias, However, Allowed to Remain in the Playoffs

ROYALS EVEN SERIES

Cornwall Flyers Defeated in Second Game of Series by 2-1

Montreal, March 4 — (CP) — Montreal Concordia and Verdun Maple Leafs will renew their Quebec senior hockey league rivalry tonight with a sellout crowd assured for the second of their best-of-five games semi-final playoff.

Leafs, awarded the opening game of the series 4-2 when Concordia quit the ice in protest over a goal they thought was offside, will find determined opposition in their city hall rivals for the civics are out to make amends.

Winners of the series will meet either Cornwall Flyers or Montreal Royals to decide a league champion and the odds today are that it will be Royals. Flyers upset last season's Allan Cup finalists 2-1 in the first game of their series but Royals came back yesterday with a smashing 7-4 victory to establish themselves as favorites for the title.

Meantime, Quebec's other senior circuit, the provincial league, wound up its regular activities as Verdun Bulldogs edged out the Olympics 5-4 in Boston on Jean Louis Bourcier's goal in the last minute of play.

Six Teams in Playoffs

Playoffs in this league, with six teams seeking the title, will start Tuesday with Valleyfield meeting Sherbrooke in the first of a best-of-five semi-final round. Boston and Verdun and Lachine and St. Hyacinthe will start best-of-three games quarter-final rounds Wednesday.

Royals took a period to get warmed up against Flyers, slim Buddy O'Connor getting the only goal of the opening session, but they rattled five goals into the Cornwall net in the middle stanza and increased their lead to 7-0 at the start of the third before the Ontario team found its feet.

Flyers waged a spirited rally but four goals were all they could get and Royals coasted in to an easy victory. The series will continue here Wednesday night.

Lou Salica Favored To Win Bantamweight Crown From Pace

Toronto, March 4 (CP)—According to the prophecy of most Canadian champions past and present now resident here Georgie Pace, Cleveland's world bantamweight champion, will be crownless tonight after going 15 rounds or less, with Lou Salica, challenger from New York.

Promoter Jack Corcoran expects a crowd of more than 10,000 will pay some $20,000 to watch the chocolate soldier defend his title. Majority of them favor Pace, frequent headliner here and the negro reigns favorite at 6-5.

However, such ringmen as Horace "Lefty" Gwynne, Canadian bantamweight champion, Baby Yack, former bantam champ and Frenchy Belanger, once great flyweight king, are among the fistic elite going out on the limb for Salica, who held the championship in 1935.

"I just watched Salica doing his stuff in the gym," said Gwynne, "and I'll take him any day to pin back the ears of Pace or anyone with his style. Louis is a fast, clever boxer and has a punch. I have seen him in several fights and he was too much of everything plus experience for Pace. We'll have a new world champion when this is over."

Comment of the others followed a similar vein.

"I think I can take him," said Pace as he wound up training. He's supposed to be fast and clever but I've caught up with that kind before. A few solid clouts will bring him around to my speed and I never met a man yet I couldn't hit."

If it was possible for anyone to be more confident than the Clevelander then Salica was.

"Why that guy has never gone 15 rounds yet," Salica chirped. "Then too he's little more than a counter-puncher. A good boxer can always lick that type. There won't be any doubt about who is champion after tonight."

SEABISCUIT, THE WINNER

C. S. Howard's celebrated Seabiscuit, winner of the sixth running of the Santa Anita Handicap at Los Angeles on Saturday and a purse of $100,000. Kayak 2nd chased the winner under the wire, while Wichcee, a Canadian-owned horse was third. Jockie Johnnie Pollard of Edmonton, was astride Seabiscuit.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

Clearwater, Fla., March 4 (AP)—For the first time in the club's history Brooklyn Dodgers started charging admission to intra-squad practice manoeuvres today, showing President Leland Stanford MacPhail still is figuring the angels. To give the customers a ride for their money the Dodgers will stage a nine-inning game today.

Anaheim, Calif.—It looks like that $25,000 Connie Mack paid Memphis last fall for pitcher Herman Besse may pay dividends for Philadelphia Athletics this season. Besse pitched hitless ball for three innings yesterday as the A's trounced Seattle of the Pacific Coast League 6-3 in the first exhibition game of 1940.

Lakeland, Fla—Detroit Tigers have that familiar look now. Pete Fox is on the job. "Old reliable" arrived yesterday to start his eighth season.

San Bernardino, Calif.—A seven-inning practice game by teams selected from the ranks of Pittsburgh saw only one extra-base hit—a triple by rookie Frank Gustine. Pitchers Johnny Gee, Ken Heintzelman and Oadis Swigart each gave up two hits, But Johnny Lanning and Ray Harrell allowed none.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—While the holdout status of Joe Medwick has received a lot of public attention, there's another heavy slugger St. Louis Cardinals probably are beginning to worry about. He's catcher Don Padgett, about whom nothing has been mentioned by the management. Medwick will meet with Branch Rickey tomorrow in an attempt at conciliation.

Avalon, Calif.—The hottest battle in Chicago cubs' camp is for the shortstop berth. The veteran Billy Rogell, obtained from Detroit in a deal for Dick Bartell, is vying with Bobby Mattick, Leonard Merullo and Bob Sturgeon, all youngsters.

BRIER BONSPIEL OPENS AT 'PEG

Ontario Champions Meet British Columbia in the First Game

Winnipeg, March 4 — (CP) — Championship classic of Canadian curling, the 14th annual Macdonald Brier Bonspiel opens here this afternoon with Bert Hall's great Kitchener rink defending for Ontario the coveted Brier tankard won last year in Toronto. The bonspiel gets underway at 3:30 p.m. EST.

Challengers chosen in elimination events represent each of the other eight provinces and a Kirkland Lake quartet, representing Northern Ontario, rounds out the bonspiel roster of 10 rinks—a galaxy of 40 star curlers.

Each rink meets each other rink once in the round-robin, total wins to decide the championship and custody for another year of the Brier tankard. This is the first year the competition has been played outside Toronto where it was inaugurated in 1927. Today's program has afternoon and evening draws.

Hall's Ontario champions, contesting the Brier for a third consecutive year, meet Bill Finlay's British Columbians from Vancouver this afternoon in the first round. Cliff Manahan of Edmonton, Brier champion in 1933 and '37, engages New Brunswick, represented by Nick Thibodeau's Bathhurst four. Another former champion, Howard Wood of Winnipeg, tackles Bill Dunbar's Saskatchewan rink from Kinley.

Other pairings bring 70-year-old Col. Archie Bell from Quebec City against S. S. Rafuse of Bridgewater, N.S., and Jim Davis' Kirkland Lake rink against Prince Edward Island, skipped by Rankine McLaine of Charlottetown.

The winner of the Coca-Cola contest was won by Hit-Miss mixed team; Men's League was won by the Deacon Sport Wear with 3827; Ladies' high single, Miss M. Fairbairn with 334; Gents' high single, Art Whalen with 334.

Each one of the winners will receive a case of Coca Cola.

SEABISCUIT WINS $100,000 STAKE

Seven-Year-Old Becomes Greatest Money Winner of All Times

Los Angeles, March 4 (AP)—Seabiscuit, winner of the 1940 Santa Anita Handicap and new money making champion of the United States turf may try for new victories.

It depends on his owner, Charles S. Howard, San Fransisco sportsman. The decision will be made this week. The general belief is that Seabiscuit, seven years old and still going strong, will continue to gallop in the quest of gold and glory.

His smashing comeback victory in Saturday's $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap lifted Seabiscuit into the hall of racing fame alongside his famed grandfather, Man O' War.

With his one length triumph in the 1940 renewal of the country's richest stake, Seabiscuit won $86,650. It put his total earnings at $437,730. The former all-time record, set by W. S. Kilmer's Sun Beau in 1931, was $376,744.

Seabiscuit and his stablemate, the South American black named Kayak II, finished one-two in a roaring drama of the turf that had the assembled thousands cheering hysterically. Whichcee, owned by Major Austin Taylor of Vancouver, ran third and an outsider, Wedding Call, fourth.

The time for the mile and a quarter was 2:01 1-5, a new track record. Kayak II held the old mark, 2:01 2-5, set last year winning the same clasic.

THOROUGHBREDS DIE IN STALLS

Fire Sweeps Main Stables of Bowie Race Track Early Today

Bowie, Md., March 4 (AP)— Five racing thoroughbreds died in their stalls early today and 54 others were driven to safety with pitchforks as fire swept the main stables of the Bowie race track.

The blaze roared through five large frame stables, the trainers' kitchen and the track blacksmith shop. One hundred and eighty-four stalls were destroyed.

Preliminary estimates of damage ranged around $50,000.

The five horses burned were Eudes, I. Betsy and Lau Tautrie, owned by J. J. Martin, and Steemup and an unidentified two-year old owned by K. D. Kolseth.

PETERBOROUGH GIRL CAGERS DEFEAT LOCALS

'Orfuns' Enjoy 28 Point Lead for Return Game in L.O.B.A. Playdowns

SCORE IS 40-12

Local Girls Handicapped for Want of Competition During Season

Showing too much class around the baskets, the Peterborough "Orfuns" downed the Belleville "Y" lassies 40 to 12 here on Saturday night in the first district L.O.B.A. playdowns. In victory the Liftlock City feminine cagers enjoy a 28-point lead for the return game of the series to be played in Peterboro next Saturday.

The visitors launched an early-game attack, that netted them a substantial 17 to 4 lead at the halfway mark and continued to outscore the Belleville girls 23 to 8 in the final session. The "Orfuns" had the advantage of a full season's schedule of play, while the Belleville girls remained idle, as they drew a bye into the L.O.B.A. playdowns.

Marion Maclean and Peg Rowbotham led the locals on the attack, while Bet Blade, Ruth Thompson and A. Craig carried the offence for the Peterboro girls.

Cleveland and Syracuse Have Not Lost a Game to Philadelphia or Pittsburg This Season

By the Canadian Press

It would be a happy day for Cleveland Barons and Syracuse Stars if they could get Philadelphia Ramblers and Pittsburgh Hornets respectively for permanent opposition in the International-American Hockey League.

The Barons haven't lost a game this season to the Ramblers and the Stars hold a similar record against the Hornets. Both teams kept their record intact in week-end games, Cleveland beating Philadelphia 3-2 and Syracuse winning 4-2 from Pittsburgh in two of last night's four games.

In other contests last night New Haven Eagles edged out Hershey Bears 6-5 and Providence Reds whipped Springfield Indians 4-1. Springfield beat New Haven 4-3 Saturday night and Hershey downed Cleveland 3-2.

Charlie Mason scored two goals and Don Deacon one in the Barons victory last night, with Levinsky and Smith getting the Rambler points. The victory put Cleveland into a second place tie in the western division with the Hornets.

Eddie Convey and Bennett divided the goals in the Syracuse victory while little Billy Taylor and Babe Tapin scored for Pittsburgh.

As Belleville is very much in the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association picture today it might be of interest of the fans to review the progress of this growing organization. Seeing the need of the organization and sponsorship of hockey among the boys under 18 years of age, Dr. R. W. Matchett, Hamilton and J. H. Stafford, Toronto, conceived the idea of a provincial hockey organization for boys below the junior age. The professional clubs were making strong inroads among the Dominion's junior clubs, all of which was taken into consideration by the originators of the O.J.H.A., namely to organize amateur hockey below the junior classification. Five years ago there were but five juvenile teams in the O.J.H.A., today we find the association boasting of 78 teams and yearly new leagues are flocking to the colors, as individual clubs sponsors are beginning to realize that the true spirit of amateur hockey is found in this organization. Tonight at the Hume Arena the Belleville juveniles enter the second round of the O.J.H.A. versus Regiopolis College of Kingston with goals to count on the round. These kids play a scrappy brand of hockey and the fans can be assured the boys are giving their all.

Do you remember when sports editor and columnist of the Toronto Daily Star, Lou E. Marsh, died four years ago today after a brief illness? Noted as a boxing and hockey referee and an authority on most sports, Marsh was 58 years old when he died. He had joined the staff of The Star when he was twelve. That was the same night the Belleville Redmen played the Whitby Red Wings in the O.H.A. playdowns and were eventually eliminated by the Whitby sextette. All of which reminds us that this year's edition of the Belleville Redmen set a record never before known in Belleville's intermediate O. H. A. circles. The locals failed to win a single O.H.A. game, a record we hope will never be forced on Belleville fans again.

Refereeing hockey games in the National Hockey league is a much tougher and more trying business than playing the game, declares Frank "King" Clancy, former defence ace of Ottawa Senators and Toronto Maple Leafs and holder of the defence players' scoring record in the major league.

"When you're playing," declared Clancy, "there's 15 on your team and you can relax when you get to the bench or even when the play is at the other end of the rink. But when you're refereeing, you have got to be on your toes every second and you've got to be thinking. You don't have time to sit back and decide whether a certain play was a foul; you must call it without a second's hesitation."

"Marse Joe" McCarthy, manager of the world champion New York Yankees, thinks he has a real tough job on his hands during the Yanks' training season in Florida. McCarthy headed south last week saying he had "a tough job ahead of him to pick the best talent from the FIVE rookies coming up from the Yankee farms." Other major league managers haven't even five good players with which to commence spring training, so why all of McCarthy's worries? Incidentally he predicts his Yankees will win their fifth straight American League pennant this year, to which the experts aren't altogether assured. There is a feeling that the world champions are due for a slump and a crack-up.

The Cincinnati baseball club may have two McCormicks in the line-up this year. Myron McCormick, an outfielder up from Indianapolis, looks good. He's a six-footer, almost as big as Frank, the first baseman. Myron was born in California, Frank in New York.

Showing a complete reversal of form Pete Beach's Albert College senior interscholastic pucksters, not only defeated Norwood High 3-0, but overcame a two-goal lead and won the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. hockey championship and the round by a 9-8 score. "Des" Partridge had a goal and two assists, Alf Moulden bagged the winning counter and added an assist while "Lefty" Lougheed scored the other counter. Tony Christian, Albert's goalie who turned in a mediocre effort in the first game here when Norwood won 8-6; was sensational on Saturday in the return game that saw Albert blank the "northerners." The Norwood fans take their hockey seriously, the fans swarming the Norwood rink when a free-for-all fight broke out, but the Albert kids gave a good fistic account of themselves, proving they can battle in any field. Coach Beach's group champions now meet Oshawa Collegiate in the C.O.S.S.A. semi-finals.

Josh Maracle, veteran sports mentor down around Point Anne, has operated a three-teamed puck league in the cement village this season. Josh thinks highly of his Ox Point pucksters, so-much-so that he challenged any and all Belleville hockey squads to a game here Tuesday night. His challenge was promptly accepted and a team composed of players who will be over-age from the local junior squad, coupled with a few members of the Redmen, will meet Josh's sextette Tuesday night.

SPORT SPICE — With a Canadian jockey astride, Seabiscuit became the greatest money winning horse of all time when C. S. Howard's mighty runner won the sixth running of the Santa Anita handicap Saturday. . . . Jockey Johnnie Pollard rode a great race, but to "the 'Biscuit's" stablemate, Kayak 2nd, goes top honors as Kayak came from last place to finish a second, while the Canadian owned Whichcee was third. Over 75,000 saw the race. . . . Les Canadiens will have to win the most of their remaining games while the Americans would have to lose all of their N.H.L. contests to have the Frenchmen finish in the Stanley Cup series. . . . New Yorkers are still of the opinion that Montreal is a good hockey team, but it hasn't seen a winning combination in so long they've forgotten all about the palmy days of Joliat, Vezina et al. . . . Ebbie Goodfellow's brother died in the Ottawa hospital over the week-end at 28 years of age.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Married and in Love"

Making a strong presentation of a modern matrimonial dilemma, "Married and in Love," showing at the McCarthy Theatre, brings to the screen three proven film favorites and a new discovery, comprising its quartette of featured players.

Alan Marshal, Helen Vinson and Patric Knowles are the trio, and the newcomer is Barbara Read, a talented youngster playing her first leading-role and playing it very well indeed.

The story concerns the lives of two couples, a doctor and his middle-western wife, and a woman novelist and her wealthy husband. The doctor and the novelist were engaged in their college days, but the latter broke her engagement abruptly and married her rich admirer instead.

When the novelist and the doctor meet some ten years afterward the woman has realised her mistake and selfishly decided to make the doctor run away with her, abandoning his loyal spouse. The results are both dramatic and suspenseful, and come to a climax in the doctor's apartment when his wife suddenly learns what is going on and takes clever steps to alter the situation.

Miss Read proves herself a real find, giving a convincing performance as the unsuspecting wife, and Marshal is excellent as the doctor. Miss Vinson as the other woman and Knowles as her bored but well-intentioned husband turn in just as brilliant portrayals. The compact drama of the story is greatly heightened by confining its telling to just these four principals.

John Farrow's direction of the S. K. Lauren screen play, and Robert Sisk's production for RKO Radio both round out a well-handled and thoroughly interesting film.

Fox Movietone News

Important happenings described by Lowell Thomas are shown in the new issue of "Fox Movietone News," also now on the McCarthy Theatre program with "Married and in Love," and also an excellent all-star comedy and "Submarine Circus," a new R.K.O. Radio short featurette novelty.

Fashion Show on Stage

At the McCarthy Theatre this week in addition to the above screen program, you are invited to attend the Spring Fashion Show which is a stage presentation under the auspices of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary and will feature dresses, coats, sportswear and blouses by J. A. McNabb, Ltd., millinery by Miss Campbell, furs by Ashley Furs, jewellery by Angus McFee, handbags by McIntosh Brothers and hairdressing by Cole Hair Dressing Parlor, Cummings' Beauty Parlor, Mayfair Beauty Salon; also Helena Rubinstein make-up by Lattimer's Drug Store.

AT THE BELLE.

"THE LIGHT THAT FAILED"

Said an important critic of English letters of Rudyard Kipling's works some years ago, "The Freshness of the invention, the variety of character, the vigour of narrative, the raciness of dialogue, the magic of atmosphere, were alike remarkable."

The same authoritative opinion goes for the motion picture treatment of his most famous novel, "The Light That Failed", starring Ronald Colman, which is now on the Belle screen.

Here you have all the vigor of Kipling's bass voice when he's speaking of battle; all the tenderness of the master when he speaks of young love; the gay color, of which he was probably the mastorian scene, be it the London of the nineties, or the far-flung battle lines of the Empire—brought to life by the motion picture camera.

"The Light That Failed", is an important and big picture.

It tells the story of Dick Heldar, artist and soldier-of-fortune, who saves the life of one, Torpenhow, war correspondent, during an engagement between the British and the Fuzzy-Wuzzies, savage warriors of the Sudan. The men become friends, and upon their return to London, Heldar becomes the sensation of the art world. At the crest of his fame he meets the girl whom he loved as a child. Heldar asks her to keep a promise made many years before, and, marry him. She, too, is an artist, but not a success. Perhaps because of jealousy of Heldar's fame, she is cool to him.

In a fit of desperation he undertakes to show her how to paint. For his effort he picks a portrait of a woman, to be called "Melancholia," upon which he proposes to depict all the tragedy to which the human animal is subject. For his model he picks a guttersnipe named Bessie, who nurses a secret grudge against him for breaking up what she fancied was a romance between herself and Torpenhow.

An old wound suffered in battle begins to affect Heldar's vision. A visit to a doctor confirms his worst fears—he has only a couple of weeks left before he goes completely blind. He sets to work madly to complete his portrait before the lights go out. It is to be his revenge on the girl he once loved, and his monument. Blindness overtakes him just as he completes the picture.

It is then that the street waif, Bessie, takes her revenge upon him by completely destroying the painting. His friends refuse to tell him about it, and he goes on.... thinking that his painting has rocked the London Art world to its foundation.

When he discovers that his picture has been ruined, the brilliant climax of the picture is reached—a climax which is one of the most striking and gripping ever recorded by a motion picture camera.

The role of Heldar is played by Colman, while Walter Huston does Torpenhow. Both performances are masterful. The childhood sweetheart is portrayed by Muriel Angelus, a member of Paramount's "Golden Circle" of young players. It's her first, and an auspicious beginning for a career which should carry her far. The guttersnipe, Bessie, is played by Ida Lupino and it is not only the best performance of her career but one of the finest emotional portrayals ever filmed as well. Dudley Digges has an important supporting role and performs with his usual skill and artistry.

And to William A. Wellman who directed this masterpiece, a bouquet of orchids. He not only makes the Kipling spirit crackle and sparkle but he makes of "The Light That Failed", a great motion picture document which it is the business of every motion picture fan to see. Adventure has seldom been as honestly portrayed and romance has never been more brilliantly handled.

A funny interesting newsreel, and a funny cartoon "Little Lambkin" precede the feature attraction.

AT THE CAPITOL

"ROSE MARIE"

Belleville will thrill anew to the special return showing of "Rose Marie." New audiences will hear its haunting melodies for the first time. Remember this will be the last opportunity for all to see this spectacular romance now showing at the Capitol.

By special arrangements with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios the management of the Capitol Theatre is privileged to present a limited engagement of America's singing sweethearts Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in the colorful musical romance "Rose Marie."

For your added entertainment the Capitol will also show a picture which combines the elements of comedy and mystery as they are seldom found together in a motion picture. It's Paramount's "Death of a Champion," which brings to the screen for the first time a character already well-known to mystery fans—"the human encyclopedia," "Oliver Quade." None other than Lynne Overman— who did such a grand job in "Union Pacific"—brings this unique personality to life on the screen. The supporting cast boasts of such capable players as Virginia Dale, Joseph Allen, Jr., Donald O'Connor, Susan Paley and Robert Paige. To get down to the story, it finds Overman and his helper, O'Connor, vending encyclopedias at a society dog show when a champion Great Dane, owned by an eccentric millionaire, dies mysteriously. In quick succession, three persons who might know why the dog was done away with, are murdered. Allen, ex-fiance of Miss Paley, grand-daughter of the millionaire, who has shifted her affections to Robert Paige, promoter of the show, is accused of murder on the ground that he made a wager with Miss Paley that his dog would win over her grandfather's. Overman becomes involved in the solution of the crimes because of Donald's penchant for deduction, and in a whirlwind climax solves 'em all, reunites Miss Paley and Allen, and wins the affections of Miss Dale, the millionaire's nurse.

R. E. HENDERSON, PRESIDENT

Choose your own payment schedule

Find the loan you need in the table. Then read across, picking out the monthly payment which you can conveniently make. Note that you may make small payments if you wish. Or you may pay larger instalments and pay up sooner. Note, also, how little your loan costs if repaid in a short time. Charges on a $100 loan, for instance, repaid in four monthly instalments, are only $5.04. (In all cases payments shown in the table include all charges. There is nothing more to pay.)

Simple to borrow

All you do is fill in and return the coupon below. We then send a representative to your home. You need no stocks, bonds or endorsers. No credit inquiries are made of friends, employers or relatives, and you don't have to ask friends or fellow-workers to sign the loan papers with you. You get your loan promptly, without red tape or embarrassment.

If a loan can help you, send the coupon for more information about this new service now. You will be under no obligation to borrow.

LOOK, MR. LEWIS ! !

John L. Lewis, president of the C.I.O., should get a big kick out of this photo showing U.S. vice-president John Nance Garner drinking a glass of milk. Yes, milk, for wasn't it Mr. Lewis who referred to Mr. Garner as a "whiskey drinking old man" several months back?

Ida Lupino, portraying Bessie, the befriended and befuddled street gamin in Rudyard Kipling's "The Light That Failed," a thrilling love story that you'll long remember, featuring Ronald Coleman, Walter Huston and Muriel Angelus, now on the Belle screen.

Dr. and Mrs. Hess of Hastings, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stillman Terrill recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry McColl and baby have been spending a few days with Rev. and Mrs. F. A. Lawson in Toronto.

Mr. Percy Gooding spent a few days in Toronto with relatives.

Mrs. Ken Gotsell has moved in Mr. Francis Stacey's house.

Miss A. Milligan of Toronto, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Stillman Terrill.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Stewart of Mountain View, are spending a few days with Mr. K. Maybee.

At the Jasmine Club room on Friday evening, there was a splendid attendance. Miss Helen Bently, the president conducted the business part and Miss Lockie presented a delightful program. Refreshments were served by Miss Hazel McMasters.

Mrs. W. W. McColl entertained a number of ladies at her home recently.

The Junior Hockey team held a dance in the town hall on Wednesday night.

Mr. E. A. Bell is quite ill with flu.

Friends of this community were sorry to hear of the sudden passing of Mr. Nelson W. Osterhout, at his home in Brockport, N. Y., which took place on Sunday, Feb. 25th. Mr. Osterhout, better known as (Nels) was born in this vicinity, December 18th, 1856. For years he conducted a successful shoe making and repairing business. He married Mrs. Melissia Hamlin in the year of 1898, and in 1900 they moved to Brockport, where he continued the shoe business. He leaves to mourn, his widow and a step-daughter, Mrs. Milton Ellis (Maude), also a step-son, Mr. Dan Hamlin; and ten grandchildren.

Little Benny's Note Book

My birthday is coming next month and it comes the same date as Sid Hunt's birthday and we give each other a present, only last year I got stung on account of giving him a openwork bag with 12 fancy marbles in it and him only giving me 2 pencils held together with a rubber band around them, so this year I decided not to get stung again so this afternoon I said to him, Hay Sid, how about us not giving each other any birthday present this year? People dont give each other presents as much as they used to, anyways, it's getting old fashion, I said.

Okay, I was going ,to get you a swell falts nose with eyeglasses and a mustash and funny teeth all attached to it, but okay, Sid said.

Sounding like a perfect present, and I said, O well, all right, if you've got it all picked out in your mind already we might as well do it.

Well what are you going to get me? Sid said, and I said, Something swell, I'm going to surprise you.

Nothing doing, then I'll surprise you too, Sid said. I'll get the falts nose for myself and surprise you with something elts, he said.

All right, I'll tell you, I said. And I thought fast, saying, I'm going to get you one of those trick plate pushers that you shove under peoples plates at the table before they sit down, and they've got a rubber hose and a squeezer attached to them, and you squeeze the squeezer and it makes the plate bob up and down. Only we've got to hand each other our presents at the same time so there cant be any mistake, I said, and he said, Okay, happy birthday in advants.

The same to you, I said, and just then some more of the fellows came up and we started a game of G-men and rackateers.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 4—(CP)—Golds showed a slight gain today on Toronto Exchange. Other groups were mostly quiet. In the quiet action only 91,000 shares changed hands.

Central Patricia Bidgood-Kirkland, Naybob and Malartic Gold Fields ruled stronger and prices were lower for Preston, East Malartic and Madsen. In the base metal group Waite-Amulet and Nickel had minor gains to off-set small losses for Pend Oreille and Smelters.

Utilities, Steels and Foods and miscellaneous issues showed weakness. C.P.R. sold at 7 1-2, its best price of the year, Walkers Common added 1-2 and Ford A advanced 1-4 to 20 3-4.

Western Oils were dull with Okalta 4 cents up at 1.17 and Home Oil unchanged at 2.58.

WALL STREET

New York, March 4 — (AP)— Steels put on a mild rally in today's stock market and brought support to other recently wavering divisions. Fractional advances were in the majority near the fourth hour.

Bonds and commodities edged forward after early irregularity.

Among stocks inclined to revive were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, U.S. Rubber, Anaconda, Kennecott, Allied Chemical, Standard Oil of N.J., Douglas Aircraft and Glenn Martin.

Canadian issues were neglected. Lake Shores inched back while Canadian Pacific and Distillers Seagram held unchanged. Canada 4s, in the bond market, gained 1-4 point.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, March 4 (CP)—Cattle trade was fairly active on the Toronto livestock market up to mid-session today. Butcher steers and heifers were steady and cows firm to 25 cents higher. The lamb division was a little stronger. No price was established for hogs. Veal calves were slightly easier than last week's close. The cattle holdover was 140 head.

Butter, Churning Cream Move Higher

Toronto, March 4—Increased activity pushed butter prices still higher, which advance was reflected by churning cream on the Toronto open produce market Saturday. Graded eggs ended the week with a firmer market.

Behind the buoyant tone of last week's butter market was the fact that purchasing seemed to have been more active than for several weeks past, while selling pressure by weak holders apparently had dried up and offerings were not as heavy. According to the Canadian Commodity Exchange, the statistical position of the market is unchanged. Final report on cold storage holdings due about the tenth of the month is expected to be more unfavorable in view of the fact that there were no exports during February, against substantial shipments in the same month of last year. Saturday, Ontario creamery solids traded at 27c for No. 1 grades. Prints increased in sympathy with solids, top grades moving through retail channels at 27 3-4c to 28 1-2c per pound. Buyers advanced churning cream to the range of 26c to 27c for No. 1 grade, on truck country points.

Good demand strengthened prices on the three top grades in the graded division of the egg market. Government inspected lots of these grades commanded a 1-2 cent per dozen premium on prices quoted. The retail section maintained previous levels.

Breaking Down of 150 lb. Hot Weight Carcass

Last week the article dealt with the butchering of a 200 lb. hog. This week we shall start with the 150 lb. hot weight carcass, and break it down into Wiltshire Sides and the by-products.

The average shrink from hot to cold weight, of 3½ per cent, reduces the 150 lb. carcass to 144.75, which, when cut into Wiltshire sides, yields the following products:

(Extracts from Bulletin No. 2)

Products:	Percentage of 144.75 lb.	Pounds Weight
Wiltshire yield	79.44	115.00
Head	5.95	8.62
Tenderloin	.85	1.23
Leaf Lard	2.60	3.77

ITALY SENDS STRONG PROTEST

Italy's protest yesterday was accompanied by the newspaper attack of Robert Farinacci, Fascist Grand Council member. He called the British blockade "reaction of our refusal to sell arms to England" and charged that Britain "hopes to oblige our country to buy coal from Welsh mines."

Announced Weeks Before.

British authorities were said to have pointed out that the coal blockade was announced many weeks before the Rome-London trade negotiations were suspended.

They were said to have been interrupted because of Italy's desire to buy coal with agricultural products instead of with products of her heavy industry.

Italy objected to Britain's blockade of German imports as well as exports.

Control of German-bound ships, she contended, require "onerous and excessive documentation not compatible with normal secrecy of commercial dealings. The re-routing of ships in control ports with delay frequently prolonged for days and weeks, causing very serious damage to equipment, to regularity of service and to carrying on of traffic and frequently paralyzing the supply of goods to non-belligerent countries with immediate and direct repercussions on industry and labor."

She took exception to the blockade of German exports because it "profoundly disturbs the mechanism of international exchange, suppresses sources of supply and reduces the possibilities of production of non-belligerent states."

Contents of Note.

The note said that the Fascist government particularly protested against the "illegitimacy and gravity" of Britain's coal blockade.

"The British government," it said, "knows that the coal in question meets an indispensable need in the life and labor of the Italian people."

Stating that the blockade "is of the kind to disturb and compromise economic and political relations established between Italy and Great Britain by the agreements of April 16, 1938," it added:

"The Fascist government, while renewing its formal protest, intends to mark from this moment data and factual elements of the situation with regard to responsibility inherent in the future development of same."

Whatever Britain's motives are in blockading German exports, the note said, "they could in nowise make legitimate the diminution of the rights of non-belligerent powers."

The Italian government referred to the present note as a renewal of a "protest and reserves already made against the principles involved in the British government's disposition economic war and for the ways in which these are applied to non-belligerent states."

Sails With Coal

Rotterdam, March 4—(AP)—The Italian Collier Orata sailed for Italy today with a cargo of German coal.

Some sources had reported yesterday that Great Britain would permit 16 Italian ships in port here to pass the Allied sea blockade with German coal shipments to Italy.

(The Rome government has protested the blockade to Britain. Five other Italian—vessels were understood to be preparing to leave today. Four sailed last Friday but returned here. British authorities, it was understood in some sources, agreed to exempt from possible seizure those ships which were loading coal when the blockade order went into effect.

Meets Cool Reception

London, March 4—(CP) — Foreign office circles indicated today Italy's protest against Britain's stoppage of German coal shipments would meet a cool reception here.

The Italian protest, against blockading German coal bound by sea to Italy, contained a statement that the British measure might "disturb and compromise" Italian-British political and commercial relations.

"It cannot be assumed that we can waive rights and international interests which are maintained under international law," one British source said.

It was reported in authoritative quarters that "the most rapid and careful consideration" would be given the Italian note, and that an effort would be made "to be as accommodating as possible."

At the same time, these sources said, it would be unwise to believe that Britain would retreat from her original position in view of "unrestricted warfare by Germany against the Allies and neutrals."

Decreed Last November

They pointed out the British blockade was decreed last November, but was not applied to German coal shipments to Italy until last Friday.

The foreign office said that although no negotiations were in progress now for a new Anglo-Italian financial and commercial agreement, the British committee still is in Rome.

"Talks may begin at any time," an official spokesman said. "They have not broken down, but merely have been discontinued."

Foreign office sources disclaimed knowledge of a British protest to the Italian government concerning the reception of the fascist press to the note announcing the coal embargo. A British counter-protest was reported unofficially in Rome.

LONDON PAPERS SUGGEST CHANGES

"The paper asked if the nation was being served as we should be by the higher command of the Royal Air Force," it said "and whether these posts should not be filled with younger officers familiar with up to date machines and strategy and tactics appropriate to their use."

The Times also forecast changes in high places.

"New situations," it said, "are expected in time—perhaps no long time—and as in the past will without doubt demand new methods and men.

Must Survive Test or Go

"In this country, for the first six months, power has been in the hands of a cabinet admittedly experimental and transitional in composition. No prospect of the coming months can exclude the certainty that it will in time undergo further changes in plan and personnel, adapting it ever more closely to the imperious requirements of war."

The Mail said "men who don't survive the test of real war must go," and "we believe Mr. Chamberlain will discover before long that he can very usefully replace some of his ministers, both great and small."

It suggested that there might be necessity "very soon" to review some of the appointments of former War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha.

The Domala, towed to an undisclosed port after bombs had set her afire and shattered her bridge, was the first big British passenger ship victim of German warplanes.

Of 301 persons aboard, 20 Britons and 88 Indian sailors were feared lost. The Domala carried 253 Lascars being repatriated from internment in German ports. She sailed from Antwerp, Belgium.

Many were said to have been killed in their bunks when the plane dived and swept the ship's decks with machine-gun bullets.

Nine Britons and 42 Indians were rescued by a Netherlands ship and landed at a south coast English port. The others were rescued by British ships.

Carried Navigation Lights

One eye-witness said the bomber carried full navigation lights, and the Domala's crew mistook it for a British plane until it dropped to 40 feet above the ship and released the first bomb. The Admiralty said four bombs were dropped, and three scored hits.

"We were blazing from stem to stern in 20 minutes," the eye-witness said. "After the first bomb, the plane sprayed the deck with machine-guns."

Another survivor said the passenger and crew were attacked after they fled the ship.

"I was in a small lifeboat with 15 others," he said. "Every few seconds the plane dived and poured lead into our sides.

Jumped Into Water

"After the third raid, I jumped into the water and crawled on a raft. It contained a dead Lascar, his body riddled with bullets. Five minutes later, I saw the lifeboat sink with my dead comrades."

Many of the survivors were injured, and several died of exposure.

The sinking of an unidentified British vessel was reported at Amsterdam yesterday when two Netherlands ships, the 2,248-ton Sint Annaland and the 2,249-ton Schieland, reached port.

Their crews said they took cover and escaped bullets from a warplane, but that they saw it bomb and sink the British ship.

The British steamship Albano, 1,176 tons, sank in the North Sea yesterday after striking a mine which, survivors said, lifted the ship from the water. Two persons were killed.

The Netherlands freighter Limburg, 345 tons, was said to have been raked with machine-gun fire at sea by a German plane.

Two crewmen were killed when the 710-ton British steamship Cato, also believed to have struck a mine, sank off the west coast. There still were eleven missing.

The Royal Air Force during the week-end accounted for three German airplanes but lost one bomber when by mistake three R.A.F. fighters shot it down. They mistook it for a German bomber.

The Admiralty recalled to active service five veteran naval officers, all of whom carry the rank of Admiral of the Fleet, the highest in the navy.

They are Sir Henry Oliver, Sir Osmond Brock, Sir Roger Keyes, Sir Frederick Field and Sir Reginald Tyrwhitt. It was indicated that they probably would not be asked to go to sea, because of their advanced ages, but that shore positions of importance are open to them.

Of the five perhaps Sir Roger Keyes is best known to the landsman. An active member of parliament for many years and a forceful speaker inside the House of Commons and on the political platform, he won fame in 1918 for his famous St. George's day raid on Zeebrugge and Ostend, Belgian ports held then by Germany.

Ice Breakers Work Up St. Lawrence

Montreal, March 4 (CP) — Ice-breakers N. B. McLean and Lady Grey, working up the St. Lawrence from Three Rivers, are expected to reach Montreal about March 17 if their present schedule is maintained, officials said today.

Ice encountered on the river has averaged about 10 inches thinner than last year when the ships reached Montreal near the end of March, officials said. Both ships are expected to reach Sorel Wednesday.

FINNS REPEL DRIVES AIMED

4 Russian Planes Downed

The communique said Russian war planes had been active yesterday, supporting ground troops on the Isthmus and bombing areas behind the front. Lappeenranta, about 30 miles northwest of Viipuri, was described as hardest hit.

The Finns said that so far as could be ascertained there had been no civilian casualties, and announced that four Russian planes had been shot down.

Yesterday the high command announced 1,000 Russians had been slain at Kollaa, northeast of Lake Ladoga, where their attacks were repulsed by artillery fire.

1,000 of Enemy Killed

One thousand of the enemy were reported killed at Kollaa, where patrol activity and artillery fire repulsed waves of Russian infantry supported by tanks, propellered sleds and other motorized equipment.

On other fronts, where savage fighting was said still to be in progress, the Finnish communique yesterday reported gains on the eastern side of the Karelian Isthmus—where the Russian invaders have failed to dent the Mannerheim line—and at Kuhmo and Salla on the eastern front.

Where the Karelian Isthmus defence lines are intact, well-timed artillery fire was reported to have inflicted heavy losses on the enemy lines.

Several Russian Points Taken

Several of the enemy's strong points were said to have been seized after Red army sallies failed in the eastern front sectors.

The fighting for Viipuri, western terminus of the Mannerheim defences, involved Finnish withdrawls to new positions, but Russian attacks were repulsed generally, according to the Finnish high command. The Finnish contention, since the bloody Russian drive for Viipuri started Feb. 1, has been that each inch of lost ground has been won by the Russians at disastrous cost.

The Finnish communique said Red army planes had made widespread air raids over southern Finland, and that counter aerial attacks had taken heavy toll on Soviet columns and communications lines. Seventeen Russian planes were said to have been shot down; eight Finnish civilians killed and 10 others wounded.

TONY

— BY ELIZABETH VERNON —

CHAPTER XVIII

The wind raged. It shook the house, wrenched at the windows and for a moment died away. That moment was very still. The curtains of the bed swayed a little in the draught. The shadows moved in the corners, flickering with the light of the fire. Somewhere the old paneling cracked sharply. Then once more the wind was howling, flinging the snow against the windows.

Tony glanced round. Fear of the dark—that legacy of an unhappy childhood—had never left her. And now in this strange bedroom it held her rigid.

The snow, whirling on the wings of this storm, had made it impossible for her to return home. Or so Alan and Roberts had said. She had tried to telephone to Oaken, but the line was down. Then at the thought that Jacky would be frightened, she announced her intention of making her way through the blizzard. Alan, however, had given his orders to the contrary, and somehow it hadn't been possible to disobey. And now, clad in his dressing gown and pajamas, so much too big, she cowered on a stool by the fire.

The room was Sir Matthew's — no other bedroom in the large house was prepared for a guest. Some of his belonging were left in it—his dispatch case, a tobacco tin, a tray of papers on the table. Their presence didn't cheer her. But if they had been Alan's possessions she would, she knew, have been a little comforted. No one else slept in this wing. In the whole house there were only herself and Alan and Roberts. Alan was far away, on another floor. With longing she thought of the chaise longue in the sitting room next his bedroom. If she could have slept there her heart would not now be beating out its terror. But she had not had the courage to ask.

The storm rose again to a wild wailing. A picture clattered a little against the wall. The door, shaken by that gust, opened.

With a gasp, Tony rose. She gazed down the empty gallery whose darkness was illumined for a few feet by the light from her room. With fumbling fingers she tied the length of Alan's dressing gown round her waist. She dragged the clothes from her bed and flung them over her shoulder. Then, torch in hand, her heart beating in her throat she trailed out of the door. Down the wide gallery, so full of moving shadows, she went, and down the broad slippery oak-smelling stairs. Would Alan be very angry? His anger would be less frightening than her solitary room and the voice of the storm.

The landing outside Alan's rooms was black as pitch. Noiselessly she opened the door of the sitting room. The light in his bedroom was on, and the door was ajar. She had hoped to find it closed. She moved forward, her hand outstretched, and bumped into a chair.

"Who is there?" came Alans voice.

"It's—it's only me, Alan."

"Tony!"

Blinking a little in the light, still embracing her blankets, the legs of her borrowed pajamas in folds round her ankles, she entered his room. Alan was sitting up in bed. For what seemed to her a long moment, he contemplated her. He was smiling a little. But that, she remembered, might mean that he was angry.

"Please don't be cross with me," she said.

"What on earth do you think you're doing?" His voice was cold. He did not intend her to know that her sudden ludicrous appearance had saved him from a black hour in a desert of sleeplessness. The book he had tried to read had been useless. His mind had been spinning back and forth.

"I'm very sorry, Alan. But my room is so far away. I heard noises. I thought it was a ghost, and then my door burst open."

"You're not very brave, are you?"

"Oh, no," she replied, as if it were no use to deny such an obvious fact. "So I thought I'd come and sleep in the sitting room. But I didn't mean to disturb you."

"You're shivering.'"

"Well, it isn't a warm night, is it?"

She came forward to the fire and knelt down on the hearth. And now she was quite near him. He could have touched her. He could look down on her shining head in whose curls the firelight played, as he had looked down on another occasion in the days when he was a man. He remembered that occasion so well—Jacky asleep in her small bed, Tony kneeling on the hearth. She had worn pajamas and a dressing gown then too, but they had not been five sizes too big for her. She had looked different. And—he had regarded her differently. He had thought of her, not as a little friend, but as a bad little fool whose only redeeming trait was love for her small sister. Well, he had been wrong.

"Tony, it's after midnight. You must go to bed."

"But may I sleep in your sitting room?"

"You're no safer there, my child. If something dreadful came, I couldn't help you. I'm of no more use than a week-old pup."

She glanced at him. "I would never be frightened if you were near, Alan," she said quietly.

Strange. It was as if he heard those words not with his mind, but with his heart. They would linger there, he knew, like music. But why?

"Very well. You can sleep where you like, Tony," he said abruptly. "Run along now, but give me a cigarette first."

She smiled. She stretched out her hand to the glass cigarette box. The too-long sleeve of her pajamas caught it by the corner. An instant later it was swept to the floor.

"Darn!" said Alan.

In a flash, at the sound of his voice her hands flew up. White with terror, she flung herself back. Her shoulders struck a small table. It and everything on it fell with a deafening crash to the hearth.

"Oh, please—oh, please!" The dreadful, broken whisper came from Tony's lips. He couldn't see her face. Her head was covered by her arms. Like some little dog about to be kicked or beaten, she had, he saw, made herself as small as possible—a small shaking body.

There was a long silence. Slowly her hands came down. They twisted together. She looked away from him, down at the floor.

"Tony"—his voice was very gentle, as if at any moment she might rise from those trembling knees and escape from him, out of his house into the storm. "Did you think I would hurt you? I can't move from my bed."

"I had forgotten that," she muttered.

"Do you really think I would hurt you if I could?"

She looked at him now. "No. I know you wouldn't. But I couldn't remember that," she said.

"Tony," Alan said quietly after a moment, "come here."

She rose. Timidly she advanced.

"Sit down," he said.

She did as she was told, seating herself on his bed. But there was still wariness in her glance. It was as if part of her mind could not trust him, even though she thought of him as a friend. Was he, he wondered, her only friend? He looked at her, curled up there, trying to smile as if her deep-rooted terror had never betrayed itself, and he felt such desire to comfort and understand as caused him to forget his own pitiable state. He did not look pitiable as he said, "You're still trembling, Tony."

"You musn't mind me," she replied. "I'm stupid sometimes." She looked down at the floor, at the wreckage of the carafe and glass that had stood on the little table. "I'm very sorry."

For a moment Alan was silent, choosing his words with care. Into that silence there floated the chim of a distant clock striking the quarter after midnight. This he reflected, was a strange little interview. He remembered that other midnight scene of many weeks ago. How certain he had been then that he knew everything—that all this child needed was discipline. How blind he had chosen to be. Had not the truth been clear in her swift nervous movements, her silences, even in her quick defiance? For Matthew Lake had read her fear in a few short minutes.

CHAPTER XIX

"Tony," Alan said. "someone at some time, has ill treated you. It was your brother, I suppose?"

She nodded.

"Why?" he asked.

"He was a bully. Jim was at home all the time, and so was I. So there wasn't any rest. But it's all over, years ago. I don't often think of it."

"Couldn't you have complained to anyone?"

"There was no one to complain to after father died."

"Your mother?"

"Tony shook her head. Something in her little smile struck him as dreadful.

"And Hyacinth?" That name, not spoken for many weeks, came bitterly to his lips.

She didn't speak. Perhaps she imagined that he was half pleading to be told that Hyacinth had been kind. "Well?" he aswed.

"I don't want to remember those years," she answered woodenly. She was pleating the coverlet with nervous fingers.

"Nevertheless, I want to know of them, Tony. You and I are friends." He used the plea of friendship, but he allowed into his voice a little of the ring of authority. "And now, please answer my question. What part had Hyacinth in this?"

"Oh," She still fingered the coverlet, 'Jim and Hyacinth always went together. If I was slack or forgot anything, then Jim dropped on me. But you know, Alan, they didn't hate me—not until Father's death. You see, I only had a daily governess, and she left after luncheon each day. I used to invent excuses to make her stop a few minutes longer. Yes, those years were tough. But I'm tough, too." With a kind of pride she lifted her chin. And then, perhaps, she saw the anger and pity in his face. Her voice changed. She took his hand.

"Nothing is unbearable, Alan." She said it as if to comfort him. "You think it's just going to be, but it isn't. It would have been, but there was Jacky. I used to go into the nursery often, and the nurse was kind. But when Jacky was older—I was frightened then. I thought Jim would begin to bully her." As if, at that thought she was back in those days, she whitened. "I couldn't have borne that, I couldn't." Unconsciously, one thin hand went to her heart. "But it was all right," she murmured. "Jim died. So it was all right."

"And nowadays, are you happy, Tony?"

"I'm happy when I'm with you. If Jacky and I could be with you, always, then I'd be happy."

A deep silence followed on those words. The ticking of the grandfather clock on the landing sounded clearly. And where others—every one else—looked on his him as useless wreckage, she thought of him as a strong refuge.

"You will be happy without that, Tony dear," he answered her at last.

"No." She glanced up. Her eyes, very clear, met his. "I—I suppose you wouldn't think of letting us come to live here, Alan? I could talk to you when you wanted to talk and be silent when you didn't. And so would Jacky. I'd run your errands. I'd learn to sew. I'm a good fag. Jim taught me that; and now it would come in useful."

"No. Tony, it isn't possible." He looked down at her hand, resting in his.

There was a little pause. "You're not angry at me, are you, Alan?" she asked.

"No, my child."

"Then you're trying to think what's best for me. But you don't know." She had slipped off the bed now. She stood there, gazing down at the bright coverlet as if she gazed into a deep well and could see truth lying at the bottom. "I know what's best for me; it's best for me to be with you."

He was smiling; but, he found, with difficulty. "In a year or two you won't think so."

"Oh, Alan!" There was something pitiful in her look; something unconscious. "I don't change," she said.

"You will have a home of your own one day. Soon," he told her.

She shook her head.

One. Again that soft chime striking the hour penetrated the sounds of the gale, the rushing of the wind.

"Tony." His voice was even — so much more even than the beating of his heart. "I am not angry at you. I'm grateful for your thought of me. You must continue to come to Holme Dacey—though not, perhaps, in snowstorms—or my life will be empty." Quickly she looked up at him, but he went on: "And now, my child, you will go to bed at once."

"Oh, yes, Alan."

She obeyed him immediately. But she was always goo d with him. she was always good with him. the floor. He watched her as she dragged them into the sitting room.

Switching off the light, he lav back on the pillows. Through the door, just ajar, he could hear a rustling as she made up her bed.

And now there was silence. Then the door opened a very little way. Her head appeared in the doorway, her face in shadow.

"Good night, Alan."

"Good night, Tony."

The winter light, reflected brightly from the snow, poured into Alan's sitting room. Alan lay on the chaise longue which last night had been Tony's bed. He was prepared for the day—shaved, wearing a tweed jacket, a rug flung over his legs.

The door opened. Matthew Lake entered. "Good morning."

"Hullo," said Alan. He lowered the paper. Sir Matthew, glancing at him with a trained eye, saw the half hidden anger in his face, the rebellion against his helpless state, and thought: "It's a bad day." Aloud he said, "I've just arrived. Met Tony wandering about. There's no fire for her downstairs except in the dining room."

"Well," said Alan, "the dining room will have to do. I'm not feeling like conversation this morning. She's still here because I said she wasn't to leave till you returned. It looks like more snow. I don't want her to die in a drift. If you can't escort her home, Roberts will have to."

"I'll take her," said Sir Matthew quickly.

Alan shot him a glance. Then he lit a cigarette. He smoked for a minute in silence. Then abruptly he spoke. "Matt, you're more than a bit in love with Tony, aren't you?"

There was a little pause. "What makes you think so?" The scare on Sir Matthew's face stood out suddenly, startlingly.

"One notices. Why don't you do something about it"

"She's so young."

"Well?" In Alan's voice was a kind of suppressed rage. "She's wretched at home. I can tell you that. She's had a bleak life. If you care for her, propose to her—marry her. Make her happy. She needs it."

"I don't suppose she'd have me," muttered Matthew Lake.

"Is that a reason for not trying? I think she would," Alan said and added, "You used to have some guts, Matt."

Sir Matthew turned. He smiled a little. "I'm not usually accused of feebleness" he said,

"No," Alan replied. "You're all right with savage tribes. But you're afraid of Tony."

Sir Matthew reddened. Before he could speak Alan went on, "and when you are married to her, you had better remember that she'll need a firm hand now and then, as well as the spoiling she's never had yet."

"You seem to have become very wise lately," Matthew Lake said with a touch of irony.

"Yes."

"Then have you any reason to suppose she'd marry me?"

For one brief second Alan hesitated. "Yes, I think so," he said quietly.

Matthew Lake turned away. He walked to the window and stared out over the changed landscape. The white expanse met the heavy grey of the sky with no warmth nor color anywhere. The question with which he broke the silence was unexpected. "Is she in love with you, Alan?"

"Good God, no!" The answer came with violence. "Girls don't fall in love with cripples. The most they suffer from is a brief phase of green-sickness and pity." There was a pause. "And if she were" Alan said, "it would obviously be better that you should divert her from such idiocy."

Matthew Lake glanced round at the lean handsome face, drawn now with the strain of sleepless night. "Oh, obviously," he said.

There was silence between the two men. Then Matthew Lake asked: "Alan, are you in love with her?"

"Are you drunk, Matt, and at this hour of the day? Up to two months ago her sister and I were engaged."

Sir Matthew turned back into the room. "That would make no difference, Tony doesn't know it, but she's the kind that could steal the heart from a man—steal it and make it hers and hold it for ever. She has that attratcion and that power."

"Really?" said Alan. He flicked his ash to the floor. "Well, I can't say I've noticed it."

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, March 4 —(Special)— Disagreeable weather prevailed in Trenton and the surrounding district yesterday making walking and driving conditions uncertain and nasty, the afternoon was especially miserable, when a drizzling rain froze as it fell to leave a coat of ice on the sidewalks and roadways. The unfavorable conditions slowed down traffic, kept joy-riders off the highways with the result that there wasn't a report of a car accident in this community recorded at the police station. But the dismal day did not dampen church-goers and there were good attendances at all Trenton churches in the morning.

Conduct of Purchasing in Department Concern of Court — Three Supply Ministry Employees Reported Discharged

CABINET CHANGES SEEN

Anthony Eden, Now Dominions' Secretary, Slated to be Moved to Inner Cabinet—Reorganization Not to Take Place Before Easter

London, March 5 (CP) — Assembly of the War Office secret court was announced today as London newspapers continued to express concern over the supply ministry's conduct of its vast purchasing.

The court met to question an unamed War Office colonel reported to have recommended a discharged convict to the supply office as a contractors' agent. There were reports Scotland Yard had completed an investigation of the entire wartime contracting system. Other developments included the dismissal of three supply ministry employees.

Reports persisted that Prime Minister Chamberlain planned to make his third wartime cabinet reorganization in the near future. Anthony Eden, member of the government but not of the war cabinet as Dominions Secretary, is rumored as in line for advancement.

Snowfall and rainfall! Snowfall is considered very heavy if it falls at the rate of two inches an hour. However, it does not, as a rule, cause the inconvenience or destruction that might occur in the case of intense rainfall, because snow "stays put" at least for awhile. Rain is reported as excessive when one inch or more falls in an hour, which represents much more water than two inches of snow; that is to say, excessive rain means much more water than could occur with very heavy snow in the same tibe. A very intense rain was reported at Opid, Calif., April 5, 1926, when 1.02 inches fell in one minute.

GERMANY LOSES 271,000 TONS IN SIX MONTHS

22 Ships Were Captured, 25 Scuttled and Undisclosed Number Sunk

BRITISH SHIPPING LOSS

London, March, 5—(CP)—An authoritative British naval source said that in the first six months of war Germany lost about 271,000 tons of merchant shipping out of a total of 4,492,708.

The losses, he said, included 22 ships captured, totalling 94,500 tons, 25 scuttled totalling 154,000 tons and an undisclosed number of sinkings by Allied action and from marine causes.

British losses to date as a result of enemy action, he said, approximate 620,000 tons, of which two thirds has been replaced by new construction and captures. This was compared with a loss of more than 2,000,000 tons in the first six months of 1917, when Germany's war on shipping reached its Great War peak.

Nazis Plan Gliding Attacks On Britain, London Reports

London, March 5—(CP) — Dispatches from Otterdam saying that a plan has been revealed by which German bombers would make a gliding attack on Great Britain, were published in several London morning papers today.

The plan is that the bombers would climb to a height of 30,000 feet in Germany, cut their motors and glide across the Netherlands to the vicinity of Utrecht where they would again climb to 30,000 feet, again cut their motors, and glide across the North Sea at one of its narrowest points.

Thus they would be able to approach Britain without being detected by sound devices.

The dispatches said that bombers are already rehearsing as evidenced by mysterious lights seen over various parts of Holland recently. It was charged that these lights are sent up by Nazi sympathizers for the benefit of Nazi pilots in training.

OPPOSITION OPENS NEW DRIVE ON KING GOVERNMENT

Renew Charges of Deception, Political Patronage and Profiteering in War Effort

NEWS FILM BANNED

Dr. R. J. Manion Opens Quebec Campaign by an Address in French

Renewed charges of deception, political patronage and profiteering in the war effort swirled around the political arena today after leading speakers of opposition parties opened a fresh drive against the government last night which matched the number of cabinet spokesmen for the first time since the campaign started.

But competing with the campaign as a topic of public interest was the statement of Premier Hepburn of Ontario that the March of Time news film "Canada at War" has been banned from Ontario until at least after the March 26 election. In Ottawa it caused more private comment on Parliament Hill than any strictly election development.

Conservative Leader Manion opened his Quebec campaign by speaking in French from Ottawa over a French network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation restating his "absolute opposition" to conscription and charging that Liberal leaders are deceiving the people of Quebec province.

He said he was opposed to con-

SIX OFFICIALS ARE CHARGED

Wayne County Officers Charged With Graft and Running Policy Games

Detroit, March 5 (AP)—Six public officials of Wayne County (Detroit) including Sheriff Thomas E. Wilcox and Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea, were indicted today by Judge Homer Ferguson, sitting as a one-man Grand Jury investigating gambling and graft.

The indictments charged conspiracy to operate or permit the operation of disorderly houses, gambling houses, handbooks and policy games.

In addition to Wilcox and McCrea, the indictments named Bernard E McGrath, Chief Deputy Sheriff of Wayne County, Carl Staebler, Chief of the Civil Division of the Sheriff's Office; Harry Colburn, Chief Investigator for the Prosecutor's Office, and Albert J. Garska, President of Grosse Pointe Park.

Forty-five other persons were named in the indictment.

McCrea and Colburn are also under indictment by the Grand Jury on charges of conspiracy to protect or operate a $1,000,000 baseball pool in Detroit.

The indictments followed by a few hours an attempt by McCrea's men to invade the Grand Jury headquarters. Judge Ferguson, calling out police riot squads for protection, charged that McCrea was seeking to seize the Grand Jury's records and prevent a court examination on the earlier indictment tomorrow.

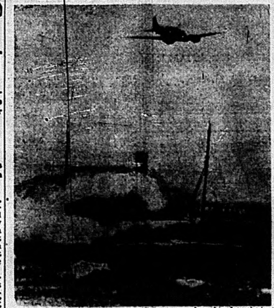
FIGHTS 4 ROUNDS WITH BROKEN ARM

Louisville, Ky., March 5—(AP)—For four rounds last night spectators booed the performance of Ronnie Hampton of Louisville in a boxing match with Joey Palmo of Cincinnati.

Then it discovered he had been fighting since the first with a broken left arm. Palmo was warded a technical knockout victory.

The boos turned to applause.

LINE BOMBED IN ENGLISH CHANNEL



One hundred and six persons were estimated to have been killed when a German bomber swooped down on the 8,441-ton liner Domala and scored hits with three bombs and then machine-gunned the decks. This was the first time since the outbreak of the war that a German warplane has launched an attack west of the Straits of Dover. An R.A.F. plane is pictured flying above the Domala as it blazes fiercely off the English coast following the German attack. This picture was radioed to New York and then transmitted by Phonephoto.

Executive Chairman Explains In Detailed Statement Means By Which Rate is Reduced

Ald. Haig and Members of Council Congratulated by Mayor on Excellent Showing

MOTIONS PASSED

Considerable Time Used in Reading Various By-laws Needed to Adopt New Tax Rate

A reduction of four mills in the tax rate to 41½ mills, was announced by Ald. McLean Haig, chairman of Executive, who introduced the by-law to fix the receipts and expenditures of the municipality for the current year at the regular session of the City Council held on Monday night. Ald. Haig also introduced several by-laws to fix the rate for Public, High and Vocational Schools, Separate Schools, Unemployment Relief, General Expenditures, Local Improvements, and a by-law to provide for the collection of taxes, penalties and discounts if paid before due date. The council members had little other business than the estimates and the session was one of the shortest of the year. Ald. Haig was in the chair for the committee of the whole for general business, and bylaws and the work was quickly dispatched. At the conclusion of the session, Mayor Glencoe Thompson congratulated the chairman of executive for his task in preparing the estimates and also for the very fine showing made. The other members of the council were included in the congratulatory address, for as the Mayor stated, the lowering of the tax rate could not be accomplished without the co-operation of every member of the council.

N. S. LEGISLATURE BEGINS SESSION

Halifax, March 5—(CP)— Lacking much of its peacetime color, the first wartime session of Nova Scotia's 18th Legislative Assembly since Confederation opens today. The province's administrator and Chief Justice, Sir Joseph Chisholm, will read the speech from the Throne in place of Lieut. Governor Robert Irwin, granted a leave of absence because of illness.

At a caucus last night, F. M. Blois, one of the two Conservative Members from Colchester, was chosen Opposition Leader in the Legislature. He succeeds Percy Black who resigned his seat to contest Cumberland for the Conservatives in the Federal election.

U-BOAT PROBABLY DESTROYED BY BRITISH PLANE

Direct Hit Made on Craft Which Was Lying in Shallow Water

2 SHIPS IN TROUBLE

London, March 5 (CP)— Stroke and counter-stroke in the struggle over Germany's attempt to break Britain's control of the seas today matched a report of the probable destruction of a German submarine by air attack against the loss of a British merchantman and possible loss of two others.

A Royal Air Force plane scouting Schillig Roads, German naval stong old off the Elbe River in Heligoland Bight, scored a direct hit on a submarine lying at the surface of shallow water the Air Ministry announced last night.

"Four bombs were dropped, one of which registered a direct hit between the conning tower and the stern," said the Ministry.

EARTH'S SURFACE STILL SAGGING

Widening Cracks Appear in Walls and Pavements at Shenandoah

Shenandoah, Pa., March 5 — (AP)—The earth's surface sagged anew today in this undermined anthracite town.

In scattered sections of a 16-block area, widened cracks appeared in walls and pavements. The slow sinking of homes and business houses ceased temporarily late yesterday after some shifted downward as much as 20 inches in the cave-in of old mine workings deep underground.

Early today some residents of the cave-in section—most heavily populated part of this community of 21,000—heard faint rumblings much like those that sent 2,000 fleeing threatened buildings early yesterday.

Coal company engineers, State mine inspectors and a local committee went into the honeycomb of diggins to seek the cause of the worst cave-ins in the history of Pennsylvania's great anthracite fields.

CONSCRIPTION FAILURE IN LAST WAR SAYS MANION

Voices "Absolute Opposition" in Radio Address to Province of Quebec

SPEAKS IN FRENCH

Ottawa, March 5—(CP)—Voicing "absolute opposition" to conscription, Conservative leader Manion opened his Quebec campaign by stating that "If I am elected Prime Minister of Canada, there will be no conscription put into effect by the government which I lead.

"Conscription to my mind was a failure in the last war, as it raised only about 10,000 men out of more than 500,000, and it stirred up much misunderstanding in our country," he said here last night in a 30-minute French speech broadcast over the French network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

For that reason and because conscription is not necessary in this war, and because, as I have said on other occasions, it is the duty of a public man to hold Canada together as a nation, I am absolutely opposed to conscription."

Attacked Unjustly is Claim

He said the Liberals keep attacking him unjustly regarding conscription, "apparently trying to split this counry as they have in the past."

TWO CANADIAN FLYERS HONORED

Decorated With D.F.C. by King George for Acts of Bravery

London, March 5 (CP Cable) — Flight-Lt. Lawrence Wilton Skey, 28, of Toronto, and Pilot-Officer Robert Howard Harper, 24, of Scott, Sask., who showed "gallantry and devotion to duty in the execution of air operations," received the Distinguished Flying Cross from the hands of the King in an investiture at Buckingham Palace today.

Three heroes of the Waltham Abbey explosion January 18 and officers of the navy, army and air force also were decorated. Eighteen officers of the Royal Air Force were decorated with the D.F.C. by His Majesty, who wore R.A.F. uniform.

A number of young R.A.F. officers lost their nerve on leaving the palace and fled from the huge crowd of citizens and photographers.

The Waltham Abbey munitions workers who were decorated knew that to have stopped work during the blast would have doomed the whole plant.

For continuing their processing of nitroglycerine in the Royal Gunpowder factory blast that killed 5 men and injured many others the trio received the Order of the British Empire.

Had their operations with their highly volatile material been interrupted the entire batch of nitroglycerine would have exploded.

British Sentiment Demands Finland Should be Helped Says London Times

London, March 5—(CP) — The Times said editorially today the "whole sentiment of this country demands that Finland should not be allowed to fall."

But Lord Beaverbrook's newspapers, the Standard and Daily Express, urged the government not to intervene in a military way in the fight between Finland and her invader, Soviet Russia. The Standard suggested a parliamentary debate.

Kermit Roosevelt, son of the late Theodore Rosevelt, in a broadcast last night said his international volunteers are "going to fight for the whole civilized world against Russia—the modern infidel."

"It is my honor and privilege to lead this modern crusade," he said.

Meanwhile the King received in audience Thomas Maitland Snow, former minister to Finland. Snow was succeeded Feb. 7 by George Gordon Vereker.

The Times said that failure to give adequate aid to Finland may be revealed in the future as another one of those "opportunities which have been missed through a policy of false economy, of the failure to appreciate the comparative unimportance of secondary risks."

The Standard asked that former War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha, an advocate of intervention in Finland, explain "on what grounds he believes Britain's resources and manpower are such that she can send a new force to the Arctic, maintain large numbers in the near east and at the same time fulfill the call which our French ally makes upon us for aid in protection of her frontier."

5 Italian Ships Are Detained By Allied Forces

Economic Warfare Minister Cross Tells British Commons Any German Coal Now Exported From Rotterdam to Italy is Subject to Seizure as Prize of War

SHIPS LOADING COAL

British Action Follows Closely Italy's Protest Against Blockade—Cross is Questioned on Economic Relations With Other Neutrals

London, March 5—(CP) — Five Italian ships were taken to the contraband control base off Deal, southeastern England, today in the dispute between Britain and Italy over Italian imports of German coal.

Following announcement by the Minister of Economic Warfare, Ronald Cross, in the House of Commons that two Italian vessels carrying German coal had already been detained, two British destroyers tonight escorted three more Italian vessels to the Downs control base where the other Italian ships were anchored.

London, March 5—(CP) — Two Italian steamships loaded with German coal for Italy already have been detained by the Allied blockade forces, Ronald H. Cross, Minister of Economic Warfare, told the House of Commons today.

Mr. Cross said that any German coal now exported from Rotterdam to Italy is subject to seizure as a prize of war and added that such exports "now have ceased."

The British action followed closely on publication of Italy's protest against the blockade, which said it endangered the "economic and political relations" of the two countries as established by the Italian-British accord of April 16, 1938.

Seventeen Ships Loading.

Seventeen Italian ships have been loading coal at Rotterdam, six sailed for Italy yesterday and the others were ready to get under way. (An Amsterdam dispatch said four more of the Italian ships sailed today.)

Italy is dependent on foreign fuel sources. Of the 11,000,000 tons of coal imported by Italy last year 60 per cent. came from Germany. Though the two nations have a common frontier, insufficient rolling stock is available for transportation of much greater coal supplies at present.

Under questioning in the House, Mr. Cross also discussed economic relations with other neutrals.

In reply to a question whether he knew of an impending deal to put Petrolul Romanese, Rumanian oil company, under German control, he said the company was not important and still was under Rumanian control.

"If I answered the question I would be revealing the terms of arrangements made with the neutral countries," Mr. Cross said, apparently referring to Norway, the Netherlands and Belgium.

PASSENGER TRAIN GOES INTO RIVER AND 120 KILLED

Engine and Six Coaches of Japanese Train Drop 75 Feet Into 40 Feet of Water

RESCUE HINDERED

Tokyo, March 5 (CP-Havas) — More than 120 passengers were believed killed today when a train plunged into a river at Raihuwaku, on the border of Niigata and Yamagata prefectures in northern Japan.

The train went through a bridge that had been destroyed by an avalanche. The engine and six coaches dropped over a cliff nearly 75 feet into a stream nearly 40 feet deep at that point.

Rescue squads were hindered by snow.

Twenty-one persons were rescued, eight of them seriously injured. Two bodies were recovered.

After leaving Yonezawa the train passed through a mountain tunnel. Less than 50 feet from the tunnel exit the bridge had been carried away

INVADING REDS HELD AT BAY BY FINNISH FORCES

Russians Attempt to Encircle City and Attack From Rear

HEAVY FIGHTING

Helsinki, Mar. 5 (AP).—The defenders of Viipuri, after battling all day yesterday with Russians attacking across the islands of the Bay of Viipuri, still were fighting in this strategic area today, the Finnish high command announced in its daily communique.

The invading Russians were attempting to encircle the city, long deserted by civilians and considered virtually lost even by the Finns themselves.

In addition to attacking the islands in the bay, the Reds attacked the northwest shore of the bay from where they presumably could drive overland against Viipuri from the rear.

"On the isthmus enemy attacks against the islands in the Bay of Viipuri and the northwest shore of the bay continued all day Mar. 4," said the communique. "Fighting continues on the capes at the mouth of the bay; at all other points attacks were repulsed."

St. Julien Chapter I. O. D. E. Report For February

The monthly business meeting of the St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. was held on Monday evening, March 4th, in the Odd Fellow's Temple, and reports of different committees were as follows:

Mrs. Watkin, War Convener reported 40 pairs socks; 4 sweaters; 5 pair wristlets and 11 pair mitts sent to "D" Detachment Midland Regiment, R.C.A.F., Trenton. To the Navy League of Canada 34 pair socks; 7 scarfs; 14 pair wristlets and 1 sweater. To Belleville Boys in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment 24 pair socks. These were kindly delivered by Mrs. (Capt.) Bradley in person. A gift was sent by the Chapter through one of its members to Lieutenant Jack Morgan who has lately received his call to join the above mentioned Regiment. A sincere friend of the Chapter and Soldiers donated $5.00 toward our work, with a promise of more from time to time. Sewing Committee reported: 11 hospital gowns made for the local Red Cross out of material furnished by them.

The revenue activities for the month of February as follows: A draw on the tea pot and cosy realized a nice sum and the lucky winner was Mrs. J. Reid of Chatham St., city. The R.C.A.F. band concert in the Capitol Theatre on Feb. 25th also netted a goodly sum, the amount of which was previously mentioned. These band concerts, besides being a splendid entertainment at a nominal cost to the public, have been a wonderful source of revenue towards our Chapter funds to carry on our necessary war work, but this work could not have been carried on without the kind co-operative "war giving" spirit of the members of the Bands (Municipal and Royal Canadian Air Force), the soloists, the generosity of private citizens, when solicited, and above all the owners and management of the Capitol Theatre, who gave us in every case the use of the theatre free of charge, as well as all work of staff in connection with these concerts. This may not seem much to the outside public, we assure you it does mean a lot, as there are the heating, lighting, cleaning, advertising and giving up their Sundays at home, all of which if summed up, would mean a perfectly splendid WAR DONATION.

"We regret that so many had to be refused admittance to the last concert, but they will have another opportunity as we have a date set for another R.C.A.F. concert the end of this month. Watch for the date. We want also to thank the press for these and former reports which help materially in letting the public know what our Chapter is trying to do."

Young Conservatives Of Sidney Township Hold Meeting

The Sidney National Young Conservative Association held their organization meeting Monday night in the Wallbridge Town Hall. Mr. George H. Stokes, the National Government candidate for South Hastings, spoke briefly to a large and enthusiastic group of young people from the township of Sidney.

Mr. Stokes stressed Dr. Manion's proposed Ministry of Youth Welfare, saying that for the first time in Canadian history the youth of the country would have a cabinet minister and a full time department to deal with their peculiar problems and needs. He emphasized that the present problem of youth unemployment would be much worse at the conclusion of the war when thousands of young Canadians would have to be re-absorbed into civilian life and that the problem could only be faced by immediate constructive action such as that proposed by Dr. Manion.

Mr. Wilmot Shortt was elected president of the organization; Mrs. Morley Phillips, first vice-president; Mr. Frank Phillips, second vice-president; Mr. Harry Coulter, third vice-president; Mr. Jack Sargent, treasurer; Mr. Morley Phillips, secretary. Auditors are Mr. Ralph Campbell and Mr. Harold Hollinger. An executive committee comprising a chairman from each polling sub-division was also appointed to assist the above executive.

The meeting was followed by a very enjoyable dance.

OBITUARY

ELIZABETH ANN LIVINGSTONE
(Stirling)

Stirling, March 5 —(Special)— Following an illness of several weeks' duration there passed away on Monday, March 4th., one of Stirling's oldest and most respected citizens in the person of Elizabeth Ann Elliott, widow of the late George Livingstone. Deceased, who was in her eighty-first year was born in Sidney Township, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Elliott.

Spending her entire life in the district of her birth the late Mrs. Livingstone had lived for many years in the village of Stirling. She was a faithful member of St. Paul's United Church and active in Women's Missionary Society work. Extremely interested in horticulture she displayed a fondness for gardening and for several years was a member of the Stirling Horticultural Society.

Surviving is one son, James Alfred Livingstone, Stirling; one sister, Mrs. P. W. Fleming, Sudbury, Ontario; three grandchildren, Messrs. James and George Livingstone, and Mrs. D. Mackenzie, all of Rochester, N.Y.

Funeral arrangements will be made known later.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

NO SERIOUS ACCIDENTS REPORTED IN DISTRICT

Although driving conditions throughout the Belleville area were exceedingly treacherous over the week end, no serious motor accidents were reported locally or by the Highway Patrol today. Sunday's rains coupled with Monday's snow storm left adjacent highways and county roads in a slippery and slushy condition and resulted in diminished progress. Drivers proceeded with caution, which tended to lessen the chances of accidents to a noticeable degree.

SEWERS BLOCKED BY FREEZING SNOW

Five city sewers were reported blocked as the result of ice and snow freezing in catch basins along city streets today, City Engineer Chas. A. Mott revealed at noon.

The Public Works Department was busy all day thawing out frozen sewers with the employment of the city steam boiler. Curbs and ditches are being cleared also in an effort to relieve the surplus water, that resulted from yesterday's snow and today's thawing.

"The weather was colder last night and tightened up sufficiently to allow surplus water to drain off before the snow began to melt again today," explained City Engineer Mott as he added that efforts to alleviate flood conditions on city streets were being increased.

WOMAN KNOCKED DOWN BY CAR

Mrs. Diamond, 14 1-2 Forin St., escaped without serious injury after being knocked down by a motor car at the intersection of Campbell and Pinnacle Sts. yesterday afternoon. Mr. A. S. Newman, 325 Dufferin St., informed police authorities that Mrs. Diamond had stepped directly in front of his motor car, but was uninjured after being knocked down. Mr. Newman immediately stopped his car and rendered all assistance possible and later personally reported to Sergeant Arthur Harman, the incident which was deemed purely of an accidental nature.

SPEAK AT STELLA POLITICAL MEETING

Mr. R. D. Arnott, M.L.A., of West Hastings and Mr. George A. Reid, of Belleville, were speakers on Monday evening at Stella at a political meeting held in the interest of Mr. George F. Tustin, the Conservative candidate for Prince Edward-Lennox riding. There was a large attendance of the people of the community.

FUR PRICES UP AT LEAST 10 P. C.

Fur trappers of this district have reason to be jubilant this season, as evidence of the fur market being one of the best in years is indicated.

In Montreal recently eight per cent of the entire fur offering at a large sale sold at an advanced price being fully ten per cent higher than last season, which is exceedingly encouraging to the fur trappers of the country. With the exception of beaver, that sees a closed season this year, a good run of fur-bearing animals is reported in many sections of the province.

Another favorable sign for fur trappers is the fact that fashion experts are predicting increased popularity for small fur jackets in spring wear.

STRUCK IN EYE WITH HOCKEY STICK

Bobby Moon, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Moon, Deseronto, sustained a painful eye injury while playing scrub hockey in Deseronto over the week-end. He was struck in the left eye by a hockey stick in the hands of a playmate. Rushed to the office of Dr. W. C. Blackwell, it was found necessary to put two stitches in the upper part of the eye. It is not believed the sight will be impaired, however.

OPTIONS TAKEN BY GOVERNMENT

Surveyors resumed activities surveying in the vicinity of Bath this week with the proposed intention of establishing a training ground for flyers. Although no farms in that district have been purchased by the government as yet, it was announced that options on 1200 acres in the vicinity of the Hamburg-Bath roads have been taken up and held.

MR. LYN FAIR WILL BE SPEAKER

The last meeting of the Bridge Street Church Men's Association for the season will be held on Wednesday evening at six fifteen o'clock when Mr. Lyn Fair, the agricultural representative for Hastings County, will be the speaker. Mr. Fair will speak on "Agriculture in Hastings."

AIR HEAD DEAD

Air Vice-Marshal J. Lindsay Gordon, first air officer ever to command a military district in Canada, died following a lengthy illness. A Great War Ace, he was decorated in 1918 and later he was director of the R.C.A.F. and commanded military district No. 10 at Winnipeg and No. 12 at Regina.

Service Rendered by Salvation Army Wins Words of Praise From Men Who Served Overseas

Army Supported Large Number of Refreshment Huts, Hostels and Military Homes for Soldiers' Welfare

$3,500 TO BE RAISED

The Salvation Army, one of the many duly accredited social organizations authorised to carry on wartime services among the overseas forces during the Great War, is again preparing to place at the disposal of the enlisted men the entire resources of their well-known organization.

The commendable effort of the Army in the last war of providing social and recreational needs for the soldiers in France and Belgium is only too well remembered by ex-service men who recall the invaluable services received with a deep sense of gratitude. A fair indication of the services rendered can only be gathered when it is realized that the Army operated 157 refreshment and recreation huts, 77 hostels and naval and military homes, while over 300,000 soldiers and sailors were cared for each week in institutions, and over 100,000 soldiers attended religious meetings weekly.

The one outstanding feature of the Salvation Army huts from which the soldiers received refreshments during the last war was their quietness, according to J. R. McCullough of the local Hydro office, who went overseas with the 51st. Battery. Mr. McCullough said that the soldiers, coming in from the trenches, were indeed grateful when they saw the sign of the Red Shield and knew that there they would find a cheerful welcome, and where they could forget for a time their terrible experiences in the trenches. Mr. John Anderson, also of the local Hydro office, went overseas with the 2nd. Brigade of the Canadian Garrison-Artillery, likewise praises the work of the Salvation Army among the soldiers while they were overseas and speaks in a highly commendatory manner of the Army's services in England.

Already since the present war has started the Salvation Army has opened more than fifty huts and rest rooms in France and England. They also have sent a company of twenty-five "lassies" to serve in the British War Auxiliary Service in the war zone in France.

Money, of course, is needed to carry on this splendid work among the soldiers overseas and it is to this end that the Salvation Army in Canada is sponsoring a $1,000,000 campaign throughout the Dominion. The local objective has been set at $3,500 and Major Alderman is confident that this amount will be reached before the end of the campaign which starts next Monday morning.

GIRL IS FOUND DEAD IN BATH

Miss Vivienne Wilson, 20, is Thought to Have Touched Worn Electric Heater

Toronto, March 5—(CP)— Miss Vivienne Wilson, pretty 20-year-old stenographer, was electrocuted or drowned while taking a bath at her home today. Efforts to revive the girl proved unsuccessful. She is thought to have touched a worn electrical heater while taking a bath and was found submerged in the bathtub. She was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Wilson.

Schoolchildren's 'Strike' Ended

Toronto, March 5—(CP)— A schoolchildren's "strike" in protest against their teacher ended at the little schoolhouse in Dublin section of North York Township, just north of Toronto, today when the School Board voted to dispense with the services of Miss Reta Lang. The Board however approved payment of her salary until the end of the school term.

Out of 60 pupils at the school only nine or 10 showed up for classes for the past few days, the rest complaining that the teacher was too strict.

RAILWAY LINE CHANGES PROPOSED

Lindsay, Ont. March 5 —(CP)— Lindsay city council was informed by the railways last night that application is being made to the Board of Transport Commissioners at Ottawa by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National railways for leave to abandon the Canadian Pacific line between Dranoel and Lindsay, and between Orillia and Medonte.

The communication from the railways said it is intended that the C.P.R. line between Lindsay and Bobcaygeon shall be taken over and operated by the Canadian National.

The Dranoel-Lindsay line was built in 1911 as part of the Georgian Bay and Seaboard railway and opened for traffic in 1912.

WAR BRIEFS

Paris, March 5—(AP)— Three "pocket gunboats" on their way from England to the Black Sea for service with the Rumanian Navy arrived at Paris today, taking the usual course of France's inland canal system to get to the Mediterranean.

The three little boats, built in England, are of 25 tons each. They are 75 feet long, are capable of a speed of 45 knots and are equipped with torpedo tubes, anti-aircraft guns, machine-guns and anti-submarine bomb devices. Each carries a crew of 15.

Sydney, Australia, March 5— The Australian Woolgrowers' Council today made public a resolution asking the British government to reduce the price of wool and urging that supplies to neutrals be maintained so as to preserve such markets for the future.

Mexico City, March 5 (AP)— Two Soviet Russian freighters were reported reliably today to be enroute to the Pacific coast port of Manzanillo to load Mexican lead and United States copper for Vladivostok.

The expected arrival of the freighters Minsk and Engels will follow the recent departure of two other Soviet vessels with similar cargoes, amounting to more than 12,000 tons.

Moscow, March 5 (AP)—A new Russian economic mission will leave for Berlin at the earliest possible moment to place orders in accordance with the Soviet-German trade agreement.

Alarmed by declining production in the Galician oil fields, Moscow was reported by Izvestia, government newspaper to be alloting 65,000,000 rubles (about $13,000,000) for expansion there.

Paris, March 5 —(AP)— French and German air forces surveyed each other's territory today, and on land there were patrol skirmishes along the western front.

The army high command communique said merely: "Nothing to report."

Tweed

Tweed — Defeating Stirling on Friday night, Tweed clinched third place in the Trent Valley Hockey League. They were without the services of Orr, Elsbury and Courneyea.

The win qualifies them to meet the league-leading Campbellford team, with the first game in Campbellford on Wednesday and the second game in the local Arena on Friday night.

Two games were played in the Juvenile League on Friday night with the Rangers further consolidating their hold on first place by defeating the Leafs 5 to 3. The winners' goals were scored by Donohue, Austin, Connor and Palmateer, while the losers' tallies came from the sticks of Sills and Leveck.

In the other game both teams scored four goals. The second-place Bruins' goals were scored by Baker and the Rivers brothers. The Red Wings' goals were notched by Baldwin, Morrison and Gehan.

The standing on March 1st:

	G.	W.	L.	T.	P.
Rangers	6	5	1	0	10
Bruins	6	3	2	1	7
Leafs	6	2	3	1	5
Red Wings	6	0	4	2	2

During the past few Sunday evenings Rev. H. L. Morrison has been preaching a series of sermons appropriate to the Lenten seasons. On Sunday night he gave a very fine address on the subject "Pilate, the Betrayer," in which he pointed out that Pilate's betrayal of the Saviour was in order that he might content the people. We, today, are also casting aside our convictions and, indulging in many questionable pleasures for the same reason. We are equally guilty with Pilate in betraying Jesus by our actions.

scription because it was a failure in the last war, because it is not necessary in this war and because it is the duty of a public man to hold Canada together as a nation.

Will Discard Patronage

At Fort William, Hon. H. H. Stevens, a leading supporter of Dr. Manion, said the National Government planned by the Conservative party will discard political patronage in all appointments or war contracts and inaugurate effective measures to prevent profiteering or exploitation. "Under the present government profiteering in certain war contracts is notorious and scandalous," he said.

It is Dr. Manion's intention, if called on to form a government after March 26 Federal election, to call to his aid a body of representative men of high calibre and known experience and reputation, he said. Such a government will give a real leadership for voluntary recruiting which "under the present government has been definitely discouraged, and furthermore will gratefully accept the offers of service from the veterans of the last war, whose offers have been spurned by the present government."

Mr. Stevens spoke on unemployment and agriculture. The Mackenzie King government has done nothing to better the unemployment situation or assist agriculture on which one-half of the Dominion population depends for a living, he said.

Civil Liberties Menaced is Claim

Under existing Defence of Canada regulations, the Dominion may soon have "an army of spies with people arrested and taken away in the middle of the night and held without trail," J. S. Woodsworth, National President of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, said at Fort William.

Certain extraordinary powers were necessary for a government in war time but the provisions of the Defence of Canada regulations menaced civil liberties to an extent that was not needed in the Dominion, he said. They could be changed overnight by action of the government.

Mr. Woodsworth said he had noticed over a period of years that the present government had sought to give business to the Canadian Pacific Railway which might more efficiently and cheaply be handled by the government-owned Canadian National Railways.

The policy of the Liberal government towards the Canadian Pacific might lead to that system becoming the responsibility of the administration, he said. "Then we would have a cry for amalgamation that would be irresistible," he added.

In reiterating his stand against conscription, he said, that the government already was exercising a form a "moral conscription" by giving young men the alternative of being struck off relief rolls or joining the service.

Winsome Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart co-starred in the Ernst Lubitsch gay, heart-warming romance, "The Shop Around the Corner," featuring Frank Morgan, next at the Belle, with Walter Pidgeon and Anita Johnson in "Nick Carter—Master Detective."

In Ottawa today the govenrment is "of the people, by the party machine, for the profiteer."

Drifted Long Way

Administration in Canada had drifted a long way from Abraham Lincoln's conception of government "of the people, by the people, for the people." In Ottawa the hotels were crowded by men there seeking jobs and contracts from the government, he said.

When Prime Minister Mackenzie King dissolved parliament four hours after it assembled, "he behaved precisely as Hitler has behaved on several occasions, in his treatment of the Reichstag," Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, national government candidate in the Federal riding of Toronto Parkdale, said in a one-half hour broadcast address over a Toronto station.

"On but one occasion did the Fuehrer go farther," said the former Ontario Lieutenant-Governor. "That was when he burned down his parliament buildings. Mr. King merely bolted the door."

Dr. Bruce charged that parliament was dissolved to forestall discussion of Canada's war effort by the elected representatives of the people.

Acted in Panic

"The most rational explanation is perhaps that Mr. King acted in panic; he feared the obligation of giving an account of his stewardship before a body vested with power to demand production of documentary records. The full story of his mad drive to Rideau Hall during the dinner recess to secure a dissolution will probably now never be told.

"Before the ink was dry upon the paper he acted. He ordered the lights to be put out in the chamber of the House of Commons, so that when members returned at eight o'clock they found the highest court in the land in darkness. They were informed by page boys that officially they had no longer a legal existence."

Change Made Smoothly

Canada's war effort is directed ably by a "war cabinet" of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Justice Minister Lapointe, Finance Minister Ralston and Defence Minister Rogers, supplemented by other cabinet committees to deal with individual phases, Postmaster-General Power said at Ottawa.

The change from peace time to war footing was made smoothly, he said, because the machinery already has been set in action following proper preparation. The chief civil servants of the government had been getting ready for eighteen months in case war should become an actuality. Chiefs of the various departments knew what roles they would have to play should hostilities break out.

"The pensions department, which I headed until lately, knew, for instance, of the part it would play in air raid precautions for our coastal cities. It also had drafted pensions legislation for the new army. The transport department made ready to take over shipping control; the post office department to censor the mails, and the defence department to censor cables and long distance telephone calls."

Speaks on Bren Gun

Lieut.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, charged at a Toronto meeting that the Dominion government's Bren machine gun contract embraces "every objectionable feature of profiteering in weapons of war which can be imagined."

He claimed that Hon. C. D. Howe "knew perfectly well it was a deliberate lie" when the minister of transport, in a recent speech in Toronto, said that allegations Col. Drew made regarding the contract had been disposed of by a public enquiry.

"That lie assumes importance in view of the fact that Mr. Howe is the man whom Prime Minister Mackenzie King has made responsible for the contracts. My allegations were proved to the last detail."

M. J. Coldwell, National Chairman of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, in two broadcast radio addresses at Sudbury, said there can be no successful conclusion to the present war unless adequate preparations are made for the aftermath. Peace must be based on social and economic justice throughout the world.

Still Promising

"For 20 years Labor and the C.C.F. have fought consistently in Parliament and country for unemployment insurance. Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Liberal party promised it in their platform of 1919 and after 21 years they are still promising it.

"After every war there have been periods of stagnation and this war will prove no exception. Indeed in my opinion, poverty stricken European nations will be more self-sufficent after the war than before it, so that if we pin our faith on Liberals, Conservatives or National Government supporters, we shall be sadly disillusioned."

Record of the Conservative and Liberal parties in the last 10 years—during which each has been in power five years—should show the electors of Canada which is the "party of action," R. L. Maitland, British Columbia Conservative leader, said at Peterborough.

Their records in trade matters alone point the way. For years under Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Canada sat back while the United States put up tariffs which "definitely and impudently" indicated the United States would buy as little as possible from Canada.

No Retaliation

While the United States dumped goods into Canada there was no retaliation until the Conservative government, under Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, decided to fight back with the history-making Empire trade agreements.

"Mr. King said at the time he didn't think they would succeed, but that will always be his attitude as long as he has the alternative of an agreement with the United States."

Now Mr. King was boasting of his agreement with the United States but it would last only as long as the United States profited under it, as State Secretary Cordell Hull had indicated.

"Wouldn't it be better to depend on long-range Empire agreements than a passing agreement with the United States? Mr. Hull is saying in effect, 'I've broken down the Empire agreements which hurt the United States,' and at Prince Albert Mr. King points to the United States agreement and says: 'That's what I've done.'"

Charges Vigorously Denied

Charges by Conservative Leader Manion against the Dominion Government's war effort have been "inaccurate, reckless and mischievous" and were "apparently designed to create widespread suspicion and distrust," Defence Minister Rogers said at Saint John. Dr. Manion had been unable to provide evidence of a single instance of patronage or profiteering.

Mr. Rogers said:—

"It is being said that Prime Minister Mackenzie King is a man of peace and has not had his heart in this war. I would like to say, with all the conviction in my power, that no greater falsehood has been uttered in the course of this campaign. Mackenzie King was a man of peace, just as you and I, so long as peace could be maintained with honor.'"

The most recent of Dr. Manion's "irresponsibile" charges was termed by Mr. Rogers "absolutely untrue." A newspaper report had quoted Dr. Manion as saying in Northern Ontario Feb. 26 that the First Canadian Division went overseas "with some old Lewis michine guns, relics of the last war, and rifles of the type which could not hit the ceiling and with no artillery."

In First Class Condition

The Lewis gun equipment was overhauled and placed in first class condition before issue for overseas service, said Mr. Rogers. Many of the barrels were practically new and had fired only a few rounds. The division also had a complete establishment of Vickers machine guns. The new Bren machine guns would follow.

"All rifles issued to the division were thoroughly overhauled, re-sighted and given a firing test before issue for overseas service. The rifle issued to the Canadian troops is identical with the rifle issued to the British army."

Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport, said at Midland that the Liberal party believes in using the best brains of the country for the war effort as much as does Conservative Leader Manion in his plans for a national government. More than 200 of the top-notch business men of Canada serve on the War Supply Board to do work "for which they have proved themselves amply fitted in private life."

Interested in One Issue

Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, said at Regina that in his election tour of the four western provinces "I have found people are only interested in one issue, and one only—war."

Mr. Lapointe said the "main thing is who are the men the people want to put in charge of the war effort."

Speaking of Canada's war effort, he declared the opposition not the Liberal government, is on the defensive. "The chances of Mr. Manion being returned to power get slimmer and slimmer every day."

"There have been lots of critics, lots of statements made. Yes, the narrower the mind, the broader the statements!" he observed.

True, the government had made mistakes, "but we did try to correct them."

With a laughing reference to "Lord Haw-Haw's" broadcasts, Mr. Lapointe said a counterpart has now been heard speaking in French, saying the French Canadians are opposed to war. These statemnets, he claimed, were based on "the false, malicious statements of some Canadian public men."

(Lord Haw-Haw is the name the English have given to the person who delivers the Nazi war broadcasts from Germany).

Taxes May Double

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Federal Minister of Agriculture, in an election address at Manitou, Man., criticized persons who had attacked Prime Minister Mackenzie King, for what they described as his too friendly attitude to the United States.

He said: "Can you conceive of the people of Canada with the Empire at war, electing anyone as leader who is other than friendly to the United States?"

Some persons had felt the government had moved too slow in its war preparations but he said "if you don't think we are going fast enough, let me tell you we intend to spend $500,000,000 next year that might double your taxes." This was because of the rapid development of the three branches of the war services.

Cabinet Ministers Assist

Eight Ontario cabinet ministers who voted for the Ontario Legislature resolution condemning the Dominion Government's war effort now are supporting the Mackenzie King Government in its election campaign, Revenue Minister J. L. Ilsley said at Digby N.S.

Parliament was dissolved because of passage of resolution, Mr. Ilsley said. Ontario represented one-third the area and population of Canada and more than one - third its wealth. The government felt if this proportion of the Dominion were of the opinion Mr. King and his colleagues were incapable of carrying on the war an election should be called at the earliest possible moment.

The Dominion Government accomplished a "gigantic" task in three months following Canada's declaration of war, Lieut.-Col. Thomas Vien, member of the last parliament and Liberal candidate in Montreal Outremont, said at Montreal.

Col. Vien, whose 15-minute address was broadcast over a network of Quebec stations, said that the Conservative leader, Dr. R. J. Manion, and national government candidate sought to "capitalize on the patriotism of the Canadian people."

Tweed Schoolboy Fractured Wrist In Fall at Play

Tweed — While playing during the noon recess at Tweed Consolidated School on Friday, Dick Graham, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Graham, fell and fractured his wrist. He was taken to Tweed Hospital where the fracture was reduced by a local physician.

Several carloads of local citizens went to Belleville Saturday night to hear Dr. R. J. Manion discuss the problems confronting the electors in the present election campaign.

Ice has formed to a depth of more than three feet in Mr. Ed. Way's driveway, resulting from the overflow from a small creek at the rear of his property. Ordinarily the water finds its outlet to the lake by way of a culvert under the southern end of McGowan Street. This outlet being blocked by ice, has caused a gradual building up of the ice during the past six weeks.

Mr. A. J Maynes who was recently operated on in Belleville General Hospital is making favorable progress.

Allan Mills

Allan's Mills — Miss Phylis Miles of Havelock spent a few days with friends in this vicinity.

Born—at Whitby, to Dr. and Mrs. Marvin Wellman on Feb. 19th, a son, Arnold Woodward

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Barnum and Mr. and Mrs. Ed. McKeown attended the funeral of Mr. Arch Haselett on Thursday and spent the evening with Mr. and Mrs. J. S. McKeown.

The neighbors and friends were sorry to hear of the death of Mr. George Gibson at his home on Wednesday morning. The funeral was held at his late home on Friday.

Miss Ruth Bateman is suffering from an attack of 'flu.

Mr. and Mrs Harry McAdam of Mt. Pleasant attended the funeral of the late Mr. Haselett and spent the evening with Mr. and Mrs. A Burkitt.

The W. I. held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Geo Thompson on Wednesday afternoon with a good attendance of members and visitors. The meeting opened in the usual manner. The roll call "An early settler of Rawdon and where they lived" proved a very interesting part of the meeting. Cards of thanks were received from Mrs. M R. Neal, Mrs. J. Mumby and Mrs. W. J. Barlow .. flowers received during recent illness. Mrs. Barlow was asked to send a letter of sympathy to Mrs. A. Haselett, Mrs. Alf. Williams and Mrs. A. V. Brown presented Mrs. J. P Baker with a corn flower cut glass vase and Mrs. W. J. Barlow with a corn flower cut glass flower bowl. Mrs. Barlow and Mrs. Baker thanked the W.I. friends for their remembrances. It was decided that the W. I. hold a pot luck dinner in the club rooms at Bonarlaw. The convener Mrs. M. Fitzgerald took charge of the meeting for Historical Research. Mrs Walter Heath gave a splendid paper on "What do we live for, if not to make life less difficult for each other." Mrs. J. S. McKeown gave a paper on the history of 12th line school and Mrs. Alf. Williams gave the paper on the history of Springbrook school.

Community singing was enjoyed by all. A display of relics was put on. The meeting closed with "Onward Christian Soldiers" and God Save the King, after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostess. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Thos. McKeown.

The passing of a life-long resident of Rawdon Township occurred on Tuesday, Feb. 2th, when Archibald Haselett succumbed after an illness of about a week's duration.

Born in Rawdon 71 years ago, the late Mr. Haselett was the son of the late Mr and Mrs. Wm. Haselett. He was prominent in the community where he spent his entire life as a farmer. A member of Springbrook L. O. L. No. 442 he was greatly interested in the work of the Lodge.

Surviving are his widow, two sons, Harry of Bonarlaw and Gerald of Toronto, one sister, Rose Haselett, Springbrook, and two brothers, John, of Edmonton, and Thomas of Strassburg, Sask.

The funeral service was conducted on Thursday afternoon in Springbrook United Church under the auspices of the Springbrook Orange Lodge and visiting members. Rev. Mr. Harding preached a very comforting sermon to the bereaved family, who have the heartfelt sympathy of the community.

The flower-bearers were: — Mr. Fred Bateman, Don Stuart, Jack Eastwood, Clayton Burkitt, Alex. Stuart, Thomas Neal. The pallbearers were:— Mr Percy Bateman, Hugh Jones, Gordon Webb, Chas. Lough, Orrie Barton and Jack Morrison. Interment was made in 12th line cemetery.

PLANS TO EXPLORE NORTH POLE AREA

'Adventure and science now draw Sir Hubert Wilkins to attempt a new trail by sailing down the Mackenzie River in a pocket submarine. He is on his way to the west to find out if it is feasible to assemble a pocket submarine at some point in the west and in it to navigate the Mackenzie River.

He has a plan for a tiny craft, 48 feet long and eight and a half feet in diameter. It would have a crew of four men, an extensible electrically-heated conning tower which can melt its way through the pack to the surface and a dinky elevator to bring the explorers to the polar air. The war has caused abandonment of his plan to build a 120-foot submarine for Arctic exploration.

Knowledge of the polar sea reveals that the north pole is covered with moving pack ice. It is impossible to establish a permanent camp there for it would soon move. That is one reason for trying to reach the pole by submarine. Another reason is the great difficulty of getting to the North Pole over the ice. Sir Hubert claims that it would be very easy to get to the Pole under the ice in a submarine and easy to move back to the correct location as the ice pack shifts.

Such an exploration has importance of two kinds. It will permit the study of marine biology, Sir Hubert believing it will be more easy to study from under the water than from a surface vessel. He is particularly anxious to study marine biology between Bering Straits and the North Pole. This, according to the explorer and scientist seems to be the centre of the Arctic currents. The sea is about three miles deep at this point. Meterology can also be studied from under the surface. The contemplated submarine will not be a complicated vessel and the explorer will pay for it out of his own pocket with a few small contributions from scientific institutions. "I'll pay for it out of the proceeds of my books and lecture tours," he said.

Ice is from fourteen feet thick to six inches thick at the North Pole, but the thickness of ice gives no difficulty.

If it is found that the Mackenzie River is not navigable for the small under-ice sled he may build it on the Pacific Coast. He does not plan to stay long at a time under the water at the North Pole as it may not be advisable and it may be that a base will be established on the Arctic Coast.

MARCH

What is March? The question is difficult to answer and yet everyone knows the month well. The Christian Science Monitor in a new style of description gives rather a complete idea. Here is what is the month of March:—

"Mud . . . maple sugar
. . . rain . . . lambs . . .
snow . . . smoked ham . . .
wind . . . horseradish . . .
sunshine . . . rhubarb . . .
roosters . . . bluster . . .
skunk cabbage . . . crows
. . . greens . . . slush . . .
rain-barrels . . . tempests
. . . chickens . . . chickadees . . . sparrows . . .
clouds . . . blizzards . . .
buds . . . floods . . .
woodpiles . . . hail . . .
robins . . . freezes . . .
breezes . . . woodpeckers
. . . stars . . . groundhogs
. . . plows . . . logs . . .
bogs . . . fogs . . . brooks
. . . blasts . . . calves . . .
colts . . . showers . . .
sleet . . . sleighing . . .
freshets . . . housecleaning
. . . town meeting . . .
washouts . . . ice . . .
rakes . . . ruts . . . taxes
. . . chipmunks . . . thaws
. . . and mayflowers, violets, arbutus, and spring around the corner. 'That's March.' "

THE WEATHER

It is over four weeks ago since the bear saw his shadow and according to the adage there would be a "second winter" as it is called. The weather has turned moderate and the mild temperature of the first days of this week must have made the bear uneasy in his hibernation. In those past four weeks and more there has been no hard weather and severe storms have been lacking and March came in like a lamb.

The latter part of February was unusually bright and so far March has not developed blustery weather usually so characteristic of the month. Sunday was a bleak and dreary day but not stormy.

March has almost four weeks to go and there may be some severe encounters with the dying winter. However as Easter is less than three weeks away and there is a notion that an early Easter means an early spring, everybody holds out hope that the spring will not be a tardy one.

DOMINATION HIS AIM

Whatever the views which Adolf Hitler expressed last week, his plan remains the same, domination. He acted against the laws of nations and began the war which now rages when he went to batter down the Polish people. The demand for "living room" for the German people is a myth. That is not his plan. It is still domination.

Steadfastly from the start of the war Britain and France have expressed their opinion that peace can only come when Hitler, the cause of the strife, is removed from control of Germany and when Nazism in relation to the nations of the world is eliminated. Until that is accomplished there can be no peace.

Whatever explanations Hitler may put forward as to why Germany is at war, the facts remain that Britain and France are at war with Germany because of the German policy in relation to the freedom and preservation of the nationalities of Europe and because Nazi Germany used force and violence as an instrument of policy.

There is in the Allies the determined resolution to put an end to the trampling by Hitler on the rights of the nations and the freedom of peoples. The world knows that it was not an economic issue that caused the war. It was Hitler's desire, ruthless ambition and readiness to use violence that started the conflagration. No nation drove Germany to war but herself. Peace would not have been broken and the world would have advanced had it not been for the relentless ambition of the Nazi leader and the Nazi philosophy of government and world politics. It was not lack of colonies which caused the war; Nazi Germany had become war-minded and had deliberately prepared for war for years

The mask has long been off. Mankind has a clearly-defined conception of what is the Nazi German program—to dictate and to dominate Europe and then the world.

Therefore Britain and France will fight the Hitler and Nazi menace until the threat to the world is removed.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MARCH 5TH, 1920

Preliminary estimates brought down in the city council total the staggering sum of one million and three hundred thousand dollars. Here is the list: Housing $500,000; Free Bay Bridge $50,000; Schools $350,000; Patriotic Fund, still due, $50,000; New Fire Hall $25,000; Gas Plant $50,000; Public Works, pavements and sewers $145,000; Other expenditures $65,000. Ratepayers may well view these preliminary estimates with uneasiness; there is a limit to which even progressiveness can safely go. However, we shall see.

The outlook for the cheese business this year is said to be excellent.

30 YEARS AGO

MARCH 5TH, 1910

Rumor says that there will be fire works at the next meeting of the city council over the proposed increase in market tolls.

Gas from the pipe crossing the lower bridge became ignited late last night and created quite a blaze. Members of the fire department smothered the flame with a blanket. Some passerby had evidently dropped a lighted match upon the leak.

Some of the cellars along the west side of Front Street were flooded this afternoon owing to the ice shove. No particular damage was done.

Mrs. S. Bopery of Lindsay is visiting friends in the city.

One Picture Missing

Telling the story of a bank robbery in pictures is good enough newspaper practice. It gives so many people a chance to get their picture in the paper. Gives to the bank building an opportunity to have its picture taken, and bank buildings are so obliging that way; they remain still and unmoved while the operation is on.

We noticed that the Globe and Mail used two and a-half columns of space to picture a bank robbery. After the robbery was over the bandit went to a moving picture show and changed his clothing in the wash room. Then departed with $646 in his pocket.

Interesting to note all the things shown in the picture. No. 1 was the teller who took two shots at the bandit—and missed; No. 3 was the ledgerkeeper who chased the bandit in a car and took four shots at him—and missed. No. 6 was the junior clerk who also took a shot at the bandit—and missed. No. 8 was the picture of a hole in the wall showing where one of the bullets had lodged, and that looked rather impressive, although a hole in the wall has no effective connection with stopping the bandit.

Then there is the picture of a detective stooping over with flashlight in hand looking at the room where the bandit changed his clothes. Our book on "How to Be a Detective" indicates that stooping over and looking closely at the floor is quite the right attitude.

In all nine pictures, and the only one missing is that of the man who robbed the bank.

Strangleholds

Herr von Ribbentrop is reported to have told Mr. Sumner Welles yesterday that Germany is not prepared to consider peace unless and until Great Britain's "stranglehold on the economic life of the world" is broken. Of what does this "stranglehold" consist? If Herr von Ribbentrop chooses to describe it as sea power that enables Britain in time of war to obtain essential supplies for herself and to deny those supplies to her Continental enemies, then he is defining for Germany a war aim which can only be achieved with the destruction of the British fleet. But if he means that in normal times of peace Britain is hogging the good things of the earth— its reserves of oil and minerals and crops —to the detriment of other nations, then he is talking nonsense.

For the plain fact is that in times of peace Britain's reserves of all these things—British oil and British rubber, British sugar and British copper—are available to the merchants of every nation at precisely the same price that is paid by Englishmen themseles. There is not one price for tin at Singapore for British manufacturers and another price for German manufacturers. Any German—any Swiss, any Russian, any Scandinavian—can and does buy British raw materials in the world market at the world price. Moreover, British capital with which to develop the resources of other countries can likewise be purchased at prices which make no discrimination between nations as such. For example: in the post-war years a great many millions of pounds sterling of British capital went into Germany to help rebuild that country. And there much of it was trapped.

It is true, of course, that merchants of other nations—Germans, Danes, Greeks, Japanese—must have British exchange if they are to purchase British products, and this means that they must sell goods of their own abroad. It is also true that in this respect Germany has suffered (along with all other nations) from the rising tide of economic nationalism in the post-war years and the multiplication of high tariffs. But what have Herr von Ribbentrop and his Fuehrer done to remedy this situation from Germany's point of view? They have aggravated the very problem that was chiefly responsible for Germany's economic troubles by taking that country into a deliberately planned "autarchy" which isolated it still further from the paths of international commerce. They have shaken the confidence of foreign markets on which their trade was dependent, with their endless threats of war. And they have governed their own country with such scorn for the standards of civilized conduct that sentiment everywhere has turned against the German nation, with a still further loss of markets. When Herr von Ribbentrop talks of "strangleholds" let him not forget that Hitler has strangled the goodwill of most of the world.

Kipling Let Wife Dominate Him

The recent death of Mrs. Rudyard Kipling caused Viscount Castlerosse, who knew the Kiplings well, to write some of his reminiscences in The London Sunday Express, to which he is a regular contributor.

"They were among the few happy pairs I have ever met," he says, "but as far as Mr. Kipling was concerned his married life was one of complete surrender.

"To him Carrie, as he called her, was more than a wife. She was a mistress in the literal sense, a governess and a matron. In a lesser woman I should have used the term 'nurse.'

Gave Her All His Earnings

"Kipling handed himself over bodily, financially and spiritually to his spouse. He had no banking account. All the money which he earned was handed over to her, and she, in turn, would dole him out so much pocket money. He could not call his time or even his stomach his own.

"When in London he would frequently have luncheon in the Beefsteak Club. He describes these meals in his autobiography. After luncheon he would take out a pipe, which first he would regard affectionately and then rub in the palm of his hand. His tobacco he kept in an oval silver box.

"'It is not as strong as I would like,' he said to me one day. I guessed the reason. Carrie would not let him smoke strong tobacco. 'The missus," he called her.

"Then regularly at twenty-five minutes past two he would look at the clock, push back his chair and leave rather hurriedly. He was going back to join Carrie at Brown's Hotel. His midday meal was frugal, and it had to be, for he was given only a few shillings with which to regale himself.

"This restraint was due not so much to parsimony as to the fact that Mr. Kipling was always fearful that her husband would overeat or overdrink himself.

"Rud, she called him, and her eye, like the eye of the Almighty was always on Rud.

"Sometimes in the evening, enlivened by wine and company, he would take a glass more than he was accustomed to and then those great big eyes of his would shine brightly behind his strong spectacles, and Rud would take to talking faster and his views would become even more emphatic.

Sent Off to Bed

"If Mr. Kipling was with him she would quickly notice the change and, sure enough, in a decisive voice she would issue the word of command: 'Rud, it is time you went to bed,' and Rud always discovered that it was about time he went to bed.

"I myself during the long years never once saw any signs of murmuring or of even incipient mutiny.

"If Mrs. Kipling had never lived, Kipling would have been a greater writer, but he would not have had such a happy life— an existence which was only stained by the death of his son."

Kipling's only son, John, who was an officer in the Irish Guards, was killed in action at the Battle of Loos during the World War, when a detachment was cut off and died fighting. Their bodies were never recovered.

Aryan Cowards

Vladimir Grossman, of Montreal, writes in the Canadian Jewish Review of some German characteristics, saying that the whole civilized world—and not only the Jew — shudders at the German's attitude toward and treatment of the Jews. This is no longer a political problem. It has become a subject of study for neuropathologists and students of mass-psychosis. It is now patent that we are here faced with an abnormal phenomenon—an urge on the part of a large number of humans to destroy other humans and to shed human blood in order to gratify certain instincts.

What, however, are these instincts? In German brutality toward Jews and Poles there is evident one dominating element; the absolute helplessness of the victim. The more obvious the defencelessness of the victim the more pronounced the savagery and inhumanity of the assailant. There are beasts in the jungle that relinquish their prey as soon as it is crushed and ceases to put up a fight. There is an unwritten code of "ethics" among low robbers and murderers to spare the life of children, women and the aged. But not even the ethics observed by professional criminals is followed by the German military hordes and their leaders. Is this perhaps an organic defect with this nation of philosophers and "spiritual disciplinarians"? Or is it, perchance, a new phenomenon, the product of new conditions? Mayhap, again, that such is the horrible lot of a people or of a land whose misfortune it is, through various vicissitudes, to be ruled by a band of underworld gangsters?

An answer to these problems is of vital importance not only for the Jews; the whole world is clamoring for it, since the war will, at all events, not destroy the German people. We are not concerned with Hitler or Hitlerism. We are concerned with the Germans and with what they themselves call Deutschtum (Germanism), the German Spirit, the true Germanic spirit.

But the desired answer can only be arrived at if we rid ourselves of the idea fixed of German invincibility. Mighty Prussia's attack upon little and weak Denmark in 1864 was the assault of a robber upon a defenceless neighbor; the war that Prussia waged against Austria in 1866 and Bismarck's provocation which led France, under Napoleon III, to declare war on Prussia, were all calculated to demoralize the enemy. Napoleon III was as much of a "mystic" as, later, Wilhelm II. The abject defeat of the German Army in 1918 is, nevertheless, the most signal military debacle recorded in the annals of modern warfare. The German Army surrendered and the God-anointed and last of the Hohenzollerns fled to Holland —so fast in fact, that the very devil could not catch up with him—the Teutonic countless hosts and their artillery were intact. When the Iron Marshal Hindenburg, and the bestial Ludendorff kept, every second, raging and demanding over the telephone to Berlin that the army capitulate immediately to the Allies, that same army was planted upon the soil of France.

When The War Ended

The "heroes" who were to preach later on a totalitarian war, brought the world war to its conclusion in an ignominious and cowardly fashion, and were the first to take to their heels; were the first guilty of flight, in the simplest sense of the term. If General Blucher, the man who with his regiments turned the tide at Waterloo in favor of Wellington and, at the last moment, dealt a death blow to Napoleon, could but rise from his grave he would have contemptuously shouted at the German strategists: "Cowards! You are not soldiers! You are but murderers of women and children! Cowards!"

In 1917, too, when the Germans dictated the Brest-Litovsk peace treaty their stand was that of highwaymen who knew full well that the men they treat with are crushed and incapable of defence. General Hoffman's attitude toward the Russian delegates was that of a robber chieftain. Yet, but one year after that, when the Germans lost the war and people in Poland tore off the epaulettes of Teuton officers and spat publicly in their faces — they put up no opposition, accepted it all obsequiously. The German army was no more. Cowards!

It is easy enough to shoot down Polish Jews in Wierushow, or Lublin, knowing all the while they cannot even dream of defending themselves. It is easy enough for "Ayran" German officers to violate Jewish women and to slay their children; there is no risk, no danger; no possible defence. It is an easy job.

At Versailles in 1918 Germany's chief delegate, Count Brockdorff Rantzau played the role of one outranged by the conditions of the Treaty and refused to sign the document. Now, another German nobleman, a Baron von Neurath, plays the role of an executioner in Czechoslovakia, in the full knowledge that the Czechs can put up no defence. Is it not likely that he will occupy the chair in which once sat Count Brockdorff Rantzau, his head hanging in shame? Cowards!

Aryan murderers and cowards! That is what the whole German army is today—its great heroes and its small, petty heroes. Is it possible, then, that history, in the face of a horrified world, will not stigmatize them with the only epithet which befits them: Murderers and Cowards?—Montreal Gazette.

Why Hitler Still Holds Back

(By Francis Williams, in the London Daily Herald).

No real ray of light yet penetrates the fog of this strange new war.

The war strategy of the Allies is, it is true, clear enough, and on the whole thoroughly commendable. It has from the beginning been directed to avoiding large wastage of life in attacks against strongly fortified positions. It is the strategy of siege warfare, not of an attempt at a knock-out blow —whether by land or air.

It is the German reaction which provides the mystery of the war.

Here are threats piled upon threats, but so far hardly any action at all. Instead of the blitzkrieg expected, there is confusion and inactivity. In place of the waves of attacking planes which each one of us anticipated, there is a spray of propaganda which dashes itself to nothingness against the rock of fact.

Why is this? What is happening inside Germany to explain this failure of German arms even to attempt any decisive action?

There seems to me to be four possible explanations. Here they are:

(1) German inactivity may be a quite deliberate and considered policy of political war.

As I pointed out in one of my previous weekly articles, military and political weapons are, for Herr Hitler, interchangeable — he employs whichever seems most likely to achieve his purpose.

And it is possible that he still considers that if Germany takes no decisive action, and particularly no decisive action against civilian populations, Britain and France will get tired of making a war which has no battles and will, in the end, allow it to die of its own inertia, leaving Germany still in possession of Czecho-Slovakia and her part of Poland.

Hitler may have studied the history of Sanctions against Italy and remember that after a period of not very whole-hearted action, there came a time when Mr. Neville Chamberlain announced that Sanctions had become mid-summer madness. They were ended and Italy remained with her Abyssinian prize.

He may think—wrongly, I consider—that if he bides his time and does nothing very much, history will repeat itself and that Mr. Chamberlain will make another speech and that another act of aggression will have been allowed to succeed.

The absence of a German attack may be due to inability to attack effectively against strong defences.

(2) The Air Force which has hung as a threat over Europe for so many years may have been largely bluff and may not, in fact, be competent to undertake engagements which will involve it in a clash with first-rate opponents.

And the Army may be insufficiently equipped, have too small a proportion of fully trained men, and be unable to rely upon an efficient enough transport system to make it possible for it to risk any large engagement.

(3) There may be dissensions so acute within Germany that the regime dare not risk a major war operation.

It may not dare risk it for fear that it would provide the cover for a major internal revolt — either within the Nazi Party itself or on the initiative of a monarchist-Army group, or possibly—although at the present stage this seems not very probable—within the mass of bewildered ordinary people.

(4) Indecision may be due to a brainstorm on the part of Hitler himself.

The feeling that he is being thwarted by Britain and France may, for the time being, have upset the balance of a mind never very stable.

Opposition to his will has always driven Hitler into a frenzy. If to this is added the effect of the Munich bomb plot, it may be that the Fuehrer is in no condition to come to any decisions himself and that none of his entourage has the courage to make decisions for him other than the makeshift decision to fill in the gap with loud threats.

Which of the possible explanations of German inactivity is the most likely to be correct? It is very difficult to say.

There is some evidence to support each of them.

In support of the first is the fact that the one constant theme of German radio propaganda in English has been — apart from dislike for Mr. Churchill—that this is an absurd war. Again and again comes the attempt to persuade the people of Britain that none of their real interests is affected, and that it would be better for everybody if the war were called off without further ado. There is other evidence of the same kind.

Yet such an explanation does not square either with the bursts of hate propaganda, or with what seems at one time to have been very near a decision to attack Holland.

In favor of the second explanation is the definite failure of the German air attacks on Scotland, the very high percentage of casualties and the accumulating evidence that the German fighters are inferior to both the British and French.

Yet it is difficult to believe that the leaders of a great military machine like the German would admit inferiority simply on such evidence and without the test of a really large scale action.

As to the dissension within Germany, there was evidence of that before the Munich bomb showed the pitch to which hatred of Hitler has risen among some, at any rate, of those near to him.

And finally we have plenty of evidence over a long period of the unstable nature of the German leader—of the passions into which opposition to his will throws him and of how queerly balanced in him are periods of indecision and of sudden political flair and decision.

Reports of a contemplated attack, first in this direction and then in that, the mixture of conciliation and hate in propaganda, all suggest that he is in one of those moods of indecision now.

If so, we must not expect that if we are wise, will we under estimate the power and energy of Herr Hitler when he does make up his mind.

Here then are four possible explanations of the mystery of Germany's inactivity. My own feeling is that it is something of all four which holds Germany back.

Hitler, I think, has not yet quite made up his mind that the era of victories without war is over. He has been shaken in his hopes of a lightning war by his generals' reports on the comparative strength of the German forces, and still more shaken by the knowledge of plots against him. In consequence he is at the moment in a mood of hysteria which makes decision impossible.

No doubt that mood will pass. But while it lasts we gain. Every day increases our output of arms, every day improves further our already strong Air Force.

And within Germany indecision at the top must be having a crushing effect upon the morale of the masses.

We must not fall into the danger of over-confidence, nor delude ourselves that Nazism will be defeated without a struggle.

But we may, at any rate, congratulate ourselves that in these early days of democracy has shown a steadiness both of strategy and purpose that Hitlerism has been unable to achieve.

Sunday's bombing of the British liner Domala in the English Channel with a loss of more than 100 lives and the apparent crippling of the ship emphasizes the soundness of the present British policy of arming ships with anti-aircraft guns.

The Domala is the biggest vessel which so far has fallen a victim to the German air force, now engaged in indiscriminate warfare against everything afloat around the British Isles. The incident also marks the first appearance of German raiders west of the Strait of Dover.

In planting its bombs on the Domala the bomber swooped down to a level only forty feet above the ship. At that height the bomb aimers were practically certain of hitting their target but their aircraft would have been an easy mark for anti-aircraft fire had the Domala been armed.

Like many of the other devices used in modern war anti-aircraft gunnery is more often than not a preventive measure. Aircraft are seldom destroyed by it but they cannot bomb effectively or accurately in the face of a hail of lead.

The Domala attack was the most spectacular weekend illustration of the way the war is becoming intensified in all domains, the land, sea and air.

On the western front between the Rhine and Moselle rivers patrolling and raiding activity was intensified. A number of clashes between German and French troops were reported and both sides took prisoners. French authorities learned the Germans were bringing fresh divisions up to the line.

In the air numerous fights occurred over the lines and the British made long and repeated reconnaissance flights over Germany.

PUMPING PLANT FULLY EXPLAINED TO ROTARY CLUB

O. H. Scott Tells Rotary 781,000,000 Gallons Were Pumped Last Year With Average Consumption of 141 Gallons

ADVISES METERS

Mechanism of Plant Fully Detailed in an Interesting Address

The constant problem of supplying the city of Belleville with pure water was explained to the Rotary Club at its noon luncheon yesterday by Mr. Oswald Scott, manager of the Public Utilities Commission. Last year the Belleville Waterworks pumped and filtered 781,000,000 gallons, with an average consumption per person for the whole city of 141 gallons.

Pointing to the many sources of water wastage, Mr. Scott compared Belleville's water consumption with other centres, where water meters are used, including the highly industrialized city of Brantford, where consumption is only 78 gallons per capita. Wastage, he pointed out, added to the cost, which affected every person.

The Waterworks Department always had before it two prime considerations: first, the health of the community, and, second, an ample capacity for fire fighting, Mr. Scott explained.

Belleville waterworks are comparatively young, he continued. They were started in 1886 as a private enterprise and the mains covered a large part of the city at that time. The water tower was erected then and the pumping station was operated by steam. The total mileage of mains had doubled since 1886. In 1898 the city took over the waterworks at a cost $182,000.

Water From Trent Watershed

Touching on the source of Belleville's water, Mr. Scott said that water flowing into the Bay of Quinte mostly originated in Muskoka and came down the Trent watershed. There are quite a number of fair sized communities along the course and as they grow the problem of contamination increases. Industrial development at Frankford and Trenton and the expansion of the airport all added to the problem of water purification.

"More than half of the waterworks systems on the North American continent obtained water from artesian wells," said Mr. Scott. Where water came from direct natural sources contamination only could be overcome by filtration. The system of purification used today might not be adequate a few years hence because of the increasing sources of contamination. Even wells were becoming increasingly affected. Something over 300 wells in this district were tested in 1921 and only three were found to be free from polution.

It was not possible to separate water for home-use from that for fire use, so that the supply was doubly costly to provide.

Plant Completely Renovated

Up to 1911 the water for Belleville use had been pumped directly into the mains. Then in 1917 the plant had been completely electrified, Mr. Scott continued. In 1923 a new intake was installed and a standby pump operated with a gasoline engine was put in to provide against failure of the electric system.

During the past year, said Mr. Scott, Belleville Waterworks had pumped 781,000,000 gallons of filtrated water into the mains, beside 37,000,000 to backwash the filters. In this process 82,165 pounds of alumn and 9,292 pounds of chlorine had been used. The water first is pumped into the intake well then chlorinated and filtered before being pumped into the mains. In the winter, due to less solid matter in the water the filters could operate as long as 149 hours before being backwashed. In the summer sometimes this period falls as low as two hours. The filters are composed of 28 inches of fine sand over 20 inches of gravel. There are three settling basins with a total capacity of 180,000 gallons.

Mr. Scott said it was the policy of the Commission to gradually renew the waterworks equipment. One of the difficulties with the gas plant was that nothing had been renewed for years, and steps had been taken to ensure that a similar situation did not develop with the waterworks. Installations were being renewed constantly and water meters installed in industrial plants.

Average Consumption 141 Gallons

In 1939 the average consumption per person, including all water used industrially, was 141 gallons, said Mr. Scott. The use of meters showed a tremendous saving, while giving people all the water they needed. Among places where most of the consumption of water is metered he quoted Barrie with an average yearly consumption of 58 gallons per person, Brantford 78 gallons, Port Hope 56 gallons and St. Thomas 87 gallons.

A tremendous amount of water is lost each year through leakage which can not be stopped excepting by water users. "For instance," said Mr. Scott, "a dripping tap will waste 2,920 gallons a year.

Utility Financially Strong

Financially, Mr. Scott declared, Belleville Waterworks are in a happy position. The outstanding debentures amounted to $117,000. After using some of the surplus for improving and renewing the system the balance was handed back to the city to be applied against lowering the tax rate. The city is charged $3,000 a year for fire service, but in the past three years this amount had been returned annually along with $19,292.

"I believe this money should go back to the people who paid it in the first instance," Mr. Scott declared.

Mr. Scott, who is a past president of Belleville Rotary Club, was introduced by Frank Correll, and the thanks of Rotary was fittingly voiced by Jack Hartwick.

Plans for Ladies' Night on Monday evening, March 11th, were announced by Jack Deacon. Nacy Piper, journalist and former director of Hart House theatre, Toronto will be the guest speaker.

Among the guests was E. W. Van Luven, president of the Kingston Rotary Club. Information was received that Mr. Harry Ackerman had attended a meeting of the Rotary Club in Mexico City.

"Just like Mr. Chamberlain", said Les, wiping the soap off his razor.

"Exactly", agreed Mr. Picobac. "And the whole British Empire's behind him!"

History of Newspaper Development Told to B. Y. P. U. by Clarke Lapp

The large number of B.Y.P.U. members and their friends who braved the disagreeable slush Monday evening were well rewarded when they heard an authoritative and enthralling address on "The Heart of a Newspaper," by Mr. Clarke Lapp, Advertising Manager of The Ontario Intelligencer.

Mr. Lapp interestingly outlined the history of printing, from the earliest form of wooden blocks to the modern high-speed presses of today. Johann Guttenberg, of Mainz, Germany, said Mr. Lapp, was the inventor of printing from movable metal types cast from moulds, in the year 1450. This was the first important step in printing and it is significant that the Bible was the first book to be printed on Guttenberg's press. The speaker described the chief features of this early press that comprised a flat table on which the form was placed face upwards and a folding leaf, holding the paper to be printed. Pressure was applied by lever and screw to a platen of metal, which forced the paper on to the inked type and so transferred the impression.

Few Could Read, Write

Mr. Lapp stated that very few people before Guttenberg's time, other than the clergy and the nobility, could read or write but with the advance in the art of printing books became available to the common people and great strides in education were made. Little change took place in the printing press between the 15th and the 19th centuries. The first radical mechanical innovation affecting speed and cheapness was that of the revolving cylinder, which holds the paper in its passage across the type. The introduction of the impression cylinder developed the factor for speed. The modern newspaper press proceeds with that development by the addition of a type or rather, a plate-carrying cylinder. The modern newspaper press is a composite machine with many replicas of the type matter and cutting and folding apparatus, producing completed copies at the rate of several thousand per hour at the delivery point.

Invention of Linotype

The third great step in printing was the invention of the linotype by Mergenthaler, an intricate and really amazing machine that sets type faster than formerly could be done by six men. Mr. Lapp explained how the magic fingers of this machine picked out type matts, filled in spaces and cast a complete line of type matter in one solid slug of lead.

An insight of how news-gathering was co-ordinated and distributed was given by the speaker. Dispatches covering all important world happenings were gathered by a central agency of which scores of daily newspapers were members. He explained how the world-wide ramifications of the news-gathering agencies were available to the Ontario Intelligencer and how in turn the local paper contributed to this service. Thus, a recent tragedy which occurred in the vicinity of Belleville was covered by a reporter of The Ontario Intelligencer, the dispatch was transmitted to the headquarters of the Canadian Press and in turn transmitted to all member newspapers across Canada. Likewise the Canadian Press sent the story to the Associated Press in New York and a summary of the story appeared all over the continent that same afternoon.

News Proportioned

While newspapers endeavored to give the public all important news items as quickly and accurately as possible, stated Mr. Lapp, there was always more pleasure derived by the paper in printing news that was good-flavored and pleasant than news that was melancholy and unpleasant. There was an attempt to keep down to proper proportions things that were offensive. Several amusing personal experiences of his reportorial days were related by Mr. Lapp, to the enjoyment of the appreciative audience.

The guest speaker was introduced by Mr. Ed. Burn of the Stewardship Group, under whose auspices the meeting was held. Miss Margaret Lee capably performed the duties of chairman and Miss Marion Chambers read the Scripture lession. Two splendid pianaforte solos, "The Palms" and "Romance," were contributed by Mr. K. Burgess and Miss Anna Hogle sang very sweetly "The Holy City" with Miss Katherine Hogle supplying piano accompaniment. The closing prayer was given by Miss Janet Grant.

Madoc Community Honors Newlyweds

Madoc — On Thursday afternoon the Catholic Women's League of Sacred Heart Church, Madoc, held a very successful afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. Robert O'Riordan. The tea table was presided over by Mrs. G. Wallbridge and Mrs. O. McEvoy. Others assisting the hostess were Mesdames Fred Nayler, L. Rupert, L. Mulrooney, Fred Meraw and Miss K. Laffin.

On Friday night neighbors and friends of Madoc Township and village gathered at the home of Mr and Mrs. George Hill to do honor to their son and his bride, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Hill. Cards were played during the first part of the evening with Mrs. Parks and Mr. B. Bailey being the winners. Following this Mrs. Madeline Bailey read an address to Mr. and Mrs. W. Hill and they were presented with many beautiful and useful gifts among which was a cabinet of silver from the groom's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Hill thanked their friends for the gifts. Concert Assoc. Plans to Have Don Cossack Choir Appear in the City

Local Organization Launches Drive to Obtain 600 Members to Make Possible Next Season's Attractions

C. A. CAMERON, PRES.

With an objective of 600 members in order to make possible the appearance in the city of the famed Don Cossack Male Choir, the annual membership campaign of the Canadian Concert Association was launched in the city Monday evening at the most enthusiastic inaugural gathering of the organization's six years. The dinner meeting at the Queens Hotel was attended by an unusually large number of members who displayed such keen interest in the association's future that the success of the drive was assured.

Mr. C. A. Cameron presided and welcomed the members present, expressing special pleasure at the presence of those from out of town, Miss Light and Mr. C. Jamieson of Napanee, and Mr. and Mrs. K. Crews of Trenton. At the election of officers which took place later in the program, Mr. Cameron was unanimously re-elected as president, tribute being paid to his splendid work while occupying office in his past terms. The executive is as follows: President, C. A. Cameron, K.C., ex-M.P.; Vice Presidents, W. J. Morrison, R. Hachborne, S. B. Wright, Deloro, C. Jamieson, Napanee, Mrs. K. Crews, Trenton, Miss Florence Barber, Picton; Treasurer, Mr. B. C. Sisler; Secretary, Mrs. B. Reid; Campaign Chairman, Miss Leona Riggs; Campaign Secretaries, Miss Aileen McKeown, Miss Jessie McGie, Mrs. Jack Haig; Publicity Chairman, Alec. Gordon; Chairman of Ushers, R. Hachborne.

The appointment of Reception and Artists' Committees, Board of Directors and Team Captains will be made by the executive and it was decided that the chairman of the Board of Education would be asked to be a member of the Board of Directors.

The report of the treasurer was given by Mr. B. C. Sisler.

To maintain the high standard of entertainment provided this year the membership fee will remain at three dollars, with a student rate of one dollar and a half offered to pupils of the public schools, Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, St. Michael's Academy, Albert College and Ontario Business College. Those procuring adult tickets for next year's concert season will be given the privilege of also attending the Ann Jamieson recital on Friday night. A further advantage offered was that a deposit of one dollar be accepted, the remainder of the senior ticket fee being payable in September.

Plans Outlined

Miss Leona Riggs, campaign chairman, to whom special credit for the success in Belleville of the Canadian Concert Association is due, outlined the plans for the campaign which will conclude on Friday, March 15th. Headquarters will be as usual at the Chamber of Commerce. If a membership of six hundred is obtained Belleville will have the distinction of a vait by the Don Cossack Male Choir with its distinguished singers and dancers. This group of White Russians who came to America in 1918 is one of the most famous of choruses in the musical world today and their performances have swept audiences to their feet with cheering to the echo. As another concert artist Ania Dorfmann, pianist, who has appeared as guest with Toscanini's NBC orchestra has been selected while the third concert has not been chosen.

This year all the artists graciously played for the school children and Miss Jamieson will sing for them, and tell them something of life in Hollywood.

Sincere appreciation to the Board of Education for their kindness in past years in permitting the use of the auditorium was expressed and a letter will be forwarded to the Board officially recording the heartfelt thanks of the association.

Mr. John Deacon on behalf of the members commended the president and executive for the splendid concerts in the past and pointed out that in providing free to school children of the city afternoon concerts by outstanding artists the association was making a valuable contribution to the development of musical appreciation in the youth of the city.

It was announced at the meeting that blind people residing in Belleville were being invited and escorted to Ann Jamison's concert on Friday evening.

At the conclusion of the interesting meeting details of the campaign were discussed and arranged.

PLAINFIELD W. M. S.

The February meeting of the Plainfield W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. Arthur Hall on Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 28th.

The president, Mrs. Harry McCreary opened the meeting with a few well chosen words in memory of Lord Tweedsmuir and a hymn was sung. Mrs. Clarence Hall led in prayer for the bereaved family. The days devotions were in charge of Mrs. Viollet Elliott. Mrs. Ralph Wilder rendered a solo and Mrs. Mabel Hubbel led in prayer. After the transacting of considerable business the second group leader, Mrs. Ed. Emerson took charge. Mrs. Bernice Moore rendered a solo and Mrs. Emerson gave the chapter in Study Book, "Moving Millions". Miss A. Hamilton gave a short reading on Christian Stewardship and Mrs. Clarence Hall in a short talk on Christian Citizenship said there were no slums in Finland. A hymn was sung and the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Stirling Rector To Assume Charge Brockville Parish

Brockville, March 5—The Bishop of Ontario announces the appointment of the Rev. A. S. McConnell, L.Th., rector of the parish of Stirling and Frankford, as rector of Trinity Church, Brockville. The appointment will take effect on April 1. Mr. McConnell is a past president of the Dominion Anglican Young People's Association, states the Brockville Recorder.

The Rev. Mr. McConnell, who succeeds the Rev. S. E. Morton, Rural Dean of Leeds, who died some weeks ago, was born in County Fermanagh, Ireland, and came to Canada in 1914. During the Great War he served with the Canadian Army Service Corps and after some years' business experience, entered the University of Toronto. He graduated in divinity from the University of Trinity College in 1929 and, having been ordained a deacon on May 5, 1928, and a priest the following year, was appointed to the mission of North Frontenac, where he served for three and one-half years. In 1932 he was appointed incumbent of the mission of Loughboro and in August of the following year he became rector of the parish of Stirling and Frankford, where his ministry has been most successful. For several years he has been a member of the executive committee of the synod of the diocese of Ontario and of the diocesan board of religious education and he is regarded as one of the most promising clergy in the diocese.

While living in Toronto as a young man, Mr. McConnell became much interested in young people's work in the church and he was elected president of the Toronto Local Council and subsequently they have a family of two sons.

Mrs. McConnell was formerly Miss Ruby Foy of Toronto and Dominion president of the Anglican Young People's Association.

BRIDGE ST. W.M.S.

The March meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Bridge St. United Church was held Friday afternoon with Miss L. Brown, the President, presiding.

Mrs. Cronk, in reporting for the department of Stewardship and Finance said: "The cause of war, want and misery would disappear if individuals and nations followed the Master. The only way to a lasting peace is for those who have the answer to spread the way of life."

Mrs. Finkle's group had charge of the programme—which was introduced by a devotional period led by Mrs. Holmes and assited by Mrs. Daly on the theme "Ye Shall be my Disciples, I will Make ye to Become Fishers of Men."

Mrs. Finkle, assisted by Mrs. Bell and Mrs. Moore gave a resume of a chapter of the study book "Moving Millions" written by one of the native bishops of the church in India. It was particularly interesting because it presented the case for Christ from the Oriental angle, with the great necessity for church union instead of the overlapping and confusion of denominationalism.

SALEM W. M. S.

The February meeting of Salem W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. P. Milligan. The president opened the meeting with a hymn followed with minutes, roll call and business. A letter was read from Mrs. J. Hanna expressing her appreciation of a plant sent during her illness. The opening exercises and devotional period were those of the World Day of Prayer and led by the president, Mrs. L. McLaren. Mrs. Clifford Hagerman took charge of the program. Readings were contributed by Miss Clarence Hagerman, Mrs. J. Sills and Mrs. G. Milligan. After the closing hymn, all repeated the Mizpah Benediction.

Gently Does it —With Fish

Many centuries ago a Chinese sage said: "If you would govern a country wisely, do it gently, as you would cook a small fish." Today government experts tell us to cook all fish gently, large or small, and they caution us to cook them until they are tender only (no longer) in order to preserve their delicate flavour. Whether you are planning to govern the country or the family dinner, these wise words should be your guide.

In view of the fact that the next few weeks will bring forth many recipes for governing the country, we shall confine ourselves here to recipes for cooking fish — gently.

Stuffed or Planked Fish

Use a whole fish, or any desired fillets. Clean the fish or wipe the fillets with a damp cloth, wrung out in cold, salted water. Salt lightly and stuff.

Dressing:

2 cups of soft bread crumbs; ½ can of tomato soup or ½ cup of cooked strained tomatoes; 1½ tablespoons of melted butter or fat; ½ teaspoon salt, if soup is used, or 1 teaspoon salt if cooked tomatoes are used; ½ tablespoon of onion juice; ¼ teaspoon poultry dressing.

Mix together and stuff whole fish, or place the stuffing between two pieces of fillets. If a plank is used pre-heat it for 5 minutes at 400F. Grease the plank or pan, place the stuffed fish on it, sprinkle with oil or melted fat, and bake in a 400F. oven until the fish is cooked. Usually from 8 to 10 minutes per inch thickness of fish is sufficient. Serves 6.

Tomatoes stuffed with oysters, or creamed peas, and stuffed, parboiled onions may be placed around the planked fish and baked with it. Or potato croquettes may be alternated with the stuffed tomatoes or stuffed onions. Buttered bread crumbs and grated cheese may be used to stuff the tomatoes or onions, too.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, March 5

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A PRODUCTIVE and progressive day is read from the predominant planetary configurations, although success must be wrested from difficulties, obstacles and hostile opposition. Determination, perseverance and hard work, as well as initiative, are likely to attract the interest and solid support of employers, superiors or others whose co-operation is essential in putting over important projects. The conflict may be with groups, such as unions, guilds or organized opponents. Private affairs unfold romantic aspects.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year calling for all their skill, resolution, perseverance and industry, as well as boldness and initiative, in successfully launching new and important projects. There also will be obstructions, opposition and enmity, but these may be met by firm resistance, fidelity and patience, thus winning the definite support of those in prestige and influence. Enduring progress and stability should ensue.

A child born on this day may be able, industrious, practical and constructive, and should win against obstacles by patience, persistence, enterprise and co-operation of those in power. It may have jealous or passionate outbursts.

For Wednesday, March 6

A RATHER peculiar setup of the planetary scheme may be responsible for some surprising and perplexing developments on this day. This may mainly affect the domestic, social or emotional interests, with probably an unforeseen and uprooting denouement. While the disturbances may be unpredictable as well as breath-taking, the mental adjustment and poise are so soundly based that doubts and difficulties may be composed by good common sense.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of singular intriguing and unique experiences, which seem to be mysterious, dangerous and revolutionary. Doubts and disturbances, with perplexities and thrills are indicated, with their roots in subtle, inexplicable and bewildering sources.

A child born on this day although sensitive, impressionable, subtle and imaginative, fond of mystery and the unique, may have sound judgment and good common sense.

UNGRATEFUL GUEST

Rochester, Pa., March 5—(AP)—J. W. Specac celebrated his 50th birthday by inviting in some friends and boasting of his thrift. He showed them his savings of $133. Next day, he reported to detectives that one of the guests had stolen his money.

ANCIENT SYMBOL REMOVED

Springfield, Mo., March 4—(AP)—The hammer and sickle set into stone above the entrance of Pipkin punior high school is no more. Superintendent Harry Study got so tired of explaining that the design was an ancient symbol of industry and agriculture long before Communism that he hired a stone cutter to remove it.

HEARING IS ADJOURNED

Arnprior, Ont., March 5—(CP)—A two-weeks' adjournment was granted in police court today in the case of G. H. Moles, former municipal clerk and treasurer, charged with theft of between $7,000 and $8,000 incorporation funds.

The request for adjournment came from G. M. Bleakney of Ottawa, the accused's counsel. He asked additional time to "go over the case." Bail of $7,000 was continued.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today

Married Women Have the Best of It in This Life, Mother Nature Has Seen To That

Strangely every woman grows up with the idea that when she falls in love and gets married her pursuit of happiness has come to a glorious conclusion; that she's struck the high note and she will hold it until the end of time. Only a few women have wit enough to realize that staying in love is going to be harder work than falling in love and that keeping a man's interest is going to be much harder than catching it, that marriage hasn't given her immunity to sorrow and trouble but rather increased her susceptibility and put her in line for every experience that can come to a woman, bitter and sweet. Because she has believed that marriage marks the end of her struggle, she's inclined to fume and fret when she has troubles instead of triumphs.

Let's take an inventory of what the marired woman has a chance at. It rests largely with her how much she has. First, a big sop to feminine vanity. Every woman wants to be desired and enjoys the advertisement that she is desired. Marriage gives her the advertisement. She's as pleased as pie when a man proposes to give her his name, make her his wife and set her to preside over his home and bear his children. She also revels in the established place in a society which is set up for couples, a place she cannot have without a husband.

Second, she has a companion to share her troubles and her triumphs, her joys and her sorrows, the delicious sense of backing that even a poor excuse of man gives his wife. If she's lucky she has a breadwinner; if unlucky, she takes that over for the pleasure of having a man around the house. Somebody to cater to, somebody to talk things over with, somebody that she comes first with, somebody that comes first with her.

Third, she may have children; playtoys for her youth, companions for her maturity, comfort for her old age. She may have all the heart warming experiences of motherhood: love, pride in her progeny and an opportunity to live again her youth in her children.

Even though her husband is a broken reed and funds are scarce and the struggle to rear the children and maintain a home is hard and unremitting, the married woman has had great gulps of joy which the single woman cannot know. Unless her partner is a total loss as far as character is concerned, marriage is the happiest life for a woman and in the event that papa is a washout he has at least given her the opportunity for the full and completed life which nature intended every woman to have.

Comfort and encouragement for wives and mothers? Says I, the comfort, if any, should be handed out to those who live on crumbs and call themselves career women.

Caroline Chatfield.

Lynne Overman, "Small Fry" O'Connor and lovely Virginia Dale in the new Paramount mystery-comedy, "Death of a Champion," now showing at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program the colorful musical romance "Rose Marie," with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy.

MELROSE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular meeting of the Melrose Women's Institute was held for the month of February, on Thursday the 29th, at the home of the president, Miss Lily Weese. During the winter months the ladies of the community have been doing War Service work and the business part of this meeting was taken up in reporting on the articles that had been completed and handed in to the committee in charge and the funds on hand to continue this work. Methods of raising funds were discussed and it was decided to have a special box in which to place donations at each meeting. Another sewing day was arranged for.

Much credit is due the committee for war service work for the way they have purchased supplies, distributed them and so carefully expended the funds at their disposal. Mrs. Thos. Leslie who has so generously given of her time as a member of the war service committee, wished to thank those outside the society who had donated yarn and had knitted some as many as ten pairs of socks. At the previous meeting special mention had been made of Mrs. Edward Simpkins, over eighty years of age who had helped knit a pair of socks.

The members feel, during war time, there is greater need for economy so instead of remembering the sick with fruit or flowers the conveners will send a card.

Owing to illness in the homes a number responsible for the program were unable to be present. Much sympathy is felt for an aged member, Mrs. Robert McMechan, who has been confined to her bed for more than three months with a broken hip.

Readings were given by Mrs. Wm. McMechan, Mrs. S. Demille, Mrs. Chas. Young and Miss Evelyn Badgley. Mrs. Bates sang, playing her own accompaniment. Miss Lily Weese conducted a "Kitchen contest" the winning group being Mrs. G. Walker, Mrs. Fred Taylor and Mrs. O. Stratton.

Members were reminded to bring to the next meeting suggestions for next year's program or questions regarding Institute work.

Collection amounting to $3.20 was received and the National Anthem was sung. Attendance 32, including 7 visitors.

Refreshments were provided and served by the lunch committee.

PRACTICAL JOKE HAS FATAL ENDING

Ironton, O., March 4—(AP)— A coroner's inquest was ordered today into the deaths of W. T. Washington, 18-year-old Negro, and Gifford Rucker, 31, mechanic, who were victims of a "practical joke". Fellow employees smeared paint on the Negro's face as he napped, W. B. Dilley, foreman, reported. Gasoline exploded as Rucker sought to remove the paint, fatally burning the two men.

New Treatment For Old Malady

By McKEOWN'S Drug Store

Erysipelas has afflicted human beings for a very long time. Medical science has discovered new treatments for this old and painful and disfiguring malady.

Isolation is important. Erysipelas is a contagion of the first rank. The smallest abrasion or cut will admit the germ with the long scientific name.

Serum, a "cold ray" light, hygienic cleanliness, all figure in the treatment and cure. Consult your physician for expert advice — isolate the afflicted member of the family — use the utmost care to prevent a spread of the disease.

Take all prescriptions to a qualified druggist. This is a disease which demands the utmost skill and knowledge to combat.

CALL WITNESSES TO GIVE VERSION

Ernest Kehler's Flight to Canada Under Discussion at Murder Trial

New York, Mar. 5 (AP). — Witnesses from northern New York cities were called today to give their versions of Ernest Kehler's flight to Toronto after the slaying of a German consular attache.

Kehler is charged with killing Dr. Walter Engelberg in the Nazi's home in Brooklyn last Dec. 5. Police said the Winnipeg-born boxer confessed he killed the German when Engelberg made indicent advances, then fled to Canada to join his wife.

The prosecution expected to call witnesses from Buffalo, Niagara Falls and other cities who, the state says, would testify they saw or talked to the young fighter during his flight.

While his wife remained outside the courtroom at his request, Kehler heard himself identified yesterday as "the stranger" who boarded an elevated train at a Brooklyn station 80 minutes after the state contends the death took place.

Kehler, known in the ring as Ernie Haas, was identified by Pierce J. Powers, subway conductor.

Philip Mitchell, a negro fighter, testified he saw Kehler and Engelberg together in November at a prize fight in Manhattan.

German Student Photographed Damaged Plane

Question in House Revealed That He Had Lived in House of Employee of Minister of Supply

London, March 5—(CP)—Questions in the House of Commons brought out that Wilhelm Solf, German student at Oxford sentenced to two months imprisonment for photographing a damaged airplane at Abingdon, resided in the home of an employee of the Ministry of Supply.

It was further brought out that Solf's father was once the German Ambassador to China. The elder Solf was described by Captain Alan Graham, conservative, as "a notorious anglophobe," but this was denied by Osbert Peake, under-secretary for Home Affairs.

Young Solf, 25, who came to Britain three years ago to study at Oxford, was sentenced Feb. 26. Miss Marjorie N. Rowse, convicted at the same hearing of instigating the illegal photographing, was given a suspended sentence of one year.

Mr. Peake, replying to Sir Gifford Fox, conservative, disclosed that Miss Rowse's father is employed by the Minister of Supply as controller of machine tools and that Solf stayed at the Rowse home.

The Under-secretary added that while the photographs in question had no military value, "we are deeply concerned about the reckless and foolish disregard of the special restrictions upon aliens shown by this undergraduate."

DUTCH INDIGNANT OVER BOMBINGS

Nine Netherland Ships Bombed or Machine-Gunned in Two Days

Amsterdam, March 5—(CP-Havas) — The bombing or machine-gunning of nine Dutch ships in two days brought renewed expressions of indignation against Germany in the Netherlands today.

Two seamen were killed and many were wounded in the series of attacks carried out by Nazi aircraft at various points in the North Sea. The vessels attacked were the Limburg, 345 tons, the Wasa, Amazone, Boekelo, De Ruyeter, the Sint Annaland, 2,248 tons, the Schieland, 2,249 tons, the Rijnstroom, 855 tons and the Elziena, 197 tons. The Elziena was sunk.

"Such acts," said the Rotterdamsche Courant, "have caused great indignation.

"This manner of conducting the war is a flagrant offense against neutral rights, like torpedoing without warning.

"There can be no doubt about the identity of the aggressor, since members of the crew of the Elziena spoke of a German plane.

"We hope our government will protest vigorously at Berlin and it will be supported by the entire Dutch population."

MAKES PREDICTION

New York, March 5—(AP) — Archduke von Hapsburg, claimant of the ancient throne of Austria, believes a central European Democratic Federation would follow a revolution in Germany, or an Allied victory.

He said the real hope of lasting European peace in an Allied victory followed by a tight little union of federated states along the Danube. He mentioned the Czechs, Slovaks, Bohemians and Poles as prospective union members, in addition to Austria.

Opposes Proposal To Invoke Act Of Neutrality

Washington, March 5—(AP)—Senator Walter George, Democrat of Georgia, disclosed today that a foreign relations sub-committee of the United States Senate has voted unanimously against proposals to invoke the Neutrality Act in the Finnish-Russian and Sino-Japanese conflicts.

The sub-committee, of which George is chairman, agreed that there was no present need for application of the Act. George said that United States neutrality is not at stake in the hostilities, and that none of the four nations had declared war when the Act is applied—as it has been to Great Britain and the Dominions, France, Poland and Germany—a designated belligerent must pay cash for purchases in the United States and must transport them on non-American ships.

MARMORA OUSTED FROM PLAYOFFS

Defeated by Madoc 3-2 in Sudden Death Game for Playoff Berth

Madoc, March 5 (Special) — An exciting game of hockey was played in the Madoc Arena on Monday evening to settle what possibly was the most unsportsmanlike executive decision ever passed in the history of the Trent Valley League. The decision forced Madoc to play a team low in the standing before finishing the regular schedule, and although Norwood was originally scheduled to play this game, the executive cancelled it to allow Marmora a chance to get in the playoffs.

The Marmora lads were not good enough for the local team, however, and were skated off their feet to the tune of a 3-2 score. The loss sustained by the Marmora lads ousts them from further competition until another year.

The teams:

Marmora —Goal, Callery; defence, M. O'Neil and C. O'Neil; centre, Leonard; wings, Reynolds and Leonard; subs, Johnson, Buskard, Kerr and Neal.

Madoc—Goal, Martin; defence, Embury and Larone; centre, Keller; wings, Akey and Heyworth; subs, Gilman, Hawthorne; Stewart and McGibbon.

Referees—Herb Payne and Vance, Peterboro.

Fire Exploded 500 Gallon Gas Tank

Clarksburg, Ont., Mar. 5 (CP).—Bullets cracked and a tower of flame shot 100 feet in the air when a terrific explosion, following fire, rocked this village 15 miles west of Collingwood last night.

The fire broke out in Roy Lougheed's general store and threatened the entire business section before it was brought under control by the Collingwood fire department. Damage was estimated at $15,000.

Volunteer firemen were forced to retreat when the flames exploded ammunition in the store. Before outside help arrived the fire caused a 500-gallon gasoline tank near the store to explode. The crowd ran for shelter as the blast occurred.

German Youth Toting Three Guns When Arrested

New York, March 5—(AP) — Hans Wiggers, 15, may get back to Germany, but he won't be the three-gun man he was in Brooklyn early today.

Hans, pockets bulging, was strolling along when a radio car halted him. One of the policemen said: "Where are you going?"

Hans, whose knowledge of English is slight, was silent. He tugged at his pocket and handed over a .32 calibre American pistol.

"Where did you get this?" demanded the policeman.

Hans, still silent, handed over another pistol, a .35 calibre German weapon.

"What the devil are you up to?" asked the other cop.

Hans replied with a third gun—an air pistol.

They took him to the station house where an interpreter found out that Hans came from Germany 10 months ago as a mess boy. He missed his ship on its return trip.

He said he found the artillery in the basement of a Brooklyn house, and thought it would be a good idea to take it back to Hitler's army.

Then, he added, perhaps he would be forgiven for missing his ship.

The police turned him over to the children's society.

CODRINGTON MAN SUFFERS INJURY

Suffering a leg injury when a log rolled on him, while he was at work in the woods near at home, Mr. Wilfred Wright, R.R. No 2 Codrington, was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital at noon today and underwent an X-ray examination to determine the extent of his injuries. At press time however, the exact extent of the man's injuries had not been learned.

MERCHANT SHIPS OF GREAT BRITAIN ARE ALL ARMED

Signs Point to Intensified Aerial Attacks on the Sea Lanes by the Enemy

AIR FORCE ACTIVE

By H. M. PETERS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The sea and air power of Great Britain today set itself for the third wave of Germany's attacks on her shipping.

Signs pointed to intensified aerial attacks on the sea lanes and to vigorous British counter-measures, presumably through constant patrolling of the skies, engaging the enemy before it can pounce on shipping.

Winston Churchill's decision to arm all British merchantmen has been put into effect and the merchant marine will be able to give a good account of itself in its own defence.

Germany's air force appeared ready to attempt the job at which the submarine and the mine have fallen short of Nazi hopes. Submarine attacks have dropped appreciably with the destruction of an estimated fifty of the craft and the probable loss of more than 3000 trained submarine personnel. Similarly, diligent work by sturdy mine-sweepers has lowered the casualties by mines around the British Isles a comparatively negligible figure in recent weeks.

Activity Steadily Increases

But the German airforce is steadily increasing its activity over the sea. First it experimented for weeks on small British trawlers, raking them pitilessly with bomb and machine gun.

Now the air attack has spread to larger craft, and to neutral shipping.

The Netherlands reported today that nine of her ships had been attacked from the air in the North Sea. They ranged all the way from the 297-ton Elziena which was sunk, to the 2,249-ton Rijnstroom which was damaged.

This type of attack on larger craft was ushered in last week when a lone Heinkel bomber attacked the British liner Domala, 9441 tons, set her afire and crippled her seriously. The liner suffered a death list of more than 100.

London revealed the type of defence that will be employed against this menace, by giving a hint of how close a watch its scouting force is keeping on the German coast far across the North Sea. The Air Ministry announced that one plane had bombed a submarine in the Schillig Roads, which is at the very mouth of the Elbe River. Patrols over German seaplane bases at Sylt are commonplace.

That type of patrolling, intensified as the air attack is intensified, was the indicated reply.

Retired Engineer Presented With Fishing Tackle

Honoring their most recent member to have reached the age of retirement, Canadian National Railway officials and employees gathered at the Belvedere Hotel last evening to nonor W. A. (Pierpont) Morgan, retired C.N.R. engineer, who stepped from his last railway run one week ago in the Belleville C.N.R. yards. Mr. Morgan was presented with a complete fishing tackle outfit, he being a stern disciple of Izaak Walton, while Mrs. Morgan was given a beautiful caserole dish.

Upwards of 50 engineers and railway employees attended the banquet and testimonial function, while the entertainment was provided by Dan Fairman's "Top Hatters'" Orchestra. Dick Sargeant, also a retired engineer, acted as chairman of the evening, while Mr. Thomas Hallam made the presentation to Mr. Morgan, Mr. Hallam being the next C.N.R. engineer to become of the retiring age next August.

Community singing as well as other social evening events added to the enjoyment of the evening that marked the retirement of Mr. Morgan from active service on the C.N.R. "Pierpont' Morgan joined the old Grand Trunk in 1907 and became a classed engineer in 1911 and was always in freight service until the time of his retirement one week ago.

CALLED BACK TO DUTY

Sir Reginald Tyrwhitt

Sir Roger Keyes

Sir Reginald Tyrwhitt and Sir Roger Keyes, retired admirals of the British navy, have been recalled for duty by the admiralty, under an order that those with ranks of admirals of the fleet henceforth would be on the active list for life.

Colonel Kermit Roosevelt Meets Men He Will Command

Men Who Have Volunteered for War in Finland 'Fine Looking Lot, Ready for Anything,' He Says

OF MANY RACES

London, March 5—(CP) — Colonel Kermit Roosevelt saw for the first time today the men he will command on the Finnish front. He met them at the recruiting office of the international brigade.

He found them "a fine looking lot, ready for anything." As for himself, he was, he said "deeply honored at the opportunity to lead them." Roosevelt will leave for the front "very soon."

Uniformed in khaki, Colonel Roosevelt shook hands with Britons, Czechs, Austrians, Poles, Swedes, Irishmen and soldiers of fortune from the two Americas. He said he was glad to hear that recruits were "turning up at a rate of 100 a day."

Col. Roosevelt, who came from lunch with Winston Churchill, was greeted by Viscount Dawson of Penn, physician to the king, who is acting as volunteer medical examiner. Lord Dawson said the men he had examined were 80 per cent fit for active service and that many of them "were already on their way."

C.C.F. Member Charged With Not Playing Part Loyal British Subject

Regina, March 5—(CP)—J. F. Herman (S. C. Melville) charged in the Saskatchewan legislature yesterday that Rev. T. C. Douglas, C.C.F. member for Weyburn in the recently disolved House of Commons "did not play the part of a loyal British subject."

Speaking during the budget debate, Mr. Herman said he had evidence that Mr. Douglas, addressing a coronation day celebration in Outram, Sask., May 12, 1937, had declared before nearly 400 persons, of whom about 200 were children, that "we have sung 'God Save the King' long enough."

"I repeat, that if the report I have is correct concerning Mr. Douglas' remarks before the coronation celebration, Mr. Douglas is not a loyal British subject," Mr. Herman said.

C.C.F. members of the legislature protested the remarks and Mr. Herman replied: "Oh, you don't need to get concerned, I am going to file affidavits to prove what I say."

Mr. Herman then proceeded to read one affidavit, sworn by Arthur Bergum of Torquay, Sask., to the effect he had been at the Outram meeting and had heard Mr. Douglas say "that he had sung 'God Save the King' long enough, particularly in front of all the children." Mr. Herman then filed with the clerk two other sworn statements which he said were to the same effect.

One of these was an affidavit taken by Arthur St. Once of Torquay which stated that he had heard Mr. Douglas make the statement "that he had sung God Save the King long enough, and that we didn't need a King and Queen. We should be separated from the British crown or words meaning that, and that is what turned me against Mr. Douglas, it just made my blood boil."

Mr. Herman led up to the incident by saying he was going to discuss' Mr. Douglas' attitude to war.

"I say to you, that when a member swears allegiance to the crown, he should be loyal," Mr. Herman said. "When he does that which is not loyal, he should be condemned. That applies to T. C. Douglas."

G. H. Williams, leader of the C.C.F. opposition, questioned the member's right to "impute disloyalty to a member of the House of Commons."

Mr. Herman said he had heard a Communist in Regina after the visit of the King and Queen, say that having seen the Queen, he could not continue to be a Communist, yet an elected member of Parliament said before a group of children at a public meeting that "we have sung God Save the King long enough."

More Severe Penalties to be Given for Spying

Rotterdam, March 5—(CP-Havas)—The Netherlands government will strengthen its anti-espionage service and stiffen penalties against foreign spies, Justice Minister P. S. Gerbrandy told parliament today as a spy trial ended here.

P. Bakker, 47-year-old Netherlands subject, told the court he had broadcast weather reports to Germany with a portable transmitter given him by Nazi agents. He also admitted receiving 310 florins (about $81) a month from Germany and having served as a German spy in France during the last war.

On trial with him was Heinrich Drewer, editor of the Westdeuscher Presse Dienst of Essen, a German news servive. Police testified they found documents containing instructions for Bakker in Drewer's baggage.

The prosecutor asked a four-year sentence for both defendants. Judgment will be handed down March 18.

Conservative and Fascist Nominated in N. E. Leeds, Eng.

Leeds, England, March 5—((CP Cable)—J. J. Craik Henderson, Conservative, and Sydney Allen, Fascist, were nominated today to contest the by-election of Northeast Leeds to fill the vacancy in the House of Commons caused by the retirement of Sir John Birchall, Conservative member for the constituency for 22 years.

Mr. Allen, Harrogate poultry farmer and a veteran of the first Great War, has been promised the support of Sir Oswald Mosley's British Union. Mr. Henderson, who also served in the last war, is Professor of Mercantile Law at Glasgow University. Under the by-election truce, Labor is not contesting the seat.

In the 1935 general election Sir John Birchall polled 25,915 votes against 14,080 for A. J. Dobbs, Labor.

General Motors Plans 'Separation Allowance' for Employees' Benefit

New York, March 5 (AP)—A guarantee of one-half month's to one-half year's pay in the event of "separation" was given to more than 40,000 salaries employees by General Motors Corporation today.

The plan, announced by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., Chairman of the company, provides that any salaried employee with a year or more of continuous service who is released for reasons beyond his control will be paid a "separation allowance."

This will amount to 25 per cent of one month's pay for each year's service up to 10 years. For each year's service in excess of 10 years, the allowance will be on the basis of 35 per cent of one month's pay. The medium allowance is one-half of one month's pay and the maximum is six months' salary.

The new plan is in addition to the "income security" and "lay-off benefit" plans already in operation for more than 150,000 hourly-rated factory employees of General Motors. The three plans together cover every employee of the company.

HOCKEY PLAYER FINED

Vancouver, March 5 (CP)—Fred (Cyclone) Taylor, President of the Pacific Coast Hockey League, clamped $100 fines today on fiery Jean Baptiste Pusie of the Vancouver Lions and Manager Bobby Rowe of the Portland Buckaroos as the result of a brawl here last night while Lions were trimming the Bucs 4-3.

WAS NOT BOUND OVER

Mrs. Fred Smith, Church Street, was not bound over to keep the peace according to the judgment handed down by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in police court held last Friday. In the original report of the incident it was stated that both parties concerned in an assault case were bound over to keep the peace.

PRIVY COUNCIL UPHOLDS RULINGS OF ALBERTA COURT

Laws Passed by Alberta Government in 1937 Held Ultra Vires by the Privy Council

LONG LITIGATION

London, March 5—(CP-Cable)—The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council today upheld decisions of Alberta courts declaring ultra vires of the Provincial Legislature two acts passed in 1937 which reduced interest rates on Alberta Government securities and bonds guaranteed by the Provincial Government.

Their lordships dismissed two appeals brought by the Attorney General of Alberta and ordered that the Provincial Government pay the costs of the respondents in both cases, the Independent Order of Foresters, which as the holder of Provincial securities had sued for the payment of full interest. The Attorney General of Canada, who intervened in the appeals since the question of interest was held to be within the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, must pay his own costs, the Judicial Committee ruled.

First Appeal by Alberta

The first appeal was made by the Alberta Government in the name of the Board of Trustees of the Lethbridge Irrigation District and dealt with the Provincial Guaranteed Securities Interest Act, which reduced interest on securities guaranteed by the Provincial Government by 50 per cent. The second dealt with the Provincial Securities Interest Act, which made a similar reduction in the interest of Government bonds.

Toronto, March 5—(CP)—The ruling of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in London that Alberta legislation reducing interest rates on the Government's bond obligations is unconstitutional gave the local market for Alberta bonds a general lift today.

Alberta issues improved from 1-4 to 3-4 of a point. The market was more active and offerings appeared to be more meagre than usual.

POLITICAL PARTY OPPOSES VALERA

Called Constitutional Republican Party Aimed at Establishment of Republic

Dublin, March 5 (CP)—A new political party, opposed to Prime Minister Eamon De Valera, was added to Irish politics today.

It is the Constitutional Republican Party aimed at establishment of a republic to include all Ireland and composed of dissident former members of Mr. De Valera's Fianna Fail.

Samuel Fitspatrick, a former Irish Republican army officer, said the organization was formed because "De Valera has no definite policy of partition and has instituted repressive measures against Republicans."

BRITISH POLICE ARE INJURED

Jewish Demonstrations Are Staged Against New Land Laws in Palestine

London, March 5—(CP)— Fourteen British police and a number of Jews were reported today to have been injured Saturday in Jewish demonstrations in Palestine against the new land laws, restricting the transfer of land from Arabs and Jews.

One report said an 18-year-old university student injured in a disturbance in Tel Aviv Saturday died today.

Reliable British sources said "a certain number" of Jews were arrested in Jerusalem, Haifa and Tel Aviv. Curfews were imposed at Tel Aviv.

Rome, March 5—(AP)— Scores of Jews and British police were injured in demonstrations in Palestine late last month against new land laws, a reliable informant just come from Jerusalem disclosed on passing through Rome today. Largest demonstration was at the Jewish city of Tel Aviv, with more than 15,000 Jews taking part.

Some erected barricades across the Tel Aviv's main thoroughfare, Ben Yehuda. Police tried unsuccessfully to disperse the mobs, first firing in the air and then at the feet of the demonstrators. Finally cavalry troops were summoned. About 140 Jews and scores of police were hurt.

GINGER CHARGES DESERTION

Los Angeles, March 5 (AP)—Ginger Rogers of the movies has filed suit for a divorce from Lew Ayres, it was revealed today. A Superior Court set March 13 as the trial date. The complaint escaped notice since it was filed under their true names of Virginia M. Ayer and Frederick Ayer.

Ginger and her movie-hero husband were married in 1934, but they have been separated since early in 1936. She charged desertion.

Cross Outlines British Position On Coal Exports

Tells British Commons That Such Exports of German Coal From Rotterdam 'Have Now Ceased'—Italian Vessels at Contraband Control Base

London, March 5—It was not immediately disclosed this afternoon whether the last three of the five Italian vessels to arrive at the contraband control base off Deal, Southern England, in the dispute between Italy and Britain over Italian imports of German coal were carrying such coal. The last three ships were the Absirtea, 4,170 tons, Felce, 5,639 tons and the Numidia. The other two were the 8,891 ton Orata and the Caterina.

Several other Italian vessels were in the northern end of the Downs Roadstead off Deal and were expected to anchor in the Downs tomorrow. The Italian tanker Loasso, 5,968 tons, also was at the Downs control base.

In outlining the government's position in the House, Minister of Economic Warfare, Ronald Cross, said any German coal now exported from Rotterdam to Italy is subject to seisure as a prise of war. He added that such exports "now have ceased."

HALVED INTEREST RATES ARE PAID

Provincial Treasurer of Alberta States Ruling Will Not Affect Action Taken

Edmonton, March 5—(CP)—Halved interest rates will be continued to be paid on Alberta's public debt despite the ruling of the judicial committee of the Privy Council in London today.

The Privy Council found legislation which reduced the interest to approximately half their former rates was unconstitutional.

A statement issued by Provincial Treasurer Solon Low said:

The ruling of the Privy Council will make absolutely no difference to the policy of this government, which has consistently held the position that the half-interest rate paid on the public debt since 1938 is in equity a fair return to the bond-holders and is the limit of the Province's ability to pay, having cognizance of the essential social services which have to be maintained.

Therefore the government will continue to pay half-contractual interest rate on the public debt and maintain in full its essential social services. This government has already assured the people and now reaffirms that so long as it holds office the people will never be called upon to pay more.

MAN OF 4 ALIASES FACES 10 CHARGES

North Bay Telegraph Operator's Suspicions Lead to Arrest of Man at Toronto

Toronto, March 5 (CP)—Suspicious of a man who tried to sell him a subscription to a magazine, a North Bay telegraph operator signalled his Toronto office to check on the salesman.

Result of this quick thinking was that Glen Bishop, alias G. Hoyle, alias E. L. Evans, alias C. S. Forester and alias C. L. Owens, was arrested and held for detective William Koopman of the Toronto police. Detective Koopman said Bishop had been sought for months and that police have 80 complaints from all over eastern and northern Ontario from persons who said they bought subscriptions to magazines but never received them. Detective Koopman laid 10 charges against Bishop today.

THIS SOLDIER ONLY 15

Toronto, March 5—(CP)—Maybe this will end the argument about who is the youngest member of the Canadian Active Service Force. Private Alex C. Berwick of the Toronto Scottish Regiment, now in England, celebrated his 15th birthday with his regiment at Aldershot last January.

Berwick's family here explained today that the boy joined up a few weeks before war broke out and the youngster, big for his age, received permission to go overseas when the unit left Canada.

PRESENTS CREDENTIALS

Washington, March 5 (AP)—Australia opened formal diplomatic relations with the United States today when the Australian Minister, Richard Casey, presented his credentials to President Roosevelt.

A brief ceremony signalized what the Minister described as "the stretching of the hands of friendship between your country and ours across the Pacific."

The presentation of credentials established relations with the third British Dominion to be presented in Washington, the others being Canada and South Africa.

Woman Fatally Slashed With Hatchet

Richmond, Mich., March 5—(AP)—A 65-year-old farm wife was fatally slashed with a hatchet in a chicken coop today.

Mrs. Lottie Ciborowski died in Port Huron General Hospital less than three hours after the attack. Prosecutor Duncan McColl of St. Clair County said her husband, Walter, 61, would be charged with first degree murder.

Police said Ciborowski admitted he killed his wife during the quarrel over another man. The chicken coop adjoined the house where the Ciborowskis and four of their six children lived.

MANITOBA ONLY UNBEATEN RINK IN THE 'SPIEL

Woods Scored Four on Last End to Defeat New Brunswick in 3rd Round

ONTARIO WINS

Winnipeg, March 5—(CP)—Manitoba was the only unbeaten rink in the Macdonald's Brier Canadian curling championships when the third round was completed today.

Skipped by Howard Wood, Winnipeg's Brier champion of 1930, Manitoba scored a four on the last end to defeat Nick Thibodeau's New Brunswick rink from Bathurst 13-10. The only other previously undefeated rink, Northern Ontario, lost a thrilling duel 11-9 to the defending champions, the Bert Hall four from Kitchener, Ont.

Prince Edward Island was the only Province without a victory after the morning draw at the Amphitheatre rink where the crowd of less than 200 was far below the 1,500 who watched the opening rounds yesterday.

The Islanders, skipped by Rankine McLaine, piled up a good lead against 70-year-old Col. Archie Bell of Quebec only to see that veteran count a four on the 11th to tie the score and add a single on the last end for a 12-11 win, Quebec's first in the bonspiel.

Saskatchewan created a mild surprise by trouncing the British Columbia four skipped by the redoubtable Billy Finlay of Vancouver 14-5. It was the second win for Bill Dunbar of Kinley, Sask., and the second defeat for Finlay.

Cliff Manahan, who won the Brier for Alberta in 1933-37, made his second victory a 15-6 triumph over Nova Scotia, now beaten twice.

Knock-Out Game at Best

The battle of the two Ontario rinks saw the knock-out game at its best. They reached the 11th end tied at 7-7 but there the northern four from Kinrkland Lake, skipped by Jim Davis, faltered and a pair of costly misses gave Hall a four. Davis fought gamely in the 12th but the best he could do was a pair of shot rocks.

Thibodeau gave Manitoba a real scare as matched Wood's "cover-up" game until the last end. They were tied at 5-5 at the half-way mark but on the seventh Wood's favorite game of getting a rock into the house and guarding earned him a two. Thibodeau countered with three on the eighth and a single on the ninth, Manitoba came right back with two but New Brunswick led 10-9 going home after a single on the ninth. Wood had four rocks in the house when Thibodeau threw his last rock, barely missing his stab at Wood's rock biting the four-foot ring.

One of Three Held Given Bail by Court

Ottawa, March 5 (CP) — While counsel for Harry and Louis Binder tried today to raise bail for Harry, it became known that Arthur B. Saunders, 26, charged jointly with the Binder brothers under Defence of Canada Regulations, had been released on bail.

The three Ottawa men are to appear in court tomorrow following a week's remand, charged with printing and circulating pamphlets allegedly of a seditious nature.

Saunders was released yesterday on bail of $3,000, the figure set for each of the accused when they appeared in court last week.

Harry Sigler, counsel for the Binder brothers, said the matter of bail for Louis Binder, a member of the Royal Canadian Engineers, was being left in abeyance for the time being.

WHITE PAPER ISSUED

London, March 5—(CP)—A government white paper issued tonight promised efforts to obtain "the greatest volume of export trade possible" for Britain and indicated that the United States and South American markets were considered fields to be developed.

The white paper was presented to the House of Commons by Sir Andrew Duncan, President of the Board of Trade.

Regiopolis College of Kingston Secures Four Goal Lead Over Belleville Juveniles in 1st Game

Kingston Showed More Speed and Carried Stronger Defence Than Locals

SCORE IS 7-3

Keating on Defence for Kingston Easily Best Player on Ice

Regiopolis College proved too strong for the Belleville juveniles and romped off with a 7 to 3 win over the local kids in the first game of the second round of the O.J.H.A. playdowns at the Hume Arena last night. In winning the Kingston seminary kids enjoy a four goal lead in the second game of the series to be played in Kingston on Friday.

On the heavy ice the more sturdy Regiopolis sextette showed more speed and carried a stronger defence, which tended to make the game border to roughness as high sticks and heavy checking dominated the play, that terminated in a free-for-all fight when Bill McBride, of the locals, and Keating, the visitors' strong defenceman, tangled in blows that resulted in a general bedlam and major penalties to the principals seconds before the game ended. Players and spectators climbed over the boards to swarm the ice, but no blows were struck with the exception of those delivered by the originators of the scrap.

Led in First Period

Goals by Bruce May gave Belleville a two to one lead in the initial frame, after Forest had opened the scoring in the initial period. Sweetman and Keating scored for the Kingston kids in the middle frame, leaving Belleville trailing by a 3-2 count. In the last frame Regiopolis College out-scored the locals four to one, Belleville's lone tally coming from the stick of Dick Barrett. Sweetman led the visitors with four of his team's seven goals and added two timely assists in set-up plays. Jim Cook, lithe left-winger of the Regiopolis team, is a son of Bill Cook, former star of the New York Rangers, who is now managing the Cleveland Barons of the International League.

McBride, May and Barrett looked the best for Belleville as Keating starred for Kingston, with Hunter, Smith, Sweetman and Forest all turning in good efforts for the visitors as Reason repeatedly rose to heights to thwart the Belleville offensive drives.

The line-ups:

Regiopolis College — Goal, Reason; defence, Keating, Rowan; centre, Smith; wings, Carney, Cook subs, Forest, Sweetman, Darah, Kirby, Hunter, O'Brien.

Belleville—Goal, Clark; defence, McBride, Row, centre, Robertson; wings, May, Barrett; subs, Goyer, McGuire, Rosebush, Kellar, Cronk, Bennett, Fitzgibbon.

Referee—Howie, Belleville, Langdon, Kingston.

Pro Puck Personalities

Toronto Maple Leafs

By Central Press Canadian

Were the regulations governing the awarding of the Calder prize-rookie award not so strict— they demand that a player must not have played an N. H. L. game prior to the season in which he is selected, Jack Church, defenceman with Toronto Maple Leafs, would be strongly in the running for this season's award. Jack played a few games in emergencies with the Leafs last season, but this winter is his first full major league campaign, and he's made good, something he has had to do without having a regular defence partner, this year's Toronto system juggling six players into four defence posts each game. He's no Little Lord Fauntleroy on the ice, but three minor league seasons with Syracuse, when the Stars of that city were the Toronto farm team, toned him down to the extent of his concentrating more on the puck than in taking opposing players apart. Church turned pro with Syracuse at the start of the 1936-37 season, after a season with Toronto Dukes—and another in a Toronto commercial league. Despite his many Toronto connections he's a western Canada hockey product. Born at Kamsack, Sask., he played at Regina and had a trial at one of Lester Patrick's Winnipeg "hockey schools", but didn't stick. It was after that that he journeyed east to remain. Last winter he was chosen for the Int.-Am. league's all-star team. Born on Victoria day 25 years ago.

'Kraut Line Best I've Ever Seen' Says Art Ross

Boston, March 5 (CP)—Something in the way Art Ross said it commanded attention, even allowing for the natural inclination of a hockey manager to glorify the performances of his own men.

"Those Kraut kids of mine make up the best forward line I have ever seen," said the dour battler, letting a soft smile play over his usually-grim features. "They're better than the Cook brothers and Frankie Boucher were in their hey-day with the Rangers."

That's what Ross declared the other day of Milt Schmidt, Woody Dumart and Bobby Bauer—his kraut kids—as he watched them go through their paces at a practice. He said it so quietly and yet with such obvious enthusiasm that it was easy to see he really is convinced of it.

"I don't say that they'll score more points while they're in the National Hockey League than the Cooks and Boucher did," Ross added. "I don't know just how many those fellows and when they finished but it must have been an awful lot. But the krauts are still a better combination, both as individual players and as a line.

"I think they're faster, better puck carriers and better scorers. They might not run in as many goals as the Cooks and Boucher did because when the Cooks and Boucher played they got on the ice for a lot longer stretches. They had more playing time than the individual lines do now."

The krauts will have a chance to gain ground tonight when they tangle on Boston ice with Detroit Red Wings in the only scheduled game of the night. A victory would place the Bruins only one point behind the leading Rangers and also avenge a 6-3 defeat suffered the other night at the hands of the Wings.

GEORGIE PACE RETAINS TITLE OVER L. SALICA

Negro Bantamweight Earns Draw With Clever New Yorker in 15 Rounds

PACE QUITE FAST

Len Wadsworth Retains Canadian Middleweight Title in Ten Rounds

By JACK CALDER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, March 5—(CP)— Clever Lou Salica, who has been to the boxing wars, can still hold his own with the best in the bantamweight division.

The New York veteran fought to a draw with world champion Georgie Pace of Cleveland before 8,500 fans last night and was coming along like a youngster in the 15th and last round. At the finish a good part of the crowd thought that Salica, who held the title back in 1935, had established a slight margin.

But to ringsiders Pace's whipping right fist and his ability to ward off the best of Salica's looping lefts and rights seemed a match for the former champion's almost continuous assault. Georgie never let himself get pushed around until that furious last round, when he tired badly in his first attempt at a 15-round encounter.

Pace, a 9 to 5 favorite, got about $3,500 from the gate of slightly better than $10,000. Salica's share was about $2,200.

May Be Matched Again

It all seemed to add up to a return engagement, though promoter Jack Corcoran made no immediate approach to either fighter's manager.

The same was indicated by the result of the furious semi-final, in which Len Wadsworth of Hamilton, staged a successful defence of his Canadian middleweight championship by drawing with Frankie Genovese of Toronto in 10 rounds. In the case of each of the feature bouts, referee Billie Burke voted for a draw and the judges differed in their opinions.

For seven rounds Pace poked that persistent right into Salica's face and mid-section, until the New Yorker's left side was painted a deep crimson. Then the Cleveland negro's left, which had bothered him in his preparations for the fight, developed a soreness that made him wary.

Heated Exchanges

From away back, Salica threw lefts and rights that pulled him closer on points rapidly. Only in the 10th, however, could he score with one-two's repeatedly and Pace came back in the 12th with counter punches that brought heated exchanges.

Most observers close to the action called the pair about even on rounds but figured Pace had a wider edge in those rounds which he won than Salica had in the rounds he took. In the 15th, though, the Italian flailed away at Pace's face to take that heat by a wider margin than Georgie had established anywhere along the way.

Hymie Caplin, Salica's manager, declared afterward that he would ask the National Boxing Association to split the championship between the two fighters. He said Pace hadn't obeyed an N.B.A. order to fight Salica within two months after he was awarded the title, defaulted by Sixto Escobar last year.

BUN COOK GIVEN 5-YEAR CONTRACT

Will be in Charge of Coaching and Personnel of Providence Reds

Providence, R. I., March 5—(AP)—The National Hockey League will have to wait five years before it can hope to lure back Bun Cook.

For Cook, a member of the famed New York Ranger trio of Cook-Boucher-Cook, was given a five-year contract yesterday to continue coaching Providence Reds of the International-American League.

That means that two National League clubs which are believed to have had their eyes on Cook will have to wait. For under the contract he will receive not only a salary, but a percentage of the profits—probably a better financial arrangement than any major league club could offer.

He will have complete charge of player personnel, direct the scouting and conduct hockey schools in search for local talent.

161-Game Schedule For International

New York, March 5—(AP)—The 161-game schedule that the International Baseball League will undertake this year to fill out a lengthened season was released today by President Frank Shaughnessy.

The campaign was extended a week to conform with the American Association and as a result the league increased its program from 154 games.

On opening day, April 18, Montreal will play at Jersey City, Buffalo at Baltimore, Toronto at Newark and Rochester at Syracuse. The season will close Sept. 15.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By the Associated Press)

Tampa, Fla., March 5 — (AP)—Manager Bill McKechnie of Cincinnati Reds hardly knows what to do with himself since one of his "problem children" has left the club and the other has reformed. Lee Grissom is a problem for Joe McCarthy of the Yankees now and Red Barrett, one of Bill's main worries f orthe last two years "has really settled down to business."

Winter Haven, Fla.—Roy Joiner, 31-year-old hurler who once toiled for Chicago Cubs and who had a great season at Jersey City last year, doesn't think his age will keep him from sticking with New York Giants.

Manager Bill Terry agrees. He's counting on Joiner as a possible starter or at least his relief mainstay.

St. Petersburg, Fla. — Buddy Rosar, whose job with New York Yankees is merely to try to oust Bill Dickey from the regular catching spot, will be ready to step in if his turn comes He has been doing some terrific belting in practice, is strong, agile and down to his playing weight.

Clearwater, Fla.—Just to prove they're still the Dodgers, one squad of Brooklyn ball players has managed to equal a modern major league record in a training camp practice game. The "Dressens" sent 19 men to the plate in one inning against young Sam Nahem, scored 14 runs and won the game 18-4. Only once since 1900 has a major league club had 19 men at bat in a championship game. Chicago Cubs did that in 1922.

Lakeland, Fla.—Detroit Tigers' squad, completed with the arrival yesterday of outfielders Earl Averill and Bruce Campbell and second baseman Charley Gehringer, is scheduled for an intra-squad game today. Gehringer almost hit the ball out of the park in his first appearance at the plate.

BILL FRITZ RUNS IN CASEY 600

Queens University Track Star Runner-up in Two of the Fastest 600's This Year

New York, March 5 —(CP)— Bill Fritz, Queens University track star, will compete in the 21st running of the Casty 600 in the Knights of Columbus meet at Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

Fritz accepted an invitation yesterday to run in the race for the Cardinal Hayes Trophy. He was invited last year, but was grounded in a plane by a snow storm at the last minute.

Fritz won two of the cup specials last year—the Hollis 600 in Boston, and the Buermeyer 500 in New York. So far this season he has been runner-up in the two fastest 600's of 1940. He finished second to the New York University Negro star, Jim Herbert in the Millrose 600 and second to Charley Belcher in the United States Amateur Athletic Union 600 run-off two weeks ago. He also placed third in the Prout 600.

Fritz will again compete against Belcher, the national champion and Herbert, among others in the Casey 600. Thus the Canadian star will get a return fatch with the two who have beaten him this season.

KITCHENER RINK WINS AND LOSES IN BRIER 'SPIEL

Northern Ontario and Manitoba Only Rinks to Win Two Rounds on Monday

NOVA SCOTIA ROUTED

New Brunswick Scored Surprise Win Over Alberta in First Round

By CHARLES EDWARDS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Winnipeg, March 5 —(CP) — Meeting of the unbeaten Northern Ontario rink skipped by Jim Danis of Kirkland Lake and Ontario's national curling champions, the Bert Hall four from Kitchener, promised to be a feature of the third round in the Macdonald's Brier competition today .

Highlight of yesterday's opening program was the second-round defeat handed Ontario by Cliff Manahan and his Albertans from Edmonton. After the rinks ended the sixth end tied at 5-5, Manahan, Brier champion in 1933 and 1937, curled brilliantly with fine support from his rink to score a 12-7 win. The Alberta four includes Cliff's two sons, Ross and Wes.

In the first round yesterday afternoon Northern Ontario beat Prince Edward Island 11-7, Manitoba beat Saskatchewan 8-6, Nova Scotia downed Quebec 11-7, Ontario defeated British Columbia 12-11 and New Brunswick scored a surprise win over Alberta, 13-11.

Two Rinks Undefeated

Northern Ontario and Manitoba were the only rinks to pass through the second round unscathed. The Kirkland Lake quartet beat New Brunswick, skipped by Nick Thibodeau of Bathurst, 13-7. Manitoba, led by the 1930 Brier champion, Howard Wood of Winnipeg, trounced Rankie McLaine's Islanders from Charlottetown 19-4.

Bill Finlay's Vancouver rink routed Nova Scotia 16-4 with the Bridgwater quartet skipped by S. S. Rafuse no match for Finlay's 30 years' experience in major bonspiels. Col. Archie Bell and his Quebec team lost 16-7 to Bill Dunbar of Kinley, Sask., they and Prince Edward Island, were the only rinks without a victory.

In addition to the All-Ontario battle this morning, Quebec and the Charlottetown four meet to break their winless tie. British Columbia - Saskatchewan, New Brunswick - Manitoba and Nova Scotia-Alberta are the other third-round games.

Pairings for this afternoon are: Saskatchewan - Northern Ontario; New Brunswick-British Columbia; Manitoba-Nova Scotia: Alberta-Prince Edward Island: Quebec-Ontario.

Reblin Dulmage, manager of the Zion Hill hockey team, stole a march on the other rural puck managers, when he engaged the Hume Arena for a practice this afternoon. Secretly Skipper Dulmage moved his Zion Hill "cheesemakers" into town and for over an hour the north Thurlow Township lads worked out on the large Belleville ice surface. "Gosh, that's a long way to the other end," complained the Zion Hill defenceman after his first sojourn up the ice. These rural teams competing in the post-season hockey series commencing in the Hume Arena on Wednesday night, are taking the winning of the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy exceedingly serious. Some of the teams are importing players so high is the tension running. The teams entered are Glenn Miller, Roslin, Wallbridge, Mountain View, Zion Hill and Foxboro. Everything is open and no holds are barred in this series, that should be interesting for the city folk, who never get an opportunity to see the rural teams in action.

Bill Dennis' Belleville juveniles took a 7 to 3 trouncing at the hands of the Kingston Regiopolis College kids last night and now face the mountainous task of having to haul down a four goal lead in the over-size Jock Hart Arena. The local kids seemed too anxious to play the man, rather than the puck on the slow soft ice last night, which ultimately led to their defeat. Actually from this corner the Kingston kids looked much better and on faster ice would have won regardless, that is on the night's play. Coach Dennis' kids played better hockey in Picton, but pitted against a strong, hard-hitting team last night proved wanting. The last-minute scrap between Keating and McBride had been brewing for some time before hostilities broke out, so bad were the personal contacts and high-sticks throughout. The game terminated with the principals being banished and a few kids swarming the ice to give the fans a thrill and the "news hounds" a break.

In Keating the Regiopolis squad have a strong sturdy defenceman, who knows his hockey, but Sweetman proved the opportunist of the game with four goals and three assists. Incidentally No. 8 with the Kingston seminary school was none other than Jim Cook, son of the heralded Bill Cook of the New York Rangers and now manager of the Cleveland Barons. The kid takes after poppa, always playing his position. With McBride and May looking the best for the locals, maybe the remainder of the squad will return to form on the Kingston artificial ice and prove the old adage of Belleville's ability to produce good road teams. "You're not licked yet, kids."

The folly of group byes was clearly demonstrated in local sport circles this winter. First the Belleville junior hockey team had a bye into the junior "B" playdowns, as both Picton and Trenton were junior "C" clubs. True enough the local kids enjoyed seven practice games, but these exhibition tilts do not carry the same prestige or significance and importance as a regular league game. Had the local juniors been grouped with three Kingston teams, in a district junior "B" group, they would have undoubtedly won and atop of their winning, would have been in much better condition to continue in the junior "B" playdowns, as was their lot. Another year a strong district junior group will be advocated for the locals. A similar situation confronted the Belleville "Y" girls in the L.O.B.A. "Whizz" Cowan's local feminine cagers drew a bye into the L.O.B.A. playdowns, the folly of which was proven when the local gals lost 40 to 12 to Peterboro over the week-end, the Liftlock City lassies enjoying a full season's schedule of play, while Belleville remained idle.

Maurice Tillet was in Belleville over the week end. To the ordinary run of sport fans the name Maurice Tillet means little or nothing, but if we were to add that "The Angel" was one and the same person as Tillet, no doubt all ring fans would recognize the moniker as the name of the most ferocious looking grappler to have crossed the Atlantic in years. At any rate "The Angel" was in Belleville and stopped for lunch at a local restaurant en route to Ottawa where he meets Leon Numa tomorrow. "The Angel" is the nearest thing yet discovered to the Neanderthal Man. He is a French wrestler whose facial expressions alone should frighten the ordinary run of grapplers into submission.

Do you remember after 15 years of trying, the United States Military Academy of West Point scored its first victory over the Royal Military College at Kingston, Ont., one year ago today, in the 16th annual hockey game between the two schools? The "Pointers" had previously tied only one game to spoil the Canadians' otherwise complete run of victories.

SPORT SPICE — Wally Elmer's Kingston juniors made a formidable stand against the heralded Oshawa "Bees" last night, it taking the Motor City "all-stars" overtime before they beat the Limestone City kids 3-2. . . . If the Kingston kids can squeeze out a win in Oshawa Wednesday, the third and deciding game will be played here in Belleville on Friday. . . . In the meantime Josh Maracle's Point Anne "Stars" meet Belleville here tonight. . . . "Red" Ruffing, ace right-hander with the New York Yankees, signed for a paltry $23,000 yesterday, leaving Joe DiMaggio and Red Rolfe the only members of the champions unsigned. . . . See where Point Edward is having an easy time pushing over teams in the intermediate "B" ranks, that is Point Edward, Sarnia, et al. . . . Georgie Pace, the Cleveland colored boy, successfully defended his title against Lou Salica last night.

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty was telling us about the future and how important it is, saying, Dont forget you are all future citizens, no matter how young and small you may seem today, and the best future that anybody can wish you is to be employed in the work that you enjoy the most and that you do the best. This would be a very happy world if somebody could only devise a way to have everybody do the work that they are best suited for. But unfortunately such is not the case and life is full of square pegs in round holes. For instants if a talented violinist was forced to use his small sensitive mussles to dig in the streets with a heavy shovel, that would be an example of a square peg in a round hole. Who can give me another example? she said.

Raymin Levy waving his hand and saying, A radio announcer telling you about some marvellous medecine for a cold when his nose is so stopped up and he's sneezing so much you cant hardly understand a word he says.

Well, in that case the unfortunate man would only be temporarily unsuited to his work, he wouldn't be a permanent square peg in a round hole, Miss Kitty said. Anybody elts? she said, and Lew Davis waved and said, A permanently def man trying to give sombeody singing lessens.

That would hardly be a very likely possibility, I imagine, Miss Kitty said, and I quick waved, saying, A man with only one permanent leg trying to teach dancing.

Now that's enough of fizzical disabilities, cant anybody think of a person whose naturel endowments might make him unsuitable for certain employment? Miss Kitty said, and Sam Cross waved and said, A giant in a sideshow offering to take the midgit's place on the midgit's day off.

The result being the spelling lessen.

AT THE McCARTHY

"HIS GIRL FRIDAY"

The year's wildest, wittiest whirlwind of romance, according to ecstatic advance reports, opens next at the McCarthy Theatre with Cary Grant and Rosalind Russell costarred. The film is Howard Hawks' "His Girl Friday", a Columbia romantic comedy with Ralph Bellamy featured.

"His Girl Friday" is said to be a sparklingly racy riot which brilliantly interweaves romance and laughter. Grant is seen as the maddest man who ever ran a newspaper; Miss Russell is his capricious, captivating star reporter, and Bellamy the fuming, fretting insurance agent to whom she is engaged. Against a background of drama and tragedy, this splendid screen triumvirate move through excitingly hilarious events which top and climax each other in breathless fashion.

"His Girl Friday" is heralded as a thrilling modern romantic comedy set against the vibrant background of metropolitan life. Suspenseful situations, scintillating dialogue and sparkling comedy are said to form an integral part of the picture.

The unusually well-chosen cast of featured and supporting players includes Helen Mack, Ernest Truex, John Qualen, Gene Lockhart, Roscoe Karns, Abned Biberman, Porter Hall, Clarence Kolb, Frank Orth, Isabel Withers, Cliff Edwards, Frank Jenks, Harry Watson and Pat West.

Howard Hawks, noted director of many screen successes, has brought his well-known flair for fast-moving drama to the direction of new picture. "His Girl Friday" is based on an original play by Ben Hecht Screen Vaudeville.

"Rhythm Jamboree", a clever allstar unit of radio, screen and stage stars will also be presented on the program in addition to the laff hit "His Girl Friday" which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre.

"Spring Fashion Show."

Under the auspices of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary you are invited to attend at the McCarthy Theatre a Spring Fashion Show to be presented on the stage, featuring dresses, coats, sportswear and blouses by J. A. McNabb Limited, millinery by Miss Campbell, furs by Ashley Furs, jewellery by Angus McFee, handbags by McIntosh Bros., and hairdressing by Cole Hairdressing Parlors, Cummings' Beauty Parlor and Mayfair Beauty Salon; also Helena Rubinstein makeup by Lattimer's Drug Store. In addition to the stage show, Helen Vinson, Allen Marshal, Barbara Read and Patric Knowles are presented in the romantic comedy screen hit, "Married and In Love", also the latest Fox News as described by Lowell Thomas and other excellent short featurettes are presented in advance and following the Fashion Show presentation.

AT THE CAPITOL

"ROSE MARIE"

No matter how much you liked "Naughty Marietta", the musical sensation of 1935, you're sure to like "Rose Marie" even more. Costarring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy. Hundreds of Belleville citizens thrilled anew to the special return showing of this colorful musical romance at the Capitol Theatre. By special arrangements with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios the management of the Capitol is privileged to present a limited engagement of America's singing sweethearts.

For your added enjoyment the second first-run feature depicts the popular fiction sleuth "Oliver Quade" at the Capitol, the new comedy mystery, "Death of a Champion," votaries and novitiates alike of the fellow's amusing approach to crime had Paramount to thank for casting Lynne Overman as Quade. Overman has given many superb performances in the past, but never has he been as grand as he is in the role of the fellow who sells compendiums of knowledge by literally being a "human encyclopedia," and who dabbles in crime as a sideline.

Of course, the picture had to have an ace supporting cast, and Virginia Dale, Joseph Allen, Jr., Donald O'Connor, Susan Paley and Robert Paige were selected for the top featured roles.

Dog Dies Mysteriously

Adroitly mixing comedy with mystery, the story begins with Overman and his assistant, Donald, disposing of encyclopedias at a society dog show. Before very long, a champion Great Dane, owned by the millionaire organizer of the show, dies mysteriously. Then a famous dog authority is murdered.

Dog's Trainer Murdered

Donald's addiction to detective fiction inspires him to do a little sleuthing in the murdered man's room. A pair of intruders enter and the second man to arrive kills the first. Donald quits his hiding place, rushes to Overman's apartment. Overman calls the Chief of Police, and subsequently the Chief finds that the corpse is that of the millionaire's ex-dog trainer.

When Donald discovers a third murder, Overman has to bring his deductive powers to bear to solve the murders.

'WET' EVIDENCE STOLEN

Tulsa, March 5—(AP)— Bootleggers burgled $5,000 worth of whiskey from the United States government. Seized as evidence in federal raids, it had been stored pending trials of suspects. Oklahoma is dry constitutionally. Several empty bottles indicated the burglars tested their loot. They took 150 cases; passed up 100 others.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

PLAY-OFF GAMES WON BY MADOC AND STIRLING

Bata and Marmora Teams Miss Out on Tie-Breaker Games

Stirling, March 5th—The four low teams in the Trent Valley Hockey Loop entered sudden death play-off for fourth position last night with Madoc and Stirling emerging winners. These two will now meet in a sudden death game to decide, which will enter the league play-offs.

Stirling nosed out the Bata team last night in Frankford by a scant margin winning their tilt by 1-0 and Madoc ousted Marmora 3-2. Stirling invaded the new shoemaking centre at full strength and with a good number of supporting fans the game altho' played on soft ice was remarkably fast with both goalies turning a fine effort. Juggling in the Bata line didn't improve their scoring punch and "Ace" Reid speedy centreman seemed lost back on the defence line. Playing their regular position Stirling had a slight edge over their opponents, who did a bit of experimenting. Reid, who is one of the most shifty centres in the loop played defence with Stojan and Guay moved up on the forward line. Even after the change proved a bad one they continued in that order.

The game was fairly even but rough in spots with twelve penalties being meted out about equally divided between the two teams. Referees Armstrong and Finnigan handled the game well and checked any rough tendencies with quick penalties. The first two scoreless periods offered plenty of close ones. The only goal of the game was scored after twelve minutes of the final session, when "Hank" Ingram, veteran defenceman of the Stirling "Bombers" went right through alone to flip one past Romanyi.

All Teams Given a Chance

Late last week when the league executive was faced with some minor difficulties they embarked on a plan to give all teams a chance at the play-offs. They ruled that the four low teams should meet to decide fourth position. Bata to meet Stirling, Madoc to meet Marmora and the winners to meet on neutral ice to decide the holder of fourth position in the league standing. Madoc and Stirling having won their first game of this set-up will meet tonight for the final tilt and the winner goes into the semi-finals with either Campbellford or Norwood. Reid, Mayette, Stojan and Guay were the best for the losers last night and for Stirling, Fraser, Walker and Armstrong formed the fast skating front line in front of Jones and J. Walker and the second string including Bolte, Ingram, Richardson, Morton and May also turned in a fine effort.

The teams:

Bata—goal—Romanyi; defence—Stojan and Reid; centre—Guay; wings—Mayette and Butler; subs—Pollard, Rose, McDonald Stirling—goal—Fox; defence—Walker, Jones; centre—Armstrong; wings — "Friday" Fraser, Rowan Walker; subs —Martin, Richardson, May Ingram, Bolti and G. Fraser.

Referees—Armstrong and Finnigan.

SUMMARY

1st period—No score.

Penalties—Butler, Morton and Reid.

2nd Period—No score.

Penalties — Morton (2), Armstrong and Jones.

Third Period—Stirling (Ingram) 12.20

Penalties—Butler, Fraser, Jones, Mayette and Armstrong.

TRENTON MIDGETS WIN ROUND OVER LINDSAY

Trenton Kids Win 2-1 at Home and Take Round of Series

Trenton, March 5th., (Special)—Outscoring Lindsay Midgets 2 to 1 in a close game here last night Trenton Midgets won the round 3 to 2 when the visitors failed to shove the biscuit past Anderson, who played a whale of a game in the locals' net. Trenton was the better team throughout but the Lindsay crew did threaten whenever the home squad slackened the pace. Richards gave the locals the lead in the opening frame banging the puck into the Lindsay cage from a scramble. Soft ice slowed up the play and forwards found it hard to make combinations click. The middle session went scoreless but there were more fireworks in the last round when each side secured a score apiece. Filion and LaMorre combined to give Trenton a two-goal advantage the former beating Clarke with a good clean shot. In a desperate attempt to win the enemy ganged the Trenton net and this was where young Anderson entered the picture. The slim Trenton goalie stopped every one but Brennan, who counted the visitors' only goal with less than two minutes left to play. Lindsay forwards made it hot for Anderson until the end which did not come too soon for the tiring locals.

The teams:— Lindsay — goal—Clarke; defence—Johnson and Brifden; centre—Green; wings — Hughes and Gassen; alternates — Brennan, Ellis, Heels, Goodyear, Gregory and Muir. Trenton—goal—Anderson; defence— Wickens and Trumble; centre—Filion; wings — R. LaMorre and Allan Richards; alternates—Perry, Longman, Allison, Shenel, Davis and Shoniker. Referee—D. Warrien.

TONY

— BY ELIZABETH VERNON —

CHAPTER XX

The wind had died. The snow was stiff under foot. Over everything lay an utter stillness. Only Tony's whistle, clear as a boy's, broke the silence.

Sir Matthew glanced down at her. A very young face. Yes, but quite inscrutable. Was she whistling because she was happy? Somehow he didn't think so. Was it to keep up her spirits? In that case, he reflected, smiling a little twistedly, he had better whistle too.

"Your visits have been very good for Alan," he said.

"Oh, have they?" She was smiling up at him, and at something in that smile his heart sank a little.

"Tony," he said, and his voice was almost rough. "You're not happy at home. Are you?"

"Did Alan tell you?" she asked, and Matthew Lake saw the flush on her cheek.

"No." Again he heard his voice roughen. "I have eyes in my head. I don't need Alan to tell me anything about you."

There wasn't, for her, any answer to be made, and she made none.

"Tony—" his voice now was as gentle as if he spoke to a hurt child. "I want to say something to you. Don't walk on." He put his hand on her arm.

"Yes, Matt?" She turned aside with him. She stopped and looked up into his face.

He took her thick-gloved hand. "Tony, do you know what I want more than anything I have ever wanted or thought of?"

"No, Sir M—no, Matt."

"I want to make you happy. Oh, my dear—"

But she tried to free her hand. There was understanding in her face now and fear. "Please don't say any more. I don't want—" the words were incoherent.

"Listen, listen," he besought her. "Don't speak. Tony, I'll take you away from Oaken. I'll make you happy. We'll have Jacky with us. She shall have everything she wants—everything. Oh, Tony, can't you love me? Won't you marry me? Wouldn't you and Jacky be happy with me?"

She shook her head. "I want us to look after Alan. I want us to be happy with him."

For a moment Matthew Lake said nothing. He had dropped her hand. "Are you in love with him, Tony?"

"I—don't know—"

"He—he may always be a hopeless invalid." As Matthew Lake spoke those words he felt the sharpest remorse that he was ever to know.

"I don't care. I don't care!" Tony turned away from him. Her face was in her hands. "I wouldn't care—except for him—if he could never move. I could still hear him talk, I could still look at him—" her voice died away.

"I see," said Matthew Lake at last.

x x x

Tony entered the house. Slipping off her coat, she dropped it on to the long chest. For a moment she stood motionless, her heart heavy with the thought of Matthew Lake's wretchedness, her mind bewildered by the fact that he loved her.

She opened the door into the hall. Hyacinth was seated by the fire.

"Hullo, Hyacinth," she said. "Where's Jacky?"

"Out. She has gone into Dorminster with Sedley."

Tony came over to the hearth and sat down.

"Where have you been?" Hyacinth's voice was sharp now.

"I was at Holme Dacey."

"Visiting the sick," said Hyacinth. "Very pretty. Have you seen Alan often?"

"Oh, yes." (Surely it was best to tell the truth? "They" couldn't get at you so easily then.)

Hyacinth rose from her chair. "I don't think we can allow that," she said. Her lips were a thin line. "It doesn't look well."

"Rot." Like a careless boy, Tony stretched her legs before her.

Hyacinth was moving about the room. She stopped. "You used to hate him," she said. And then, after a pause: "He's not better, by any chance?"

"He can never be better." Tony's voice was thin.

"Making up to him. You must be short of friends, and so must he."

"I am," Tony whispered. She rose and began to finger the ornaments on the chimney - piece. "Where's Major Cheaveley?"

"Where should he be?" In a flash Hyacinth turned. "Why do you ask?"

"I s-saw his car had broken down outside our gates," she answered, and loathed herself for the fear that caused her tongue to stammer. "I guessed he'd be here."

"You sneaking little cat," said Hyacinth, and the low, well bred tones made the words more dreadful.

Not for years had Tony made any plea for pity. And now her mouth was dry as she spoke. "Hyacinth, why do you hate me so? I've never known why. I've never done you any harm."

"Hate you?" Hyacinth repeated. "I wish to God you'd never been born!"

"But unfortunately I was born," Tony said. "And yesterday I was eighteen."

"Well?"

"Father left me jewels. I want to see them. That's all."

"You're too young to wear them. Why should you see them?"

"Because that is my right." Oh, the joy of saying that—of seeing the helpless rage in Hyacinth's face.

From the drawing-room came a bright, artificial laugh. A man's deep voice echoed it. The door opened. Mrs. Querne entered. She was leaning on Major Cheaveley's arm. His black eyes ranged over the scene before him.

"Why, what is the matter?" said Mrs. Querne.

"I am asking to see the jewels Father left me."

"Why not?" said Major Cheaveley. And his heavy glance sought Hyacinth.

Slowly Hyacinth turned away. She crossed the room to her bureau. It was, Tony thought, as if for the first time in her life she obeyed an order.

She had returned from her bureau to the hearth. In her hands was an old leather case. She set it on a table and unlocked it and threw back the lid.

Tony approached the table. She gazed down in silence at the contents of the box—at the pearls, softly luminous. Emeralds were there, and rubies. Dazzling a treasure; they took her breath away.

"But they're lovely," she breathed at last. With careful hands she lifted a bracelet. She held it up. It winked in the firelight. "They're gleaming — gorgeous—" she spoke half to herself and half to Bob Cheaveley who was watching her, a little smile on his lips.

"Yes. They do glitter." He hardly glanced at the bracelet. He didn't touch it. "Even artificial jewels do it."

Tony glanced at Hyacinth, standing so stiffly. A strange impulse assailed her.

She lifted the coiled rope of pearls from the case. A diamond brooch was caught in the clasp, but she did not unfasten it. She held out to her sister the pearls and the brooch.

"I don't want all these things" she said clumsily. "I'd like you to have this—she thust them into Hyacinth's hands.

There was a moment's silence. Hyacinth's expression was unfathomable, and before it Tony shrank back a little. A second later, with a sudden movement Hyacinth had flung the pearls to the floor. The brooch rolled into a corner.

She laughed. At the ugliness of that sound Tony made a half movement, as if she would put her hands over her ears.

"Oh, Hyacinth, Hyacinth," came Bob Cheaveley's voice, mocking as a raven. "Why behave as if they weren't real?"

(To Be Continued)

Berlin, March 5—(AP)—Artillery fire and aerial reconnaissance enlivened the western front yesterday, according to the German communique today. It said:—

"Between the Moselle River and the Palatinate Forest livelier artillery fire and scouting activity by both sides.

"The air force, despite unfavorable weather conditions March 4 continued reconnaissance flights over eastern France."

Rosalind Russel, Gary Grant and Ralph Bellamy principals in the year's raciest comedy romance "His Girl Friday," which is the smash hit opening next at the McCarthy Theatre.

Eldorado

Eldorado — Mrs. James McLeod spent the week end in Toronto.

Word was received by friends in Bannockburn of the death of Miss Fisher, at Toronto on Tuesday. Miss Fisher lived with her niece, Mrs. S. McEwen for some years and during that time made many friends here.

Mr. Henry Lloyd, Sr., celebrated his 80th birthday on Thursday, his family all being home for the occasion.

Mr. Clarence Rutledge of Hybla spent a few days with his sister, Mrs. Ralph Armstrong recently.

Miss Bernice Parks of Belleville was the week end guest of her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen McCoy of Prince Edward, are guests of the latter's aunt, Mrs. Hugh Empey.

Mr. George Fox of Madoc is busy engaged hauling logs for Mr. Geo. Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bateman were Sunday guests of Mr and Mrs. James Bateman.

Mr. James Nickle has returned home after attending a convention at Toronto last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Blackburn and Harley were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Bateman

Mr. and Mrs. John O'Rourke and Mr. Wallace Kincaid of Queensboro were dinner hour guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ken. Bateman on Wednesday

Women's Institute

The monthly meeting of Cooper and Remington Women's Institute was held on Wednesday, at the home of Mrs. Joseph Rollins, with a good attendance. The meeting opened by singing the Institute Ode and community singing and was followed with a two minute silence in memory of the late Governor-General. The roll was answered by "My favorite song and composer".

The hostess then gave her favorite poem. It was decided to have a pot luck dinner. Letters of appreciation and thanks were read from several members. It was decided to send our soldier boys, Oscar and Harold Whiteman and Thomas Ash, boxes in the near future. The January motto was given by Mrs. Gordon Chapman and the December motto by Mrs. Joseph Rollins, they not being present at the previous meetings. The February motto prepared by Mrs. G. Graham was well given by Mrs. J. Wood. The topic "What truly constitutes true neighborliness — How I obtained it — Do I appreciate it?" was given by Mrs. S. Rollins, Mrs. H McCoy favored with an instrumental. A reading, "Just a Married Woman" by Mrs. A. Greenly. Current events by Mrs. H. McCoy, a reading, "Origin of St. Patrick" by Mrs. R. Greenly composed the program. Mrs. Fred Irwin then gave a paper on Postal Service. Mrs. E. Moore led in a discussion on storing furs Mrs. A. Parks was the winner for the exhibit of woollen articles.

The meeting closed by singing "Good night ladies" and the Mizpah Benediction. A very dainty lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants.

Y. P. U.

The Eldorado and Union Young People met in the Sunday School rooms of the Eldorado United Church on Friday evening. The Worship Service was in charge of Rev. George Crabbe, with Mrs. F. J. Nickle reading the Bible lesson, followed by a short explanation by Mrs. Crabbe. Mr. Fred Weir favored with an organ solo. Mr. Ken Holmes then called on Mrs. Jack Empey the guest speaker of the evening who used for her topic "Christian Citizenship and Temperance" closing with a very interesting discussion. Mr. Holmes then led in an information quiz program with the men winning by 8 points.

WALL STREET

New York, March 5 — (AP) — Traders worked up a mild buying urge for Selected Steels, Aircrafts and specialties in today's stock market but continued to ignore many issues. Dealings were slack throughout.

Bonds, commodities and foreign securities markets shifted over a slightly irregular course.

Among stocks, Canadian Pacific, Dow Chemical, Glenn Martin and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit managed to edge into new high ground for the year.

Other Canadian issues were slightly improved. Dome Mines, McIntyre and International Nickel made small gains. Lake Shore mines were easy and Distillers Seagram unchanged. Canada 4s, in the bond market, gained a trifle.

Up most of the time were Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone and Sears Roebuck.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 5 (CP)—On Toronto Exchange today a stronger market for the industrials and the base metals helped sentiment in the early action. Gold shares were a bit heavy and the western oils were unchanged at noon. Turnover in the first three hours totalled 112,000 shares.

C.P.R. and the Canada Steamship lines issues were features of the trade. They recorded new high prices for the year on heavy trading. Power and steel stocks also ruled higher.

In Base Metal, Nickel, Sudbury Basin and Noranda were stronger. Preston, Wright Hargreaves, Perron and Pickle Crow weakened 4 to 5 cents.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, March 5 — (CP)—No price changes were shown by bacon-hog markets reporting today.

Lightweight: Brantford, $8.50, Chatham, $8.75.

Dressedweight: Brantford, $11.50 Chatham, $11.95, Hull, $11.60, London, $11.50 plus transportation, Stratford $11.50 plus transportation.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal March 5—(CP) — All classes of livestock held steady in early trading on Montreal Livestock Markets today, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Receipts: Cattle, 136, sheep and lambs, 5; hogs, 1,245; calves, 926.

Cattle offerings comprised mostly cows and bulls. Good butchers sold up to $5.75, with mediums ranging from $4.50 to $5.25.

Good veals brought $10.50 with an odd top at $11 while mediums sold around $10. Sales, as a bulk, ranged from $9 to $9.50. Drinkers traded between $5 to $7.50.

Sheep failed to make a market. Bacon hogs sold from $9.25 to $9.40, mostly $9.35 to $9.40 fed and watered. Selects drew $1 premium. Sows went between $6 and $6.50 while hogs, sold on rail grade, fetched from $12.30 to $12.40 hot weight.

Toronto, March 5 —(CP)— Trade was slow at steady prices on cattle up to mid-session on the Toronto Livestock Market today. Veal calves were about steady with Monday's prices considering quality offered. The few local lambs offered held steady. There were no sales on western lambs. No hog price was established. The cattle holdover was 850 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 1,000, calves 500, hogs, 1,000 sheep and lambs 550.

Weighty steers sold at $7.10-$7.50 for good to choice with common selling downward to $6.50. Good to choice butcher steers ranged from $7.15-$7.30 with common selling downward to $6. Good butcher cows sold at $5.25-$5.50 with a few top at $5.75 and common selling downward to $4. Canners and cutters sold at $3.25-$3.75. Good butcher bulls sold at $5-$5.50 with common selling downward to $4.50. Fed calves sold at $8-$9 for good to choice with common selling downward to $7.

'CANADA AT WAR' FILM IS BANNED

finite if the film, prepared by the "March of Time," would be shown even then.

Mr. Hepburn, who made the announcement as chairman of the Appeal Board of the Ontario Government Motion Picture Board of Censors, claimed the review was "nothing but pure political propaganda for the Mackenzie King government."

He described the film as "farfetched and misleading," and said it was prepared with the assistance of the Canadian government and was "purely and deliberately political propaganda."

"No party, the one in power or any other," he said, "is going to get away with that sort of thing."

Mr. Hepburn added:

"If they want to show the extent of Canada's war effort, let them show the hundreds of thousands of unemployed who are walking the streets looking for a chance to enlist or find work in industry at a time when the very security of the country is at stake.

"We are not going to allow movies to be used for political purposes. I would not allow a picture like this to be shown, whether it was a National, a Conservative or a Liberal government in power."

Butter Prices Rise ½ Cent at Toronto

Toronto, March 5 — Prices increased 1-2 cent per pound for butter under continued good buying that absorbed offerings on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Eggs held firm at previous levels.

Buyers took on butter in good volume despite the steady rise in prices. Yesterday's activity would seem to indicate that the preliminary report on cold storage holdings was satisfactory to the trade. Amount of butter on hand in the nine leading cities of Canada as of March 1 was 16,334,357 pounds, little changed from the year ago holdings of 16,461,083 pounds. A substantial export movement occurred in February last year, however, while Canada shipped no butter in February of the current year. First grade Ontario creamery solids traded at 27 1-4 cents per pound in the morning session of the market, but later the product turned over at 1-4c higher.

Prints followed solids higher as top grades moved through retail channels at 28 1-2c to 29c per pound.

The egg market opened the week on a firm tone, with supplies clearing at former values. Government inspected shipments still command a 1-2c premium in the graded section. Exports are now assuming importance to the domestic market and most sections of the country are participating in the movement. Recent cables from Britain report a slightly easier market, but Canadian eggs are still being sold overseas on a favorable basis with prices here.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, March 5—(CP)—Produce market prices here as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 28c; first grade solids, jobbing price 27 1-2c.

OBITUARY

ALBERT E. CHAMBERLAIN
(Prince Edward County)

Albert Edward Chamberlain died suddenly as the result of a heart seizure at his late residence, Pleasant Bay, Prince Edward County, early this Tuesday morning.

The late Mr. Chamberlain, who was in his 39th year, was born in England, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. William Chamberlain. At the age of sixteen years he came to Canada and resided in Prince Edward County for 22 years. In religion he was a member of the United Church and well esteemed. His sudden passing has brought sincere regret to his friends.

Surviving him is his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Ethel Geraldine Benway.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

DEATHS

CHAMBERLAIN — Suddenly at Pleasant Bay, Prince Edward County, on Tuesday morning, March 5th, 1940, Albert Edward Chamberlain, in his 39th. year. The funeral will take place from his late residence on Thursday afternoon, March 7th. Service in the home at 2 o'clock. Interment Anglican Church cemetery, Hillier. m5-1t.

SUPPLYMINISTRY'S DEP'T PROBED

Several Under Attack

Ministers who had been under attack included Leslie Burgin, supply minister; Sir Kingsley Wood, air secretary; Sir Reginald Dorman-Smith, agriculture minister; Lord Hankey, minister without portfolio, and several others. All these, except Sir Kingsley Wood, are outside the war cabinet.

Mr. Chamberlain's first cabinet reorganization of the war came on the day it broke out. He brought Winston Churchill into the government as First Lord of the Admiralty and reduced the cabinet from twenty members to nine. Now there is some agitation for an even smaller cabinet.

Former Convict May Testify

The next reorganization came Jan. 5 when Leslie Hore-Belisha was displaced as War Secretary and changes were made at the Information and Board of Trade posts.

Tomorrow, the former convict, 36-year-old Charles Kingsley Scott, is expected to tell the secret court about allegations that the Colonel introduced him as a responsible agent for contractors seeking war orders.

Legislation, based on the reported Scotland Yard investigation, is expected to be forthcoming to eliminate a "rake-off." Heavy penalties, it is said, will be imposed on promoters who demand commissions on the claim that they exercise a special influence over Ministry officials.

The News Chronicle commented today that "the cabinet shares the general disquiet concerning supply contracts. Highly placed officials at the War Office have been called in to give evidence."

Nothing Causes Surprise

The bombing of the British liner Domala by German warplanes last weekend with a loss of more than 100 lives was "not really worse than many other Nazi actions at sea" the News Chronicle said today.

"Nothing they do now would cause us surprise, however infamous it is," the newspaper said. "But let us beware of getting so used to these murderous actions that we almost condone them in our minds as being common form.

Only the Nazis behave like this at sea. Only the Nazis have this brutal and lawless attitude to life which comes out in their methods of warfare, in their concentration camps and in their treatment of conquered people."

Captain Brawn of the Domala told a dramatic story of the terrible scenes aboard the liner after it was bombed and set on fire. Many of the crew were trapped below deck, the Captain said, and suffered serious injuries before they were able to make their way up the escape funnel.

Bravery Amazing

"Among them was Junior Engineer J. Dunn, of Kelty, Fife," Captain Brawn said. "He had a broken leg and terrible burns on his face but he crawled the length of the ship and clambered up 40 feet of perpendicular iron ladder on the poop. His bravery and stamina was amazing.

"A warship came near but the seas were too heavy for a boat to get near so we did the only thing we could. We gave him a lifebelt and threw a lifebuoy to him after lowering him into the water. He was eventually picked up but did not survive. He was about twenty years of age. He was the bravest man on the ship."

The captain said that after rescue work was believed completed a British warship conducted a further search with the aid of a plane which finally spotted a raft.

"When the warship reached the raft it found only one survivor left of seven, Cadet Duval, 17," he said. "Six other Europeans had been overcome by the cold and had been washed off the raft. Duval was frozen stiff and had not strength to move. The sailors of the warship formed a living chain over the side of the ship and when the man at the end of the chain reached Duval he had to wrench his frozen hands away from the raft. That was only one of the many great things done that day by the British navy.

Lashed to Rope

"The last to leave the ship were a butcher, an elderly man named Davy and myself. I lashed him to the same rope as myself and together we jumped for it. We were in the water for five or ten minutes before being pulled aboard the warship by a rope."

The Daily Mail said editorially: "The loss of the liner Domala holds a lesson and a warning. The circumstances of this raid will doubtless be carefully studied by our air tacticians. It may be the opening of the intensified attack on British and neutral shipping with which we have been threatened.

"We must be prepared for a wide extension in the range of bombing attacks by more powerful bombers. Germany may use machines in squadrons, and attack not only single vessels but convoys."

U-BOAT PROBABLY DESTROYED

"After the attack, the submarine was seen enveloped in a cloud of greyish black smoke with only the upper part of its conning tower above water."

Thus another German loss was believed added to about 30 submarines which, according to unofficial estimate, have been sent to the bottom by Allied action in the half year of war. France has sunk 10 or more and the Royal Navy and Air Force the rest.

Against this stroke Britain had to weigh the announcement early today that the 6,717-ton motorship Pacific Reliance had been sunk off the west coast by enemy action, and SOS messages indicating that the 5,831-ton steamship El Ciervo and the 10,516-ton tanker Charles F. Meyer had run afoul of undersea raiders.

Tanker Send SOS

"We are sinking," concluded the message from the Charles F. Meyer after the tanker reported being torpedoed 50 miles southeast of Hastings in the English channel.

"We are being chased by a submarine," said an SOS attributed by Mackay radio, in New York, to El Ciervo from a position about 900 miles east of the Virgin Islands. The call indicated that the ship sighted a submarine at 3.07 p.m. EST. yesterday.

The crew of 98 from the Pacific Reliance landed on the Cornish coast during the night. Although badly holed, the motorship remained afloat for some time, enabling all her men to escape in six lifeboats.

Four of the boats were guided to the shore by an R.A.F. plane which shuttled back and forth over them while the occupants of the other two were picked up by another vessel.

The admiralty said losses to British shipping in the week ending March 3 were 1,886 tons. Against this, the admiralty reported that to avert capture the crews of four German vessels, totalling 18,490 tons, scuttled their ships.

CONSCRIPTION FAILURE IN LAST

Quoting from reports in French-Canadian Liberal newspapers of speeches made by Liberal cabinet ministers during the past few years on this question and on participation in a war outside Canada, Dr. Manion charged such statements do not coincide with the present policy of the government and that the Liberals are attempting to deceive the people of Quebec

Mentioning Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Justice Minister Lapointe, Works Minister Cardin and Postmaster-General Power, he said —"I have not deceived you. These other men have. Since they deceived you in the past, are they not likely to deceive you in the future?"

Object to Divide Quebec

"Their whole object today is to divide Quebec from the rest of Canada for political purposes. They want, at any cost, to have a solid political bloc from Quebec, though I believe I am expressing the opinion of most thoughtful people in your province when I say that it is not a good thing either for Canada or for Quebec, that they should succeed in this design."

He said that national government is not the same as union government, as the Prime Minister stated in election speech. Union government was the union of the two old parties in 1917 while national government is a proposal to form a government of some of the best minds in Canada, of all parties or of no parties, to give an efficient and economic war effort and to lay plans for the post-war period.

Members Free to Vote

"The national government that I propose is not only against conscription but the members who are elected in support of that government, in the Province of Quebec or elsewhere, are just as free to vote against conscription, if the subject ever comes up in the House of Commons as are the members of any other party."

Referring to the sudden dissolution of parliament, Dr. Manion said that if Mr. Mackenzie King is permitted to close parliament "to suit his political purposes," then tomorrow he or someone else may close parliament to destroy the rights of a minority or perhaps to suppress parliament altogether.

Dissolution prevent making public the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations and Dr. Manion asked: "As Mr. Mackenzie King no doubt knows the contents of the report, are we to conclude that he was also afraid to face these recommendations?"

INVADING REDS HELD AT BAY BY

Fighting Heavy.

Although fighting was heavy on the very outskirts of Viipuri, Soviet troops had not yet entered the city proper.

The newspaper Helsingin Sanomat, owned by Eljas Erkko, former foreign minister, admitted the possibility Viipuri might be lost, but added that it is "an outpost which has never been surrendered without a fight".

"The Russian forces on the isthmus have advanced to the outskirts of Viipuri," said an editorial in the newspaper.

"It is their (the Russians') only significant achievement after more than three months of warfare. That this would happen sooner or later was clear to everybody, even from the beginning of the war.

"The surprise to ourselves as well as to the enemy is only in the fact that the invader has not got there earlier."

Even if Viipuri is lost, however, the paper added, "our fate is not sealed. We have defended our land even when all of Karelia was in Moscow's grip."

BRITISH SENTIMENT

The Times editorial observed:

"Finland is demanding with insistence that her sacrifice should not be made in vain and she is beginning to display anxiety lest the true nature of her situation should be misunderstood.

"It is becoming clearer every day that this war is no side issue. Finland is defending more than the cause of liberty and more than her own soil.

"The whole north is in peril of the aggression directed against her and not perhaps against her alone. Our own cause is being buttressed by her resistance to the evil of tyranny. Finnish resistance has already weakened Russia, the colossus though she be, appreciably and has eaten up great stores of oil which might otherwise have reached Germany for use against us.

No Time to Waste

"For that, if no other reason, Finland is entitled to expect gratitude and recompense. But there is now no time to waste in debate. As we look back upon the annals of old wars we are constantly struck by the opportunities which have been missed through a policy of false economy, of failure to appreciate the comparative unimportance of secondary risks.

"The Gallipoli campaign in the last war is an outstanding instance. Let us not prepare for ourselves once more the melancholy task of discussing lost chances—to find, perhaps as we have many times found in the past, that the will and means to seize them were really there all the while and that only some misunderstanding prevented us from doing so.

"Our interest is clear and there is a moral issue involved as well as a material."

"We have enough to do," the Daily Express said. "We cannot police the world. We already have difficulties in policing the waters which we hold and the lands for which we are responsible. People who urge us to declare war against Russia are not sound advisers.

"If we are to fight for Finland why not for China? Why not declare war on Japan and send an expeditionary force against Tokyo?"

$1,335,000,000 LOAN ANNOUNCED BY SIR J. SIMON

Loan is to be for Period of 15 to 19 Years, Yielding 3 P. C. and Issued at Par

OPEN ONE DAY

London, March 5—(CP)— A new 300,000,000 pound ($1,335,000,000) war loan was announced in the House of Commons today by Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The loan is to be for a period of 1 5to 19 years, to yield three per cent interest and to be issued at par, Sir John said.

Lists will be opened next Tuesday and closed the following day.

The loan will be redeemable at par Oct. 15, 1959, with the treasury reserving the right to redeem the issue in whole or in part any time after Oct. 15, 1955.

Ten per cent of all subscriptions will be payable on application and the balance on April 15, the Chancellor continued. The minimum subscription is 10 pounds and the maximum $1,000 pounds.

"The government's appeal for subscriptions to a large loan had necessarily to be delayed until it was felt the market was ripe for the issue," Sir John said.

Giving Investors Time

"I am taking the somewhat unusual step of announcing the terms of the loan a week in advance of the opening of the lists in order that investors may have ample time to make any arrangements which may be necessary to enable them to subscribe the fullest possible amounts.

"I hope that as many small investors as possible will take advantage of this opportunity of lending their savings to the state for a longer period than that of national savings certificates or defence bonds."

Earlier Sir John had said in reply to a question regarding the possible introduction of forced savings: "I cannot give any final undertaking as to how the war will be financed throughout the duration."

The Chancellor said that nonresidents subscribing to the loan would be offered, subject to certain safeguards, exemptions from taxation along the lines of some loans in the first Great War.

AT THE BELLE

"The Shop Around the Corner"

Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart are happily reunited for the third time in "The Shop Around the Corner," which opens next at the Belle theatre. They first appeared together in "Next Time We Love," the picture that started Stewart on his way to stardom, and later in "Shopworn Angel."

Now their teaming gives Miss Sullavan her finest dramatic acting opportunity since "Three Comrades" as Klara Novack, new girl in Matuschek's leather goods and novelty shop, employed "over the head" of the chief clerk, Alfred Kralik.

Stewart currently at the height of his career following brilliant performances in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "Destry Rides Again," plays Kralik. He resents Klara, she him. They quarrel constantly until they discover that they're really quarreling because they love each other.

Ernst Lubitsch, master of human emotions, wanted so much to film this story, which is his favorite, that he was going to form his own producing company to achieve the ambition before signing to produce and direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

He hand picked the supporting cast, which features Frank Morgan and Joseph Schildkraut.

"Nick Carter—Master Detective"

Nick Carter, most beloved and most read of any detective character in history, comes to life in a thrill-packed romance, with Walter Pidgeon as the screen personification of the master sleuth in "Nick Carter—Master Detective," a drama of thrills by air, land and sea, is announced as the companion feature attraction. The story deals with the machinations of an international spy ring stealing secrets of the builders of secret new war planes. Carter is set to ferreting out the mystery. In a transcontinental flight he notices strange actions of a pretty stewardess (Rita Johnson) who later proves instrumental in saving him in a battle in the desert. In the airplane factory he traces this and that suspect, trails a mystery group by painting the top of their car white and following by plane, to attack them in a fleeing yacht from the air. Thrill follows thrill until the criminals in the strange case are disclosed in a whirlwind finish. Players include Henry Hull, Stanley C. Ridges, Donald Meek and Addison Richards.

"The Light That Failed"

A thrilling love story you'll long remember is Rudyard Kipling's "The Light That Failed," featuring Ronald Colman, Walter Huston, Ida Lupino and Margaret Angelus now at the Belle with the Belle News of the hour and a clever and funny cartoon.

London, March 5—(CP)—Czech volunteers who have completed their training in military camps along the eastern British coast are now preparing to join the reconstituted Czecho-Slovak army in France, it was disclosed today.

NOVA SCOTIA SCHOONER'S CREW RESCUED AFTER 13 DAYS ADRIFT

Down almost to her bulwarks in the water, the Nova Scotian schooner Chisolm is shown, TOP, before she foundered in the North Atlantic three days out of Lunenburg. This picture was made from the deck of the Swedish freighter, Sagoland, which picked up the captain and crew of five from the schooner after they had been adrift for 13 days, subsisting on a salvaged keg of water. The rescued members of the Chisolm are shown, BOTTOM, grouped about Captain Henrik Bang-Melchoir, second from LEFT, of the Sagoland. Captain George Corkum, of the Chisolm is standing beside the Sagoland's skipper.

EXECUTIVE CHAIRMAN

Each Item Explained

Ald. Haig in presenting the receipts and expenditures for the current year, explained each item in detail and showed very clearly how the reduction was obtained. Last year the rate was set at 45½ mills but this year due to careful management and with a surplus from last year the rate was set at 41½ mills and Ald. Haig had no hesitation in stating that with careful administration and the avoidance of capital expenditures, the tax rate could be reduced materially each year for some years to come. The greatest help towards the reduction of the tax rate has been paying off of several debentures on sidewalks and pavements in the city.

The chairman of executive gave a detailed statement of the business of the city and in explaining the various items, said in part:

"Last year when I introduced the By Law adopting the Receipts and Expenditures for the year 1939, I pointed out in considerable detail the high capital indebtedness of the City and the effect of that indebtedness on the tax rate. I showed how that debt had been accumulated and how, if no further major capital expenditures were undertaken, that debt would be gradually paid off and mature rapidly from 1940 on, with a very beneficial result on the rate. I am glad to say that last year's Council continued the policy of its immediate predecessors of refraining from unnecessary expense and that the present Council has every indication of following the same practice.

"Council this year has been very strongly pressed to adopt various programmes involving certain capital outlays of monies. While appreciating the many advantages of the improvements which these programmes would create, the members of the Council unanimously feel that under the conditions which exist at home and abroad, it would be very unwise to proceed at the present time.

Too Early to Foretell Future

"Since the adoption of last year's estimates, war on an unprecedented scale has broken loose in Europe. It is yet too early to foretell either the duration of the war or its final effect on the economic and financial fabric of this country. But there is one very important fact which Municipal Councils should never loose sight of—increased financial pressure on either Dominion or Provincial Governments might and probably would have a serious effect on the costs to be borne by a Municipality such as Belleville.

"The total National expense in Canada is divided among the Federal, Provincial and Municipal Administrations. It is quite possible that the additional expense which the war will impose on the Federal and Provincial Treasuries may have the effect of transferring to the Municipalities, expenses now borne by the other Governments. The Municipal subsidy this year was reduced by one-half mill, due it is said to additional financial burden created by the war. There is no doubt but that there will be a considerable increase in Federal and Provincial taxes on account of war. I therefore strongly urge upon this and succeeding Councils, the continuation of the policy of economy now established and the refusal to embark on capital projects unless they be absolutely essential. In this manner the Municipal Council can make a contribution to the tax payer which will to some extent offset any increase in taxes imposed by other bodies over which this Council has no control.

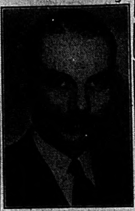
Four Tax Instalments

"The By Law which I will introduce in a few minutes will provide for four tax instalments this year instead of two as in former years. This change has been strongly recommended by the Department of Municipal Affairs. It should have the effect of making it more convenient for many citizens to pay their taxes due to the smaller instalment. It will have the added advantage from the standpoint of the City of bringing tax monies into the Treasury earlier in the year, thereby reducing interest on our bank borrowings.

"I am glad to be able to present this By Law earlier in the year than has been the past custom. You will recall that last year it was not introduced until the latter part of June. I have always felt that the tax rate should be set and the Estimates and Expenditures adopted as early in the year as possible. In the first place the early establishment of the rate removes a certain amount of uncertainty in regard to it and permits those people who may contemplate building or who have to budget their taxes, to make their plans accordingly. In the second place it has the great advantage of placing the various spending departments in the City on a budget early in the year. This means that they are on a budget for ten or eleven months instead of five or six and it is unnecessary to add that the adoption of a budget means more economical management.

"Time does not permit for a detailed analysis of the various items of Receipts and Expenditures. I just want you to bear with me while I deal briefly with a few of them. You will notice that there was a very large surplus of $13,785.77 accumulated from 1939. I might add that this surplus was not budgeted for last year but results from an increase in ordinary receipts over our estimates and a reduction in our last year's expenditures over our estimates.

ALD. McLEAN HAIG



Chairman of Executive in the city council, who presented the estimated receipts and expenditures and announced a reduction of four mills in the tax rate to 41½ mills.

Reduction For Debenture Debt

"There is a very substantial reduction in the amount necessary this year for debenture requirements. This is chiefly the result of almost continuous negotiation with the Ontario Municipal Board. Due to an accumulated surplus in the sinking fund, that Board has given us permission, in accordance with the Municipal Act, to cease levying in the case of certain sinking fund debentures where a sufficient amount is already on hand to provide for the entire principal amount at maturity. Some of these came under the Local Improvement Act and the property owners affected will have their local improvement charges eliminated a year or two before they would ordinarily expire. No monies have been withdrawn from the Sinking Fund for any current expenses.

"The re-assessment was completed last year and resulted in an increase in the total assessment of something over $200,000.00. I might say further, that we confidently expect a further substantial increase in this year's assessment. The reduction in rate last year stimulated the erection of a considerable number of houses which will be assessed this year. In addition, the City sold property during 1939 which will return to the assessment roll this year, and these alone will increase the assessment to an estimated amount of $100,000.00. It is to be hoped that the substantial reduction in rate which I will announce in a minute should provide an additional stimulus to building during this year.

"I cannot close without expressing my appreciation for the assistance and co-operation which I have received from the Comptroller, the City Clerk, the City Treasurer, the City Auditor and the City Engineer. Many administrative changes have been inaugurated and in order to make them efficient and effective, the co-operation of these officials is essential. I am sure when the changes now in process and those contemplated are completed that they will not only simplify and co-ordinate the administration but will prove to be more efficient, and more economical and a benefit to the citizens, the City officials and the Councils.

"We have also received the greatest co-operation from the Board of Education, the Parks Board, Library Board, Police Commission, Board of Health, and others in their early preparation of their estimates.

It gives me a great deal of satisfaction to introduce this By Law which fixes the tax rate for the City of Belleville for 1940 at 41.5 mills. This represents a reduction of 4 mills from last year's rate and it is gratifying to predict, that in the absence of any unforeseen contingency that there is no reason why the rate should not be annually reduced for some years to come.

A communication from the Fire Marshal's department in Toronto, respecting the amalgamation of the fire halls in the city under one roof was received by the council and ordered filed without being read to council. The report was fully discussed in committee before presentation to council. The report is as follows:

Report re Belleville Fire Department

The Fire Committee of the City Council had completed plans to discontinue the use of the south fire hall as such, and to house the entire department in the north hall, commonly referred to as No. 2 Fire Hall. It was expected that the move would be made within a few days or at least as soon as certain private fire alarm facilities could be changed over to the north hall. The purpose of centralizing the department is said to be that it will represent a saving in the cost of operation of the department and will simplify the assignment of men and apparatus to duties, particularly in cases of alarms.

The fire hall has sufficient ground floor space to accommodate the apparatus now in the department, but when new equipment is procured to supplement or replace some of the apparatus that appears to be substandard due to age and low motive power, some improvement will be necessary in connection with the exit doors in order to provide a direct line of exit for each vehicle.

The accommodation upstairs is not sufficient for the increased number of men, but we understand that one large room, now used by the Band, is to be turned over to the fire department, in which case sufficient accommodation can be arranged. It is strongly recommended that in the interests of the department a separate room should be furnished for office purposes and that two separate bedrooms be provided for the officers on duty in the hall. Additional toilet facilities will be necessary and also additional washroom accommodation, as the present accommodation would be totally inadequate, particularly when the department returns from a fire. There is sufficient space to make these improvements and they will undoubtedly contribute to the efficiency of the department.

The building has fallen into a poor state of repair through lack of proper maintenance and possibly in some measure due to age. Some steps were being taken to correct some of the conditions with a view to making it easier to heat the building and to render it more comfortable for the firemen on duty. In some places the walls showed signs of deterioration and should be carefully checked and repaired or reenforced where necessary. It was suggested by some that the foundation walls were not in good condition and that they should not be relied upon, apparently due to the nature of the fill upon which the concrete floor was laid a few years ago. This, however, could not be determined without knowing more about the fill and what the walls were like before the fill was made. This is a matter that should be left to the local officials who are acquainted with all circumstances.

In addition to lacking present-day modern features, the building is open to other objections on account of its location:

1. It is set right out to the street line so that it is necessary to open the doors inward and so that there is danger of injury to the public when the department responds to an alarm. Special precautions will have to be taken to see that the sidewalk is clear before any vehicle leaves the hall.

2. It is on a busy street where it is evidently difficult to prevent at least temporary parking of cars, which would interfere with safe and prompt dispatch of the apparatus to a fire. Additional and more prominent "No Parking" signs should be provided and they should clearly indicate that the immediate area is a fire department route.

3. There is no adjoining land that can be used as a training ground. It is desirable that practical drill be carried on immediately adjacent to the hall so that men and apparatus can respond to an alarm promptly. Lectures and discussions and instruction in first aid and resuscitation can of course be carried on in the hall.

It is recommended that the Council consider steps toward the erection of an up-to-date fire hall in a central location with sufficient ground area for drill purposes. Adequate modern facilities and accommodation would no doubt be reflected in an increased interest and efficiency on the part of the fire department as a whole.

Respectfully submitted,
J. E. Ritchie,
Acting Deputy Fire Marshal.

Two Lots Sold

Two lots on North Front Street were purchased by S. H. Wilson for $550 and he will be charged with 9 months' taxes. The C.N.R. also purchased two lots on south side of College Street for $150, and if the city owns the other part of the lot it will be sold to the same people for $75. Fifty copies of the History of Belleville in its entirety and compiled by W. C. Mikel, was purchased at $10 a copy. The by-laws passed at the meeting were (1) a by-law to authorize the levying and collecting of taxes for Public School purposes for 1940; (2), a by-law to authorize the levying and collecting of taxes for High and Vocational School purposes for 1940; (3) a by-law to authorize the levying and collecting of taxes for purpose of Catholic Separate School for 1940; (4), a by-law to authorize the levying and collecting of taxes payable by the municipality at large for city's share of Local Improvements rates and charges, (5) a by-law to authorize the levying and collecting of taxes for unemployment relief purposes for 1940; (6) a by-law to authorize the levying and collecting of taxes for the purpose of municipality other than for schools, city's share of Local Improvements and Unemployment relief for 1940, and (7), a by-law to collect taxes, provide penalties and set discounts.

Addresses Council

Ex.-Ald. B. F. Jennings addressed the council on the distribution of gas and stated that he might be able to produce a purchaser for the Gas Plant. He stated that W. A. Caunt of Toronto, was in the market and that he would set up his own unit that would manufacture gas that could be sold in Belleville for 50 cents per thousand cubic feet. The equipment ex-Ald. Jennings stated would be made in Belleville by the Stephens Adamson Company. "I understand that a request will be made from the Utilities to the council to provide funds to repair the local plant," said Mr. Jennings, "and if this man is willing to manufacture his own gas he should be given every consideration."

Mayor Thompson stated that a committee had been appointed and he would be pleased if Mr. Jennings would get in touch with Ald. Butler and give him all the information that he was in possession of. A number of motions were introduced by Ald. Butler and all but one were passed, that one being sent back for further consideration. Fred Burke will be paid for tending the city clock during the absence of the regular tender, Jack Roblin. The committee conferring with the Hydro Commission was given a further two weeks to report; mechanical apparatus to wind and strike the clock will be purchased, the cost not to exceed $300. The chairman of City Property will preside over a committee for the cultivation of garden plots as a wartime measure. The motion to allow the City Clerk to set a number of days as Tag Days was referred back to the committee at the consent of the mover.

Ald. Clarke moved that the Property Committee have power to sell vacant lots without the approval of Council was agreed to when the Council was allowed to set the price for the various lots. There being no further business the council adjourned.

Picton Resident Also Victim of Pick-Pockets

Police today were informed that a fourth person fell victim to pick-pockets at the Belleville Collegiate during last Saturday's political meeting, three having been reported on Monday when a total of $131.00 was reported to have been stolen by pick-pockets.

Today Chief Kidd received a letter from Iva E. Martin, of Picton, who complained, that his pockets had been picked and the sum of $17.00 removed. However, Mr. Martin was able to provide the police authorities with a meagre description of the man he suspected.

"It was after the National Anthem. I found myself in difficulty trying to put my overcoat on, the right sleeve seemingly being hard to put into place. I was being jostled around and upon turning around to make some jocular remark, found a freckle-faced man shoving up against me," Mr. Martin wrote to Chief Kidd as he added further details regarding the incident, which he paid little attention to until he found his money missing, when he returned home Saturday night.

John Kingston of Tweed, lost $90.00 in a wallet, while John Striker of Wellington lost $21.00 and W. J. Nicholls, of this city lost $20.00 in a similiar manner, police revealed.

9 Italian Ships At Control Base Despite Protests

British Warships Driving Fuel-Laden Ships Into Control Station as Fast as They Head for Italy

BRITAIN WANTS ARMS

Arthur Henderson, Labor, Going to Ask Chamberlain for Statement on Coal Dispute in House of Commons on Monday

London, March 6—(CP)— Two more Italian ships were escorted by the Royal Navy into the contraband control station at the Downs today, bringing to nine the number of Italian vessels detained in the controversy over German coal exports.

The Ministry of Economic Warfare said all nine were flying the Italian ensign and all were "assumed to be carrying coal."

Today's additionals are the Liana and Rapido, both colliers. The other seven are the Orata, Fiece, Caterina, Absertia, Ernesto, Nunidia and Loasso.

The last-named, at first described as a tanker, has been identified as a coal ship, the Ministry said.

Two other Italian ships lay off Deal for a day or two, but left today with pilots aboard for a northern British port.

Shipping circles expressed belief they were going to pick up cargoes of British coal for Italy, although the British and Italian governments are at odds over the question of supplying Italy's coal needs from British mines.

Britain Would Like Arms

Britain wants manufactured Italian products, such as arms, rather than agricultural products in exchange for such coal. British credits for export of coal to Italy were said, however, to have been available for some time, so that Italy could obtain the British coal now and settle later on what Britain is to get in exchange.

ONTARIO PREMIER OFFERED CHANCE TO VISIT SCHOOL

Defence Minister Rogers Denies Charges Made by Premier Hepburn

STATEMENT ISSUED

Ottawa, March 6—(CP) — Defence Minister Rogers has offered to let Premier Hepburn of Ontario visit the Royal Canadian Air Force school at St. Thomas, Ont., with newspapermen to see conditions at the school where the Ontario Premier charged there have been "violent disturbances."

In a statement issued here last night on authority of the minister who was in Fredericton, Mr. Rogers denied the charges of disturbances and said "it is high time for Premier Hepburn, for the good of all loyal Canadians everywhere, to desist from his intemperate abuse."

"I will make Premier Hepburn an offer, purely in the interests of Canadians, in the hope it will bring him down to earth at last," the minister said.

"Let him visit the school at St. Thomas. At the same time we will make arrangements for such representatives of the Press as desire to be in attendance. He and they may ask all the questions they like. The doors will be open. The en-

Film Banned In Ontario is Shown in West

Edmonton, Mar. 6 (CP). — The march of time film, "Canada At War", banned in Ontario by Premier Hepburn Monday until after the Canadian general election, Mar. 26, because Mr. Hepburn claimed it was "nothing but pure political propaganda for the Mackenzie King government," will continue to be shown in Alberta.

Capt. Robert Pearson, Provincial moving picture censor, said he had not received any complaints about the film and had no intention of interfering with the showings in the province.

Roosevelt, Minn., March 6 (AP)—He wasn't timed but John Miklosh set some kind of a speed record. Miklosh was cutting timber. A companion, half a mile away, heard him yell and a short time later saw Miklosh streak past. The reason: Miklosh kicked at some brush that got in the way of his axe. The "brush" was the paw of a half-awake black bear.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, March 6 (CP) — The weather has become a little colder over Ontario with light snow in some districts. It has been mild throughout the west; fair in Manitoba with light snow and rain in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh north and northeast winds; fair and a little colder today and Thursday.

Manitoba—Cloudy tonight and Thursday with light snow or part rain.

Saskatchewan—Cloudy and mild today and Thursday with light snow or part rain in many districts.

Alberta mostly fair tonight and Thursday with not much change in temperature.

Spring gardens! Spring weather is now on the way northward, and even upward on mountain slopes, and garden work in many places may soon begin. In the north, tomato, eggplant, cauliflower, cabbage and pepper seeds may be sown in hotbeds, or lacking these, in boxes in the house. Radishes and lettuce planted in hotbeds may mature there. Asparagus beds may be fertilized. When ground is ready to work, the gardener may sow seeds of spinach, radishes, early peas, beets, onion sets and lettuce. He may dig, before they begin to grow, parsnips and salsify left in the ground over the winter.

DEFENCE MINISTER SAYS WAR EFFORT IS ONLY ISSUE

Hon. Norman Rogers States King Government Appealing for Support on Its War Effort

STEVENS MAKES CHARGE

Claims 109 Acres of Land Bought for $88,000 and Only Assessed for $9,000

(By the Canadian Press)

The Dominion election campaign frequently wavers from the chief issue, which by nearly unanimous consent is the war effort of the government, but every few days some speakers set it back on the track by sweeping aside secondary disputes and taking up the main argument.

Defence Minister Rogers and R. L. Maitland, British Columbia Conservative leader, undertook this task yesterday.

At Woodstock, N.B., and Fredericton, Mr. Rogers told audiences again that the government was appealing to the electorate on its war effort. He said the opposition have found no adequately supported criticism to warrant a change of government.

Mr. Maitland said in a broadcast speech from Toronto that nothing has been done by the government that marks it as a strong, aggressive government which Canada needs now. He said that Conservative leader Manion would give the government action which Canada requires.

Radio Licence Fee Abolition Promised If Manion Elected

Montreal, March 6 —(CP)— Conservative Leader Manion issued today a statement in which he promised that if he is elected he will abolish the radio licence fee and operate national broadcasting on a "pay-as-you-go" basis.

The statement:

There has been a great deal of discussion, both in the press and on the hustings, on the subject of radio licences, and the present seems to be an opportune time to make my position clear.

It is my firm belief that there is no reason why the radio user in Canada should be compelled to pay $2.50 for the privilege of listening to his radio, whereas the radio user in the United States pays nothing. The radio licence fee is merely a nuisance tax, and one which bears heavily on those who are least able to pay. Numerous reasons can be given why the radio fee should be abolished, but I think they are obvious to most people.

It is my purpose therefore to abolish the radio licence fee and to operate national broadcasting on a pay-as-you-go basis, which will retain the advantageous services now provided. There are other means without the licence fee of having radio pay its way.

Allies Begin Special Efforts to Iron Out Blockade Difficulties in U. S.

By Andrae Berding
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, March 6.—(AP) — Great Britain and France began special efforts today to iron out difficulties with the United States arising from the Allied blockade of Germany.

Frank Ashton-Gwatkin, an adviser to the British ministry of economic warfare, and Charles Rist, formerly Deputy Governor of the Bank of France, were here to confer with Secretary Cordell Hull and other State Department officials.

The problems that confront them are embraced within the series of American notes sent to Britain in December and January.

They involve:—

1.—Taking American ships into contraband control ports within the European combat area.

2—Censorship of mails.

3.—Delays in examining ships at Gibraltar.

4.—Blocking German exports to the United States.

The British and French experts also are expected to discuss allied plans for rationing the imports of neutrals adjacent to Germany. Britain is reported concerned over increased American shipments to such neutrals, fearing that a portion of the goods is going through to Germany. The British Embassy recently notified American shippers of lubricating oil that navicerts would not be issued for the time being for such shipments to several neutrals adjoining Germany.

Huge Plane Purchases

Meanwhile, French and British airplane purchases in the United States were shown by the Commerce Department to have made the January airplane export total of $25,480,817 the second best for any month in history.

The total was only slightly under the record set in December, but is expected to be exceeded many times this year because the allies have indicated potential airplane purchases in the United States totalling $1,000,000,000..

In January, deliveries included $12,053,978 to France, $4,040,912 to the United Kingdom, $2,733,149 to Australia, and $1,512,536 to Canada.

Finland, making its first substantial purchase in this line in the United States, also received 17 planes which, with equipment, were valued at $1,047,651. Turkey and Sweden also were large buyers

Establishments Required for Operation of British Air Training Plan

Ottawa, March 6 —(CP)—Work will start shortly on the erection of new buildings at the Royal Canadian Air Force Station at Trenton, Ont., it was learned today.

Tenders for the work which will cost some $300,000 closed within the last few days and the award of the contracts will be made soon.

The projected buildings include seven hangars, a repair depot and a number of dormitories. The repair depot is one of the establishments required for operation of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

BRITAIN DEMANDS FULL SHARE OF RUMANIA EXPORTS

PROBLEM FOR GOV'T.

Bucharest, March 6 — (AP)—Great Britain has demanded full equality with Germany in sharing Rumanian exports, including oil, a high authority said today.

The British demand, said to have brought Rumanian minister Viorel Tilea here from London, is believed in diplomatic quarters to have been prompted by the Allies' resolve to cut deeply into German sources of supply in this country.

These quarters see Rumania being pushed closer to an inevitable choice between Germany and the

Britain Will Register Children in Cities

Action Taken in Order to Make Prompt Dispersal if Necessity Arises

London, Mar. 6 (CP).—Great Britain moved today to register children in her cities for the purpose of prompt dispersal in event of spring air raids.

Herbert Morrison, leader of the London County Council, governing body of the world's largest city, appealed to parents to register their children immediately.

Mr. Morrison said 400,000 to 500,000 children in Greater London would be eligible for registrations.

Mass removals were made when war was declared Sept. 3 but there has been a drift of children back from their shelter in safe places.

"If word is given the children will move out of London, we hope, in the same orderly manner as last September," Mr. Morrison said.

"Teachers will take them and police will make the same careful arrangements. It is expected that the movement will spread over six days.

"No child will be taken out of London unless its parents wish. The government wish children now in the country to stay there. There will be no further dispersal until raids make it necessary."

It was understood similar arrangements were under way in other cities.

Paris Forecasts Settlement In Coal Shipment Dispute

Satisfactory Arrangement Likely to be Based on Profitable Collaboration of Britain and Italy—Neither Side is Inclined to Push Affair to Extreme

By JEAN ALLARY
Havas Staff Writer

Paris, March 6—(CCP—Havas)—The Anglo-Italian dispute over German coal is likely to end in a satisfactory settlement based on profitable collaboration between the two countries, it was believed here today.

This belief was strengthened by the relatively moderate initial reaction in Rome to the interception by British naval patrols of Italian vessels bound from Rotterdam with cargoes of German coal.

It is held here that neither side is inclined to push the affair to an extreme and that the dispute will boil down quickly to its essential element; the rapid organization of coal shipments to Italy.

Germany Urges Test of Naval Control

The Germans are urging the Italian Government to make the issue a test of Allied naval control as a whole and it was on this key that the Italian protest to London was written. Since then, however, Rome has apparently been hesitating to go farther along a road that might lead Italy into a head-on collision with the Allies.

In this Italy can see a definite German interest—but none for Italy. The hesitation is favored, moreover, by the voice of Moscow echoing that of Berlin. The Soviet press is harping on the allegation that Italy is menaced by the Allies in the Mediterranean and in the Balkans. The Italians, however, are naturally not inclined to heed the advice of Moscow.

COL. GEO. DREW MAKES CHARGES

King Gov't. Charged With Dictatorial Radio Censorship and War Contract Inefficiency

Calgary, Mar. 6 (CP).—Col. Geo. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, last night in an election campaign address before 1,000 persons here charged the Liberal Government of Prime Minister Mackenzie King with war contract inefficiency and dictatorial radio censorship.

Col. Drew, in his first western speech of the March 26 federal election campaign, said Prime Minister Mackenzie King had used the radio and press to expound Canada's war effort ever since war was declared. Now the government leader had forbidden broadcasts of public election speeches.

Part of Speech Deleted.

A thousand words had been deleted from a radio speech he had made, Col. Drew declared. Hitler's methods had been followed in having a censor follow him with a copy of the revised speech as he delivered it over the air last Thursday. The censor was ready to cut him off if words were added.

In connection with contracts, Col. Drew declared that two years ago a contract had been let for the construction of 28 aircraft. This fall, 20 of the completed planes were flown to Trenton two at a time, because there were only two of the right kind of propellers in Canada. The government had forgotten to order engines for the last eight of the planes.

In Montreal, one George Rabinovitch, had bought a building for $62,500 and then leased it to the Dominion government for ten years at $23,700 a year, he added.

NEW LAND LAW FOR PALESTINE PROVOKES DEBATE

London Telegraph Says Land Regulations Are 'Choice of Evils'

TRANSFER RULES

Dispatches Tell of Demonstrations by Jews Protesting Restrictions

London, Mar. 6 (CP).—The government's Palestine policy was attacked in the House of Commons today by Philip Noel Baker, Labor, in moving a vote of censure on the government for its new restrictions on transfer of Palestine lands from Arabs to Jews.

"In the last war the Jews were very strong," Mr. Noel Baker declared. "They had great influence in many lands and we desired their help. It was to get that help that we made the Balfour Declaration (of Nov. 2, 1917, promising a national home for the Jews in Palestine).

State of Jews.

"Today the Jews are a weak and hunted race. Their property has been stolen and destroyed, and it was because their influence had gone that we dared do this shameful act today, to repudiate the moral contract we made with them when the last Great War was going on."

Policy Essential, Says MacDonald.

Mr. Noel Baker said Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald had "thrown this bomb"—his Feb. 28 announcement of the land restrictions—and now Palestine "is in turmoil again".

"There have been mass demonstrations, police charges, many people have been wounded and one Jew died. he continued. "There has been curfew at Haifa and Tel Aviv but no counter-demonstrations by Arabs against the Jews."

Mr. MacDonald replied for the government that its Palestine policy was "essential to the maintenance of good, impartial government and to enable us to mobilize our forces."

Import of Mandate.

He added that the mandate, which called on Britain to encourage the settlement of Jews on the land, also bound her to protect the "rights and position of other sections of the population."

He said, "It is not true that it will be almost impossible for future Jewish immigrants to settle on the land."

Dispatches from Jerusalem said a British constable was injured by a stone as police yesterday broke up demonstrations by Jews protesting laws restricting transfer of land from Arabs to Jews.

Windows of buildings along Jaffa Road were smashed and police established curfews in Jewish sections of Palestine and in the Jewish city of Tel Aviv.

Disturbances in Palestine

Fourteen British policemen and a number of Jews were reported injured in disturbances last Saturday, but the Daily Telegraph and Daily Herald said these were much more serious, with 18,000 participants in Tel Aviv alone and 150 demonstrators and a score of policemen hurt.

It said policemen were stoned by the crowd, at which they finally fired, and that mounted troops eventually had to quell the outbreak. It said troops in battle kit had to help police in halting a demonstration at Haifa.

Statistics Show Women Growing Healthier, Live Longer Than Men

New York, March 6 — (AP)—Women of the United States are growing healthier than the men, and their superiority is so great that in every decade of life, from cradle to old age, fewer females die than males.

A clear-cut surplus of women is in prospect as a result of this trend, figures published today by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company indicate.

The superior ability of the women to escape death covers the present century up to 1937, the last year when dates are available.

During this period, the death rate of white male babies under one year old decreased 61 per cent, of girls, 63. At 20, the young men's death rate dropped 57 per cent; the young women, 65. At 40, the men were down 40 per cent; the women, 52. At 60, males experienced a reduction in mortality of less than 7 per cent, against 26 for the women.

Social trends that may flow from such a female surplus are mentioned in a separate analysis of European nations where, due to the last war, there were for a time surpluses of women of marriageable age with a shortage of husbands. One result was marriage of older men to young women, with increasing divorce and a drop in child-bearing.

French and British Troops Withstand Savage Attacks

Germans Attack British Post and French Outposts West of the Vosges—British Prisoners Taken French Report States

POSTS RECAPTURED

Two British Soldiers Killed and One Wounded in Skirmish — German Infantrymen Aided by Preparation From Trench Mortars

Paris, March 6.— (AP)—French and British troops withstood small but savage German attacks after considerable fighting on the Western Front yesterday, the French Command reported today.

The Germans attacked a British post and French outposts west of the Vosges, the French said.

British prisoners were taken by a German raiding party, according to a British General headquarters communique dated yesterday. Two British soldiers were killed and one wounded, along with one German fatality, it was said.

The British communique, the first issued since the Tommies arrived at the Front, said the raid "took place this (Tuesday) morning against a post in the British front line, and the enemy succeeded in capturing some prisoners. "The post was recaptured, and the enemy retired, leaving one dead. Two British soldiers were killed and one wounded".

Norwegian Seamen Describe Plane Attack

Oslo, March 6 — (CP-Havas)—Nineteen Norwegian seamen rescued by a British trawler arrived home today and described how their ship, the 1,388-ton Vestfos, was sunk in the North Sea by a German bomber.

"The plane was flying very high and dived just over our main mast. We saw the pilot waving his hands and making signs to us," they said. "After making a wide circle at slow speed, the plane came back and dropped a bomb on the bow of the ship, causing some damage.

Then we took the warning seriously and the crew of 19 left the ship quickly. The plane returned to the attack with a second bomb, which hit the ship near a hatch without doing much harm.

"In a leisurely way the plane made another circle above the ship and dropped a third bomb, which blew up the winches like matchsticks and started a fire."

AIRCRAFT, TANKS, ARTILLERY ASSIST RUSSIAN THRUST

Attack Across Viipuri Bay on Beleaguered Coastal City Turned Back by Finns

"HEAPS OF DEAD"

"Dozens of Tanks" Destroyed in Battle—40 Civilians Killed by Air Raid

Helsinki, March 6—(AP)—Red army attacks across frozen Viipuri Bay were reported by the Finnish high command today to have been repulsed, fending off another assault against the beleaguered coastal city.

Aircraft, tanks and artillery supported the Russian thrust across the ice, but the Finns turned back the attack. The Red army also atacked in force at many land points on the Viipuri sector between the bay and the Vuoksi, but the Finns said all attacks were repulsed.

"Heaps of Russian dead" in front of the Finnish positions were described by a Finnish high command communique which said "dozens of tanks" were destroyed.

The eastern end of the isthmus front, where the Finnish lines have stood firm against continued Russian pounding, saw lively artillery activity and farther north on the Kuhmo sector Russian attacks were repulsed, the Finns reported.

Soviet air raids behind the lines killed 40 persons and wounded many others during attacks yesterday on Mikkeli, Lahtis and Kuopio. Ten enemy raiders were shot down during the forays, the Finns said, adding their own air force "undertook numerous patrol and bombing flights in support of our land operations."

Coastal Guns Assist

Coastal guns sweeping the ice of Viipuri Bay, on the flank of the depopulated, half-ruined Karelian capital joined in the aerial assault on the tightening Siege lines.

Bombs and shells ploughed great holes in the ice, it was reported, and some of the Russian troops with several tanks were plunged into the water, infantrymen and tank crews alike drowning.

And early today Finland's flag—a blue cross on a field of white—still fluttered from a battlement of historic Viipuri castle, although the Red army was pounding at the gates of the city and Finns themselves acknowledged that Viipuri could not be held much longer.

Viipuri long since gave up her civilian population, about 74,000, removed to safety in the face of the Russian drive on the Karelian Isthmus-Mannerheim line.

(The Russians reported no fresh inroads against Viipuri proper, but told of seizing another foothold in the encirclement drive, the town of Neetela, nine miles north east of Viipuri).

Claim 21 Finnish Planes

Today's Leningrad communique said the Red air force "acted against enemy troops and military objectives" yesterday, and that 21 Finnish planes were brought down in combat).

The Finnish town hardest hit in yesterday's air raids was the target of 200 bombs. Thirty-two Russian planes droned in on it in two flights 50 minutes apart. Military censorship forbade naming the place.

Five direct hits were scored on a hospital, and one bomb struck an air raid shelter, the last killing 25 persons, nearly all of them women.

A Finnish communique charged three hospitals were bombed and that more than 10 patients were killed in one and at least four in another, aside from "many" patients who were injured.

Rev. S. R. Foreman Gives Talk on 'Duty'

The Intermediate B.Y.P.U. of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church heard an inspiring address on Tuesday evening when the Reverend S. R. Foreman of Emmanuel Church spoke on Duty.

The scripture lesson from John's Gospel Chapter 13 was read by Miss Verna Fox and Miss Jean Fox led in prayer. Miss Jean Cook delighted the gathering with a humorous reading and Master James Olmstead contributed with a violin solo which won instant applause. The closing prayer was offered by Miss Norma Haw.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw, Ont., March 6th — Mrs. J. M. Barlow is visiting friends and relatives in Frankford this week.

Holy Communion Service was held in St. Mark's Church on Sunday last at 11 a.m., and was well attended. Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne delivered an inspiring sermon on the subject, "Why am I a Christian." The cut flowers on the altar were a memorial to the late Mr. S. S. McComb, who was for many years a Warden of the church and member of the choir.

Three Fire Alarms Answered by Dep't

Three fire alarms, one last night and the other two this morning, kept the local fire department on the qui vive over the night, but no serious damage resulted in any case.

Dense black smoke rolling out through the cellar window at 47 Grove St. sent the reels to that address at seven o'clock last night but excepting for the woodwork being slightly charred no damage resulted. The fire started, when some oily rags lying in the window became ignited, presumably as the result of the head flying off a match, according to Fire Chief Lynch this morning.

A chimney fire at 29 1-2 Station St. around seven o'clock this morning resulted in no damage, but at eight o'clock the reels were called to the property of the Schuster Coal Co., where one of their coal storage piles had become ignited. The fire will continue to burn for hours according to Chief Lynch, who stated that one lead was left pouring water into the seat of the trouble.

Amalgamation of Two Fire Halls Takes Place Today

Alderman A. M. Kennedy, Chairman of Fire, officially announced this morning that the lower fire hall would be vacated by the Belleville Fire Department some time today and thereafter would house their entire fire-fighting equipment in No. 1 hall on upper Front St.

Early this morning the fire bells connecting directly between the Belleville General Hospital and the lower fire hall as well as those connecting with the County Home were removed to the upper hall and at ten o'clock this morning everything was in readiness for the exodus.

Eastern Division of L. Y. R. A. To Hold Regatta at Picton

Yachts From Kingston, Gananoque, Clayton, N.Y., Watertown, N.Y., and Picton Will Take Part

OTHER BUSINESS

Picton, March 6—Yacht Clubs at Kingston, Gananoque, Clayton, N.Y., Watertown, N.Y., and Picton will take part in a regatta being held here August 7-8-9. This is the annual regatta of the Eastern Division of the Lake Yacht Racing Association just awarded to Prince Edward Yacht Club.

The event opens on the evening of August 7th with a cruising race to Picton. Large craft will start at Prinyer's Cove and smaller craft at the Adolphustown dock. A day's events will be held on Picton bay, August 7th. The following day there will be another cruising race, the larger boats going to Kingston and the smaller ones to Adolphustown. A dance at Kingston Yacht Club is to conclude the event.

Last year the regatta was at Kingston and Gananoque and attracted many entries. The local club is already making arrangements.

Consecon Eliminated

Consecon was eliminated from Wellington hockey league Monday night when West Lake won 3-1 to enter the semi-finals. Wellington won a protest over a Bloomfield-Wellington game and were admitted to the play-offs, defeating Mountain View, 5-4. Platford, McQuaid and Kleinsteuber scored for West Lake and Carter for Consecon. Wight (2), Burd, Baverstock and Morris counted for Wellington and Amo (2), Rowbotham and Moy for Mountain View. Wellington scored three in the first eight minutes of play to win.

Undergoes Operation

Mrs. Sherman Young has received word from Aldershot, England, that Lt.-Col. Sherman Young, O.C., of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, is to undergo an operation there. Col. Young was gassed in the last Great War and the operation is necessary for that reason. Col. Sammon, formerly of Kingston, is acting O.C. of the regiment.

Over 1,300 people enjoyed the concerts by the R.C.A.F. band here on Sunday despite unfavorable weather. The band lived up to all advance notices. They gave a program of sacred and secular music in the United Church in the afternoon, assisted at the evening church service and gave a program of classical and popular music at the theatre in the evening. Community singing was a feature. The collections are to be used to send cigarettes to all men of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment now overseas.

Special Constable Appointed

Picton—Many matters were dealt with at the town council meeting Monday night. Harry V. Palen was appointed as special constable and will furnish his own motorcycle. Picton has had a two-man police force since Constable Frank Smith obtained leave for active service. The police committee had received many applications for the position and recommended Palen with council agreeing.

That some men had been given preference in town work this winter, was charged by Ex-Mayor Robert Norman, who stated he acted as a spokesman for these men. He suggested an investigation. Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon, who is chairman of relief also requested an investigation but council decided to have all men willing to work register with the town clerk. Reeve H. S. Colliver pointed out, that it was a difficult task to give part of the work to men who were endeavoring to keep off relief and said it would be a sorry day for the town if the Mayor tired of handling the relief work as he had given a great deal of time to it.

Situation Improves

The relief situation is improved, a report by the relief administrator, L. R. Brown revealed. During the past month there had been 177 receiving relief at a cost of $1016. This was to be compared with 265 receiving relief last February at a cost of $1,546.

Mayor McKibbon complimented the streets committee on the manner in which the main streets of the town had been kept free of snow this winter.

On the request of market clerk Jack Welsh it was decided to have a bathroom installed in the market building, where the clerk resides. A letter of thanks was read expressing the appreciation of the women of West Lake for the rest room, which was recently opened in town for their convenience.

Official notice was received of the Ontario government's decision to reduce the subsidy to municipalities to one mill.

A campaign to raise $1,500, here for the Salvation Army Red Shield War and Home Service Work will get under way here on Monday. An organization meeting was held at Shire Hall with A. O. Sharp presiding. Mayor N. McKibbon was chosen as chairman. The collectors are W. E. Scott, Finley McArthur, Colin Carter, C. G. McGibbon, Dr. Chas. Wright, Fred Webster, L. E. Wiseman, Fred Burford, Harold Knapman, Bert Burns, Cal. Spencer.

It was decided to launch the campaign with a mass meeting in the Regent theatre on Sunday evening, with Brigadier Riches of the S. A. division, as speaker. The campaign for the Legion War Services went over the top here with the objective of $800 doubled and canvassers are confident they will go over the top with this appeal.

Mrs. Ralph Warren and children were guests this week of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Moynes, Belleville.

Mrs. Rodger Ross is visiting relatives at Listowel for a time.

Walter Fraser and Fred Newman attended the annual school dance at Albert College, Friday evening. Both are former students.

Mrs. Gordon Walmsley and son Jack have returned from Toronto where they visited her mother, Mrs. H. W. Kerfoot.

Dr. and Mrs. George Currie arrived Tuesday from Calgary and are visiting their parents, Dr. and Mrs. M. Currie and Mr. and Mrs. R. Hadden.

MRS. RUTH (ETON) BENWAY

(Prince Edward County)

After an illness of five months' duration Mrs. Ruth Benway, wife of Mr. Frank E. Benway, passed away at the family residence in the 3rd. concession of Hillier Township in Prince Edward County early this Wednesday morning.

The late Mrs. Benway was born seventy years ago in England, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. William Eton. At one time she resided in Bloomfield and Wellington and for the past forty-five years she made her home in Hillier Township and was highly esteemed in the community. In religion she was a member of the United Church at Hillier.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Frank E. Benway; three daughters, Mrs. Viola May, Sidney Township; Mrs. John Root, Hillier Township; Mrs. Geraldine Chamberlain, Hillier Township; three sons, Mr. Charles Benway, Mr. William Benway and Mr. George Benway, all of Hillier Township; two sisters, Mrs. Fred Young, Picton, and Mrs. Ida Ackley, Syracuse, N.Y.

The death of Mrs. Benway makes a double bereavement for her daughter, Mrs. Geraldine Chamberlain, her husband, Albert E. Chamberlain, died suddenly on Tuesday morning, March 5th.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. ALFRETTA STEINBURG

(Orland, Ont.)

Wooler, March 6—(Special) —A lifelong resident of Percy Township and well known throughout the community, Mrs. Alfretta Steinburg, passed away at the family residence, Orland, Ont., yesterday after an illness of a few days' duration. Born in Percy Township, eighty-four years ago, Mrs. Steinburg was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Kemp. She was a faithful member of the United Church. A wide circle of friends will regret to learn of her passing.

Left to mourn her death are one daughter, Mrs. Ernest Franklin, Codrington, two sons, J. A. Steinburg, Orland and H. P. Steinburg, Wooler. One brother, John Kemp of Orland also survives. She leaves three grandchildren, Douglas and Doreen Steinburg and Mrs. Carl Austin all of Wooler and seven great grandchildren, Wayne Franklin of Orland, Mrs. Clayton Covert of Warkworth, Harold, Helen and Ruth Steinburg of Cornwall, Fred Hennessy of Warkworth and Guy Austin of Wooler.

Funeral service will be conducted in the home on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock by Rev. M. Cook and interment will take place in McPhail's Cemetery.

DEFENCE MINISTER SAYS WAR EFFORT

Hepburn in Picture

The controversies precipitated by Premier Hepburn of Ontario over his provincial ban on the March of Time film "Canada at War" and his charges concerning disturbances at the Royal Canadian Air Force School at St. Thomas, Ont., have brought him into the election picture although he has not campaigned.

At Haliburton, Ont., Transport Minister Howe said that permission to show the film was refused because the provincial leaders did n owant their critical statements disproved by photographs. At Fredericton Mr. Rogers said the reason was presumably because Mr. Hepburn felt it told too much while a few months ago he criticised the government because it told too little.

MacPherson May Run in Regina

The Hepburn charges about the air school brought denials from Mr. Rogers and a government spokesman at Ottawa.

The news that M. A. MacPherson, runner-up to Dr. Manion at the 1938 Conservative convention which chose the party leader, is expected to run as a candidate in Regina projected another personality into the electoral spotlight again. He is considered cabinet timber if Dr. Manion forms a government.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Conservative Minister of Trade and Commerce, charged at Winnipeg that the war effort of the present Liberal administration was marked by inefficiency, ineptitude and waste.

One of the worst examples of government waste was the purchasing of 109 acres of land in Ontario from three "friends of the Liberal party" for $88,000, Mr. Stevens continued. He said the land, required for a rifle range, had been assessed for $9,000.

Only a few acres of land were used and the balance was leased back to the former owners for a rental of $2,000 a year, he charged.

Hopelessly Mismanaged is Claim

Supplying of clothing to soldiers had been hopelessly mismanaged. In Toronto enlisted men had to sleep on newspapers because no cots were available, Mr. Stevens said.

"The real issue in the Federal election is to win this war and to preserve democracy in Canada as well," Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, said at Calgary.

Col. Drew made a hasty entrance to the crowded hall three-quarters of an hour after the meeting had started. A specially chartered plane had whisked him to Calgary from Lethbridge on the last leg of a fast trip from Toronto which he left Monday.

His speech was filled with charges of war contract inefficiency, and with charges of dictatorial radio censorship applied by the King Government.

Hugh C. Farthing, K.C., Calgary East Conservative candidate, also levelled charges of "tyrannical censorship" against radio regulations, when he read to the audience 300 words which he said had been deleted from his radio address by a Calgary radio station manager in the afternoon.

Too Low Value on Life

Life has been held at too low a value in wartime, M. J. Coldwell, National Chairman of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation said at Hamilton.

"The cheapest thing in war is human life and we've got to make it the dearest, and make war so expensive that those who are anxious to see it will be anxious to preserve peace," he said.

He advocated that a bond or insurance policy to guarantee post-war security be given to each man, or his dependents, upon enlistment in the Canadian army, the Air Force or the Navy. Young men offering their services today never would be content to return to the economic insecurity that was an unavoidable evil under the present social system.

"They won't accept the conditions their fathers accepted when they returned from the last war".

Mr. Coldwell urged that long-range planning be undertaken now for the period following the war. It was useless to expect such planning from Prime Minister Mackenzie King or Conservative Leader Manion, both believers in trade as a cure for all evils.

Lapointe a Kindly Man

He said that there would be little threat to democratic Liberty in the defence of Canada regulations if its enforcement were in the hands of the Dominion Minister of Justice, Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe.

"He's a kindly and gentle man and I wouldn't worry if Lapointe were enforcing them, but he's not", Mr. Coldwell said. "Enforcement is in the hands of Provincial Attorneys-General and in some provinces the enforcement is harsh and not in keeping with the democratic system.

"As a democrat, I would prefer any other province to Ontario at present".

Want More Than Fireside Chats

R. L. Maitland, K. C., of Vancouver, leader of the Conservative party in British Columbia, declared in a half-hour radio address broadcast over a national network from Toronto that from 1935 until the present nothing has been done by the Government of Canada that marks it as a strong, aggressive government such as Canada needs at the present moment.

"We want something more than fireside chats from Prime Minister Mackenzie King," he said. "We want a government of action."

Dr. Manion, the leader of the Conservative party, promises action, said Mr. Maitland. "Dr. Manion's whole record is the record of a human, energetic, fearless man, and Dr. Manion calls on the people of Canada today to support him. He asks you to help him lift government above party affairs and patronage at this time.

Proposes Youth Minister

Dr. Manion proposes protection for agriculture. He proposes the further development of Canadian industry within Canada. He proposes a Department of Youth so that this problem will be ever-present in the planning of affairs by the Dominion Government. He promises Dominion jurisdiction over unemployment as a national responsibility. He seeks to form a cabinet irrespective of party, and in this direction he has shown his good faith in years gone by. He brings his war service to aid him in returned soldiers' problems."

The Dominion Government is appealing to the electors on its war effort and the Opposition have found no adequately supported criticism to warrant a change of government, Defence Minister Rogers said at Woodstock, N. B.

The campaign issue was serious and must be dealt with calmly and deliberately, he said. No speaker on the government side had sought support by means of prejudice. The first wartime election had been fought largely on a battlefield of prejudice and misunderstandings, and the country suffered for years afterwards.

There is only one outstanding issue now and that is for or against the candidates supporting the present administration, said Mr. Rogers. No one should allow secondary issues in various districts to cloud the real issue.

Mobilization and equipping of two divisions by the government showed no lack of careful planning and administration but quite the contrary, Mr. Rogers added.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner told a Gladstone, Man., meeting of the benefits to the farmer under the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act.

Denton Massey, National Government candidate in Toronto-Greenwood, and Sylvanus Apps, National Hockey League star and National Government candidate in Brant, spoke at Paris, Ontario. The Toronto Maple Leaf player said if he was elected he would call a conference of representative farmers to discuss their problems.

tire subject may then be given full public discussion and the conditions at this school reported as the Press sees them."

Earlier in the day, Premier Hepburn said at Toronto that Canadian censorship had "covered up" what he described as "violent disturbances" at the air school where airmen were "fed-up and disgusted with doing nothing but shining door knobs and polishing floors."

Charges Listed

Mr. Hepburn said several hundred airmen marched through the streets of St. Thomas in protest against "lack of training." It took three days for military authorities to round them up and the censors warned local newspapermen that the story could not be published, he said.

Mr. Rogers said in his reply that there have been no riots and it "is absolutely untrue" that the airmen marched into town and were not rounded up for three days.

It also is untrue that the St. Thomas paper wanted to publish such a story and was denied the right. Mr. Hepburn's further allegation that the rioters were given blanket leaves so that Mr. Rogers could deny there was any disturbance, was described by the Defence Minister as "sheer fabrication."

A halt should be called by Conservative Leader Manion, Premier Hepburn and Lieut.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, "to wild and fantastic utterances," Mr. Rogers continued.

He said he did not know if these men realized what they are doing and added "each time Premier Hepburn indulges his flair for abuse and for groundless statement, for loose and violent speech, he is a party to the betrayal of Canada.

Charges Get Quick Reply

Mr. Hepburn's charges also prompted a reply from a government spokesman concerning the censorship charges.

The spokesman declared that the censors never at any time suppressed any story of disturbances at St. Thomas and no such story ever was submitted to them. The Press censors here confirmed this statement.

Mr. Hepburn, annoyed by criticism by Dominion Government officials against Mr. Hepburn's ban on the "March of Time" film "Canada at War", told newspapermen he was "exposing" news of the "violent disturbance" on his own responsibility as Premier of Ontario.

Mr. Hepburn also criticised Prime Minister Mackenzie King and charged him with having "control of the Press and the radio through his censorship".

"Well," added Mr. Hepburn, "he is not going to control the screen as well". He said he had been criticized for "preventing dissemination of this political propaganda" ('Canada at War') but "Rogers employed censorship to cover up at St. Thomas".

The film in question, said Mr. Hepburn, will be released for showing in Ontario Theatres the day after the General Election, March 26.

VETOES RESOLUTION

Port Hope, Ont., March 6—(CP)—Town council last night vetoed a police commission resolution calling for the resignation of Police Chief Thomas Murphy on the grounds of unsatisfactory performance of duties.

The commission made a test case of the Municipal Snow-Shovelling and Truckers' By-laws and then, declaring they were not properly enforced, called for the chief's resignation. The mayor and five councillors threw out the resolution.

Do You Need Money to Buy Seed?

Plan for the balance of this year now. The results next Fall largely depend upon the forethought given to cultivation, fertilization and the quality of the seed you intend to plant. Success usually follows good management. Intensive cultivation of your land, properly fertilized and sown with Registered or Government Tested seed, is the best assurance of profitable results.

Premier of Quebec

"QUEBEC IS PREPARED TO CO-OPERATE IN ALL FRIENDLINESS"

Following is Premier Godbout's statement:

"Quebec with her vast natural resources is ready to support faithfully the Canadian Government in its duty, incumbent upon it for the protection of our territory and our Christian civilization.

"Quebec's immense activities make a contribution that round out the offerings of her sister provinces.

"Ranging from the products of farm, mine and forest, to those of manufacturing plants, Quebec's share in Canada's effort is as diversified as it is large.

"Quebec is prepared to co-operate in all friendliness with the other provinces of Canada to assure the triumph of our National Unity." (Signed) A. GODBOUT, Premier.

THE SAME QUALITIES of intrepidity, perseverance, courage, and leadership that characterized her explorer sons, are alive in Quebec today. Her present pioneers are still exploring, developing, cultivating her vast frontier with its natural wealth waiting to be uncovered: with its water powers, developed and undeveloped, the greatest in the world; and immense forests yet untrod.

This people by industry and enterprise produced in 1936 over a billion and a quarter dollars of wealth; exported over two and a half million tons of their products. Quebec's mines of gold, silver, copper, lead, radium, her fur trapping and her fur culture, her fisheries, her newsprint and her forestry are constant producers of wealth. She has 33,000 miles of roads, and in 1937 entertained 600,000 tourists, being herself one of Canada's greatest and most compelling attractions.

THE AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY IS CO-OPERATING IN CANADA'S WAR EFFORT

Now, more than ever before, our plants and highly specialized equipment are Dominion assets; our skilled workmen, vital cogs in the wartime industrial set-up in which the production of units of transport looms more important than ever. A busy Automotive Industry is truly a National War Enterprise. So remember, when you buy a Canadian-Built car, you are helping support an industry that distributes more than $22,000,000.00 in wages and salaries to many thousand families dependent on the industry. Add to these the families that are employed by industries supplying raw and finished materials to automobile manufacturers, and you see what this activity means to Canada.

4-MILL CUT IN TAX RATE ENCOURAGING

Taxpayers and other citizens of Belleville should feel grateful to the city council of 1939 and the city council of 1940 for the fact that their policy has in no small measure resulted in lowering of the rate of taxation in the city for the present year. Careful management last year and plans for this year, the avoiding of large capital outlays, the fact that some debentures have matured and a few other items are the chief factors which permit the council of 1940 to announce a reduction of four mills in the rate to bring it down to 41½ mills.

Ald. McLean Haig, chairman of executive, to whom along with the Mayor and other members of the council, must go credit for the fine showing made this year in bringing down the estimates and setting the tax rate, explained that "last year's council continued the policy of its immediate precessors of refraining from unnecessary expense and that the present council has every indication of following the same practice."

He pointed out, of course, that the effects of the war on the economic and financial fabric of the country cannot be forecast and advised that municipalities should not lose sight of the fact that increased Dominion and provincial burdens would naturally have a serious effect on the costs to be borne by a municipality like Belleville. This warning is timely and there is urged upon the present council and following councils a continuation of the policy of economical administration and refusal to embark on capital projects unless they be absolutely essential. This would be a means to some extent of offsetting any increase in taxes imposed by other bodies over which this council has no control.

A surplus of $13,785.77 from 1939, which was the result of an increase in ordinary receipts over expenditures and a reduction of last year's expenditures over the estimates, was one of the factors leading to the rate reduction.

Another is that debenture requirements are less. This is due to negotiations with the Ontario Municipal Board concerning the accumulated surplus in the sinking fund. The Board allowed the city to cease levying for certain sinking fund debentures where a sufficient amount is already on hand to provide for the entire principal amount at maturity. As some of these came under the Local Improvement Act the property owners affected will have their local improvement charges eliminated a year or two before they would ordinarily expire. No monies have been withdrawn from the sinking fund for any current expenses.

The third factor is the increase in assessment of $200,000. This phase is important and there is expectation of a further increase in assessment through the erection of new houses. Sales of property made in 1939 will mean their return to the assessment roll this year. This means a boost of $100,000 in assessment.

Alderman Haig pointed to the fact that cooperation of the various bodies has been of great benefit to the council in its work.

A welcome note was sounded at the close of his explanation that "It is gratifying to predict that in the absence of any unforeseen contingency there is no reason why the rate should not be annually reduced for some years to come."

A fairly low tax rate with efficient management is one of the chief appeals of a city to newcomers, to business and to homebuilders. That the reduction in rate here will encourage and stimulate enterprise there is no reason to doubt.

The city was bearing a rather high rate for some years. Then successive councils gradually cut down the rate until this year's council was privileged to report the largest of all reductions.

The hint thrown out of expected further reductions in the rate for some years is just what is required to act as a stimulant to civic enterprise and to encourage the businessman, the property-owner and tenant.

Mayor Thompson and the aldermen of the 1940 council have been privileged to announce the most welcome reduction in rate.

COL. K. ROOSEVELT QUOTES 'BATTLE HYMN'

Colonel Kermit Roosevelt when receiving reporters the other day on his appointment as commander of the volunteers in England for the aid of Finland clutched in his hand a copy of an anthology of American verse edited by A. C. Ward. He was speaking of his call to fight for the Finns and explained that his father, the late Theodore Roosevelt, former president of the United States and the colonel of the Rough Riders who fought at San Juan Hill in Cuba in the Spanish-American War, had always wanted "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" as the National anthem of the United States. In Mr. Roosevelt's opinion it would serve as the anthem of the democracies today.

Mr. Roosevelt then opened the book and quoted the lines which he said were particularly appropriate and read:

"He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men
before His judgment seat;
Oh, be swift, my soul, to answer
Him! be jubilant, my feet!
Our God is marching on."

Mr. Roosevelt has heard a ringing call, the trumpet voice to battle in the war for the preservation of liberty and freedom in Finland.

The Finns are battling hard and the volunteers whom Mr. Roosevelt will lead will play a part in the defence of the nation and add their tribute to the achievements of the small republic.

CANADA'S DUTY

"We took the step not because we liked it, but because we felt it our duty," said the Lord Bishop of Quebec, Rt. Rev. Dr. Philip Carrington, in a sermon in New York, as he explained Canada's entry into the war and pointed out the importance of the struggle against dictatorship. He declared that the present conflict concerns the whole world and said that the preservation of the British Empire is necessary for the future of the world.

He declared that Britain has always tried to do what was right and decent and has tried to defend personal liberty.

These opinions express the views of the people of Canada who are a unit in this great undertaking to assure freedom's continuance in the world.

HITLER AND THE MONTH OF MARCH

If the German people are forbidden to possess or read books of astrology or calendars of predictions, some of which are said to be ominous and disturbing to German morale, Adolf Hitler evidently has enough superstition in his makeup for the German people.

It is said that the Fuehrer looks upon the month of March as one of supreme moment in his life. Some people are wondering if the month will have any effect on Hitler as it had in the past for a good many of his movements have had their beginning in this month. Four years ago he crossed the Rhine into demilitarized territory and two years ago he walked into Austria and seized it. One year ago he took steps in Bohemia and Moravia which laid the foundation for the alliance of non-aggression against which he ran when he invaded Poland last autumn.

Will Hitler yield to the suggestion of the month and try some new step? A few weeks will tell.

But Adolf Hitler is not as free as he was. He is limited to a degree as compared with what he was before he was at war. Six months of consolidation of the Allied armies and air fleets and navies have immensely strengthened the Allied cause. They are prepared for any emergency which may develop.

He Just Calls Them 'Errata'

We heard about a university professor getting sarcastic the other day about small errors in newspapers.

We won't stand for that.

We'll pick out the mistakes in newspapers—but we won't have an outsider taking cracks at the newspaper family.

We just ask you to consider the case.

The newspaperman writes his story in a rush, just one step ahead of the deadline for the edition.

He always does this when he could have written it three days before. If he didn't wait for the last minute to write it he wouldn't be a newspaperman.

The copy reader reads it swiftly with one eye on the clock watching edition time.

The printer sets it with one eye on the clock watching for quitting time.

The proofreader skims through it for errors, with one eye on the clock and the other on the pretty girl who reads the copy aloud to him.

And steaming with the speed with which it has been handled, the newspaper story stands before the reader in print, a half-hour after it was just a nebulous theory in the mind of some reporter.

Then a university professor chortles with glee because he finds a present and a past tense playing hide-and-seek with each other in one paragraph.

But take a university professor.

When he sets out to write anything he takes six weeks to write one short chapter of a book.

The printer reads it, then the proofs come back to the professor.

He reads them.

His secretary reads them.

His wife reads them.

His married daughter reads them.

Then he gets an expert to read them.

Six years later the book is printed—with an extra page enumerating the mistakes that have been missed.

He makes the mistakes appear learned and respectable, however, by calling them "errata."—J. R. H. in Toronto Telegram.

Fighting R. A. F. Blanket Planes in Frigid Lines

Editor's note: This is one of a Canadian Press series written during a visit to Royal Air Force stations behind the Maginot Line.

By PAT USSHER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in France (CP)—Through territory which saw some of the fiercest fighting in the First Great War a procession of four camouflaged motor cars carried newspapermen on a visit to a fighter squadron of the Royal Air Force.

The flying field is on the outskirts of a village only four minutes flying time from the German frontier. The newspapermen — an Empire Press Union party— found it blanketed with snow and with the temperature below freezing point.

Sleek Hawker Hurricane Fighters were scattered about the field. They were spaced apart so that if the enemy dropped bombs not more than one machine at a time would be hit. Engines were shrouded in blankets to ward off the bitter cold.

Operations headquarters at the field consisted of a tiny corrugated iron shed, half-embedded in the side of a small hill. Inside was an up-to-date telephone switchboard connecting with base headquarters and other air fields.

The squadron leader, a burly Ulsterman clad in a sheepskin windbreaker, sounded the field air raid alarm for our benefit. It roared like a vacuum cleaner going into action.

The squadron was billeted in a rough little house in the village a quarter of a mile away. Here we were taken upstairs to the tiny mess, where we warmed ourselves with drinks after a three-hour cross-country drive.

The airmen in the mess, most of them in their early 20s, included a tall, curly-haired New Zealander who accounted for the first German Dornier brought down in France. He encountered it on his 21st birthday, on Nov. 8. The job done, he came back to the mess and announced casually: "The drinks are on me today, boys."

The prize trophy of the feat was the twisted barrel of a machine gun.

"That's a nice trophy you have there," I said to him, pointing to the machine gun barrel.

"Do you want to buy it?" he asked with a smile.

But he wouldn't really part with it for any amount of money.

Allied Air Chiefs

Another cross-country drive along snowy roads brought the press party, headed by Major J. J. Astor, chairman of the Times Publishing Company and President of the Empire Press Union, to the nerve centre of the Allied aerial war effort. It is situated in a modern building near a village. There we met the recently appointed air officer commanding the R. A. F. in France, Air Marshal Arthur S. Barratt.

He shares quarters with General Vuillemin, chief of the French Air Force, an arrangement typifying the close co-operation existing between the two Allies. General Vuillemin, suffering from a cold, was unable to meet the correspondents, but the Chief of Staff of the French air arm, General Mandigal, was there.

A huge log fire provided a cheery warm glow in the room and the newspapermen, chilled by their long drive, welcomed it.

Conversation turned to the relative showing of bombing and fighting planes in the air warfare to date. Air Marshal Barratt was asked if he thought the good showing British bombers had made against German fighters meant the day of the combat plane was over.

Without hesitation he said he didn't agree the fighter was "washed up." He attributed the comparative success of British bombers against German fighters to "packed" formation flying and the quality of R.A.F. manpower.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

The Spastic Colon —Large Intestine

"The symptoms are fullness immediately after meals, gas coming up from stomach, gas pains in stomach region, stabbing or dull ache under or in heart region, small stool with much gas, with perhaps fullness and bloating in upper part and both sides of abdomen. The individual is worried that he has heart trouble, pleurisy, and ulcers because of heart burn or high acid condition; appendicitis because of frequent jabs of pain in appendix region. He loses weight because of the bloating and discomfort even after small meals and is afraid to eat because of this. He becomes more nervous, cannot sleep well because he imagines all sorts of ailments are present in his abdomen and chest. He resorts to laxatives and even enemas for relief of the constipation. Finally, when he is sure of the worst, he comes to the physician for examination."

What has happened to this individual (and it could be any of us at times)? His colon—large intestine—has become "spastic"; that is, there are spasms at different parts which prevent wastes and gases from going downward and out of the body. The spasms cause all the symptoms.

The above clear picture of spastic colon—colitis—is given by Dr. Theodore H. Maday in Medical World.

What causes spastic colon? Physicians are agreed that it is the new or rapid rate at which so many of us live in these days that interferes with the digestive processes before food is eaten, while it is being mixed with digestive juice in the small intestine (first part) and the stomach, with absorption of food into the blood from the small intestine, and with the passage of the wastes through the colon or large intestine.

The treatment consists in showing the patient that as the cause of his symptoms is nervousness or emotional disturbances, he must learn to be calm at mealtime, eat his food slowly so as to mix it well with the saliva or alkaline mouth digestive juice; the extra amount of alkaline digestive juice flowing down to stomach calls for an increased amount of acid juice to overcome the alkaline mouth digestive juice. This extra supply gives more complete digestion and preparation of the food for absorption.

"A happy attitude at mealtime is of great importance and as free of worries as it is possible to prevent nervous contraction (spasm) of stomach and bowel".

The Wreck of The Hesperus

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem "The Wreck of the Hesperus," published 100 years ago, was based on fact—only he wrote about the wrong ship, and the skipper's "fair daughter" whose cheeks were like the "dawn of day" was a woman of fifty-five.

It was several days after a severe storm along the New England coast that Longfellow conceived the idea of the poem while reading a clipping from a Boston newspaper, which said:

"From Gloucester we learn that of a large number of coasting vessels and sloops which had put into Cape Ann Harbor when the storm came on and for the most part anchored in the outer harbor, twenty went ashore and sixteen of that number went to pieces. Many lives were lost, as seventeen bodies had already been washed ashore. One of them was reported to be a female who was lashed to the bitts of the windlass of a coastline steamer."

From that information, Longfellow wrote his first ballad, the story of the schooner Hesperus being wrecked on the Reef of Norman's Woe. It tells of a grizzled captain who took his daughter with him on a voyage. The skipper, confident that he could bring his ship through any storm, disregarded the warning of an old sailor and failed to enter harbor when a gale began.

The captain headed for Gloucester Harbor when the gale became more severe—but it was too late. He lashed his daughter to a mast, hoping she would float to safety.

Research by Longfellow's grandson, Henry W. Longfellow Dana, shows that a schooner Hesperus was wrecked in the storm—but that the accident occurred in Boston Harbor, forty miles from Gloucester.

It was the schooner Favorite, from Wiscasset, Me., that "like a vessel of glass, stove and sank" on the Reef of Norman's Woe. The woman was not identified, but it was well known that she was about fifty-five. Dana said.

The first mention of the now famous ballad was in the poet's journal. He wrote: "News of shipwrecks horrible....twenty bodies washed ashore near Gloucester.... One female lashed to piece of wreck. There is a reef called Norman's Woe. Among others the schooner Hesperus. Also the Sea-Flower on Black Rock. I must write a ballad on this."

Less than three weeks after that entry the magazine New World accepted the poem, saying it would "resplendently coruscate in the glorious paper on Saturday next." —Victoria Daily Colonist.

Canadian Pacts Election Issue to Republicans

By H. M. PETERS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York (CP)—Months ahead of the formal opening of the 1940 presidential campaign, a torrent of argument is in flow throughout the United States about the Roosevelt Administration's reciprocal trade agreements.

Regardless of whether or not Congress in the coming spring extends the administration's power to make such agreements with new countries, the effect of the 22 agreements now in existence will be argued right up to election day, Nov. 5.

Spearhead of those who defend the agreements is Cordell Hull, Tennessee veteran who has devoted his whole political career to the dissemination of the gospel that the freer international trade is the better for the world.

Mr. Hull, secretary of state since 1933, may yet head the democratic ticket in the election, in which event the agreement over trade policies would become of even greater importance than it is now.

The Republican Party, traditionally a high-tariff party drawing its main support from the great industrial states which swung to Franklin Roosevelt in 1932 and 1936, is hammering at the agreements.

Comment on Agreements

Their many-sided arguments touch largely upon the fact that the agreements, unlike actual treaties, do not have to be ratified by the United States Senate. Under the present law the president can lower the rate of the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act (a Republican measure) by as much as 50 per cent in exchange for compensating tariff reductions by other countries.

That, say the Republicans, is too much power for the administration to wield without congressional supervision. A 50 per cent change in tariff can lay whole industries open to drastic foreign competition, they say.

Mr. Hull and his supporters answer that history has shown that when tariffs get into Congress there is too much "log-rolling" — trading between one industrial minority group and another—and that the national interest suffers.

Principal of the agreements attained under the act are those with Canada and Great Britain. Throughout the farming west and south speaker after speaker hammers at these two agreements, particularly the Canadian, on the ground that the United States is "flooded" by competitive goods.

Farmers Divided

But even among the farmers themselves there is no unanimity. The American Farm Bureau Federation has told Congress that examination "fails to disclose any measurable injury to American Agculture," while the National Grange says it "does not make sense to pay.... American farmers to reduce acreage and then enter into agreements with other nations making it easier for them to glut our markets with competitive commodities."

Mr. Hull's answer to critics is that in 1937 and 1938 United States exports to nations with which it has trade agreements increased 61 per cent, while exports to non-agreement countreis rose 38 per cent.

In reply to arguments that the program has hurt the farmer he says that after 2 1-2 years of the Smoot-Hawley Act farm income had fallen from $11,200,000,000 in 1929 to $4,700,000,000 in 1932, but that it increased to $7,600,000,006 by 1938, exclusive of government benefit payments.

"Does this indicate injury?" he asks.

No New Paper In Forty Years

There was a pleasant and apparently capable young man in this office a few days ago, and he had been with the Regina Daily Star, a paper which recently suspended publication. There were 68 on the staff, including 15 in the editorial department. The young man was "looking around" because he desired to get placed as soon as possible. As far as he knew none of the staff members had so far secured new positions.

This most recent newspaper failure was the point on which the Sydney Post-Record based an interesting if not an entirely comforting article. It recalled that the Regina Star had started in 1928 and so had lasted 12 years. From there its investigation came to the point of declaring there is not one English-speaking daily paper in Canada which was not in existence at the turn of the century, and that is 40 years ago. The one exception which might be urged is the Morning News-Herald of Vancouver, and it is actually the successor of a paper which had previously found the going too hard.

In that period of 40 years there have been amalgamations and failures. Almost without exception all the small cities of the province supported two papers. Today but one. Toronto had in the morning field the Globe, Mail and Empire and the World, and in the afternoon the Telegram, Star and News — six daily papers. Now there are three. Hamilton at one time had the Spectator, Herald, Times and the Post, but now it has the Spectator only.

While that thinning-out process has been going on there have been no newspapers starting and surviving. In several places across the Dominion a start has been made, but it was accompanied by the cross entry of a subsequent failure. Not a new English-speaking newspaper successfully launched and maintained in 40 years! That goes back to the time when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was in the early years of his regime at Ottawa and when Hon. G. W. Ross was premier of Ontario.

And in that 40-year period the Dominion has seen remarkable developments. Peterborough 40 years ago was a place of less than 14,000; today it is 25,000. The progress of this city is similar to the progress of others. Within those 40 years new industries have been established and existing ones have expanded. The entire automotive industry has come into existence with its wide range of garages, service stations and dealers' headquarters. There are people in business who have started in recent years and they have succeeded. And yet in all that period there has not been one English-language paper started in Canada which has continued until the present.

Papers today are published under a system where costs are driven to heights which were unheard of 40 years ago. At that time the amount of telegraph or cable copy being received was relatively small. Today it is positively large and it is correspondingly expensive. The newspaper in the daily field at the moment, no matter where published, must have equipment which 40 years ago was restricted to the larger cities.

Often enough we have heard it stated that newspapers are subsidized in some mysterious manner and that they are willing to throw their support to those from whom they receive the subsidy. That one startling fact that while there have been dozens of papers going out of business there has not been one successfully launched in the last 40 years is about as effective an average as can be supplied to the subsidy talk.—Peterborough Examiner.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

One of the few scraps of information trickling out to the public concerning the conversations of Sumner Welles, Under-Secretary of State for the United States, with European leaders concerns his talk with Adolf Hitler at Berlin. It is to the effect that Hitler earnestly expressed his desire to bring the Russo-Finnish war to an end.

Hitler's desire for peace between Germany's new-found friend, Russia, and Finland, a German friend of long-standing, probably are related to Germany's own conflict with the Western Powers.

Although the assault on Viipuri gives the Russians a semblance of victory, their present rate of progress indicates they cannot advance much farther before the spring breakup. And when the snow melts in the low-lying lake area and the movement of Russian motorized forces will be brought to a standstill.

Prolongation of the war for several months might result from the spring thaws and thus continue for Germany, the difficulties experienced in organizing a regular system of supply from Russia when the Soviet troops are engaged in Finland.

German economists and engineers, planning for the nation's sustenance during a long war and a tight blockade count heavily on the spring and summer months for the arrangement of transportation between Germany and Russia and for getting Russian production oriented to German needs.

Then too, if Hitler could associate himself with President Roosevelt's peace policy by joining with the United States in amendiation of the Russo-Finnish quarrel, he might strengthen German position in America and world public opinion and do something to remove the stigma of aggression from the Nazi regime.

River Current Wears Through Ice Just Below Upper Bridge

The first genuine indication of an impending general break-up in the ice of the lower Moira was noticed Tuesday afternoon just a few rods below the upper bridge, where the current had worn its way through the ice with a considerable amount of open water being evident. Running parallel with the banks of the river, great elongated cracks have appeared in the ice, while the entire centre of the river had the appearance of having sunken several inches.

Slightly swollen by Sunday's rain and the ensuing mild spell, the current rolled merrily out through the opening in the ice just below the upper bridge and was continuing above the surface towards the bay, while the surface of the river between the two lower bridges presented rather a lake-like appearance with the ice rapidly becoming softened by the action of the water. With a turn for the colder during the night, however, the water was nearly dried up this morning

Not to be caught napping by an early break-up of the river, however, precautions against the recurrence of disastrous flooding conditions have been taken by city officials and approximately three weeks ago a channel was cut in the ice at the mouth of the river. This, it is expected, will permit the escape of the flood waters of the Moira into the bay when the ice piles up against the piers of the lower bridges.

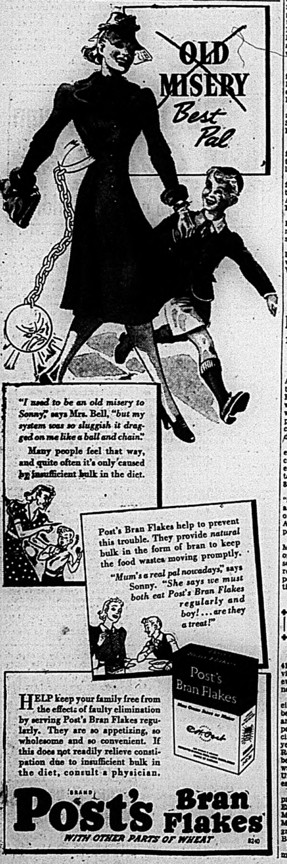
Although considerable cold weather has been experienced since the channel was first opened, thus necessitating its re-opening on one occasion, it has been entirely free of ice since last Friday when city workmen completed the task of taking out over six inches of ice which had formed after the channel was first opened.

Splash-and-Run Drivers Liable To Prosecution

Police are always on the alert for hit-and-run motor drivers, but at this season of the year a practice that is unnecessary arouses the feelings of pedestrians. What is known to police and pedestrians as "splash-and-run" drivers are the menace of the city streets today.

Police authorities have received innumerable complaints recently regarding motorists driving at a fast rate of speed through water puddles on the city streets and splashing innocent bystanders. Charges of careless driving can be preferred against drivers who fail to regard the clothing and property of others.

"It is not necessary to accelerate the speed of a motor vehicle to drive through a water puddle and splash pedestrians. On the contrary it would be better to retard the speed of the vehicle and thereby assure the safety and property of others," suggested police authorities today. In other cities throughout the province motorists, who have been apprehended splashing pedestrians on the street, have been charged in police court.



"I used to be an old misery to Sonny," says Mrs. Bell, "but my system was so sluggish it dragged on me like a ball and chain."

NETHERLANDS SUB, TUGBOAT COLLIDE

Sub Cruising on Surface When Rammed Amidships by Tugboat—Two Killed

Amsterdam, March 6 (AP)— The Netherlands submarine O-II sank in a collision with a tugboat in the Nieuw Diep today, but a daring rescue helped save all except two of the crew of about 30.

The submarine was cruising on the surface at the Denhelder naval harbor preparing to go to sea when rammed amidships by the tug Amsterdam.

About 10 men on deck sprang clear and swam to the seawall.

Ten minutes later, a crowd gathered on the wall saw bubbles. Then the periscope appeared momentarily. After another 10 minutes, part of the stern emerged.

Two naval officers in a nearby rescue boat leaped aboard the stern and managed to pry open a hatch and help the imprisoned crew to safety.

Later, it was announced officially only two men were missing. They were in the bow torpedo chamber. Tugs started salvage work.

(The O-II, built in 1925 and with a surface displacement of 483 tons, had a normal complement of 29 men according to Jane's fighting ships. It is one of 30 submarines which the Netherlands has in service or is building for delivery this year.)

Ki-Y League

One Bantam and two Midget hockey games of the local Ki-Y series were run off at the Hume arena last night with Jr. Y's Men and St. Mike's battling to a one all tie in the final canto of the night while in the other Midget game the O.S.D. lads scored a 2-0 triumph over the "Polecats". The Bantam game between the "Y" Pups and the O.S.D. resulted in a scoreless draw. All three games were handled by Jimmie Seymour.

The teams:

"Y" Pups: Goal, McCreary; defence, Gibson and Cameron; centre, Neal; wings, Rankin and C. Cameron; subs, Martin, Callaghan and Hanks.

O.S.D.: Goal, Hall; defence, Lines and Hylitt; centre, Moore; wings, Scott and Barron; subs, Sands and Leduc.

Midget Series.

Jr. Y's Men: Goal, DeRushie; defence, Flindall and Lovering; centre, Cross; wings, Arnott and Mifflin.

Polecats: Goal, Smith; defence, Reeves and Doyle; centre, Weymark; wings, York and Rosatte; subs, Smith and D. Rosatte.

O.S.D.: Goal, Martin; defence, Louzon and Wilson; centre, Moore; wings, Styles and Calder; subs, Wedge and Steenburgh.

War Risks Insurance Premium Unchanged, ¼ of 1 % Month

London, March 5—(CP) — Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, President of the Board of Trade, informed the House of Commons today that the war risks insurance premium would remain one-quarter of one per cent a month due to "the increased risk of serious air raids" during the spring.

He said a reduction was considered inadvisable although no claims had been made on the government's insurance fund now totalling 18,620,000 pounds ($82,850,000).

Commercial representatives in "all important overseas markets" are reporting on ways and means of stimulating British exports, Sir Andrew said during the question period in the House.

Geoffrey Lloyd, Secretary for Mines, told the House that storage of coal would be encouraged as soon as possible to prevent recurrence of a shortage due to a transportation failure such as the nation suffered this winter.

OBITUARY

ANDREW TOUNSLEY

Andrew Tounsley, late residence, 41 Baldwin Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday evening, March 5th., after an illness of one week's duration.

The late Mr. Tounsley was born eighty years ago at Lachine, Quebec, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tounsley. Letters From the Troops

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Royle, 212 Coleman Street, have received a letter from their son Bert now with the First Division of the C.A.S.F. in England. He writes from Aldershot as follows:

"Dear Mother and Dad:

"Just a few lines to tell you I am fine. I went to London on a five-day leave and had a fairly good time, but it's nothing like home. On Saturday, my first day in London, I was up to the Whitehall and went to an Irish dance Saturday night but I didn't dance as I can't dance. On Sunday I went out to the east end of London to some of Ruth's aunt's relations and it sure put me in mind of home as they had a small girl about Marie's size. While out there I was looking at some love birds and was told I could take a pair home with me when I return to Canada. On Monday I went out to Wimbleton with another soldier. On Tuesday I was back out in the east end for the day and went to a show at night. On Wednesday I caught the train and went back to camp and spent the rest of the day in Aldershot. Today I am just sitting around doing nothing as I have had another typhoid inoculation and am excused for 48 hours' duty.

When you get this letter please tell Ruth my address as I forgot to put it in the letter I wrote her.

How are you and how are all the rest of the family?

How are Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Williams getting along? And tell Stan Buck "hello" for me if you see him. How are Bob and Edna and the family and tell Bob if he likes to write me. I think while I have the 48 hours' off duty, I will write to Mr. Boyce and a few others as that is all there is to do.

Well I think I have told you about all I can for now so I will close and write again soon. So goodbye to all and good luck for now.

With loads of love from you loving son Bert.

P.S.—Please write soon and don't forget to send some snapshots.

My address: Pte. W. B. Royle, C5122 B Coy., H. and P. E. Regiment c-o Base Post Office, C.A.S.F., Canada.

Taking of Transport Work of Joyriders?

Whether the work of joyriders or pranksters police were unable to ascertain, but a large Smith tractor-trailer truck was stolen from the corner of Bridge and Front Sts., where it had been parked by the company driver shortly after 2.30 a.m. today.

Charles Price, Smith Transport driver, came running to the police station early today shouting that his tractor-trailer had been stolen. Price parked the large transport in front of the Dominion Bank on Bridge St., and adjourned to a nearby restaurant for coffee. Upon his return Price found his transport missing.

Constables Evans and Arnott gave chase and later the transport was found abandoned at the western city limits sometime later. The goods in the truck were found intact and nothing reported missing upon a subsequent check-up.

Police Blotter

After having parked his truck on East Dundas St., while making a social call shortly after midnight last night, Vincent Campbell, 81 Front St., heard a crash and upon investigation found, that a motor car had crashed into the rear of his parked truck.

Police were notified and Constable Taylor later apprehended Mike Yosepenko of Point Anne and held the latter on charges. The car which Yosepenko was driving easterly was badly damaged during the accident.

Two inebriates and eleven transients shared the cell block at the police station last night.

JUST A FIREBUG

Louisville, Ky., March 6 (AP) — Police said today a man listed as Roland G. Taylor, 41, was held on six arson charges after admitting he set his own house on fire "for excitement" and because he liked "to hear fire engines scream down the street."

UNEMPLOYMENT DECREASES

London, March 6 (CP) — Earl Stanhope, Lord President of the Council, told the House of Lords last night that permanent unemployment in Great Britain had decreased 40 per cent. since the outbreak of the war and soon would be eliminated.

VICKS VA-TRO-NOL

Justice Jest

By THAYER WALDO

The lady speared a pickled onion and nibbled it appraisingly.

"Delightful!" she pronounced. "I compliment your taste, Burton, dear. They do go well with sherry."

The large man at her left nodded somewhat curtly.

"Yes, yes, Prunella; quite so. But that's a trifle irrelevant just now. Mortimer and I have weighty matters to discuss. Haven't we, old boy?"

Across the table from him the party's third member seemed almost to start.

"Eh?" he jerked; then: "Oh, absolutely! I should say—a great many."

Huffily the hostess inquired:

"Well, am I to take that as a hint to retire?"

"Not at all, my dove," said Burton; "on the contrary. I was merely about to suggest that you listen with attentive silence to our talk."

"As the producer of this play of yours, I wished to go over some of the details with you."

"You—ah—you mean there are some things in the script you want to change?"

"Most emphatically not!" The bulky gentleman flicked one thick hand in a gesture of reproof.

"I see. Yes; of course. Were there—did you have any particular scenes in mind?"

"Glad you asked that!" Burton boomed heartily. "Just the point I was coming to. Yes, there's one bit I particularly feel we would do well to examine. I refer to the sequence in which Sir Cholmondeley Twerp-Gerald is given the poisoned wine by Horatio Steele."

"In that," the other went on imperturbably, "I will insist that you achieve a masterpiece. It has suspense, dramatic force, and, above all, justice triumphant."

He looked at each of them with eyes enthusiastically aglow, then resumed:

"Think of it—at last we are to have in the theatre an enactment of civilized yet perfect revenge. It has remained for Mortimer Frentrup, the outstanding playwright of this age, to deal with the problem in a wholly satisfactory manner. I am more than proud to be instrumental in offering this magnificent example of right conduct to husbands everywhere."

He paused, glanced at the wine glasses of the other two, and said solicitously:

"Come—I didn't realise we were running dry. Prunella, ring for Quint and have him bring more sherry."

Mortimer's mouth opened twice before words came.

"Not—not for me," he managed finally.

"Nonsense!" Burton scoffed. "We mustn't neglect conviviality. Ring, my dear."

After a quick glance to her right, Prunella obeyed. The butler appeared almost at once, carrying a tray which held two Spanish-labeled bottles.

"Fill the glasses," Burton directed; "the same as before."

It was performed and the man went out.

"A toast!" said Burton, "to the success of a fine and noble work, in which we all believe most sincerely!"

All joined, in varying degrees of exuberance. After that the host placed elbows upon the table and renewed his monologue.

"Somehow, I just can't put aside that incident. It has become, beyond all comparable passages in literature, a living, vital thing to me. Suppose for instance—just to illustrate my point, of course—that we three were involved in the situation your play presents, Mortimer. Imagine my satisfaction as the outraged one in hitting upon that scheme of vengeance. Really, I want you to enter into the spirit of the thing, to conceive for the moment of yourselevs as the characters. Mortimer, picture if you can, my supreme delight if I were sitting here possessed of the knowledge that the wine you just took contained a deadly poison!"

One hoarse and barely articulate cry came from the man opposite; then he swayed and toppled to the floor, inert. Instantly Burton sprang up.

"There!" he bellowed, facing the aghast Prunella. "I knew it could be done!"

Greedily he drained the glass. An expression coupling surprise with pain overswept his countenance, very gracefully he collapsed, stretching well across beside Prunella's chair and said:

"Pardon me, ma'am, but there is no cause for alarm. Some months ago a violent passion for you was born in my breast. Since then I have observed your favor divided equally between these two gentlemen, so I thought some way to dispose of them both. Fortunately your husband left a copy of the other gentleman's play on the library table. I read it and gained my inspiration. Poison was in both their drinks tonight."

The producer chuckled and rose.

"Okay, boys," he agreed; "the skit suits me. You can put it in the picture, right after Bong Crossbow's number where he sings "You Horrid Woman."

PERSONALS

Miss Madelin Reid of Doyle's Drug Store is in Toronto, attending a course, conducted by a Beauty specialist from New York, at Elizabeth Arden's Salon.

Mrs. C. Shedden of Smith's Falls, is visiting her mother, Mrs. W. Symons, Bleecker Avenue.

Miss Adelaide Graham and Mrs. Robert White, Buffalo, N.Y., are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Bottum, 214 John Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland Clancy and two children, spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lappan, Lansdowne.

A delightfully arranged affair last Wednesday afternoon and evening was the trousseau tea given by Mrs. J. Thos. Bryant of South Street, Galt, in honour of her daughter, Isabel Bryant, (Mrs. T. Harris). The hostess and her daughter, received over one hundred guests, and Master Billy Clare of Belleville little cousin of the bride-elect, assisted as door boy. During the day and evening twelve girl friends assisted in displaying the trousseau and linens, the wedding gifts and shower gifts. The dining room table was covered with a Madeira cloth and centred with a large bowl of Spring flowers. The three-tiered wedding cake which was displayed was flanked with pink tapers. Two grandmothers of the bride presided over the tea cups, Mrs. T. Bertram and Mrs. B. Bryant assisted in the evening by Mrs. H. Rosenberg. Serving the guests was Mrs. F. Clare of Belleville, and assisting in the evening were Misses Margaret Clark and Margaret Hutchinson. The living room was prettily decorated with pink and white streamers and bowls of tulips.

WEDDINGS

KINKLEY—BAILEY

The wedding took place on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in the minister's home in Kingston, of Jessie A., daughter of Mrs. Bailey, 41 Barnesdale avenue south, Hamilton, and the late Mr. W. J. Bailey, to Mr. George Richard Kinkley, R.C.H.A., Kingston, son of Mrs. Grange and the late Mr. John Kinkley, Napanee. Ven. Archdeacon Coleman conducted the service.

The bride and groom were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Scott Wiseman, brother-in-law and sister of the groom. The bride wore a dress of lime fruit green and corsage bouquet of Sweetheart roses and mauve sweet peas. The attendant wore rose crepe with touches of black and corsage bouquet of Talisman roses and sweet peas.

A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Scott Wiseman, Kingston. The bride and groom will reside in Kingston a short time.

HARRIS—BRYANT

At Trinity Anglican Church, Galt, an interesting wedding took place on Saturday afternoon at three-thirty o'clock, when Isabel Gaskin, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Thomas Bryant of Galt, became the bride of Edward Clarence Harris, College St., Belleville, son of Mrs. W. Harris and the late Mr. Harris. Rev. Mr. Thomas officiated.

The chancel of the church was banked with palms and ferns. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a charming picture in her floor length gown of white slipper satin made on Princess lines and full skirt with Queen Anne sleeve coming to a point over the wrist. She wore a finger tip veil which fell in graceful folds from a tiara of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of Bettertimes roses.

Miss Dorothy Parsons of Toronto, was bridesmaid. She chose a floor length dress of forget-me-not blue taffeta made on Princess lines with high neckline. She wore a blue flower headdress with a shoulder length veil of blue.

Mr. Kenneth Sharpe of Corbyville, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Bertram Bryant of Galt and Mr. Harold Parsons of Toronto.

During the ceremony Miss Renwick played "O Promise Me".

At five o'clock a reception, attended by about fifty guests, was held at the Greenaway Inn, Preston Road, the bride's mother in British blue with black seal jacket, black accessories and corsage of Briarcliffe roses, receiving with the bride and groom, the groom's mother being unable to attend owing to illness.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Harris left on a short wedding trip, the bride travelling in a dusky blue dress with black straw hat and matching accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Guests were present from Detroit, Toronto, Hamilton, Guelph, Preston, Kitchener, Belleville and Galt.

Latest Modes in Spring Fashions Expertly Modelled at Women's Hospital Auxiliary Fashion Show

Trend to the New Long Torso Effect Noticeable in Suits and Dresses—Afternoon Dresses Favor Continuance of Shorter Skirt While Blue Shades Are the Most Popular—Display of Evening Gowns Particularly Intriguing

SMART ACCESSORIES

Captivating new fashions on the Spring style horizon were glimpsed by McCarthy Theatre audiences yesterday when the second annual fashion show sponsored by the members of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary attracted capacity audiences for the afternoon and evening presentations. Costumes, smart to the last accessory detail, were modelled by seven local young ladies whose grace and charm contributed to the success of the spectacle. They were Miss Mary Forster, Mrs. J. Marsh, Mrs. R. M. Anderson, Miss Jean Stobie, Mrs. W. Harden, Mrs. H. R. Gibson and Mrs. R. Plumpton.

Interpreting the 1940 mode, Mrs. J. F. Forrester as style commentator played her role in splendid fashion and her interesting descriptions of each costume added to the enjoyment of the large crowds at each performance.

In the McCarthy's stately stage setting, which made a perfect background for the colorful garments shown, was pictured the loveliest feminine wear for the coming season, with the beautiful floral arrangements by Templer's and Givins enhancing the appeal of presentations. Dresses for sports, afternoon and evening, coats, suits and blouses were shown in interesting variety by J. A. McNabb, Ltd., the delightful millinary creations were from Miss Campbell's and the beautiful fur coats were shown by Ashley's, Furs. Completing the costumes, the gloves and handbags, so chic a note in the Spring styles, were from McIntosh Bros., while costume jewelry in bewildering variety was presented by Angus McFee's. Helena Rubinstein make-ups, from Lattimer's were used by the mannequins whose coiffures were arranged by Cole Beauty Salon, Mayfair Beauty Salon and the Marinello Beauty Shop.

Mrs. Gordon Robertson, who acted as pianist for the show and Mrs. Forrester both wore gowns from McNabb's, the former being in white with contrasting panels, and the latter in a black dinner gown in jacket style.

Fashion highlights presented in review included the new long torso effect, particularly in suits and dresses, the Spring coats adhering more to the casual swagger or the Princess fitted lines. In coats the color chart swept from navy and black, through the various beige tones and gray shades to the brightest aspects of the mode, thistle, gold, mountie red with coin dot revers and chartreuse green. Striped effects were also pronounced.

Afternoon dresses emphasized a continuance of the shorter skirt, with bolero styles a definite trend. Lovely new shades have made their appearance—dusky rose, hot pink, thistle, Ricco red, pilgrim gray and so many blue tones that one is reminded of the popular song "It's a Blue World." There are the navy blues, always excellent taste, while heaven blue and Britannia blue led the brighter hues in popularity. These colors were reflected in the smart array of afternoon frocks, whose trim lines, fascinating detail and clever alliance of colors showed the ingenuity of outstanding designers.

Suits Popular

Suits still usurp a prominent place in Spring fashion and here again one will find a wide scope for pleasing individual tastes. Man-tailored suits, dressmaker types with lingerie touches of color, boucle in striking colors, all contributed to the fashion picture yesterday.

Picturesque evening gowns definitely adopted the "Gone With the Wind" fashions and two such versions were particularly beautiful. Silk jersey was used in many evening frocks while net had an important place in evening styles. There were models in rainbow mauve, dusky rose, rose brocade, heaven blue, with printed frocks gaily jacketed adding their note of interest. With the evening frocks each mannequin wore in her hair an orchid, the gift of Dorothy Quick, Florist.

Complementing the Spring tailleur, the lovely fur scarves of silver fox, kolinsky or red fox were noteworthy. In addition, Ashley's showed charming little fur jackets emphasizing the "chunky" mode with wide shoulders. These were waist length or slightly longer and were in red fox, silver fox, Alaska sable, grey kidskin, and mole. The beautiful white evening wraps worn at the conclusion of the revue, with a number of short jackets, created an interesting tableau for the finale.

In hats from Miss Campbell, all the caprices of the Spring mode were revealed. Definitely feminine are the hats with their veils and flowers, and in their unusually wide range of beautiful Spring shades.

Expresses Appreciation

During last evening's performance, Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, chairman of the Board of Governors of Belleville General Hospital, on behalf of the Women's Auxiliary and the board expressed appreciation of the splendid support the Belleville public had given the event. He outlined the auxiliary's program of having each year a June bridge party, a tag day, a Christmas ball and a fashion show. In this way funds have been realized to carry out their splendid work. This year they had concentrated their efforts to supply the hospital with a mobile X-ray machine which had cost $1,375. At Christmas time, eighty patients were remembered with presents, and all during the year the auxiliary purchases helpful equipment, small or large for the hospital. There are eighty members in the auxiliary and additional numbers would be welcomed, the admission fee being only 50c a year.

Mr. Robertson discussed the new $200,000 wing which is in the course of construction at Belleville General Hospital and which when completed in May will answer all the hospitalization needs of the district in a thorough fashion.

At the conclusion of the program the mannequins, Mrs. Robertson and Mrs. Forrester were each presented with flowers by Mr. E. Shapiro on behalf of the exhibitors.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Married Man Lends Salary to Girl in His Office

Dear Miss Fairfax:

In saner moments I feel like the fabled bird charmed by a snake. The snake in question is a girl in the same office with me, whom I both love and despise. Not a week passes but she borrows five or ten from me, and never gives me anything in return. Don't tell me I'm a fool—I know it.

Of course, I'm married. My type of moron always is. My wife asks why I'm always so short, and I tell her first one lie and then another. She's a good woman and I respect her, but I'm "nuts" over the vamp. My wife and I have four children, yet I'd chuck up everything for a year's happiness with the girl I both love and hate. What do you make of my case?

CHARMED.

From the days of poor old Samson, who needed no hair tonics the world has been full of male birds only too willing to be charmed by female snakes. It's an old, old story, my friend. And whether a man is capable of breaking the spell in which he is held depends on his strength of character. Some men succeed in warding off the charm, others go down in defeat.

But why do you think, if you went away with this girl for a year you'd be happy? Thousands have tried that experiment with any thing but ecstatic results. I should think the fact that the charmer is a weekly borrower, which proves conclusively she's more interested in your pay envelope than in you, would effect some sort of a cure.

Imagines It's His First and Last Love

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For two years I went steady with a young lady whom I loved very devotedly, and I think I still do. But something happened between us and it is impossible for me to even think of marriage. Surely you can tell me how I can forget her. I have tried everything in the past two months but of no avail.

I am 28 years old, and this was my first, and I hope, my last love.

M.H.

At 28 I think you're a bit too young to talk about "last love." You'll probably have a dozen before you get over this disappointment and settle down for keeps.

It's an unfailing remedy, probably dating from the days of Adam, Lillith and Eve, but the best way to get over an old love affair is to start a new one. Hard at first perhaps, but grimly persevere in seeing the glamour in Patricia, Jeanne, or old-fashioned Mehitable. And sooner or later you'll forget the girl you want to forget.

There Seems to be a Barrier Between These Two

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much in love with a young man of a different religion. He hardly knows that the girls exist as far as love is concerned. However, he seems to prefer to talk to me more than any other girl of his acquaintance, but there seems to be a barrier between us. Do you think this could amount to more than a mere friendship, or does the fact that we are each interested in our own religion make a difference

Would it be advisable for me to send him a greeting card on his birthday? How could I possibly break down that barrier and show him how I really feel about him?

PATIENCE.

In sending the young man a greeting card on his birthday, you do not commit yourself to anything beyond a pleasant interest in his friendship. If this affair should ever become serious, a difference of religion should not be an insuperable barrier to your marriage. Religion is a matter of conscience and liberal-minded people adopt a policy of "live and let live," in worshipping God.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today

Money Loans Ruinous to Romance

Two letters in one mail from foolish females who lent money to boy friends. One of them says she doesn't mind losing the money if only she can get back the boy friend. The other says she doesn't mind losing the boy friend if only she can get back her cash. Of course everybody knows (but the two foolish virgins) that neither of them will get back either cash or boy friend. And everybody knows that such boy friends aren't worth fighting for. In which event these two damsels will do well to mark off the loans as bad debts and profit by the experience which is more than most people do in the matter of unwise investments.

There's a queer thing: that love and money won't mix before marriage and the gal who tries it wrecks her romance. Yet if love and money aren't mixed in proper proportions after marriage, the marriage is wrecked.

It's difficult to explain. You'd think, wouldn't you, that when a man's in a jam, nowhere to turn, and his best girl steps up and gets him out of the jam, you'd think that he would love her all the more for such evidence of faith in him and affection for him. You'd think he would feel a deep sense of gratitude to her and go his whole length to express it, to say nothing of paying off the loan as fast as possible.

On the contrary, the sense of obligation irks him. He begins to shy away from the reminder of his humiliation and in less time than it takes to count interest due, his interest in the girl has cooled. Even when he has common honesty to pay his debt, he doesn't overcome the feeling of inferiority, (borrower-servant-to-lender idea) which is death to romance.

No matter how sorry a man may be, and he usually is pretty sorry when he touches his girl friend for a loan, the minute he knows that he's presenting a sorry spectacle to her, he's finished with her and off to find another girl that can look up to him for a little while.

Though one spoke with the tongues of men and of angels one couldn't convince the girl who loves the man that she will lose her man and her money by coming to his rescue when he's down on his uppers. This is just as well: for money is a fine touchstone to test character and when a girl applies the test and discovers the ugly truth about the man she loves, she can get down to the business of looking for an honest man—the only sort that will make a good husband.

Fewer Guesses in Carpet Buying

By ELEANOR ROSS

LITTLE by little the guesswork is being taken out of carpet buying. Qualities are graded, and colors are guaranteed.

The increasing use of daylight lamps in showrooms makes it necessary for a true dye color to be used, and precents the mistake of not knowing how the colors will show up in daylight. Perhaps best of all is the absence of any seams in all-over carpeting, no matter of what size or pattern. Locked construction at the back seams is interjoined. Sections of designs may be inserted at any point. Burned, stained or even worn portions may be removed and a new piece of carpet inserted.

Colors Improved

Colors are more beautiful, more luminous and deeper than ever. Subtle shadings create beautiful all-over effects that are rich and beautiful. Embossed, tufted rugs are liked, the pile deeply and closely woven, with subtle colorings.

One house is showing something new, 27-inch squares of a delightful all-over pattern that may be combined to make any size carpet or rug. Where the seams join there is a carved effect which blends in with the pattern itself. There are other carpets with patterns formed by modeled tufts in contrast with nubbins of uncut pile. There are beautiful embossed tufted wool rugs and for the occasional rug there are braided designs which come in interchangeable colors, rugs that are reversible and washable, which may be bound or used with fringe.

New Weaves

There are gorgeous twist and pebble weaves that are machine made but which look as if they had been created on a hand-loom. There are all sorts of patterns, ranging from that old Victorian favorite, the large rose and leaf medallion on light grounds, to a carpet that is an uncanny copy of a leopard skin. But most of us, perhaps, would prefer a hooked rug, especially the smart new variety. There are hooked rugs that breathe of Colonial times, while others are as modern as glass yarn. One manufacturer shows hooked rugs inspired by contemporary chintz and linen fabrics.

The craze for the "carved" pattern is still on, and in the new varieties it seems that the carving is now done with color rather than with varying heights of pile. One is in a needlepoint design of leaves and a delicate flower tracery, its soft rich tones giving a beautifully sculptured effect. Of course, there is plenty of plain broadloom carpeting—there always will be—and with new piles and magnificent colors, it is eternally new and always in demand.

Anne Jamison, Brilliant Soprano To Sing Here

Daughter of a British Army Officer and proud of it, and still retaining her Canadian citizenship though she has travelled far and reached great heights of achievement, Anne Jamison, brilliant young soprano will appear here on Friday, March 8th under the auspices of the local branch of The Canadian Concert Association.

It will be recalled that Miss Jamison, after living many years in Guelph, Ont., first came to public attention through her radio programmes from a Toronto station. After two years, she gave an audition in New York and was immediately accepted for a major radio programme there. Success followed success until she became an international figure with hundreds of thousands of admirers throughout Canada and the United States.

Having reached top ranking as a radio artist, Miss Jamison assayed the concert field and her success has parallelled her previous performances. Last summer, when she appeared as guest soloist at a Promenade Symphony Concert in Toronto, 6,171 people crowded Varsity Arena to hear her. Since then she has been concertizing and comes to Belleville with a record of new achievements and increasing audiences.

Miss Jamison has graciously consented to give an extra performance for our Collegiate students and will tell them something of her life in Hollywood. Her programme in the evening, will be varied and of a most interesting character.

Cold Roast Meat
Scalloped Potatoes
Buttered Broccoli
Pickled Pineapple Slices
Celery
Cake with Chocolate Fudge Icing
Tea or Coffee

PICKLED Pineapple Slices — Combine one cup of the syrup from canned pineapple slices with one-fourth cup brown sugar, one-half teaspoon whole cloves, two pieces of stick cinnamon and one-fourth cup mild vinegar. Bring to boiling point. Add eight slices of pineapple. When boiling remove from heat and let pineapple remain in syrup over night if possible. May be sealed in sterilized jars while hot.

Chocolate Fudge Icing — Ingredients: two ounces bitter chocolate (two squares), one-half cup water, one and one-half cups sugar, one tablespoon butter, one-fourth teaspoon cream of tartar, few grains salt, one-half teaspoon vanilla, two tablespoons thick cream. Cut chocolate into small pieces. Put in saucepan with water. Heat together until chocolate is melted. Beat to blend thoroughly. Stir in sugar, butter and cream of tartar. Cook to the very soft ball stage, 234F. Remove from heat and let stand undisturbed until lukewarm. Sprinkle salt and vanilla over the surface and beat until mixture will hold its shape. Thin with heavy cream to proper spreading consistency.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Thanks for Hostess

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please let me know if it is proper to thank a person for a delightful lunch or dinner. My girl friend says that it is not proper.

M. J.

Your friend probably, and quite rightly, has in mind that, when you thank your hostess after lunching or dining at her house, you shouldn't express thanks only for the food. You thank her for her hospitality. For example, you say something like this, "Thank you so much for asking me to your party. I had such a happy time!"

Then, if you wish—and it's thoroughly proper—you may add an appreciative something about her delicious dinner, or definitely about some specialty of hers that she served for lunch or dinner.

But to thank only for the groceries isn't enough! Your hostess wants to know that you have also enjoyed her hospitality.

Wedding Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to be married in the spring. We had originally planned to have a formal wedding, but owing to recent bereavements in both my fiance's family and in my own, it has been necessary for us to change our plans. The wedding is to be held in church, where we are both well known, in the afternoon. I am planning to wear a lace dress and hat, and I shall have one attendant.

1. Should formal invitations be sent out for a wedding of this nature and under the circumstances? If so, would it be quite correct to send invitations to the church only?

2. I would rather not have a reception, but if you think that it would be better to have one, it would be held at one of the hotels or clubs, and not in my home. Do you think that it would be necessary to have a reception if I sent out invitations, or would something else suffice, such as a tea before the wedding, or perhaps a dinner for those who entertain me.

3. If I am going to wear a lace dress, of a light shade, not white, and a hat, should the men attendants wear business suits or morning coats, or would either be correct? Under the circumstances we feel that the wedding should not be a formal one, but I would like to have the men attendants wear morning coats if this is correct and permissible.

A. Z.

Your taste is very right and sure when you decide that, under the circumstances, your wedding should be a very quiet and informal one, with every detail most carefully and thoughtfully planned. Your plan for your costume, is in excellent taste, and I like your plan to have only one attendant.

Since undoubtedly you will restrict the number of your guests at the ceremony, it would be in far better taste to send your wedding invitation in the form of written notes. If your mother is living, these notes would be written by her; if not, by the one who is to be the woman sponsor of the wedding (an older sister, perhaps), or you yourself may write them.

2. There is no reason for you to have a reception, and indeed it would be in best taste not to have one. Since you do not wish to have a reception, I urge you not to have one. You may give a tea before the wedding if you wish, or a dinner to your very intimate friends, but neither of these is necessary.

3. It would be thoroughly correct for the men to wear morning coats and since you wish to have them do this, by all means carry out this plan. A lace dress and hat is a costume tending to the formal and, therefore formal day clothes for the men would be appropriate.

Bouillon Cup

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Will you please tell me if it is good form to drink soup from a bouillon cup, and if so, should both hands be used?

2. When dining with a gentleman should he sit to my right or left?

IN DOUBT.

1. First we take a few sips of the soup, with the bouillon spoon or tea spoon, to test the heat of the soup, and then we drink the rest of the soup from the cup, as we would drink tea. And we take up the bouillon cup with the right hand, as we lift the tea cup.

2. "The lady on the right of the gentleman" is the usual rule.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

SUPERSTITIONS

Many widely held health superstitions are not, unfortunately, as easily exposed and as relatively harmless as such simple folk ideas as that carrying a rabbit's foot will ward off disease. It is hard to root them out of public conscience, with the result that they often hinder the doctor's work and lessen the patient's chances of recovery.

Some of the superstitions I have in mind are made the harder to cope with because they are connected with diseases regarded for some unaccountable reason as "not nice." And I mean diseases that are common and should have no stigma attached to them whatever. I guess the idea that they are somehow disgraceful is a relic of the old belief that disease is the punishment for sin, although why some diseases should be regarded in this category and some not, I can't say. I'm afraid if illness were a punishment for wrong doing, we'd all be pretty sick.

Anyway, it often happens that if Mrs. Smith or Mrs. Jones has a weak heart, she isn't ashamed to say so. But if her infirmity happens to be cancer, she keeps it a secret as long as possible, and even after that refers to her trouble as a "tumour," or a "growth." If her daughter has an attack of appendicitis, it is just a misfortune and no one tries to hide it, but if the doctor finds she has tuberculosis, there seems to be some stigma attached, why, I can't understand.

The disease stigma that annoys me most is that attached by many persons to mental illnesses. Back in the dark ages this might have been forgivable. Then people were regarded as persons to be worshipped as holy, or persecuted as devils. In those days they didn't know that mental sickness is just as natural as any physical complaint. Nowadays we know different. We know that our brains may become sick in the same way that we have measles or any such disease. But in spite of this knowledge, the public still takes a deep breath before whispering that "Mrs. Jones' little boy is 'queer'."

There are a lot of mental illnesses that have nothing to do with heredity. There is no reason for parents, or any other kin, to be ashamed because someone in the family is abnormal or sick mentally. When this is more widely understood, perhaps the stigma now attached to mental illnesses will disappear.

Then, perhaps, we shall have fewer parents who refuse to recognize as fact the first symptoms of mental retardation in a baby. The child doesn't show reactions to things going on around him, but the father and mother refuse to believe their eyes. It can't be true in our family, they tell themselves. They don't do anything about it until the condition is aggravated, and by the time a doctor is called in the child's mental growth is permantly stunted. If the doctor had been consulted earlier, it may have been that treatment with thyroid extract would have remedied the trouble. But delay, due to a silly superstition and belief, has caused his mind to be affected permanently.

There are too many cases, too, of adults recognizing symptoms of cancer, Tb. or some other disease, but refusing to do anything about them. They don't want to admit that they have any "unspeakable" or "incurable" disease. What might be an easy case for a doctor to cure is allowed to progress to the stage where all the doctor can do is make

ZION W. M. S.

On Tuesday, Feb. 27, a large number of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Searles to spend an afternoon with Mrs. Searles who has been sick for some time and been missed greatly at church and Sunday School as teacher of the Bible Class, also at W.M.S. meetings and Institute.

After all had been served ice cream, sandwiches, cake and coffee, Mrs. Bunnett proposed a toast to the health of Mrs. Searles. This was followed by all singing a hymn and prayer by Mrs. Tufts. Mrs. Ralph Sills, president of Zion Women's Missionary Society, gave a talk on plans of the work for 1940 Mrs. Hawley sang a favorite solo of all present "Old Folks at Home." This was followed by a discussion led by Mrs. E. Sims on the importance of all attending the "presbyterial" which is to be held in Belleville in the near future.

Mrs. Lorne Brough on behalf of the Phillipston and Zion Institute then presented Mrs. Searles with a large basket of fruit. Mrs. Howard favored with an Institute song "Old Black Joe."

This was followed by a few words of thanks from Mrs. Searles to all who had been so very kind to her during her sickness.

HEPBURN ACCEPTS INVITATION TO INSPECT SCHOOL

Premier States He Will Demand Full Inquiry Into Alleged Disturbance

WILL CALL WITNESSES

St. Thomas Times-Journal Publishes Statement to Make Position Clear in Discussion

Toronto, March 6.—(CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn said today he was accepting the invitation of Defence Minister Norman Rogers to visit the Royal Canadian Air force training centre at St. Thomas and that he would demand a full inquiry into alleged disturbances there. The Premier said he would suggest next Monday as suitable for the visit and inquiry.

"You bet your life I'm going to be there", said the Premier. "I will suggest Monday for an inquiry at which time I want the County High Constable, the police of St. Thomas, the managing editor of the Times-Journal and others apart from members of the Air Force to be there for questioning. We'll get the facts.

Wants Airmen to Volunteer

"I don't want members of the Air Force called, but I want them to be able to volunteer as witnesses. I wouldn't accept any guarantee from Mr. Rogers that Airmen who might give testimony wouldn't be harassed by his 'Gestapo'. I want a guarantee that any airmen who volunteers to testify will have a promise of an honorable discharge if he wishes it and unless this if forthcoming it wouldn't be fair to ask them to testify".

Reiterates Declaration

The Premier reiterated his declaration of yesterday that censorship had "covered up" a "violent disturbance" at the air force centre. Referring to Mr. Rogers' denial that a disturbance occurred and a statement by a government spokesman that there had been no censorship, Mr. Hepburn said:

"I am amazed that Mr. Rogers has the effrontery to deny what everybody knows. The whole school walked out. There was trouble for days.

"The censors warned the air force men not to talk and when the Times-Journal tried to get information, the heads of the school would not make any statement. The Times-Journal report wasn't censored because the paper couldn't confirm any information that would be censorable."

St. Thomas, Ont., March 6—(CP) — The Times-Journal today publishes the following:

Regarding the statement made by Premier Hepburn at Toronto yesterday that "the Press were warned not to publish" reports of a disturbance at the St. Thomas Royal Canadian Air Force training school on Saturday, Feb. 10, the Times-Journay would like to make its position in the matter clear.

When we heard reports of the walkout at the school, we endeavoured to ascertain the cause and extent of the same, interviewing some of the men on the street and trying to secure statements from officers at the school.

Stories given by the men were conflicting and indefinite. Officers at the school declined to make statements but asserted that the situation was not serious.

Allege Partial Walkout

The Times-Journal learned sufficient, however, to convince us that there had been trouble in the nature of a partial walkout at the school and that it had been due in a great measure to a misunderstanding over a new system of weekend leaves brought into force through the replacing of a single-shift work system with a double-shift work system.

Having in mind the general war censorship regulation that nothing must be printed that would aid the enemy or in any way "prejudice recruiting, training or discipline of the armed forces of Canada," we endeavoured, while giving the public the facts, not to say anything that would conflict with these regulations.

We had no communication, direct or otherwise, with the censors at Ottawa or Toronto, either before publication or afterwards. We felt at the time, and still do, that what we published covered the situation and did not conflict with the general censorship regulations.

Squadron Leader Seeks to Reply

St. Thomas, Ont., March 6—(CP) — Squadron Leader R. F. C. Metcalfe, officer commanding No. 2 wing at the R.C.A.F. Technical Training School, announced today that he had asked permission of his superiors for a chance to reply to charges by Premier Hepburn that "violent disturbances" had been staged at the air centre.

Metcalfe, one of the group of officers and instructors who came to Canada last January in connection with the Empire Training scheme, said regulations of the force prevented him from making a detailed explanation of what occurred at St. Thomas Feb. 10.

"But I can say this; Mr. Hepburn's statements are so full of inaccuracies that I have taken the only step left for me, in as much as the statement amounts to criticism of my administration," said Metcalfe.

Seeks to Answer Criticism

"I have applied to my commanding officer for an interview with the acting governor-general in order that I may have the opportunity to answer any criticism of my administration at the school. It is the only way that I can deal with this matter. I also may say that as an English officer, I have absolutely no interest in Canadian politics."

The Squadron Leader pointed out that regulations of the Air Force Act, substantially similar to those in the Militia Act, would not permit an officer to issue detailed information concerning operations at the air centre.

No Steps Taken to Halt Transport of Swedish Iron Ore to Germany

London, March 6—(CP)—Great Britain has taken no steps to halt the transport of Swedish iron ore to Germany, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons today.

The government is aware of the traffic and its importance to Germany, Mr. Churchill said in reply to a question, but "the arrest of such traffic would involve many serious considerations."

The First Lord disclosed that the plane which sank the British liner Domala with a loss of 108 lives last Saturday had fooled a nearby British destroyer into believing it was a friendly craft until bombs started falling.

The Domala was attacked suddenly, he said, and since the plane was believed to be friendly the Domala's guns were not brought into action before the bombs fell. Mr. Churchill said the nearby destroyer similarly was misled.

Mr. Churchill promised to investigate a report that the ship's gun crews were not at their action stations when the attack was launched.

Australia Plans to Dispatch Army Corps for Service Overseas

Prime Minister Menzies Answers His Critics in National Broadcast

STRENGTHEN AIR FORCE

(By J. E. Holdsworth)

(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, March 6.—(CP Cable)—Prime Minister R. G. Menzies uncovered for the first time today the scope of Australia's war effort and revealed that the government plans the dispatch of an army corps for service overseas.

Answering the criticis of his government in a nationwide broadcast, the Prime Minister disclosed that in addition to the army corps the government envisages establishment of a reserve of 90,000 men and the calling up for home training of at least 26,000 and possibly 50,000 men.

An army corps normally is made up of four divisions, totalling in all with auxiliaries some 80,000 men. The British expeditionary force which landed in France in the first weeks of the war was made up of two army corps, but since has been added to.

The immensity of the Australian program was seen in the fact it will cost at least £180,000,000 ($618,000,000) spread over two years, or three times the cost of the corresponding period of the first Great War.

The Prime Minister said the Australian air force will be strengthened to seven times its size in 1940 and that by June, 1942, 17,000 people will be employed in munitions factories supplying not only Australia but Great Britain and New Zealand.

Announcement a Bombshell

The Prime Minister's announcement came as a bombshell to most Australians who had thought the government would soft-pedal defence policy in view of the political situation. He declared the government has formulated a program from which it was not prepared to withdraw simply because it had been defeated in a by-election.

He referred to the polling in Coiro, Victoria last Saturday in which the labor candidate won a seat previously held by the government. The opposition claimed the result constituted repudiation of the government's dispatch of troops overseas, which the labor party opposes. The government maintained local issues dominated the by-election campaign.

No hint of the size of the government's program had been allowed to drop prior to the broadcast and consequently the announcement was a surprise to those on the other side of the range of politics who had held that Australia had not contributed in sufficient measure to the Empire's war effort.

Like Canada, Australia will send an air force squadron overseas to act in co-operation with the Expeditionary Force. Special railway and forestry units also will be sent overseas.

"The task is very great, but if we abandon bickering it is not beyond our capacity," Mr. Menzies declared.

He said the by-election result in Corio proved that the government was leading public opinion.

Lieut. D. L. Bennett Called to Service for Second Time

Lieutenant D. L. Bennett, prominent in the social and business circles of this city for a number of years, was recently called to serve his country for a second time.

At the outbreak of the last Great War, Lieut. Bennett, joined the Argyle Light Infantry but was later transferred to the 146th Battalion of Kingston and went to England with that unit. He left England for France with the 20th Battalion and gave distinctive service at the front.

An inspiration at all times to the men under his command it was while leading a spirited charge at the battle of Vimy Ridge that Lieut. Bennet was severely wounded.

He was taken to First General Hospital, London, Eng., where he was under constant treatment until he was returned to Canada a year later.

He was a convalescent patient at Fort Henry, Kingston, until the close of the war.

After demobilization he entered business in the City of Toronto, where he was successfully engaged until coming to Belleville three days ago.

During the last war, Lieut. Bennett was one of four brothers serving in His Majesty forces. One in the Royal Air force, one in France and one in Mesopotania under Gen. Allenby. The last named brother was one of the guard of honour during, Gen. Allenby's triumphant entry into Jerusalem.

The best wishes of a host of friends will follow Lieut. Bennett wherever he may be called to serve his native land.

WIDESPREAD ANGER

Lahore, India, March 6 (CP-Reuters)—Widespread anger has been aroused in India by the bombing by a German warplane of the steamship Domala on which more than 100 Indian seamen were killed. The Moslem paper Inquilab said that indignation is intense, especially in the Punjab and the north-west frontier province. The "Indian nation," published at Patna, called the incident "one of a series of barbarous acts of war the Germans are committing at sea and in the air."

ASKS STATEMENT ON CONTRACTS

London, March 6—(CP)— A statement by the Minister of Supply, Leslie Burgin, on the subject of contracts was demanded today by The Daily Mail and The News Chronicle.

"Gossip is feeding on the question of Ministry of Supply contracts," said The Daily Mail. "Names are being whispered and rumors circulated. This matter is arousing widespread concern which could best be allayed by a full and frank statement from Mr. Burgin in Parliament."

The News-Chronicle said: "The country is disturbed about the handling of war contracts. It fears the breath of scandal which, wafted from the Ministry of Supply a week or two ago, might prove to be a positive gale if the lid is taken off. It wants the full facts."

Former Ambassador Wants Stern Peace For Germany

Manchester, March 6—(CP)— A stern peace, rendering Germany powerless ever to plunge Europe back into war, and "complete and permanent" union with France were urged by Sir Eric Phipps, former British Ambassador at Berlin and Paris.

If the Allies are defeated or "lured into a premature and inconclusive peace," Sir Eric said during an address here, "the fate of Poland would be enviable indeed compared with ours."

Recalling tireless British efforts to avoid war by making concessions to the Reich, the diplomat said there was "too much talk about all the nice, kind things we mean to do to the dear Germans after we have helped rid them of their Nazi tyrants."

"Are we doomed to play periodically with the Germans a grim war game on the basis of 'heads we lose, tails you win'?" he asked. "In other words, must we periodically fight the 'bad' Germans and then, after defeating them at terrible cost, help their 'good' brethren soon after the signature of peace to become strong enough and 'bad' enough to resume their interrupted cycle of aggression?

"Let us beat them first, and then we can decide, in close consultation with our gallant French allies, how we can protect ourselves that we shall not be called upon at stated intervals to sacrifice millions of lives in suppressing Prussian aggression, whether it be let loose at the behest of a Frederick, a Bismarck, a William or a Hitler."

Jamieson Bone Addresses Young Canada Club

Trenton, March 6.—(Special) — W. H. Ireland, ex-M.P.P., presided at a gathering of the Trenton Young Canada Club last evening at which Mr. Jamieson Bone of Belleville, Conservative candidate in Northumberland was chief speaker.

Mr. Ireland conducted the election of officers of the Young Canada Club later in the evening. The new officers are—Douglas Kinney, president; Mrs. Reginald Montgomery, first vice-president; Dr. Gordon Johnston, second vice-president; Mrs. Jack Heaney, third vice-president; Charles Dynes, secretary and Horace Ketcheson, treasurer.

COAL CARGOES HELD AS PRIZES

Britain Determined to Halt All Seaborne Exports From Germany

London, March 6—(CP)—Great Britain today ordered the cargoes of eight Italian ships—declared to be coal from Germany — held as prizes in her tightening campaign to halt all seaborne exports from Germany.

Nine Italian ships have been brought into the contraband control station at the Downs, but one of these, the Loasso, was released by the enemy exports committee.

It was established that she sailed from Rotterdam, where the Italian coal flotilla loaded, on March 1 before the order to halt German coal shipments to Italy was issued.

Timber Conference To be Held in Toronto

Toronto, March 6.— (CP)— All parties interested in development of Ontario Timber Resources have been invited by Hon. Peter Heenan to attend a conference called for next Tuesday to discuss possibilities of strengthening the province's competition in world markets.

Announcement of the conference plans was made today by Mr. Heenan, Minister of Lands and Forests who said the meeting would be the first of a series, suggested during the recent legislature committee's investigation into administration of the province's timber resources.

Representatives invited included those of labor, the newsprint industry, loggers, tie cutters, transportation services and the Hydro-Electric Commission.

Principal purposes of the conference, according to Mr. Heenan, will be a co-operative effort to reduce production costs so that Canada and Ontario would be in a better position to compete in world markets for forestry products.

4-Roomed Cottage Destroyed by Fire

A small four-roomed cottage situated on the Bay Bridge Road and occupied by Mr. A. Carmichael was completely destroyed by fire shortly before the noon hour today, when flames razed the light frame structure in the absence of the family, destroying the entire household effects.

Mrs. Carmichael had only left her home a short time when she was stopped on the street and informed that the chimney of their home appeared to be ablaze. Rushing to a near-by store she turned in the alarm but before the brigade could answer the call the fire was beyond control and it was impossible to save any of the household effects belonging to the family.

Besides Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael there is a baby of a few months in the family. The building and contents are reported to be partially covered by insurance.

QUEEN VISITS VETERANS

London, March 5—(CP)— The Queen today visited disabled veterans of the first Great War at the Star Garter Home at Richmond. As the Queen entered the common room where the men were playing cards and talking, a look of amazement appeared on their faces. The Queen asked the veterans to continue their games and then walked around the room, stopping frequently to talk to them.

ARCHDUKE OTTO ARRIVES IN U.S.

Archduke Otto of Austria, LEFT, pretender to the now non-existent Austrian throne, is greeted in Baltimore, Md., by his brother, Archduke Felix. Otto arrived by clipper plane.

NAZI FREIGHTER IS INTERCEPTED REPORT STATES

Seattle, Carrying Cargo of Lumber, Believed Met by Allied Warships in West Indian Waters

Aruba, Netherlands West Indies, March 6.—(AP) — The German freighter Seattle, which sailed Monday night with a lumber cargo, was reported to day to have been intercepted at sea, presumably by Allied warships guarding the western Atlantic against German attempts to run the blockade.

Reports received here said the Master of the Seattle had sent a message reporting his plight.

An earlier attempt by three German vessels to get away failed last week. One of the ships was captured, another was scuttled and a third returned to port.

The Seattle, a motorship of 7,369 gross tons, was operated in the Pacific coast trade with Germany by the Hamburg-American line before the war. She made regular visits to San Francisco, Los Angeles, Tacoma, Seattle and Vancouver.

The Mimi Horn, a 4,007-ton motorship, traded between Germany, Belgium, Great Britain and the West Indies. Both ships were preparing to return to Germany when the war began.

PLEADS GUILTY TO CHARGE

Brantford, Ont., March 6—(CP)—Paul Greenwood pleaded guilty today to keeping a cockpit in his home on the Tutela Heights Road and was remanded one week for sentence. Seventeen game-cocks, seized in a police raid on the residence last Saturday night, were confiscated by the Crown.

A cock fight was in progress and a crowd of men was in attendence when police walked into the house.

BRITISH GOV'T. ANSWERS CHARGE BY LABOR M.P.

Malcolm MacDonald Defends Government's Restriction on Transfer of Lands

NEAR-EAST SITUATION

London, March 6—(CP) — The government today answered opposition charges of betrayal of its promises to the Jews with the practical wartime declaration that its new Palestine laws are necessary to keep the powerful Arabs of the near east in line.

Malcolm Macdonald, Colonial Secretary, said the Government had had "most stern warnings from Palestine in recent weeks that despite appearances there was beneath the surface a growing unrest among the Arabs."

Defending the government's restriction of transfers of land by Arabs to Jews in Palestine, Mr. Macdonald told the House of Commons:

"If there were trouble in Palestine there would be repercussions in Transjordan, Iraq, Saudi, Arabia Egypt and India. One has got to be frank about these things."

The Colonial Secretary said the Palestine Arabs had shown suspicions that "His Majesty's government are not sincere in their professions that they would protect the interests of the Arab cultivator and laborer."

The Labor motion of censure was moved by Philip Noel Baker.

Temperance Federation Decides to Take Flash-Light Pictures in Beverage Rooms

Toronto, March 6—(CP) — As part of an educational campaign the Ontario Temperance Federation today decided to take "flashlight pictures" of scenes of "drunkenness" in beverage rooms.

The proposal was recommended by Rev. Allen Ferry of Owen Sound chairman of the Educational Committee, at the annual convention in Trinity United Church.

Other suggestions recommended and approved were a comic strip and a romantic serial in the federation's publication to "attract the youth." Permission will also be sought to have clergymen who give religious education in schools include in their cirriculum proportions of the scriptures dealing with temperance.

"By taking flashlight pictures of intemperance," said Mr. Ferry, "we can record on illustrated slides proof of what we have seen for years. We will be able to show how the beverage keepers kiss their patrons "Good night" and throw them out."

Comment on Decision

Toronto, March 6—(CP)—There is no statutory prohibition of a person taking pictures in a beverage room, it was said today by an official of the Attorney-General's Department, commenting on the decision of the Ontario Temperance Federation to take and to circulate flashlight pictures of beverage room scenes.

This official said there might be a question of a person's right to enter a beverage room specifically for that purpose, but if the taking of pictures was incidental to his being served there was no law to prevent it.

There might be a question of the right to take flashlight pictures without permission as the flashing of the bulb might inconvenience other patrons.

"But the Liquor Control Board has wide powers and could, if it wished, make a regulation to prohibit the taking of pictures of persons in beverage rooms," he said.

WAR BRIEFS

Gibraltar, March 6 (CP)— Five unidentified planes approaching Gibraltar from the northwest today caused the fifth air raid alarm of the war. The planes deviated to the south as crowds quietly took shelter.

London, March 6 (CP)—In the House of Commons today Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said representations had been made to the Japanese authorities for cessation of what Sir Nairne Sandeman, Conservative, called an organized campaign on anti-British propaganda in parts of North China.

Berlin, March 6 (AP)—An official statement referring to the sinking of neutral merchantmen without warning today said German planes cannot discern from the air whether neutral vessels are being voluntarily conveyed or forcibly taken to British control stations for search.

The mere fact of the convoy, the statement asserted, is sufficient for Germans to deal with such neutral vessels as hostile. The German government, therefore, makes the Allies "exclusively responsible," it added.

Bucharest, March 6 (CP-Havas)—A deal under which Britain will break Germany's hold on Rumanian lumber exports was reliably reported to be near conclusion today. The lumber will be shipped to Britain and the Near East, it was said.

London, March 6 (CP Cable)—A. H. Timleck, husband of one of the four winners of Toronto's stork derby, arrived in Britain today to visit two of his sons with the Canadian Active Service Force.

Wellington, March 6 (CP-Reuters)—Governor-General Viscount Galway today reviewed the second contingent of the New Zealand Expeditionary Corps and congratulated the men on their martial appearance. The first contingent, believed to number 10,000 men, is encamped in Egypt.

Amsterdam, March 6 (CP-Havas)—A floating mine was washed ashore today and exploded near Callantsoog, on the Frisian Coast. Windows were shattered in homes and stores over a wide radius.

London, March 6 (CP)—Anti-air raid precautions proved their worth early today when a bomb believed planted by Irish Republican Army Terrorists exploded in the Dorchester House Branch of Westminster Bank. There were no casualties. All the bank's windows were shattered, but criss-cross strips of tape pasted on the windows of Dorchester House saved all but two of them.

London, March 6 (CP)—Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary for Air, today said Britain proposed to order no new civil aircraft from overseas during 1940. Answering questions in the House of Commons he declined to make a statement on the shooting down of Royal Air Force fighter craft of a British bomber March 3.

He informed the House that "this regrettable accident is being investigated by a court of inquiry."

New Delhi, March 6 (CP-Reuters)—Measures to increase production in India of minerals needed for wartime use are under active consideration, it was announced today by Dr. C. S. Fox, member of the geological survey of India. Dr. Fox said his department already has sent representatives into the mineral fields to study the possibilities. Emphasizing strides made in recent years, he estimated mineral production of India and Burma in 1938 at 30,000,000 ($133,500,000).

London, March 6 (CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons today that Great Britain and France had decided against publication for the present of documents covering their negotiations with Soviet Russia which broke down after signature of the German-Russian non-aggression treaty last August. The Prime Minister said the decision represented a change of mind in the light of general considerations. Asked whether the documents would be published later, he said only that they would not be published at the present time.

Amsterdam, March 6 (CP-Havas)—German planes will begin freight service between this city and Berlin next Monday, it was reported today. Passenger service was expected to follow shortly. The German Lufthansa line cancelled its Netherlands schedule when war began.

Stockholm, March 6 (AP)—An additional naval defence appropriation of 117,000,000 kroner ($30,000,000) was submitted today to parliament by the Swedish government. The requested amount is for construction of mine sweepers, torpedo boats, submarines and other naval items. A record defence budget of 800,000,000 kroner ($200,000,000) was announced Jan. 11 for the coming fiscal year.

London, March 6 (CP)—Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, told a questioner in the House of Commons today that the action of the authorities in Bermuda in searching mails carried by United States transAtlantic flying boats was correct "and moreover was justified by what was discovered in the mail." He said that under International law a belligerent is at liberty to examine any mail, whether neutral or belligerent, brought voluntarily within its jurisdiction.

Bruins Wallop Detroit Wings And Appear Headed for Title; Bauer Fourth in Scoring Race

Boston Only One Point Behind Rangers With Five Against Three Games to Play

SCHMIDT LEADING

Centre Ice Star Compiles as Many Scoring Points as Blake Had in Winning Crown

Boston, March 6—(CP)—When it comes to timing utterances perfectly for the public prints, Manager Art Ross of Boston Bruins stands at the top of the class.

Only the other day, Ross ventured forth with the prediction that Milt Schmidt and Woody DuMart of his Kraut line likely would finish one-two in this season's national hockey league scoring race. In addition, Ross said he wouldn't be at all surprised if the third Kraut—Bobby Bauer—would wind up in the third spot.

Tossing caution to the winds, the Bruins' manager even went so far as to state that Bauer is the best right wing in the business today and that the Kraut kids make up a better combination than the once-famed trio of the Cook brothers, Bun and Bill and Frankie Boucher of the New York Rangers.

Not to let down his manager, the speedy little Bauer went out last night to notch two unassisted goals and help in another as the Bruins walloped Detroit Red Wings 7-2 to climb only a point away from the leading Rangers. Bruins seem certain to finish up on top for Rangers have only three more games to play compared to five for the Boston Club.

Bauer Now Fourth in Scoring

Bauer's performance placed him in fourth place in individual scoring in the league, only a point away from DuMart and Bryan Hextall of the Rangers, who are tied for second with 39 points. Schmidt, who picked up a goal and an assist against the Wings, is the leader with 20 goals and 27 assists. His total also equals that compiled last season by Toe Blake of Canadiens in winning the scoring crown.

The Bruins managed several notable achievements last night as goals went to Roy Conacher, Herbie Cain, Dit Clapper and Red Hamill. The tallies by Schmidt and Cain gave each marksman 20 scores for the season, putting them with DuMart and Hextall in this class.

Goalie Frank Brimsek of the Bruins, who was seeking his sixth shutout of the season, saw his hopes die early in the third period when Kenny Kilrea scored. Syd Howe added another for the Wings.

NORM LOCKING LEADS SCORERS

Wingman of Syracuse Stars Gained Eight Points in Last Week

New Haven, Conn., March 6 (AP)—Norm Locking, husky wing of Syracuse Stars, took an undisputed scoring lead in the International American Hockey League last week with an eight-point surge which brought his total to 56.

Tony Hemmerling of New Haven Eagles, who with Ronny Hudson of Indianapolis Capitals was deadlocked with Locking at the top last week, was in second place with 52 points, while Max Bennett of the Stars was third with 51.

Pete Bessone of Pittsburgh Hornets led the penalty list with 32 minors, four majors and a misconduct.

Canadiens

Polly Drouin

When Canadiens opened the current National league campaign in the top of the standing with four wins and two ties in their first six games, they were pinning high hopes for continued domination on the "Habitant line," an attacking trio that had Louis Trudel at left wing, Rod Lorrain at right and Polly Drouin at centre, all three of French-Canadian descent and box-office dynamite in Montreal if it could only have produced. But lack of condition and ineffectiveness resulted in Drouin going down to New Haven, injuries put Lorrain on the sidelines and through January there was no "Habitant line." It's been reunited since, but has yet to come through in really outstanding fashion. Drouin, centre of the line, is in his fourth season with the team. He turned pro in 1935-36, getting into a few N.H.L. games, spent the next season with New Haven and returned after that to Canadiens. He played his amateur hockey in Ottawa, finishing with the 1934-35 Senators. Born at Verdun, Quebec, 24 years ago, his full name: is Paul Emile, and he doesn't like the Polly that is usually substituted for Paul in referring to him. Packs 165 pounds solidly on a five-foot-seven structure. His statistical output since entering the National league stood at 15 goals, 32 assists for 47 points at the start of this season. Plus 29 minutes served in penalties.

KITCHENER RINK LOSES TO QUEBEC IN FOURTH ROUND

Major Surprise in the Annual Brier Bonspiel Being Played at Winnipeg

(By Charles Edwards, Canadian

Winnipeg, March 6—(CP)—Alberta and Saskatchewan meet today in one of the crucial games of the 14th annual Macdonald Brier Curling Championships.

Unbeaten Manitoba leads the Brier after four rounds but the other Prairie rinks are tied with three wins apiece and their encounter in the fifth round this afternoon will break the second-place tie. Manitoba meets British Columbia which has won only once.

Other fifth-round pairings are: Prince Edward Island-Ontario; Quebec-Northern Ontario and New Brunswick - Nova Scotia. For the sixth round tonight they are: Northern Ontario-Nova Scotia; Manitoba-Quebec; Alberta-British Columbia; Ontario - New Brunswick; Saskatchewan - Prince Edward Island.

Play closed yesterday in the afternoon when Quebec, skipped by the veteran Col. Archie Bell, Quebec City, scored the competition's major surprise—a 15-9 conquest of the 1939 Brier champions, Bert Hall's Ontario rink from Kitchener.

Howard Wood, the 1930 champion, skipped Manitoba to its fourth win 17-4 over Nova Scotia; Saskatchewan nosed out Jim Davis' Kirkland Lake four, representing Northern Ontario, 8-6; New Brunswick rallied with two on the last end for a 10-9 win over Bill Finlay's British Columbians; and Alberta beat P.E.I. 10-6, the fourth straight loss for Rankine McLaine and his Charlottetown men.

Col. Peter Lyall of Montreal, Brier trustee, announced to 400 guests at the annual banquet last night the 1941 championships will be held at the Granite Club, Toronto, at invitation of the Ontario Curling Association and the Granite Club where the first 13 competitions were held. The 1942 Brier was awarded to Quebec City at invitation of the Quebec Curlers' Bonspiel.

Guests of honor at the banquet, the 10 competing rinks in the current 'spiel were piped into the banquet hall by pipers of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders and officially welcomed by Lieutenant-Governor W. J. Tupper and Premier John Bracken of Manitoba, Mayor John Queen of Winnipeg and President W. R. McAlpine of the Manitoba Curling Association.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

By the Associated Press

Port Myers, Fla., March 6—(AP)—Cleveland Indians believe they have pitching "find" in Paul Calvert, 21-year-old spectacled semi-pro from Montreal. Manager Oscar Vitt heard Calvert's fast one singing past the hitters and thought a rough ball made the music. Vitt gave Calvert a new, shiny ball. It also sang. And coach Johnny Bassler reported the youngster also has a hook and control.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—Disgusted by the failure of general manager Branch Rickey to appear for a scheduled contract confab, slugger Joe Medwick planned to leave St. Louis Cardinals' training camp today and fly back to St. Louis. Hickey was scheduled to meet Medwick yesterday but won't arrive until Friday.

"I've done my part," declared Joe, who wants more than the $18,000 offered him. "I was here on the appointed date and he wasn'."

Winter Haven, Fla.—Carl Hubbell admits his screwball was the cause of all the trouble he has had with his left arm the last few seasons, but the 37-year-old southpaw figures he will be good enough to win 16 or 28 games for New York Giants this year. Hub says his arm feels better this spring than it has in years.

Lakeland, Fla.—At least Detroit's Tigers can dig up more original names than the usual "regulars" and "Yannigans" for their teams in intra-game games. Sarasota, Fla. — Ted Williams, Boston Red Sox crack "sophomore" outfielder, isn't modest about his hitting. He has a bet with Lefty Grove that he will belt one over the right field fence—418 feet from the plate. And he's so confident he already has wired his tailor what he wants.

FINNISH RUNNER, TAISTO MAKI WINS

San Francisco, March 6—(AP)—Taisto Maki, who exchanged a soldier's rifle for an athlete's spike to help build up the depleted finances of his native Finland, apparently is not far off from the form that enabled him to crack running records less than a year ago.

The mud of Finnish trenches, heavy boots and war ordeals are still fresh memories, yet without much training the 141 - pound speedster stepped out here last night to win a three-mile race. He was timed in 14 minutes, 15.3 seconds.

Ted Vollmer of the University of California and Robert Madrid of Fresno State College were second and third respectively. Each was lapped once by Maki.

The American indoor record is 13:46.2 set in New York Feb. 24, 1926 by Willie Ritola, one of Maki's countrymen. Maki is unofficially credited with running the fastest outdoor three miles when he went the distance in 13:42.2 in Finland last June.

Accompanied by Paavo Nurmi, his countryman and world's greatest distance runner of the yearly '20's, Maki made his first appearance in the United States in what will be a series of performances dedicated to the benefit of the Finnish Relief Fund. Nurmi, now 43 years old, ran an exhibition half mile.

Babe Ruth Started as a Catcher but Became Great Slugging King

Hero of all the baseball-loving kids in the world, George Herman (Babe) Ruth, walked off the baseball diamond of St. Mary's industrial school in Baltimore in 1914 and into professional baseball which rewarded his great ability with the bat with the highest salaries in baseball history.

As a gaunt, big kid at St. Mary's school, Ruth seldom had a nickel to spend. As a member of the New York Yankees' baseball club, Ruth earned hundreds of thousands and quit the game in 1935 with $1,070,447 as baseball's pot of gold.

Ruth originally was a catcher. His whip arm was feared by all local school nines. Nobody could steal on George. But the sticker was that Ruth was a southpaw. And left-handed catchers were awkward.

Turns Pitcher

Of importance was the fact that Ruth could throw the ball back with amazing speed. He had good control. He became a pitcher. It was as a pitcher that Ruth signed his first contract in 1914, with Baltimore of the International league. Ruth was given $600, but less than a month later the owner of the Baltimore team, Jack Dunn, raised his pay to $900. Another boost came a month later.

Ruth received his nickname while with the Baltimore team. The story goes that Coach Steinam of the team greeted the schoolboy with, "Boys, here's Jack's new Babe." when he entered the park to play with the Orioles.

Won 23 Games

Before the season was over Ruth was bought by Providence and finally spent part of the season with Boston of the American league. He received $1,400 from Providence and Boston. The next year he received $3,500 with Boston, where he stayed until he was sold to the New York Americans in 1920 for $100,000 in cash and a loan.

Ruth was a good pitcher as his record attests. He won 79 games and lost 38. He compiled 23 wins in 1916 and 23 more in 1917. But Ruth's mighty bat overshadowed his work on the mound.

He started out slow, but in 1918 he hit 11 homers as a pitcher and the following year he banged out 30 in 130 games.

Ruth's big bat spoke a new language for the ball fan. He became the biggest hero to the grandstanders and the youngsters on the sandlots in all baseball history. The mighty swing was poetry of motion. His long, four-base blows packed the ball parks.

Ruth drew $20,000 salary in his first year with the Yanks. This was lifted to $30,000 the next year and in 1922 he signed a five-year contract for $52,000 a year. In 1927 he got $70,000 for three more years. He reached the peak in 1930 and 1931, $80,000 per season. The rest of his tenure with the Yanks the Babe drew high salaries but they dropped yearly. He left the Yanks in 1935 and now is teaching at a training camp in the south.

Ruth set 45 records for the regular season and 31 in world series play. He banged out a grand total of 714 runs, and added 15 more in world series play. His biggest year was in 1927 when he set the record, 60. Ruth's 22-year batting average is .342, one of the best.

With the announcement of the annual meetings of the O.A.S.A. and Ontario Baseball Association in the mails, can spring be afar? Yesterday's mail brought a circular from Secretary Billie Snyder of the O.B.A. announcing that the annual meeting of the O.B.A. would be held in Welland on April 6th next, exactly one month from today. It is doubtful if very many delegates from Eastern Ontario will journey all of the way to Welland to attend this year's provincial baseball conclave, however, "Peck" Ward, Niagara Falls' livewire baseball executive, is in charge of entertainment at Welland and knowing "Peck" as we do the delegates can rest assured they will be royally welcomed and entertained. Incidentally Mr. Snyder suggests that all leagues throughout the province re-organize for the coming season as soon as possible and make reports to the annual conclave. (President Lorne McDougall of the Bay of Quinte League please note.)

It's rural league hockey at the Hume Arena tonight when the Zion Hill, Foxboro, Wallbridge and Roslin teams display their wares before the city folk. Practically every team in the tournament has bolstered its roster and is shooting with unerring aim at the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy honors. Roblin Dulmage, mentor of the Zion Hill sextette aroused the ire of the other clubs by staging a surprise practice in the local ice igloo yesterday afternoon and the north Thurlow pucksters showed considerable class for a rural league squad. These country teams packed plenty of avoirdupois along their defence and do not spare the horses when it comes to handing out sturdy body-checks. Two games are scheduled for tonight.

Do you remember when the mile bicycle record held by Torchy Peden of Victoria was bettered at Los Angeles five years ago today by Frank Bartell, bewhiskered Czecho-Slovakian, who skimmed around a track at 80.584 miles an hour, four miles an hour better than the Canadian redhead's mark.

When Joe Louis retires he plans to throw open to the public his dude ranch near Detroit. There are 477 acres. He will have 75 horses available for riding. A riding academy is included in his plans.

There is something poetically conclusive in the return of Al Simmons to the A's, Cy Peterman of the Philadelphia Enquirer finds. "Like many another of Al's rooters, we are glad. We're glad because it signifies sentiment is not altogether gone from the national pastime and that Al facing his seventeenth season since that glorious debut in 1924, has the opportunity to wind up amid scenes he cherishes most of all. For there is no question about the Pulverizing Pole's first love among ball clubs."

Some keen volleyball was seen in the "Y" loop last night when overtime games dominated the trio of games played. The city fire-fighters came from behind to beat the O.S.D. sextette after the ultimate losers had won the initial tussle 15-4. However, Gerald Vance's charges battled hard and "Warpy" O'Brien was the king-pin as the firemen won the next two sets in over-play 17-15 in both counts. The "Y" seniors had little trouble disposing of the K. of C. "Irish" in successive sets while the Bata team continued to dominate the loop by downing Albert College with ease.

It was like old times to see Bobby Hull and Murney Green out playing hockey on the local indoor frozen pond on the market square last night. Josh Maracle brought the best puck-chasing material he could find down around the "cement village" to do battle with a local crowd of "biscuit chasers" headed by the Storms brothers, Lee Geyer and a few of the local juveniles, but youth proved the old adage of sport and the local outfit won by something like a 5 to 4 score, although the actual count is still in doubt as the Ox Point sextette claim an odd goal that was missed by all concerned, including the Belleville goal post. Twice or thrice Murney Green staged one of his old time rushes that tensed the real hockey fan's feelings and made us think of those days that are gone—but not forgotten.

SPORT SPICE: Just whether the DiMaggios (Joe's married now) can manage on a five grand increase is questionable, but at least Joe and his new spouse will have better than beans, as the No. 1 Yankee star accepted a $30,000 contract yesterday . . . Earlier in the day Red Rolfe signed for a paltry $17,000 . . . Bill Terry says he is optimistic over his 1940 edition of the Giants—"I'd rather have this club than the one I started with last year," Terry stated at Winter Haven, Fla., yesterday . . . The winner of the Belleville-Kingston juvenile game will meet the Cobourg-Campbellford victor, which is liable to be the latter in both cases, we're afraid . . . Art Ross says he wants no part of Referee Norm Lamport in future N.H.L. games . . . The McAtee brothers, Judd and Norm, of the Oshawa Generals, led the scorers in the junior "A" O.H.A. group, Jud being the top scorer with 25 goals and 19 assists.

Sports Roundup

By Eddie Brietz)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, March 6.—(AP)—Hot Stove League: Detroit is using the "dead" ball exclusively in training and the Tigers are pounding the daylights out of it. . The Athletics were flattered no end when a delegation of White Sox drove 40 miles from Pasadena just to watch them practice . . . . If that Rudy York-for-Cecil Travis deal isn't hog again, why are they betting Hank Greenberg will be back on first 30 days after the season opens? . . . Wes Ferrell is showing the boys a much more impressive hook than he had with the Yankees last year.

One act play.

Tony Galento visited Norfolk and was introduced to Rev. Ralph Kyle, pastor of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church.

Mr. Kyle: "See this little book, Tony? It says your body is worth only 84 cents."

Galento: "Whaddaya mean, 84 cents" (He pulled a huge roll of bills from his pocket and flashed it in Mr. Kyle's face) . . . "That don't look like no 84 cents to me."

(It didn't to the minister, either, and he made his exit quietly.)

Rue de Sockerue: Max Waxman, manager of Red Burman, charges Mike Jacobs and Jimmy Johnston are trying to freeze Burman out of the heavyweight picture and claims the white heavyweight title for Red . . . Maxie Rosenbloom has been signed for the comedy role in Rudy Vallee's new air show.

The Giants are being drilled in sliding for the first time since John J. McGraw's last year with the Club . . . They may do a lot of it this year, too—downwards.

SKUNK LIKED COMFORT

Medfield, Mass., March 6—(AP)—Patrolman Fred Spear has an unwelcome guest in his home but he isn't doing a thing about it—except using discretion. The guest is a handsome skunk which is hibernating in an overstuffed chair in the Spear dining room. There have been no "incidents" yet, but the Spears are hoping for an early spring.

Plainfield

Plainfield—S. S. was well attended on Sunday morning. The Temperance Secretary, Mrs. Moore took charge. Vernon Emerson, Oscar Moore and Carl Platt helped with the Scripture lesson and explanation. Mrs. Moore then told a couple of stories to the children and Franklin Hazard gave a reading entitled: 'Sing a Song of Sixpence."

Sunday evening service was not so well attended owing to the sleet storm.

Mr. and Mrs. William Anderson and family, Prince Edward County, spent Sunday with Mrs. Ida Collins and Mr. James Anderson.

Pte. William Doran spent a few days in this neighborhood.

Mrs. W. Marshall spent Saturday with her daughter, Mrs. Robert Rollins.

Miss Olivia Gillespie was a Tuesday caller of Mrs. Mabel Hubel.

Mrs. Stanley Hazard and John Allan spent last Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Sinfield.

Mrs. James Anderson was able to be brought to his sister's, Mrs. Ida Collins' on Wednesday after being a patient in the Belleville Hospital.

Mrs. Violet Elliott, Mrs. S. Hazard and John Allan spent last Tuesday with Mrs. E. K. Hubel, 3rd of Sidney.

Mrs. Wes Huffman, Belleville spent Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. William Marshall.

Mrs. Harold Stover, Yarker, spent a few days visiting her parents, Rev. and Mrs. G. T. McKenzie.

Miss Annie Hamilton is spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomas, Wellington.

Master Franklin Hazard spent Saturday last with his cousin, Bobbie Sinfield, Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Melbourne Adams, Thomasburg, were Wednesday evening callers of Mr. and Mrs. William Marshall.

Mrs. Gordon Anderson and Jimmie are spending a few days with Mrs. Ida Collins.

Mr. William Hall took dinner one day recently with Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hall and Mr. James Henry Hall.

Master Iner Prindle spent Saturday with his friend Master Arthur Marshall.

Mrs. Salisbury is spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Ewart Sills, Foxboro.

Mrs. Stanley Hazard spent a couple of days recently with her brother and family in Belleville.

Mr. Weldon Prindle spent Sunday with Mrs. H. Prindle and Vernal, Carmel.

Mrs. A. F. Hall spent the week end in Toronto.

Congratulations are extended to Mrs. Geo. Collins, who celebrated her birthday on Tuesday, March 5th.

ARRIVE TO SOOTHE UNITED STATES

Frank Aston-Gwatkins, diplomatic trouble-shooter for Great Britain, LEFT, and Professor Charles Rist, of France, are shown as they arrived in New York. They are a two-man mission to Washington, D.C., from the Anglo-French Allies. Their mission is to soothe the irritations experienced by the U.S. state department as a result of the Allied blockade, such as mail seizures and detention of American ships at contraband control stations.

AMERICAN "HIGHLANDER" AND BRIDE

Omer Jette, of Albany, N.Y., went to Canada because adventure lured him to war as it did thousands of other Americans in 1914 before the U.S. entered the world war. Jette joined up with the Cameron Highlanders and in due course will find the adventure he seeks. Meanwhile he has found romance. He is shown here with his bride, Marie, a French-Canadian girl he met and married in Ottawa. They are looking at a photo of Jette's former military buddies—a company of the New York National Guard.

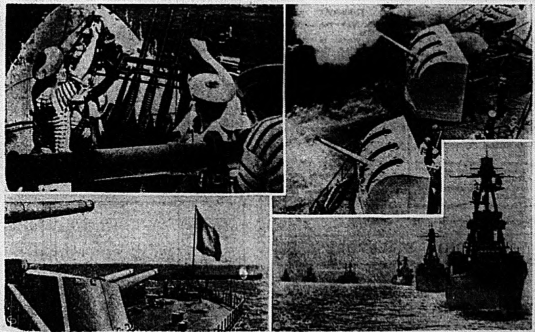
$25,000 DODGERS BEAUTY BATS 'EM OUT

Roy Cullenbine, the free agent snapped up by Brooklyn Dodgers for $25,000, is shown as he took his turn at batting practice at the Dodgers' training camp at Clearwater, Fla. The Dodgers are expecting great things from Cullenbine this season.

U.S. MINISTER VISITS GOLD MINE

Descending to 1,000-foot level of the Siscoe gold mine near Val d'Or, Ont., James H. R. Cromwell, newly appointed U.S. minister to Ottawa, is shown here, attired in a complete miner's outfit, handling a pneumatic drill as two miners look approvingly on.

NAZIS UNRESTRICTED SUB WARFARE SPURS FRENCH FLEET TO RENEWED ACTIVITY



TOP LEFT, multiple machine guns (or a "Chicago typewriter") aboard a French warship. TOP RIGHT, naval anti-aircraft guns with movable turrets to protect crews. LOWER LEFT, the mighty "mouth-pieces" of a French battleship. LOWER RIGHT, the French fleet on parade

The mighty French fleet has been spurred into renewed activity by the campaign of unrestricted warfare being conducted by German submarines and by reports that Russia is supplying her ally with Red under-sea craft to replace those sunk by the Allies. French authorities declare the Nazi submarine fleet is composed of the latest type craft, recently constructed. The Allied fleet, however, appears fully capable of coping with this newest menace. France is far stronger in naval power than Germany, with 90,000 Frenchmen to 75,000 Germans. Britain tops the list with 220,000 men, while Russia has only 50,000. The French and British fleets are working in close cooperation. Latest development is that they have dispatched a joint squadron to patrol the northern coast of Russia to prevent shipment of Russian supplies and submarines to the Reich and to prevent any Nazi ships from taking refuge in Russia. Admiral Nikolai Kuznetzoff, Russian naval commander, is reported to have made a flying trip to Murmansk to inspect the Soviet Arctic fleet as a result of this Allied move.

Patient Paul

By Barbara A. Benedict

Paul Sothern, Alberta thought, was nice. Too nice. Too good to be true. He didn't seem real. It worried her. Two nights ago he had proposed and she had stalled him off for no better reason than because she thought he was too nice. She had promised to give him her answer on the coming week-end. They were to be members of a crowd that were going up to Ned Fenway's place on Winnepesaukee. Somehow she'd have to put Paul to the test. Make sure about him.

There were eight in the crowd besides Paul and Alberta, and they landed at Ned's place late Friday night. It was perfect weather for winter sporting, and the next day every one got up early and put on skis and went out on the slope of Red Hill. Naturally, Paul and Alberta paired off together. No one thought it strange when, side by side, they swooped off the beaten trail and disappeared along a cart path that wound through a grove of evergreens.

Down in the evergreens they stopped in a clearing which widened at its farther end and became a gently undulating slope.

"It's pretty steep," Alberta said. "Think we can make it?"

"Make it? Shucks, yes!" Paul looked at her suddenly and swung his skis around so that he stood close. "But before we start, there's something we've got to settle, darling. And right now is an excellent time—"

Alberta suddenly uttered a little cry of dismay and looked down at her skis. "Oh, look! The harness on my left ski is broken! It's practically off."

Paul got down in one knee and examined the harness. "You've lost a strap," he announced. "Must have been worn and came off while we were making that last run."

The missing strap had practically rendered the harness useless. Paul took off his mittens and did what he could with the rope. Watching him, Alberta thought how nice he was.

Presently her thoughts were interrupted by an angry exclamation from patient Paul. His fingers had slipped and jammed against the cold iron of the harness uprights.

Alberta looked alarmed and concerned, but Paul only grinned and said it was nothing serious, and fell to again. After a moment, while trying to pull the rope tight, the same thing happened, and he swore, under his breath, to be sure, but, neverthless, a curse. This time he didn't apologize, but kept his head down and continued to fumble with the harness. Alberta could sense his effort to control his anger.

For a moment or two Paul worked in silence, and then abruptly without warning, he swore again, this time making no pretext to prevent her from hearing. He not only swore, but gave the rope's end such a jerk that Alberta lost her balance and sat down suddenly. Paul looked at her. His face was flushed and a fierce light burned in his eyes.

"Why, Paul Sothern!" said Alberta aghast.

Slowly the expression in Paul's eyes gave way to remorse. "Good heavens," he said. "I'm sorry. I didn't mean to do that. I'm sorry, really I am."

"So!" said Alberta. "You can't keep your temper? Over a little thing like that! I knew it. I knew you were too good to be true."

Paul regarded her unhappily. "I suppose this means your won't marry me?" He sat down in the snow, looking miserable. "Well, I don't suppose I can blame you. A girl would be taking a chance to marry a guy like me. I do have a temper, which, sometimes I can't seem to control. That's why—I mean, I try to be nice otherwise."

"That's what I thought," said Alberta. "That's what I wanted to make sure about."

"What do you mean, 'that's what I thought?'"

"Well, I mean, I thought you must get upset sometimes. You were trying to keep it from me."

"Yes," said Paul dismally, "I was. This is what I get for it." He sighed. "Well, let's get started back."

"We can't," said Alberta. "My ski harness isn't fixed. Besides you were going to ask me a question."

"I was only going to ask you," said Paul, "to give me your answer about marrying me."

"And I was going to say no," said Alberta, "until I saw that you could get mad."

Paul stared. "Now wait a minute. Please explain that!"

"Well," said Alberta, "I thought you were awfully nice. Too nice. It occurred to me that it would be dreadful living with a man all the rest of my life who didn't have gimp enough to get mad and swear once in a while. That's why I took the strap off my ski and kept it in my pocket—to see if you would get mad while trying to fix the harness. It was a good test, I thought, it being so cold and all. If you hadn't got mad, I would have said 'no' to your question."

Pauls eyes bulged. "Well, hell's bells!" he said. "I'll be d—"

"Just a minute," said Alberta, her eyes twinkling. "Enough is quite enough, thank you."

"You're welcome," said Paul, and kissed her.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma said, Your dress suit is back from the cleaners, Willyum, and it looks perfectly beautiful, so now when Mrs. Thurston Willows comes to dinner she'll know we're civilised people.

I cant conscientiously wear it, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum I thought we'd been all through that.

Dress suits were intended to be worn outside the home, not inside pop said, and ma said, Who said so, can you name me one privileged authority?

I can name you one victim, pop said. Did you ever hear of Leonard Earwig? he said, and ma said, No and neither did you properly.

I certainly did and so shall you, pop said. Leonard Earwig's wife talked him into wearing his dress suit at home to show off before guests, and the naybors got wind of it and a committy of men called on him to find out if it was true that he had really worn his dress suit in his own dining room, and Earwig spluttered and tried to brazen it out, but the committy just silently filed out, and the next week he was dropped from the nayborhood bowling team and his childern found themselves ostrich sized by their little playmates, and the tradesmen learned about the dress suit business and started to add a few cents a pound on to every bill, and the Earwigs were already living exactly within their income, even as you and I, and this was just enough to ruin them, so they tried to sell their home but they had to practically give it away because nobody wanted to live in that nayborhood because the other wives followed suit and kept trying to induce their husbands to wear dress clothes at dinner, and the result was a constant noisy bawling that brought down real estate values in the entire section, pop said.

Now Willyum I told you the matter was settled, ma said.

Wich it proberly is.

WAR BRIEFS

Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, Mar. 5 (CP).—Two German airmen whose bodies were washed ashore on Whitley Bay were buried today at Chevington. Royal Air Force men of the squadron which shot them down carried the coffin, covered with swastika flags.

London, Mar. 5 (CP).—Dominions Secretary Anthony Eden announced that upward of 1,300 Newfoundland volunteers would be trained for the Royal Artillery. Asked by William Gallacher, only Communist member of the House of Commons, whether Britain intended to restore democracy in Newfoundland before bringing her men to fight, Mr. Eden replied that the economiec position of Newfoundland is improving steadily "and we shall do our best to foster that."

Paris, March 5 (CP-Havas) —The first soldier of Czech nationality to die on the French front was Jaroslav Basl, the War Ministry today informed the Czecho-Slovak National Committee. Basl, a member of the French Foreign Legion, was killed in action Jan. 9.

WALL STREET

New York, March 6 — (AP)—teels and Motors formed the pearhead of an advancing market oday. Aircrafts, Metals, miscelaneous industries and finally the ails joined the parade toward the urth hour. Glenn Martin, Bendix nd American Telephone reached ew highs for the year.

Among favored shares were U.S. teel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Genral Motors, Sears Roebuck, Dougs, American Smelting, Westingouse, General Electric, DuPont, llied Chemical, Eastman and Caadian Pacific which touched a new year's high.

Many bonds rose. Commodities were irregular.

On the Canadian list McIntyre and Lake Shore Mines lost 1-8 of a point apiece while Dome Mines and in the bond market, Canada 4s rested unchanged.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 6—(CP)—Trading on Toronto Exchange today developed mainly in the industrials. Other groups boarded only minor gains.

C.P.R., Brazilian Traction, Canada Steamship Lines, Abitibi Pfd. and several steel stocks changed hands in the heaviest volume in weeks and several touched new high prices for the year. Aircraft issues also moved in substantial volume.

Base Metal shares, including Noranda, Steep Rock, Pend Oreille and Waite-Amulet were narrowly higher and Pickle Crow, East Malartic, MacLeod-Cockshutt, Omega and a few other golds tightened up.

Butter Continues Rise at Toronto

Toronto, March 6—The rising trend of the past nine sessions was continued on the Toronto butter market yesterday, although the aggressive buying pace showed signs of slackening in afternoon dealings. Tuesday's 1-4 cent per pound advance placed the price of the first grade Ontario product at the best level since early January, and it brings the total price increase of the past week and a half to 2 cents per pound.

Demand was not as keen as in recent sessions on the butter market, but prices closed firm at the morning advance. Offerings were not heavy, and the supplies were fairly well cleared. While the odd sale was reported in early morning trade at 27 1-2c, No. 1 Ontario creamery solids traded at 27 3-4 per pound throughout most of the day.

Prints reflected the higher prices of solids by advancing to the range of 29c to 29 1-2c for top grades.

Outside of supplies of grade-A-medium which were on the small side, the fair volume of receipts were ample for local requirements on the egg market. Prices on both sections maintained previous levels, but easing tendencies were evident near the close. Government inspected lots continued to command a 1-2 cent premium in the graded division.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, March 6—(CP)—Produce market prices here as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 28c to 28 1-2c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 27 1-2c to 28c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 24c to 24 1-2c; A-medium, 22c to 22 1-2c; A-pullets, 21c to 21 1-2c; B, 20 1-2c; C, 19c to 19 1-2c; B-large, unquoted. Receipts: 722 cases.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, March 6—(CP)—Cattle trade was generally slow with prices steady at the opening of the Toronto Livestock Market today. The veal calf division was dull. The butcher cow section was fairly active. No price was established for hogs. The holdover from Tuesday was 700 head of cattle.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock branch were: Cattle, 250, calves, 130, hogs, 435, sheep and lambs 25.

A few common to medium butcher steers and heifers sold at $6.50 to $6.75. Butcher cows ranged from $4 for common to $5.50 for good.

Choice veal calves sold at $10 to $10.50 with the odd top selling at $11 and common to medium selling from $8 to $9.

Four hundred western lambs sold late yesterday at $10.15.

A few sales of sheep this morning were at $4 for common up to $6 for good light ewes.

Hogs closed yesterday at $9 off truck for bacon and dressed generally at $12 with a few sales of the latter at $12.15.

Montreal, March 6—(CP)—Cattle held steady, calves strong and hogs were firm in early trade on Montreal Livestock Markets today, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Receipts: Cattle 55, sheep 2, hogs 677; calves 367.

A few good butcher cows sold up to $5.75 with medium kinds from $4.50 to $5.25 and common butchers down to $4. Canners and cutters made $3 to $3.75. Medium to good milch cows ranged from $60 to $80 each. Common milch cows were slow.

Veals ranged from $8 for common light veals to $10.75 for medium good kinds. Good veals made $11. The bulk of commoner kinds sold around $8.75.

Hogs sold at $9.35 to $9.40 for bacons fed and watered. Selects drew $1 premium with regular cuts on off grades. Sows made $6 to $6.50. Hogs sold on rail grade brought mostly $12.40 hot weight.

PET CANARY FOLLOWS OWNER

Huntingdon, Ind., March 6—(AP)—Everywhere that Carl E. Christ goes, his pet canary is pretty sure to follow. It perches on his hand while he works at his telephone lineman's job, rides in his pocket in cold weather and, at home, bathes in the goldfish bowl.

MAXINE ELLIOTT ACTRESS, DIES

Always Refused to Return to Stage After Her Retirement

Cannes, France, Mar. 6 (AP).—Maxine Elliott, 67, the American actress who achieved success both in Europe and North America, died last night at her chateau at Juan Les Pins.

For many years since her retirement from the stage Miss Elliott had lived on the French Riviera at her Villa l'Horizon.

A famous beauty in the early part of the century, Miss Elliott made her last stage appearance in 1920 at her own theatre in New York after 30 years as an actress.

All attempts to get her to return to the theatre were refused with the assertion that she wished to "grow middle-aged gracefully."

Since last June Miss Elliott had been suffering from a heart ailment.

Her sister, Lady Forbes-Robertson, is to arrive from London tomorrow. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Her ill health had prevented extensive war work during the present conflict, but when the First Great War started she was an early volunteer Red Cross nurse.

Among the famous people entertained at Miss Elliott's chateau were the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who were guests at a dinner party, July 1, 1938, which was also attended by Winston Churchill and David Lloyd George.

Miss Elliott was divorced in 1908 from Nat Goodwin, noted actor in the early 1900's, and never remarried.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL CONANT CRITICAL

Toronto, March 6 — (CP)—The practice by which judges of the Ontario Supreme Court set rules for legal procedure was described today by Attorney-General Conant as an "undemocratic arrangement."

Mr. Conant, speaking to members of a legislature committee investigating court and other procedure of justice, said "with all due deference to judges they are responsible to no person and the rules they make can affect the rights of the individual." Personally, he was of the "strong opinion that the rule-making body should be differently constituted."

9 ITALIAN SHIPS AT CONTROL BASE

Arthur Henderson, Labor, announced he would ask Prime Minister Chamberlain for a statement on the coal dispute in the House of Commons Monday.

British authorities showed determination to break the German coal export trade with Italy.

Allies Clamp Down

The trade went uninterrupted until Saturday morning, when the Allies clamped down. Sources close to the Ministry of Economic Warfare said last week this was "not in any way a reprisal for the temporary difficulties which have arisen in British-Italian commercial and financial talks in Rome."

The Yorkshire Post in an editorial today, said:—

"Signor Mussolini must not suppose that we are in this war half-heartedly and fear to exert our full influence with neutrals.

"We were willing to come to a War Trade agreement with Il Duce for the benefit both of his country and ours. Negotiations have broken down because of his unwillingness to supply us in return for coal with certain heavy goods.

"Apparently in the belief that he holds the central position on the diplomatic seesaw, he deems himself able to dictate to us under threat of inclining further towards Hitler if we prove difficult.

"We hope he will not overrate the advantages of his neutrality.

"We have not the slightest intention of being frightened into making war as the Germans would like us to make it and not as we ought to make it to ensure our success."

Not Viewed as Crisis

A source close to the foreign office said last night that Britain is "not inclined to view the matter as a 'crisis' or anything like it."

(In Rome, however, authoritative Italians said the actual seizure of the colliers tended to bring relations toward a crisis).

Names of Ships Held

Ships held at the Downs were the Ernesto, 4,356 tons; Orata, 8,-641; Absirtea, 4,170; Felce, 5,639; Numidia, 5,330; Caterina, 4,786; and the tanker Loasso, 5,966.

(Lloyd's register of ships list no Caterina, but shows a Caterina Gerolimich and a Caterina Madre of approximately the tonnage given for the Caterina.)

Commenting editorially this morning, The Times said it hoped negotiations would be resumed on the matter of supplying British coal to replace the German.

"Incidentally," the paper said, "British credits for the export of coal to Italy have been available for some time, and such facilities still exist. Therefore in theory, at any rate, the question of what Italy should send in return for the coal is not pressing at the moment. Britain wants a fair share of heavy industrial products useful in war.

"Italian officials in London yesterday were saying that as Britain had proposed to cut off Italy's normal supplies from Germany, the least she should do is at first to take in exchange for coal the kind of produce which Italy had been paying to Germany—mainly agricultural produce. On the other hand as some Italian heavy production is presumably available for export, Britain would be glad of them, for British purchases of agricultural produce have already been heavy elsewhere."

Italy Depends on Coal

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
Associated Press Staff Reporter

Rome, March 6 —(AP)— Seizure of Italian cargoes of German coal by British blockaders tends to bring relations between Rome and London toward a crisis, authoritative Italians declared today.

Italy's industrial life hangs upon imports of coal. (Britain has offered Italy Welsh coal to make up for German coal seized as contraband.)

Studying reports that British warships were escorting ship after ship into contraband control in application of the Allies' two-way blockade to cover Italian fuel imports from Germany, authoritative quarters declared: "It has complicated and made the Italian-British dispute more acute."

Premature Conclusions Avoided

At the same time they restrained from drawing "premature conclusions from the deplorable state of affairs."

Italians avoided any mention of the possibility that Rome might denounce the 1938 agreement with Britain on the status quo in the Mediterranean which re-established normal relations between London and Rome after a diplomatic conflict over the Spanish Civil War and the Italian conquest of Ethiopia.

Il Messaggero, a Rome newspaper, observed that possible developments appeared still more serious than stated in the Italian protest of Sunday.

That protest, still to be answered by the British Government, said the blockade was such as to disturb and compromise economic and political relations of the two nations.

Il Messaggero said the British had not shown "any tangible proof of that spirit of understanding and that desire of friendly agreement which were affirmed several times recently."

Reference to Freezing of Rhine

"They do not want to take into account the fact that only an act of God owing to the exceptional severity of the season prevented Italian ships from making fullest use of the shipping privilege agreed upon for three months," said the newspaper.

This was a reference to the freezing of the Rhine which prevented transport of the German coal to Rotterdam for transhipment before the blockade was applied to German coal for Italy.

The blockade went into effect last Saturday with nearly a score of Italian carriers still at Rotterdam, The Netherlands.

FRENCH AND BRITISH TROOPS

Morning Communique

The morning French Communique said—

"Local artillery action at the end of yesterday. Patrol activity during the night".

The German infantrymen were aided by violent preparation from their trench mortars and heavy artillery in attacking the British post, the French command reported.

It said the French and Germans exchanged artillery fire in Alsace, while bad weather grounded air combatants.

Several German submarines were attacked by Allied ships at sea, but the results were not determined, the French said.

The "in between" period—several weeks of rains that will wash away the last traces of snow and ice—has started and with it a grimmer vigilance along the Maginot Line.

A tour of the frontier fields and woods of Northern France by correspondents shows that a German offensive is expected—if it comes at all—when sunbaked earth will support the heavy trade of a mechanized army.

The whole Allied line is on the alert, and it will remain ready for momentary battle.

Germans Claim 20 Captured

Berlin, March 6—(AP)— The German news agency claimed today that 20 British soldiers were killed and 16 taken prisoner on the western front yesterday morning when German shock troops stormed a British dugout in the Moselle sector.

(A War Office communique in London said a platoon Sergeant-Major was killed and that "several of our men are missing." It added that one of the raiding Germans was killed and that the enemy "suffered casualties during their withdrawal.")

The official communique of the Germany Army said 16 prisoners were taken.

The German news agency identified the platoon attacked as belonging to the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. It asserted that this was the first time the Germans had had an actual fight with British troops on the western front in this war. It said the Germans lost one man.

The German communique said: "Eastward of the Moselle River, German shock troops cleared out a dugout occupied by English soldiers with severe losses for the opponent. We took 16 prisoners. Otherwise, no special events."

British Communique

London, March 6—(CP)—The war office issued the following communique today on the German raid yesterday on a Maginot line post of the British Expeditionary force:

"A raid on March 5 on a British post in a Maginot line sector took place under cover of a barrage of mortar and machine-gun fire at dawn. The enemy succeeded in entering the post, which was held by part of a platoon of infantry.

"The platoon Sergeant - Major was killed. The Germans left one dead in the post and suffered casualties during their withdrawal from artillery and machine-gun fire.

"Several of our men are missing."

BRITAIN DEMANDS FULL SHARE

Allies, as experts say it would be impossible for Rumania to furnish Germany with 1,600,000 tons of oil contracted for in 1940 and send an equal quantity to Britain.

Less than 4,000,000 tons of oil will be available for export this year, according to experts, leaving only 800,000 tons if British needs are met along with Germany's. That would mean Rumania's trade with the Balkans, Italy and many other countries—based on the exchange of Rumanian oil for foreign products—would dwindle.

German pressure for more Rumanian goods was also said to be increasing, with a demand that Rumania ship her entire 1940 wool crop to Germany. Rumanian acceptance of this demand would wreck the native yarn industry.

TONY

—BY ELIZABETH VERNON—

CHAPTER XXI

Tony cantered along the green turn that verged the road. The lodge of Holme Dacey appeared through the mist of a March afternoon, and she drew rein, taking the last hundred yards at a walk, humming softly to herself.

At the sound of hoofs, Mrs. Stack came out of the lodge, an apron round her waist. She did not open the gates. One arm crooked to shield her eyes from the sun, she gazed up at Tony.

"Was you going up to the 'ouse, Miss? There's no one there, you know. Mr. Fleming and Sir Matthew—they left yesterday."

Tony stared down at her "Left?" The news—the woman's words—were like a sword thrust. Bewildered, her thoughts scattered. "But—"

"Yes, Miss. Mr. Fleming went in a amb'lance, of course. Sir Matthew and Roberts was with 'im."

"I—I expect he'll be back in a day or two."

Gloomily, Mrs. Stack shook her head. "No, Miss, not from what we 'eard. We don't 'ardly look to see 'im down 'ere again."

"Oh!" Tony said. She strove for words with which to disguise what she felt, but no words would come.

"Well," Mrs. Stack was saying, "it's no more than natural, pure gentleman. There's no one to visit 'im 'ere, or there's no one 'e'll 'ave to see 'im, barrin' yourself, Miss. And when you think of 'ow keen 'e was on the 'untin' an' all, and 'ow 'e used to shoot all round the country when 'e stayed 'ere in 'is uncle's time, you couldn't 'ardly wonder at 'im leavin' the place. It'll be more of a life for 'im in London, I darsay. 'E'll be wheeled out to the theatres, and such. And make new friends what'll come and see 'im. Though it's like what my 'usband says; it's nothing but a death in life, take it 'ow you will."

"Did—did Mr. Fleming leave any message—for me?"

"No, Miss. Not as I've 'eard."

"No." Tony murmured the word to herself. The reins were slack in her hand. Crab-apple was snatching at the grass. She pulled up his head. "I must be getting on."

x x x

"I expect it's been a bit of a surprise to you, Miss, after you've been callin' 'ere so often, an' all; and Sir Matthew bein' such a friend. Well, I wouldn't be surprised to see 'im 'ere again—"

Tony smiled. Wordlessly she nodded good-bye. She wheeled Crabapple, turned his head towards home, and at a walk rode away.

Crabapple went quietly down the road. The rhythmn of his hoofbeats rang in Tony's ears. So Alan hadn't really cared for her friendship? He had, perhaps, just found it dull and demanding and he hadn't been able to tell her so. And she had been able to believe that her visits had made him happier. Something laughed within her, but the laugh rose to her lips only as a little sound, inarticulate, a half sob. "Cruel. Cruel." She had never thought of him as cruel. There was no use in crying.

Jacky would be waiting for her at home now. Tony touched Crabapple with her heel and cantered off, up a grass track, a short cut to Oaken. And not even the thought of Jacky—not the thought of anything on earth—could lighten the weight of misery in her heart.

x x x

Tony had slipped into the house by the side door. Wretchedness, she felt, was written on her face, and Hyacinth would spring on it. The schoolroom seemed a refuge. Its familiar details were welcoming. At the sight of Jacky, seated on the hearth, it was as if for a moment a cool voice quieted her.

Jacky turned, smiling. "Did you have tea with Alan?"

Tony shook her head. "He's gone. He's left Holme Dacey. He's—" she stopped abruptly.

"Oh, Tony! Are you unhappy?"

"Don't, Jacky." Tony turned away. At that rebuff, Jacky looked blank, and in a flash Tony had dropped to her knees beside her. "Oh, darling, I'm not cross. You're such a comfort. You don't know—" she buried her face in Jacky's shoulder. How could she have spoken sharply to her little sister? She had never before wanted to. It was because of this pain, alternately dull and sharp—it seemed unbearable. But one would have to bear it.

"Let's sit by the fire," she said. She forced her voice to cheerfulness. "Are you roasting chestnuts, sweet? What fun! Give me one."

Jacky smiled. She knocked a chestnut from the bar of the grate. "A letter came for you this afternoon" she said.

In a second Tony was on her feet. "Where?" The envelope was on the chimney-piece. She had never before seen Alan's handwriting but at once she knew it as his. After that first wild wave of hope her heart sank in anticipation.

"My dear Tony", she read.

"I very much hope that you will not have come up to Holme Dacey again before you get this note. I have decided rather suddenly upon Sir Matthew's advice, to go to London for, at any rate, some time. I shall miss you when I am there. Your visits have cheered me, and I am very grateful to you.

"And now, Tony dear, I want you to forget the man whose crippled life you have brightened in these last months. It is likely, I think, that we may not see each other again for a long time — not, perhaps, until you have the home of your own which I once prophesied for you. I am more experienced and therefore wiser than you, my child, and I want you to take some advice; don't, Tony, turn down happiness when it offers itself to you. You see, I think that you might perhaps do that without quite realizing what you were doing.

In a minute or two the ambulance will be here. I am a countryman and I shall miss many things at Holme Dacey. But very few people have the lives that they hoped for. I would like you to remember that.

"You have been a brave child in the past. I think that you will be brave in the future. If you should ever need help I should be glad if you would write to me. The Peregrines' Club, Pall Mall, will always find me.

"Yours,
"Alln Fleming"

For a moment Tony remained motionless, staring at the paper in her hand. Then she crammed it into the pocket of her jacket. She knelt down again at the hearth. Jacky, blowing on the chestnuts to cool them, looked up. "Was it a letter from Alan?"

"Yes, my darling. Why "

"I thought it must be. Because he's your only friend," said Jacky realistically.

Well — that, thought Tony, was true enough. Except — "There's Sir Matthew," she said, a little unwillingly.

"Oh, him. Yes. I like him, but you'd rather be with Alan than with him, wouldn't you?"

"Yes. But it doesn't matter," Tony answered at random. "Gone. Gone. Gone," said her mind. Yes, gone for always. She dashed her hand to her eyes, protesting that she had burnt herself. And Jacky, glancing sideways with the careful tact of childhood, said nothing.

It was late. Tony sat alone in the schoolroom. She was writing an answer to Alan. His letter lay open on the table but there was no need, for did she not know it by heart? The only letter that she would ever have from him.

"Dear Alan," she wrote.

"Thank you very much for your letter.

"I am very sorry that I won't see you any more. I will try to remember what you say about very few people having the lives they hoped for. I expect it is true. But I think that different people's ideas of happiness are different. I will be all right in the future, I expect, and won't need to write to you for any help, ever. I know I hadn't very much to talk about when I came to see you, but I used to enjoy myself very much.

"Yours,
"Tony Querne"

She put her letter into the envelope, and addressed it. Then she sat gazing into the fire, her head in her hands. And if all her love and her bitterness spoke clearly in the words of that letter, she didn't know it.

CHAPTER XXII

They were clear enough to Alan when, lying in bed in a nursing home, he read her reply. His hand clenched itself on the paper as the pain that lay in her words was echoed in his heart. He had thought of her so often. He could see her so clearly. A thousand times her image had come to him. Whether he slept or waked, he could see her eyes. How quiet her presence had been. Her plan that she and Jacky should live with him — a lovable plan. He remembered her words: "I'd talk to you when you wanted me to, and I'd be silent when you didn't." Abruptly, his head moved on the pillow. He glanced round the unhomelike room with its shining enamel, its cork flooring, its chromium plating. If only he were going to see her today — soon — now. He knew how she would slip into the room. She would stand there, her hands deep in the pockets of her coat, smiling a little, untroubled, waiting for him to show his mood. He remembered how she would bring him odd little gifts — apples, homemade toffee; never flowers. It was as if she knew or had guessed that flowers reminded him of Hyacinth and of the past.

He picked up her letter and read it again. "I won't need to write to you for any help, ever." "I know I hadn't very much to talk about when I came to see you." He set his teeth. But he had been right in the course he had taken. One day soon she would marry. One could be certain of that. Her curious charm would set some man aflame. He thought of Matthew Lake. But Tony wouldn't marry Matthew, though Matthew loved her. He had appeared too soon — and not soon enough. For it was, Alan knew, he himself whom Tony loved, so uselessly. She had shown that clearly, and never so clearly as in this letter in which she had tried to hide it. It was cruel to have hurt her like this. But not so cruel, not so wrong as if he had continued to see her, or to write to her. For, he told himself, she would forget him. Surely she would forget.

It was months later — a summer evening. The windows of Tony's bedroom were open wide. The last rays of sunset filled the room with a strange light. Jacky, her knees clasped in her arms, rocked to and fro on the bed, watching while Tony dressed.

"I do love seeing you dressed up," Jacky gloated, bouncing on the bed. "I hope Mother will give a lot of dances now."

Tony smiled. She knew the reason for this particular dance, for the famous band hired from London, and the banks of flowers that reinforced the reserves from the Oaken hothouses. It might have been her own coming-out dance. For was she not eighteen now? But it wasn't that. It had been designed as a setting for Hyacinth's new romance. Lord Rafton's courtship of Hyacinth had not been lengthy — one could count it in weeks — but it had been ardent. And it was likely that, tonight, he would propose.

"Will you dance every dance?" Jacky asked.

"I don't know, darling. I shouldn't think so."

"Oh, you will. No one could see you and not want to dance with you." Jacky was solemn. "Look—" she led Tony up to the long mirror.

Tony saw a slight girl who smiled at her faintly, timidly, not gayly. The eyes were bright. Her reflection gazed back at her, a little ghostlike, as the soft light streamed in at the window and mingled with the electric light.

"Aren't you looking forward to it awfully?" Jacky glanced up into her sister's face, looking for something that wasn't there—that hadn't been there for many weeks.

"Not very much. I'd rather be up here with you."

The sound of music drifted from below. There came a woman's laugh and the distant murmur of voices. "I expect I ought to go—" she hesitated.

"Yes. You go." Jacky took her sister's hand. She held it against her cheek. "Do be happy. Do have a lovely time."

The band broke into a swift waltz. Dancers were returning to the ballroom.

Tony sat on the now deserted stairs with Harry Beckett. "Run along, Harry, or you'll miss your next partner."

"Tony — look here — will you give me another dance?"

"But surely you haven't time for me? Why aren't you dancing with women of the world? There are shoals of them here: Mrs. Maudit and Lady Carterer—"

Harry turned on an indignant heel. An instant later he was back staring down at Tony where she still sat, her head a little on one side, her thoughts apparently anywhere; but not with him.

"Oh, Tony, please give me another dance."

She looked at him and smiled. At last she nodded.

The hall was deserted. No one sat in the chairs that were set in inviting couples, here and there. Tony waited by the big screen. It was there that she was to meet her next partner, Major Cheaveley. Well — she didn't much want to dance with him, but there was no way out of it.

There was the sound of a light footstep. A woman entered; it was Hyacinth. She was alone. She did not see Tony half hidden in the shadows. Her white velvet flowed round her, her face was uplifted in beauty and triumph and joy. She paused, and it was as if she were transfixed by her own thoughts.

A man — Bob Cheaveley — entered. His eyes were on her. He did not seem hurried, and yet, one saw, he moved with deceptive swiftness. Tony was about to come forward when he said, "Good evening, Hyacinth. I've been looking for you."

Hyacinth glanced towards the stairs as if for one second she contemplated flight from the man at her side. He said, "No. Wait a moment, Hyacinth." Now they were out of Tony's sight. But their words, low-spoken, came clearly.

"So you have promised the next three dances to Pip Rafton?"

"Well?"

"Well, you will give those dances to me."

"Are you mad?"

"Perhaps. But I mean to have those dances with you. It's unfortunate, I know."

"I'm not going to discuss this with you. And I don't think that you will come to this house again"

"My dear girl, wouldn't that be rather sad. We have much in common. Aren't we both interested in the same things?" The deep voice was suddenly syrup smooth: "Mr. Ortreum's historic little shop, for instance?"

There was a long silence — so long that to Tony it seemed as if Hyacinth could not have heard that odd question.

"Bob—" came Hyacinth's voice at last. "I don't know what you mean." In that whisper was sudden, desperate weakness

"I think you do."

"But if I cut Philip's dances, if I dance them with you, he won't — he won't —"

"No." Bob Cheaveley's voice was grim. "You're right my dear, he never will propose."

Tony heard a little sound. There was the rustle of silk. Hyacinth crossed the room to the stairs. Her hand was at her mouth. In her face was something that Tony had never seen there; something hopeless, ashen.

Bob Cheaveley stood, following her with his eyes. Then he threw the end of his cigarette into the empty hearth and turned towards Tony.

So he had been aware, all the time, of her presence. He smiled down at her. And now his manner was gentle. "That little scene interest you?" He jerked his head towards the empty hall behind him. Tony shook her head.

"But I'd be glad if she went to Yorkshire," she murmured.

Cheaveley looked at her.

"That's not necessary," he said. "And it won't happen. Give her time. In a year, Tony, you'll find she's different. Yes, quite changed."

He nodded towards the ballroom. "Will you give me the end of this dance, Tony?" he asked.

She hesitated, not liking him, not wanting to dance with him.

"As you wish," he said, but his smile was still kind. He nodded, and with that same air of carelessness he strolled away.

TARDY MOTORISTS FACE THIS PROSPECT

Ontario motorists who put off securing their new registration plates and driving licences invariably find that they have to wait their turn in a jostling, last-minute rush. Typical of the scenes witnessed during the last few weeks of any licence year is the one shown above portraying a section of the crowd at Parliament Buildings, Toronto, last year. In urging all car owners to secure their new licences without delay, J. P. Bickell, Registrar of Motor Vehicles pointed out that there will be no extension of time for the use of the 1939 plates and licences beyond March 31. While thousands of motorists have already secured their new licences, there are thousands more who are still driving with 1939 plates, Mr. Bickell stated.

AT THE BELLE

"THE SHOP AROUND THE CORNER"

Ernst Lubitsch brings his favorite of all stories to the screen in "The Shop Around The Corner", starring Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart and now playing on the Belle screen.

Because he was set on having Miss Sullivan and Stewart for the leading roles in his romantic comedy-drama, and they were not available when he signed to produce and direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Lubitsch first directed Greta Garbo in the hilarious satirical comedy, "Ninotchka."

Then he turned his attention to "The Shop Around the Corner", which he personally purchased, a delightfully human narrative woven around the lives of a Budapest leather goods and novelty shop owner and his clerks, their everyday problems and how they solve them.

The colorful backgrounds and the gentle theme of the story presented many opportunities for the famed "Lubitsch touch", of which he took full advantage with a hand-picked supporting cast, which includes Frank Morgan as the gruff but kindly shop owner, Joseph Schildkraut as the rascally clerk, Felix Bressart as the timid clerk, afraid of the boss, the butcher and the doctor, and Sara Haden, William Tracy, Ines Courtney, Sarah Edwards, Edwin Maxwell, Charles Halton and Charles Smith.

Nick Carter, Master Detective

Walter Pidgeon and Rita Johnson, who proved their appeal as a romantic team in the prison drama, "6,000 Enemies", combine forces again in "Nick Carter, Master Detective," which is announced as the companion feature attraction. Story of the super-sleuth who was the hero of the popular dime novel series of a generation ago. "Nick Carter, Master Detective," presents Pidgeon in the title role as a detective called in to solve the mysterious disappearance of plans for a super-airplane. Miss Johnson is seen as a plane stewardess. The story and characters have been brought entirely up-to-date, and glimpses of imaginative aircraft of the future lend a Jules Verne touch. Readers familiar with the original Nick Carter and audiences meeting him for the first time will alike find thrills in the plot ingredients; an attack by foreign agents on a plane forced down in the desert, the crash of a super-ship in a power dive, a kidnapping, murder mystery, air battles, and a fight between a plane and a speedboat at sea. Supporting Pidgeon and Miss Johnson are Henry Hull as an eccentric inventor, Stanley C. Ridges as a nefarious doctor, Donald Meek as an amateur detective and Addison Richards as a plane manufacturer. Jacques Tourneur, of "Crime Does Not Pay" short subject fame, directed.

The Belle news of the hour will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"His Girl Friday"

With Cary Grant and Rosalind Russell in the maddest, merriest whirlwind of a romance ever brought to the screen, "His Girl Friday" now at the McCarthy theatre is a delightful motion picture hit. A Howard Hawks' production, with Ralph Bellamy heading a splendid supporting cast, "His Girl Friday" rates all the encomium in the lexicon of a critic. It's gay, delightful, it's fast and furious, it's wild and witty and outrageously racy. It sparkles, and it possesses as well, an undertone of tragedy which finds expression chiefly in the swift-paced action of the well-knit plot.

Miss Russell, the stunning spitfire, of "The Women," is the central point of the unique triangle whose story is told in "His Girl Friday." Grant and Bellamy, that sensational comedy team of "The Awful Truth," are reunited in the current film, again as embattled suitors for a lady's hand. Grant, of course, wins—but then he doesn't play fair!

And the manner of his shamelessness makes "His Girl Friday" a joy to behold!

Grant, Miss Russell's ex-husband, is the managing editor of a newspaper, and the girl is—or was —his star reporter. But her efforts to quit newspaper work in order to marry a Casper Milquetoastish sort of insurance agent are constantly foiled by the hectic developments of a sensational story which she has been tricked into "covering." The yarn, a nation-rocking consequence, follows in dramatic path even as Grant—in order to keep his ex-wife on the job and away from the man she wants to marry—constantly and persistently "frames" the insurance man, kidnaps his mother, and generally comports himself in the reckless, dashing fashion which has made him the idol of millions of fans.

Grant's performance tops, in comedy, romance and serious characterization, even his redoubtable performance in "Only Angels Have Wings," which was also produced and directed by Howard Hawks. Miss Russell, equally at home in her role, is an ideal co-star. Bellamy contributes a splendid performance, as do such talented troupers as Gene Lockhart, Ernest Truex, Porter Hall, Helen Mack, Roscoe Karns and a score of other Hollywood personalities.

"Rhythm Jamboree"

A screen vaudeville featurette "Rhythm Jamboree" presenting some of the most popular stars of radio, screen and stage in a revue of mirth and melody, precedes the feature presentation "His Girl Friday."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.
A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

AT THE CAPITOL

"THE EAGLE AND THE HAWK"

Still one of the greatest of all films, for thrills, for romance, for sheer drama of raw hate and burning love, the screen has never surpassed this great war drama of the British Flying Corps. "The Eagle and the Hawk", the next attraction at the Capitol featuring an all-star cast, Fredric March, Cary Grant, Jack Oakie and Carole Lombard.

On the same program, Clarence E. Mulford's "Renegade Trail", starring the popular western cowboy William Boyd and "Gabby" George Hayes. The 7th chapter of the thrilling detective serial "Red Barry", and "Believe or Else" a cartoon will complete the bill.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, March 7

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ACCORDING to the lunar transits, this should be a particularly lively and progressive day, with much stirring in connection with group movements or other well-organized bodies. Joining forces with others for the common good is particularly enjoined for signal success, although all forms of creative self-expression and expansion are likewise nidicated. Writings, publicity, publishing and promotional enterprises flourish, and short journeys, sports and affairs of the young and progressive movements thrive.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a lively, interesting and productive year, with much stirring in the way of self-expression and expansion in creative lines. Original and novel ideas of a literary or artistic nature should thrive. All objectives in association with others for group advantage, especially in promoting the welfare of youth, are under excellent prospect.

A child born on this day may have much talent and versatility, with much originality and creative ability. Its intellectuality would fit it for a literary, scientific or professional career, with much success in connection with groups or societies.

NEW LAND LAW PROVOKES DEBATE

London Editorial Comment

London editorial comment included the Telegraph's assertion that the land regulations were "a choice of evils." It said the government "could not, without the gravest risk of storing up incalculable trouble hereafter, simply leave the Palestine problem hanging in mid-air," and the decision to implement the policy of last May's white paper possessed "at least the virtue of consistency, the conspicuous lack of which in the past has been a substantial factor in development of Palestinian unrest."

The white paper to which it referred declared that it was not part of British policy that "Palestine should become a Jewish state," and forecast an independent state in which Arab and Jew would share the responsibility of government. It was adopted in the House of Commons last May 17 by a margin of 88 votes.

Mr. Macdonald announced the new land transfer restrictions in the House Feb. 28.

Rita Johnson and Walter Pidgeon in the romantic action-filled drama, "Nick Carter—Master Detective," one of two features now on the Belle screen.

ALLIED AIRCRAFT OUTPUT OUTSTRIPS REICH'S; LINER QUEEN ELIZABETH ARRIVES AT NEW YORK

Voyage is Proof Britain Controls All the Sea Lanes

Trip is Made Without an Alarm and Not Disclosed Until Wednesday —Christened September 28, 1938, by Queen Elizabeth

TO BERTH IN N. Y.

Owners of Liner Believe Steamship Will be Safer Outside the Shadow of German Submarines — Nothing Said of Any Convoy Accompanying Liner

New York, Mar. 7 (CP).—With the red ensign proudly flying at her mast, Britain's new $28,750,000 liner Queen Elizabeth — the largest ship afloat—arrived within the safety of New York harbor waters today at the end of her bold dash 3,000 miles across the Atlantic.

Painted a drab gray, the 85,000-ton liner passed Ambrose Lightship shortly after 9 a.m. EST and headed toward the narrows, with the skyline of New York twenty miles distant.

The bluish-gray coat of the vessel, unrelieved by a single note of color, blended into the haze over the harbor. She looked like a ghost ship as she reached quarantine and dropped anchor.

Having missed the morning slack tide, the Queen Elizabeth was to remain at quarantine until about [illegible] p.m. to await a tide permitting her to tie up at pier 90 at the foot of 50th street.

Unidentified escort vessels, seen with her farther out, were dropped somewhere in the lower bay and the Queen of the seas moved up the harbor alone—in solitary majesty.

The first welcoming salutes came from a salvage and a press tug. The Queen Elizabeth responded with a throaty roar from her whistle and ran up the yellow quarantine flag.

No guns were evident. Her life

Spring gardens! Spring weather is now on the way northward, and even upward on mountain slopes, and garden work in many places may soon begin. In the north, tomato, eggplant, cauliflower, cabbage and pepper seeds may be sown in hotbeds, or lacking these, in boxes in the house. Radishes and lettuce planted in hotbeds may mature there. Asparagus beds may be fertilized. When ground is ready to work, the gardener may sow seeds of spinach, radishes, early peas, beets, onion sets and lettuce. He may dig, before they begin to grow, parsnips and salsify left in the ground over the winter.

"Splendid! Very good work, indeed."

MENZIES FORMS NEW CABINET IN AUSTRALIA

To Prosecute War Makes Coalition With the Country Party a Labor Group

RETAINS RIGHTS

Melbourne, Australia, Mar. 7 (CP).—Prime Minister R. G. Menzies followed up his vigorous enunciation of the Commonwealth's war effort by forming a coalition cabinet with the Country Party.

Apparently heeding the political implications of the Labor Party's victory in the Corio by-election last Saturday, the prime minister closed the breach created between his United Australia Party and the Country Party after death last April removed the strong hand of Prime Minister Joseph Lyons which had held the quarrelsome factions together.

Archie Cameron, the new leader of the Country Party, will become Deputy Prime Minister and take into the cabinet three of his followers. The party will also have two ministerial posts without cabinet rank.

The agreement between the prime minister and Mr. Cameron will be submitted immediately to the Country Party for ratification. Mr. Menzies retained the right to name the new cabinet members but promised to keep in close consultation with Mr. Cameron in making the choices.

The rapid evolution of the federal political situation began yesterday when Mr. Menzies, surprising observers who had thought Labor's by-election victory would cause the government to soft-pedal its defence policy, announced Australia will send overseas a full army corps of some 80,000 men and embark on a vast defence program costing over two years three times as much as did the Commonwealth's war effort in the corresponding period of the last conflict.

RUSSO-FINN TRUCE SOUGHT BY SWEDEN IS REPORTED

Rumors Lack Open Confirmation That Sweden Submitted Terms to Stalin

REPORTED TALKS

Current Rumors Declare Stalin Has Called for Surrender of Karelian Isthmus and Other Concessions

(By Elmer Peterson, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Stockholm, March 7 — (AP) — Sweden is seeking to arrange an armistice in the Russian-Finnish war, usually reliable sources said today, adding that Russian peace terms recently had been presented to Finland.

The exact nature of the terms is still the subject of speculation, but there are unconfirmed reports that Russia demands surrender of the Karelian Isthmus, Viipuri, Lake Ladoga and part of the far northern Petsamo area.

An armistice, it is said, would be followed by further efforts to arrange a settlement.

Stockholm, March 7—(AP)—Reports of preliminary negotiations here toward a settlement of the Soviet Russia-Finnish conflict—possibly starting with an armistice—attracted attention today although they lacked open confirmation.

Official Swedish circles said they could neither deny nor confirm reports that Sweden had submitted peace terms from Joseph Stalin to the Helsinki government.

One theory was that negotiations thus far had proceeded through the Russian minister to Sweden, Madame Alexandra Kollontay, the Finnish minister here, Eljas Erkko, who is former Finnish foreign minister and the Sweden foreign office.

Sheriffs Appointed By His Majesty In Ancient Manner

London, March 7—(CP)— The King today appointed new Sheriffs for England and Wales in ancient fashion by pricking a roll with a steel bodkin in a Privy Council meeting at Buckingham Palace.

The meeting was attended by Earl Stanhope, the Marquess of Salisbury, the Marquess of Londonderry and W. S. Morrison, Minister of Food. After the pricking of the Sheriff's roll routine business was transacted.

French Navy Has Sunk 12 U-Boats, Allied Ships Break German Threat

Paris, March 7.—(AP)— The French navy has sunk 12 German submarines, captured a large tonnage of German shipping and with the British navy has broken the back of Germany's threat to block the sea-lanes, Navy Minister Cesar Campinchi declared today.

(British sources have reported that the two allied navies have destroyed a total of about 50 submarines.)

In a survey of the first six months of the war Campinchi asserted that "allied naval supremacy is better than ever and Germany's main fleet does not move much nor far from its basis".

"The French sailor has given blow for blow to the German", Campinchi said. "For each cargo boat lost by us our sea and air patrols have almost matched that rate with a German submarine. The Simoun has just brought to a dozen the number of Nazi submarines lost."

The Simoun, 1,319-ton Destroyer, already had been credited Feb. 27 with sinking a submarine off the Spanish coast.

France's commercial fleet has shrunk less than two per cent through German action, the total loss being 15 ships of 71,511 tons, but no French warships have been destroyed, Campinchi said.

Besides new shipping and German prizes put into service, France yesterday floated a new warship, the 35,000-ton battleship Jean Bart, the Minister announced.

Campinchi contended that the German war against shipping was waning, supporting this with the assertion that 66 allied and neutral ships were sunk in December, 63 in January and only 48 in February, of which 27 were neutral.

He said that French convoys had lost only four out of 2,000 ships escorted since war started and that the allies had moved thousands of troops and France had imported colonial workers without losing a man.

The Minister disclosed that the new battleship Jean Bart will be equipped with two turrets of four 380-millimetre (14.9-inch) guns and six turrets of three 152-millimetre (5.9 inch) guns. The range of her big guns will be more than 25 miles.

R.A.F. Fighting Strength Doubled in 12 Months Air Minister Tells House

(By J. F. Sanderson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 7—(CP-Cable)—Great Britain and France have passed Germany on the basis of numerical expansion of their air forces, Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary of State for air, declared in the House of Commons today. On the basis of quality, the Allies are far ahead.

The air minister gave the nation a peek, but only a peek, behind the curtain of official secrecy surrounding aircraft production in this country in presenting the estimates of his department to parliament.

He expressed confidence "that even on a numerical basis the output of aircraft now accruing to us and to France today is in excess of that of Germany."

Britain's Production Doubled

Britain's production of aircraft was doubled during the past year and the quality of individual models was improved. In addition great progress has been made in rearming many types.

"I would sooner have 100 Wellingtons or 100 Spitfires or Hurricanes than a much larger number of their German counterparts," the air minister declared.

He revealed that since the outbreak of war the production of Spitfires and Hurricanes, Britain's No. 1 and 2 fighter planes, has been doubled and the output of the bigger and heavier bomber types has been increased by 50 per cent.

The minister said the estimates presented today, details of which were withheld, involve "the greatest expenditure" of this kind in Britain's history.

He said the R.A.F. had carried out more than 1,000 sorties into German territory by day and night since the outbreak of war.

Sir Kingsley said plans for production in the dominions are beginning to bear fruit and that the first military aircraft manufactured in Canada already has been flown.

"Large additional orders recently were placed in Canada and the United States," he disclosed.

The air minister announced that the empire training scheme schools in Canada, Australia and New Zealand will produce 20,000 pilots and 30,000 other airmen annually.

Acquisition of Airways

He said the British Overseas Airways Corporation has adopted and ratified provisional contracts for acquisition of Imperial Airways and British Airways Limited. A day for transferring these undertakings to the new corporation, which has been organized by the air ministry as a public corporation under government control, soon will be fixed, he added.

Conservative Leader Claims "Whispering Campaign" Being Carried on Against Him in Province

(By The Canadian Press)

The political winds blew up a gale of renewed controversy today in the Dominion election campaign after a stormy night of electioneering in which at least 16 prominent public men and one woman made appeals to the voters.

It was the most active period of the campaign so far with opposition party speakers outnumbering those for the government for the first time since the ballot battle started.

Cabinet Ministers defended the government's trade treaty policy and war record, Conservative leader Manion spoke before his first public meeting in Quebec Province, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation moved its campaign into Quebec and spokesmen for the new democracy movement aired their views in a general acceleration of the campaign.

56 Candidates Are Nominated In Manitoba

Winnipeg, March 7 — (CP) — Manitoba's list of candidates for the March 26 Federal election had reached 56 today with nomination day six days hence. In the 1925 general election the 17 Manitoba seats were contested by 71 candidates. Prospects point to a smaller number for the 1940 vote.

Candidates supporting the national government forces of Conservative leader Manion total 17 while the Liberals have 16 in the field. There is one Liberal-Progressive, W. G. Weir, member of the recently dissolved House of Commons, seeking re-election in Macdonald riding.

Supporters of the co-operative commonwealth federation whose national president, J. S. Woodsworth is seeking re-election in Winnipeg north centre, number 14. Candidates entered under the banner of the New Democracy Movement, headed by Hon. W. D. Herridge, total three, including the lone woman entrant, Mrs. Mary Wilkinson, who is running in Winnipeg north centre.

Three independent contestants, one independent-Labor and one unity reform candidate make up the Manitoba total to date.

Strict Neutrality to be Observed Even in Fields of Foreign Commerce

Bucharest, March 7 (AP)— King Carol II opened parliament today with a declaration that all the resources of Rumania would be thrown behind her army as a "supreme guarantee of our independence and of the integrity of our borders."

Disclosing that taxes would be materially increased to bear the cost of keeping 1,600,000 men under arms, the King said:

"I am sure my people will accept such sacrifices for the sake of the country and peace."

Strict neutrality, he said, will be continued even in the fields of foreign commerce "in order to assure the essential flow of supplies to our army and our people."

CUTTER REPORTS HURRICANE AT SEA

Weather Bureau Ship Returns After Voyage of Month Seeking Data

Washington, Mar. 7 (AP).—One of the United States floating weather bureaus has returned from mid-Atlantic with tales of the fierce struggle at sea—against a hurricane.

Experiences of the 22,000-ton Coastguard Cutter Bibb on her maiden 21-day tour of weather duty were described today by C. J. MacGregor, Weather Bureau meteorologist.

"On the first day out, we ran into an 80-mile hurricane that laid 95 per cent of the crew low with seasickness," he said.

The Bibb, with a crew of 125 officers and men and three Weather Bureau meteorologists and observers, is one of four coastguard boats which President Roosevelt assigned to collect weather information in the Atlantic.

The arrangement became necessary when the war caused ocean-going craft, particularly those of belligerents, to stop supplying data because of the danger that they might disclose their position to enemy ships.

More Normal Trade Between U.S. and Allies Object of Conference

Washington, March 7 — (AP)—More normal trade between the United States and the Allies, despite the war, was the purpose of a conference today between Henry F. Grady, assistant United States Secretary of State and British and French experts.

Washington officials are concerned lest closing the British market to American products may change consumers' tastes and prevent sales after the war. American tobacco exports to Britain have about ceased. Allotment of [illegible] change for purchase of products like fruit has been curtailed.

Commander of Queen Elizabeth Has Served 36 Years at Sea

New York, March 7.—(AP)—Even the British who's who does not list Britain's hero of today.

A grizzled, friendly-smiling man with piercing blue eyes, Capt. J. C. Townley, commander of the Queen Elizabeth, served 36 years at sea before winning the admiration of the world for his feat of running the German U-boat gauntlet with the huge luxury liner.

He joined the Cunard Line in 1904 as Fourth officer of the S. S. Saxonia, became First officer of the old Mauretania in 1913 and received his first command, the cargo steamer Thacia, in 1915.

Year by year, Capt. Townley rose to command of larger vessels—The Alania, The Lancastria, The Georgic, the Queen Mary—until he advanced to the most coveted post in the British Marine service as Master of the world's largest liner, the Queen Elizabeth.

For him it was a weird maiden voyage— without fanfare, without the champagne-sparkling gaiety that usually marks the baptismal voyage of a great Transatlantic liner —sailing in deepest secrecy, with a skeleton crew and not a passenger, an a 13,000-mile crossing studded with the threat of disaster.

London, March 7—(CP)— Two German planes were engaged by Royal Air Force fighter planes off the east coast of England tonight.

Onlookers saw one raider almost collide with a British plane as the fight in the clouds began.

In a few minutes the second raider, with two R.A.F. fighters in pursuit, appeared. Then came three more fighters and the two raiders were driven out to sea, onlookers said.

Earlier in the day R.A.F. craft shot down a German plane off the northeast coast of Scotland .

R.A.F. planes earlier were announced to have scouted the German naval bases of Wilhelmshaven, Heligoland and Cuxhaven and most of the principal cities and ports of northwest Germany last night.

The Air Ministry said the planes drew anti-aircraft fire and great searchlight activity but all returned safely after covering an aggregate of 10,000 miles. It was the second successive night of such reconnaissance.

The German plane announced shot down is the 44th German raider shot down on or near the British coast since the outbreak of war. In addition, nine German planes are believed to have failed to return.

The German plane flew over Aberdeenshire a few minutes after 2 p.m. anti-aircraft guns opened fire and R.A.F. fighters took off on the successful chase.

Statement Issued

A statement on the flights over Germany said: "Most of the principal cities and seaports of northwest Germany, including Bremen, Hanover, Hamburg, Wilhelmshaven and Cuxhaven were visited, while

"Lid is Off" For Newsmen At St. Thomas

Ottawa, March 7—(CP)—A Defence Department spokesman said today "the lid will be off" for newspapermen who go to St. Thomas, Ont., Royal Canadian Air Force school for the visit of Premier Hepburn of Ontario at the invitation of Defence Minister Rogers.

Mr. Hepburn charged "serious disturbances" had occurred at the air school, and suggested next Monday as the day he would like to make the visit.

"Any accredited Canadian newspaperman may make the trip to the St. Thomas air centre," the Defence Department spokesman said. "The lid will be off. They may print anything they want and there will be no censorship restrictions. It will be left to the various newspapermen's responsibility not to give out information that might be of value to the enemy."

SIX MORE SHIPS ESCORTED TO CENTRAL STATION

Cargoes of Eight Italian Ships, Totalling 100,000 Tons, Unloaded Wednesday

PAPERS COMMENT

London, March 7—(CP) — Six more Italian coal ships were held at the contraband control station at the Downs today as Great Britain proceeded with her blockade against German coal exports.

The cargoes of eight others, totalling about 100,000 tons, were ordered unloaded yesterday. Another was released because it sailed from the Netherlands March 1, before the blockade deadline.

The six ships escorted to the Downs last night were the Pozzuoli, Ischia, Integritas, Pamia, San Luigi and Semien.

A new Anglo-Italian trade agreement was rejected last month by Premier Mussolini "when it had reached the point of being ready for signature," the Daily Telegraph reported.

"Britain is ready to accept industrial plant, aircraft, engines and armaments from Italy," the newspaper said. "She is also prepared to buy large quantities of Italian vegetables which formerly had been exported to Germany, in part payment for coal, although these are not required for the British market. It is understood that the total value of these Italian exports would have been about 20,000,000 pounds a year."

Many Work out Plan

Despite the British seizure of German coal exports to Italy the newspaper said:

"Prolonged negotiations have given good reason to believe that a mutually satisfactory arrangement could be made by which Italy would receive British coal and pay for it by products of her own factories and such a plan may still be worked out.

"Some method may be devised to assist Italy over the difficulty produced by the stoppage of these particular supplies, but on the main principle of the blockade of German exports a compromise is impossible."

The Times said: "German exports, no matter what kind, no matter to which country, will be stopped. The British reply to the Italian protests will be sure to make that clear, while at the same time declaring the government have no wish to handicap Italian industry or the industry of any other country except Germany. Everything will be done to minimize the temporary hardships and inconveniences to third powers, neutral and non-belligerent."

Italian Suggestion Made

Rome, March 7.—(AP)—The most logical solution of the controversy with Great Britain over German coal exports would be resumption of Anglo-Italian trade negotiations

Carelessness Blamed for High Accident Toll in Construction I.

H. J. McGough, Manager Safety Assoc., Gives Reasons Leading to Increased Compensation Rates

PICTURES SHOWN

Claiming that 97 percent of all accidents occurring on construction jobs are the result of carelessness, either on the part of the employee or the contractor, and that these accidents can be eliminated by workers doing some careful thinking and using ordinary precautions while on the job, Mr. H. J. McGough, general manager of the Construction Safety Association of Ontario, by the showing of lantern slides, very graphically illustrated to about one hundred and fifty contractors and employees at the Quinte Hotel on Wednesday evening, the reason for the high cost of workmen's compensation.

"Don't blame the board for high compensation rates," urged Mr. McGough as he compared compensation with auto insurance, "because it is you contractors and your careless employees who are making the balls that the board tosses right back in the form of higher rates as the accident toll increases."

The refusal of employees to wear protective goggles while engaged in work of a dangerous nature results in many eye injuries that could be easily prevented, stated Mr. McGough. Last year the compensation board had to deal with no less than six cases of eye injury resulting from lime burns which would never have happened if the employee had been wearing suitable goggles.

Defective Material Also Cause

The use of defective materials in the construction of scaffolding was another cause of serious accidents often resulting in the death of the workers. Third party responsibility, as seen in careless workmen leaving loose boards lying around on the job with nails protruding from them; a bricklayer permits a brick to fall off the top of a building, or a plumber cuts off a nippling which falls several stories hitting someone on the head. Insufficient bracing and improper construction causes many a scaffold to collapse and the excuse that "we always did it this way" does not bring some workman back to life, nor does it prove that the system is correct.

Rickety ladders, unguarded stair wells, careless piling of building materials and the neglect to drive nails out of the heads of nail kegs all help to mount the accident list and keep compensation rates high. "The high cost of construction is not lessened by high compensation rates," declared Mr. McGough, "and if the contractors do not follow instructions regarding accident prevention, the Safety Association has the power to force them to pay the entire cost of every accident on their job as well as the regular compensation rate."

Employer Responsible

The employer is responsible for his employees and must report to the compensation board even if he has only one worker, said Mr. McGough, also stressing the advisability of hiring only contractors who were duly recognized by the Safety Association as being competent for the job and who were certain to keep their compensation rates paid up. The Safety Association has only been in operation 2 years, but already there are over 9,000 contractors on their lists and last year succeeded in reducing the accidents in construction work with a corresponding reduction in compensation rates.

Mr. E. Rutherford, general contractor, acted as chairman for the evening and after the lantern slides shown, introduced Mr. G. J. Beach, Assessment Officer for the Workmen's Compensation Board, who gave a short talk relative to the payment of compensation fees by contractors. The meeting was then thrown open to general discussion, with Mr. Beach and Mr. McGough answering questions relative to construction and compensation problems.

Transient Charged With Bicycle Theft

Trenton, March 7 —(Special)— Charged with the theft of a bicycle from this town, a man, who gave his name as Patrick Denley, 17, of Prescott, was arrested in Brighton last night and later lodged in the Trenton police station. Denley was today remanded on the bicycle theft charge.

When apprehended Denley is said to have been found in the possession of parts of a .22 calibre revolver. Chief William Bain revealed today that on Denley's person was found the chamber and barrel of a gun, as well as several .22 calibre cartridges. "We believe this man has knowledge of the remaining parts of the revolver," Chief Bain added.

Denley was arrested by Constable Atkinson when found sleeping in a hallway in Brighton. At first Denley denied all charges, but when an abandoned bicycle was found nearby Denley was taken to Trenton and charged.

MRS. ANTOINE LA LONDE

(Peterborough)

Death came on Tuesday to Mrs. Antoine La Londe at her home at 586 Waterford Street, Peterborough, after an illness that extended over six months. She was in her 45th year.

She had lived in Peterborough for the past two years, coming here from Belleville. Born Laura May Moiser, she was a daughter of the late Richard Moiser and Mary Ellen Keller, and was the wife of Antoine La Londe, an employee of the Canadian Raybestos Company here.

Mrs. La Londe was a member of George Street United Church.

Surviving besides her husband are seven daughters: Jean, Helen, Betty and Annie, all at home; Mrs. F. McGrath of Stirling, Mrs. Thelma Morrison of Belleville, and Mrs. Dorothy Latchford of Belleville; and five sons: Elvin, Erwin, William, Gerald and Milton, all at home.

The funeral was held on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock from the family residence, with interment at Ardendale Cemetery.

Salvation Army Prepares For War Service Campaign

Team Captains and Officials Discuss Plans for Raising Funds in Aid of Service to Troops

NEED $3,500

Team captains and officials of the Salvation Army War and Home Service Campaign were served a delightful supper at the Pinnacle Street Citadel last night with a discussion of campaign proceedings following. Mr. B. C. Sisler was in the chair and last minute plans for the campaign which is to open on March 11th were thoroughly discussed. The objective of the local campaign has been set at $3,500 and Mr. Sisler was confident that the results attained would permit the Salvation Army to carry on in the present war, the splendid services offered overseas men during the last great conflict.

Always Ready to Serve

The peace-time efforts of this world-wide service organization are almost as important as its efforts among the soldiers as is evinced by their invaluable services at times of national calamities, providing food and shelter to the survivors of mine disasters, fires and floods. Through their League of Mercy they visit penitentiaries, hospitals and sanitariums sit by the dying and lonely, walk many a condemned man the last long mile. Another service given by the Salvation Army is feeding transients and the unemployed, and also they are doing splendid service among first offenders and young lads who get into trouble in the courts. Many of these have been paroled by the magistrate in the Army's care and in many cases have been completely reclaimed and rehabilitated by being given a job and a chance to make good.

Work in Wartime Praised

The wartime service of the Army, however, will be best remembered by ex-service men, as it is certainly not difficult for these men to feel warmly toward the Salvation Army whose fine work during the Great War is recalled with a profound sense of gratitude. Rev. C. T. Olmstead of the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church is an ex-service man who is loud in the praise of the work done by the Army among Canadian soldiers in France during the last war. Rev. Olmstead left New Brunswick for overseas with the 26th Battalion and was stationed in France, being wounded in the battle of Vimy Ridge. No praise can be too high for the services rendered by the Army to Canadian soldiers overseas says Rev. Olmstead as he recalls the hospitable huts of the Salvation Army, always identified by the famous Red Shield where they always received a cheerful welcome and from whose doors no tired or hungry soldier, day or night, was ever turned away uncomforted.

Cheque for $200 Given To Mrs. William Conley

Everything is hunky-dory in the Conley family of Shannonville today.

For last night in the Capitol theatre, Mrs. William Conley was selected by the audience to be the person to offer her photograph to the management on the occasion of the regular Wednesday "Foto-nite." Mrs. Conley will receive a cheque for $200.00 when she offers her photograph to Manager Tommy Mascaro next Wednesday night.

Not so fortunate was little "Nicky" Barrett, Pinnacle Street. "Nicky" was hard at study doing his homework and failed to hear his name selected at the theatre. Had he been in attendance he would have been offered $170.00.

TRUCK DRIVER, OWNER FINED

Lonsdale Man Fined $25 for Failure to Remain at Scene of Accident

After they had apprehended a truck driver on a charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident, Provincial Police were mistaken for thieves and halted by a mistaken property owner on the fourth Concession of Tyendinaga last evening. Provincial Constables D. Adair and S. Ervine were returning to Belleville with Gerald McVicker, Lonsdale truck driver in custody, when a farmer appeared on the highway blocking the road with a 12-foot rail.

Later the farmer was identified as Leo Welch and he assured the police he had seen flashlight signals at the rear of his property and believing robbers to have been working under the cover of darkness, Welch prepared to stop the supposed robbers. However, the constables assured Mr. Welch that nothing had been stolen in that vicinity.

Today in police court, held here before Magistrate E. J. Butler K. C., McVicker pleaded guilty to a charge of failing to remain or returning to the scene of an accident in which he was previously involved. Thomas Nash, also of Lonsdale and owner of the truck, faced a charge of permitting a truck to be driven with a greater load width than 96 inches.

Both men pleaded guilty, McVicker being fined $25.00 and costs and Nash $5.00 and costs. The charges were preferred by Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine while Acting Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson conducted the prosecution.

Police alleged, that a truck load of wood driven by McVicker had sideswiped a Toronto moving van, driven by Jack Schwandt and although Schwandt had given chase and overtook McVicker, the latter is said to have refused to accompany the moving van driver to Belleville.

McVicker drove his loaded truck north out of Shannonville, the accident having occurred east of that village early last evening.

THREE TEAMS ON ICE IN TRENT VALLEY MIX-UP

Stirling and Madoc Teams Appear for Play-Off Game at Norwood

(By Arthur Duncan)

Stirling, March 7th (Special) — Two play-off games were played to packed houses in the Trent Valley Hockey League. The largest crowd of the season saw Campbellford defeat Tweed 6-5 in Campbellford and in Norwood an equally large crowd gathered to see Stirling and Norwood play. Instead they saw their home team play and defeat Madoc 8-0, while the eager red-clad Stirling squad acted as spectators. The whole event climaxed a long series of telephone calls, protests and league meetings.

Rulings Discarded Under Pressure

Recently the league executive met to deal with a protest against the Madoc club. After due consideration it was decided to disregard points and league standing of four low teams and give them all a chance to gain fourth place. Norwood, Tweed and Campbellford were definitely the three leaders. To decide fourth position the meeting ruled, that Stirling meet Frankford, Madoc meet Marmora and the winner to meet to decide fourth place. Last Monday this ruling was set in motion with Stirling defeating Frankford and Madoc ousting Marmora. Stirling called Madoc for arrangements for the second series and Madoc said no, they would not meet Stirling, but would go directly into the play-offs.

Teams Gang Up is Claim

Stirling notified the league of Madoc's refusal to meet them and Stirling was given a playoff place in preference to Madoc and notified by letter to meet Norwood in the first game of the semi-finals last night. Following is the letter of instruction received by the Stirling manager Wednesday morning from W. A. Kingston, Secretary of the League.

Tuesday, March 5th.

Earl Fox, Stirling.

Dear Earl:—

You are scheduled to play Norwood in Norwood on Wednesday night. Sabatino of Lakefield will referee.

Yours truly,
W. A. Kingston
(League Secretary).

Norwood received the same information and completed their part of the advertising and Stirling prepared for the trip. Then suddenly Madoc, Tweed and Marmora became interested. Madoc also went to Norwood and Tweed, it is said, threatened to withdraw if they were not permitted to play in preference to Stirling.

Three Teams on the Ice

Following official order, Stirling were first to appear on the Norwood rink and were welcomed with plenty of cheers. Norwood also appeared to warm up, and then out skated the Madoc team. Neither of the visiting teams would leave the ice until the game was delayed for nearly an hour as managers dashed about phoning first one official and then another. Finally out of the ether came some sort of an order stating that Madoc was to play Norwood and Stirling left the ice.

Stirling with the largest contingent of followers ever to go on the road with them watched from the rink side as Norwood trimmed Madoc 8-0. Meanwhile at Campbellford a packed house saw the local team defeat Tweed 6-5.

Stirling to Protest

Just how the difficulty will be straightened out is hard to say, but the Stirling team feels that they have complied completely with official orders and feel that they have been sadly dealt with—ordered into the play-offs and out vertising bills for the return game vertaign bills for the return game with Norwood are already posted and they feel they are left holding the bag. Had the original league schedule plan been observed Stirling they claim had no chance of the play-offs, but the new ruling made at the most recent league meeting let in even the tail-enders with a possible chance and Stirling was the trailer all season....

Today a formal protest was forwarded to the league executive with a copy of the above written order attached. Whether or not any further action will be taken remains to be seen.

FRANKFORD MAN SUSTAINS INJURY

Lewis Maston, of Trenton, who is employed at the Bata Shoe Combadly bruised leg when a large box of machinery fell on his left leg at the Bata Shoe factory yesterday. Maston was removed to the Belleville General Hospital where Dr. G. S. Cronk attended. No fracture resulted, but the knee joint was badly bruised and was swelling to a noticeable degree. Maston was assisting in the unloading of a 500-pound box of machinery when the accident occurred. Fortunately the box did not fall any great distance before it struck the man.

NO CHARGE LAID IN ACCIDENT

Eight-year-old Walter Yateman, of 3 Donald Street, was knocked down and sustained minor bruises when he ran into the side of a moving motor car at the intersection of Donald and North Front Streets yesterday afternoon. The lad was taken to the Belleville General Hospital where Dr. E. G. Kennedy attended and an X-ray disclosed that no broken bones had resulted. The Yateman lad was running across the street when he ran into the side of a motor car. The driver immediately stopped and rendered what assistance was possible and no charges were deemed necessary.

H.N.S. HOLDS MONTHLY MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Holy Name Society was held on Sunday, March 3, in St. Michael's Academy. In the absence of Monsignor Nicholson, Rev. J. J. Collins enrolled the new members present. The arrangements for the Communion Breakfast were completed. The progress and plans for the Spring Festival were discussed, and the outlook seems very promising. With the conclusion of other minor business, an address from Rev. Father Collins brought the meeting to a close.

Charge of Receiving Laid After Probe

After tracking handsleigh runner marks in the snow from the Government Dock to No. 2 St. Paul Street, city police confiscated a 150 pound bag of coal, alleged to have been stolen from the Schuster Co. coal pile, and in addition today charged Arthur Kellar, St. Paul St. with receiving or having in his possession stolen coal, knowing the same to have been stolen. The trial will be held tomorrow.

Early last evening the night-watchman in charge of the Schuster Company coal pile on the government Dock reported to police that a quantity of coal had been stolen. Later Sergeant Arthur Booth and P. C. Taylor tracked the handsleigh runner tracks to St. Paul Street, where they found a 150-lb. bag of coal lying on a handsleigh in a woodshed at Kellar's home, Sergeant Booth today stated. The sleigh and coal were held by police as material evidence. Kellar refused to comment, police added today.

DUTCH SUBMARINE RAISED TO SURFACE

No Sounds Are Heard From Two Warrant Officers and Cook Trapped in Craft

Den Helder, The Netherlands, March 7—(AP)—The Netherlands submarine P-11 was raised today by three derrick ships 26 hours after being rammed and sunk by a tugboat in the Nieuwe Diep.

Rescuers heard no signals from the two warrant officers and a cook who were trapped in the craft. The remainder of the crew of 30 reached safety soon after the accident.

The submarine was towed to a berth in the harbor to be pumped out.

DISTRICT DEPUTY VISITS LODGE

Hilton McCartney of Wellington, Welcomed by Moira Lodge

The visit of the District Deputy Grand Master, Mr. Hilton McCartney, of Wellington, to Moira Lodge, A.F. and A.M., No. 11., last evening, proved to be a memorable occasion with one of the largest attendances in recent years. Mr. McCartney expressed himself as well satisfied with the work of the lodge, after witnessing a degree ceremony.

In the banquet which followed, Mr. McCartney reviewed the progress of Masonry in the district and throughout the world. He cautioned the members not to be content with their great and ancient heritage and pride of achievement, but to strive continuously to maintain the high standards set in years passed.

The musical program at the banquet was of a high order, with several fine selections by Aselstine's Orchestra, a series of realistic imitations on the violin and vocally by Mr. Fred Stone, who has won acclaim on the radio, and other numbers.

It was announced that Moira Lodge had accepted an invitation to pay a fraternal visit to Temple Lodge, Oshawa, on Tuesday, March 19th., the members and visitors proceeding by bus and private cars.

WAR BRIEFS

Tokyo, March 7—(AP)—Domei, Japanese news agency, reported today a French vessel had halted the Japanese ship Bangkok Maru off Haiphong, French Indo China, and confiscated 110 letters.

The Japanese Foreign Office said it had no official information but that such action was contrary to international law and it was awaiting a report.

x x x

London, March 7—(CP)— The Daily Sketch today criticized the United States for giving "back door" service to Germany and urged Americans to "really keep out of the tortuous and tortured" affairs of Europe.

"The decrease in the volume of exports from the U.S.A. to Germany since the war seems to approach the increase in American exports to Russia by way of Vladivostock," the newspaper declared.

Copenhagen, March 7—(AP)—Advices reaching here today said 21 persons, including 16 children refugees on their way to Sweden, had been killed when two trains collided yesterday at Iittala, Finland, between Hameenlinna and Tampere.

The coach in which the children were riding was said to have overturned and caught fire.

London, March 7 (CP)—Home Secretary Sir John Anderson told the House of Commons today that Prince Frederick of Prussia was granted exemption from internment and special restrictions last November 1 by the West of Scotland Aliens' Tribunal.

Prince Frederick is a grandson of the former Kaiser. He was in Britain when war was declared.

London, March 7 (C.P. Cable) Labor Minister Ernest Brown announced in the House of Commons today that 21,349 persons thus far have claimed exemption from military service as conscientious objectors.

Of 8327 heard to date by local tribunals, 1070 have been registered as conscientious objectors, 3738 were registered on condition they undertook national service, 2040 were classified for non-combatant duties in armed forces, and 1479 were removed from the register of objectors.

Rotterdam, The Netherlands, Mar. 7 (AP)—An empty life raft and some wreckage bearing the name Grutto found in the North Sea today were interpreted as evidence of the loss of the 920-ton Netherlands freighter Grutto with a crew of 18.

The Grutto, in regular service between England and the Netherlands, left London Tuesday and was due here yesterday.

Paris, March 7 (AP)—Frenchwomen now may marry soldiers or sailors in absentia and even after the death of the intended husband.

This decree in the official journal stipulated, however, that the man must express his intention to wed before he dies.

It is designed to legitimize children and facilitate widows' pensions.

Junior Clubs Raise Standards On Farms Says Lynn Fair

Grain and Farm Animals in County a Great Deal Better Since Clubs Organized

STIRLING AN EXAMPLE

Standards of grain and farm animals in Hastings County gradually are being raised as a result of the work of the Department of Agriculture through the Junior Clubs, Mr. Lynn Fair, county agricultural representative, told members of the Men's Club of Bridge Street United Church last evening. At present there are three grain clubs, two calf clubs, one swine club and one foal club in the county, comprised of boys from 12 to 20 years of age. Similar clubs for girls taught the rudiments of domestic farm life, including sewing and home canning.

Mr. Fair outlined the development of the boys' and girls' clubs, which originated in Western Canada under the direction of the railways. The idea then was to introduce a measure of mixed farming, particularly in the raising of hogs. By 1931 this work had progressed to the point where other provinces became interested, resulting in the formation of the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club Work. In nine years the total number of clubs in Canada had expanded to 2,900, with some 40,000 boys and girls enrolled.

Operated Under Institute

The girls' clubs are operated under the Institute Section of the Department of Agriculture. For home gardening, seeds are supplied at cost and the instruction carried through each step, including home canning processes.

It is surprising, said Mr. Fair, the number of farm homes without sufficient Winter vegetables, mainly because of the lack of understanding of preservation methods. The girls club work was working towards the correction of this situation.

Dealing with the work of the boys' clubs, Mr. Fair took as an instance the Stirling Grain Club. At the outset the boys attended a short course in Stirling and were told the methods of raising good grain. They became interested in a new type of oats developed by the Department of Agriculture, which is rust resistant, called Erban, a cross between Earlyripe and the old Banner oats. Among the boys, Ralph Campbell of Foxboro, had purchased a bushel of registered Erban seed and planted it on an acre of ground. He secured 40 bushels from that one acre and the oats had been entered at the provincial Winter Fair, winning first prize in a class of 44 entries.

Encouraged to Keep Accounts

The boys, said Mr. Fair, are encouraged to keep account books so that they have a good knowledge of the cost of raising a bushel of grain, or a calf. For each type of club a manual setting forth essential information is given each boy. During the season frequent meetings are held of each club, usually at a grain plot or barn, where problems are discussed.

In the instance of the Stirling Grain Club, it has the sponsorship of the Stirling Agricultural Society, which donates one-third of the annual Achievement Day prize money, the province and Dominion donating the other two-thirds. Judging of the results of the boys' efforts was not confined to the product but included other factors which ensured fair treatment for all.

The manner in which Boys' Club work helped to raise farm standards was instanced by Mr. Fair in the case of one farmer who purchased from one of the boys a bushel of registered Erban Oats. He harvested 55 bushels from one acre. After thoroughly cleaning the seed, last year he planted 20 bushels on ten acres and harvested 60 bushels to the acre in spite of the dry season.

Mr. Fair was introduced to the Men's Club by Mr. Lyle Hunter, while Mr. Howard Clarke expressed appreciation for the instructive address. A count of those present showed that more than 50 per cent. had been born on farms.

BOY SENDS WORD TO POLICE TO COME AND GET HIM

Toronto, March 7—(CP)—Operators at a taxi office had an unusual request from a 17-year-old boy who visited them shortly after midnight.

"I stole a car," the lad said. "Will you please call No. 6 police station and tell them I am here." Then he sat down and awaited the arrival of officers.

Arrested on a charge of theft, the boy gave his name as Humphrey Holloway, 17, and said he had no home.

RULING EXPECTED ON QUESTION OF VOTING ON LEAVE

Flying Officer C. E. Wilmot, Candidate at Brantford, Fears Active Service Vote Will be Reduced, as Result of Soldiers' Leaves of Absence

Ottawa, March 7 (CP)—A statement is expected shortly from the chief electoral officer, Jules Castonguay, on the subject of Active Service electors who are on leave casting a vote for the forthcoming Dominion election, it was learned today.

A Defence Department spokesman, commenting on a charge made by Flying Officer C. E. Wilmot of the Royal Canadian Air Force at Brantford, Ont., a National Government candidate, that leaves would result in reduction of the Active Service vote, said it was not believed that leaves would interfere with Active Service voting.

Where Soldier on Leave May Vote

A soldier on leave, it was said, may cast his vote with any unit he is near while absent from his own place of service.

The spokesman said the order to grant leaves of two weeks at the discretion of the Commanding Officers to Active Service men who have served six months or more, was promulgated last October and in some units it developed the six months' period was up between March 10 and April 10.

Active Service men in Canada vote between March 18 and 23 under Active Service voting regulations. Military authorities are in charge of taking the vote and forwarding the special ballots to special returning officers who supervise the vote counting at Halifax for Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia; at Ottawa for Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba; and at Edmonton for Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

CONSCIENCE URGES MAN TO RETURN STOLEN MONEY

Holdup Man Writes Letter to Say He Had Been Drinking and Was Sorry

DENIES INTENTION

Toronto, March 7 (CP)—A conscience stricken holdup man today returned $14 he had taken from Louis Tsafaroff in a holdup at the latter's restaurant early yesterday.

Tsafaroff said he had received a letter and the $14, presumably from the man who had held him up. The letter was unsigned but there were initials on the back of the envelope.

"The man said he had been drinking and was sorry," Tsafaroff said.

Two hours after the holdup yesterday Tsafaroff received a phone call the caller stating he was a brother of the holdup man and offered to return the money. Last night a man called the office of The Daily Star and told an editor that he was going to send the money back.

No "Honest Intention" of Holdup

"I am the person who held up the restaurant at Yonge and St. Clair," the man said. "I feel terrible." He said he and another youth had been drinking and were "feeling pretty good."

He said he happened to remark to his friend: "What do you say if we hold this place up?"

He "honestly" had no intention of staging a holdup but when he went inside and asked the man at the cash register how much money the man had, the "first thing I knew he was handing me some money." He said he didn't have a [illegible]

30 RUSSIAN TANKS TAKEN AS REDS DRIVE ACROSS ICE

Soviet Army Suffers Heavy Loss as it Attempts to Tighten Siege of Viipuri

FINNS CALL TROOPS

Helsinki, March 7 (AP)—Russian troops seeking to drive across the ice of the Bay of Viipuri to tighten the siege of the seaport of Viipuri suffered heavy losses under the fire of the Finns, the Finnish high command reported today.

More than 30 Russian tanks were destroyed on the ice, the high command said in a communique which stated the invaders 'attacked fiercely' all day yesterday on the northwest of the bay.

"The battle for possession of capes at the mouth of the bay and islands off its northwestern shore continues," it said.

Attacks Repulsed

Elsewhere on the strategic Karelian Isthmus front attacks were repulsed, the army reported, but on the eastern front, it acknowledged a Russian success in the seizure of "a few islands" in Lake Ladoga.

Finland fought to strengthen her army by calling up the class of 1920—mostly youths of 19—and all men of other classes scheduled for re-examination this year or in succeeding years.

Troops on land, the Finnish air force, the navy and coastal defences all were used in actions against the Russians attempting to cross the ice not only in the Bay of Viipuri but the west in the Gulf of Finland.

One such attempt which the Finns repulsed, the communique said, took place off Haapasaari Islands, more than 60 miles southwest of Viipuri.

Finnish Air Force Active

The Finnish air force was particularly active in punishing shelterless Russians on the stretches of ice, the high command saying:

"Our aircraft carried out reconnaissance flights and bombed and machine-gunned enemy units and columns observed on the ice of Viipuri Bay and the Gulf of Finland."

Russians were active in adjacent areas and in northern Finland. One Russian bomber was shot down during the day.

The men called up today for duty included men who previously had been rejected for reasons of health.

The new call to the colors came while the vanguard of the Russian besiegers of Viipuri still were in virtually the same positions they occupied almost a week ago outside the key Karelian Isthmus city.

Afraid of "Pocket"

Military observers expressed belief that the final Red army assault on the depopulated and devastated city was being delayed by failures of Soviet attacks on Finnish lines east and southeast of Viipuri.

Unless the Russians can break through these lines and flank the defenders, these sources said, invading troops entering the city would be in a pocket with Finns on the east, west and north.

This was believed to account for the heavy Russian attacks across the ice of Viipuri Bay and against Finnish positions defending approaches from the east.

Finnish sources denied reports abroad that Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustav Mannerheim, Finland's commander-in-chief, was ill.

Brooklyn Judge Called 'Your Lordship' By Canadian Witness

Courtroom Spectators Unused to Formality of Canadian Court Address

New York, March 7 — (CP)—Considerable amusement was created in a Brooklyn courtroom when a Toronto detective, accustomed to the dignity and formality of Canadian courts, addressed the presiding judge as "Your Lordship."

Testifying yesterday in the trial of Ernest Kahler, Winnipeg boxer, who fought under the name of Ernie Haas and who is charged with the murder of Dr. Walter Engelberg, German consulate attache, last Dec. 5, detective John Nimmo was called to the stand to tell of Kehler's arrest in Toronto Dec. 18.

Judge J. Brancato asked the detective's age.

"Twenty-five, your lordship," said Nimmo.

Defence attorney Leo Healy asked the witness to repeat the statement.

"Twenty-five, your lordship," the detective repeated with emphasis.

Spectators in the courtroom broke into laughter and Healy, when quiet was restored, told Judge Brancato:

"Remember that one, judge."

Later the embarrassed witness referred to the judge, usually addressed in United States courts as "Your Honor," as "Your Worship."

The Brooklyn Eagle took the opportunity to play up Nimmo's well-meaning remark in its front-page account of the trial. It's two-column [illegible] headlined: [illegible]

R.C.A.F. Establishes Hdqts. Staff In London Under Group Capt. Walsh

Major Section of Staff Now in United Kingdom States Defence Department

CLOSE CO-OPERATION

Ottawa, March 7—(CP)—Group Captain George Victor Walsh of Ottawa has been appointed to command the overseas headquarters of the Royal Canadian Air Force and the major section of the new organization now has arrived in the United Kingdom, it was announced from the office of Defence Minister Rogers today.

Group Captain Walsh and his assistants comprise the major section of the headquarters staff, the defence department said. The statement was timed to coincide with a similar announcement in London.

Some members of the new headquarters staff went overseas in advance of No. 110 (City of Toronto) army cooperation squadron to arrange for its reception, accommodation and equipment, the statement said. No. 110 squadron landed in the United Kingdom last week.

"Although closely associated with the historical and significant arrival in the United Kingdom of the first air force unit to proceed overseas on active service, the establishment of an air force headquarters in the old country may be considered as a further indication of the close co-operation prevailing between nations of the British commonwealth," said the minister's statement.

Record Office

The R.C.A.F. war organization has been amended to provide also for establishment of an Overseas Records Office, which will operate with the Overseas Headquarters to meet requirements of the Canadian squadron in England "and of others that will undoubtedly proceed abroad for service in the theatre of war to which they may be assigned."

Mr. Rogers indicated that the Overseas Headquarters will comprise officers, airmen and civilians. Besides the air officer commanding, the establishment provides for staff officers responsible for the training of personnel in air force squadrons, a liaison officer between the R.C.A.F. and the Royal Air Force, and administrative officers responsible for personnel and organization.

Provision has been made for equipment, accountant and medical officers, who will be seconded from the Royal Canadian Army medical corps and dental officers, seconded from the Canadian Dental Corps.

Officers on Staff

Personnel at air force headquarters will include clerks, equipment assistants, motor mechanics and a number of airmen for general duty. The records office will have a personnel of eight, three of whom will be officers and five airmen.

Other officers with Group Captain Walsh of the overseas headquarters staff are: Wing Commander F. V. Heakes, who has been employed for some time as liaison officer for the R.C.A.F. at the Air Ministry in London; Squadron Leader A. P. Campbell, Squadron Leader B. M. Aronson, Flight Lt. C. C. P. Graham, Flying Officer W. H. Schroeder, Flying Officer W. A. Dicks, Pilot Officer E. C. Millar and Pilot Office H. R. V. Massey, son of the Canadian High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, Hon. Vincent Massey.

Group Captain Walsh was born in England and came to Canada at the age of 11. Before his recent departure for England, Group Captain Walsh was acting member of the Air Council for Air Staff.

Nazis May Delay Blitzkrieg and Depend on 'War of Nerves,' Observers' Views Are Cited

Editor of Financial Post Expects Canada May Have to 'Go a Bit Totalitarian'

EXPENSE CURTAILMENT

Windsor, Ont., March 7—(CP)—Floyd S. Chalmers, editor of The Financial Post, told the Windsor Chamber of Commerce in an address today that Canada probably will have to "go a bit totalitarian" itself to assist in the Allied war effort.

"We are fighting for individual freedom and democracy yet it is part of the ruthless paradox of war that even in a war for freedom of action," he said. "The grimmer the war becomes, the more rigid and far-reaching the controls become."

Canadians must realize further demands would be made on their economic existence if Hitlerism was to be banished. Curtailment of "normal, peace-time" expenditures was necessary.

Shrewd military observers were inclined to belief that the Germans would not risk a blitzkrieg this spring but would continue the war of nerves indefinitely, even year after year.

"Germany will match the regimented discipline of her people against the stubbornness of will of our people in the hope that our nerves and our economic system will crack first," Mr. Chalmers said.

Fish Poachers Escape in Snowplane at 85 M.P.H. Over Lake Ice

Snowmobiles and Snowplanes Used in Operations of Poaching, Police State

MANY NETS SEIZED

Thessalon, Ont., March 7 (CP)—A wild ride across Lake Huron, in which one snowplane piloted by police chased another containing alleged poachers, was told today following the largest seizure of fishing nets ever made in this district, 50 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie.

The pursued snowplane—an airplane with the wings dismantled—outdistanced its pursuers by attaining a speed of 85 miles an hour, compared to the 50-mile rate of the other containing Game Warden Wilfred St. John of Thessalon and Provincial Constable James McBain of Bruce Mines.

The chase, however, revealed that poachers are using the snowplanes, as well as automobiles, in their operations. Six days were spent by the officers in pulling up nets from the lake between Drummond, Sulphur and Grant Island.

The nets, which bore no identification marks, were so numerous that no estimate on their footage was available. They were transported here by horse and sleigh.

Police said that they believed the pursued snowplanes contained poachers from the United States side of the lake.

Farmer Killed, Two Wounded, Near Chicoutmi

Chicoutimi, Que., March 7 (CP)—Michael Tremblay, 66, was killed and two others were wounded when a bailiff attempted to make a seizure at nearby St. Ludger De Milot, according to word received here today.

Scant information here said that Albert St. Hilaire was wounded in the lung and Gustave Maltais suffered a leg wound in the affair. Both were taken to hospital at Roberval, where the condition of St. Hilaire was described as serious.

An inquest is scheduled for Roberval tomorrow morning.

Police said the bailiff, J. A. Cote, and several witnesses had gone to the house occupied by Tremblay to make a seizure. An argument [illegible] and developed into the fight [illegible] cost Tremblay his life.

Police Use Tear Gas To Disperse Crowd

Buenos Aires, March 7 (AP) — Police used tear gas today to disperse hundreds of persons seeking to gather around the provincial government house of Buenos Aires in La Plata as President Roberto Ortiz named a federal emergency administrator to rule the province.

Disorders developed in the crowds which had succeeded in surrounding the government house before the police were able to block off the approaches. The president's move came in a situation in which an armed revolt has been threatening.

ANTI-MINE CABLE PROTECTS LINER AGAINTS SUBS

Designed to Exert an Electrical Force Which Would Nullify Attraction of Steel Hull to Mines

"A LOVELY TRIP"

New York, March 7 (AP)—Britain's new 85,000-ton liner Queen Elizabeth, completing one of the strangest maiden voyages in maritime history after running the U-boat gauntlet dropped anchor in the safety of New York harbor today with no visible guns on deck but protected by a mysterious new anti-mine cable.

Observers were at a loss to understand how the cable operated since it surrounded the ship high above the water—with no apparent drop-net into the water for a sweep effect.

Naval experts explained the new protective device against magnetic mines as follows:

The cables although high above the water, were designed to exert an electrical force which would nullify the attraction of the steel hull to the mines, so that they would not rise toward the keel of the vessel.

A member of the crew, asked if he had been afraid of submarines shouted back with a laugh to newsmen in a tugboat along side:

"No they keep away from us!"

The sailor who acted as a long-distance spokesman for the dozen odd crew members visible on deck or at open portholes said it had been a "very nice trip—lovely."

John Barlow Assistant Marine Superintendent of the Cunard-White Star Lines in New York, one of the three persons permitted to board the Queen Elizabeth at quarantine, said that the liner brought only a skeleton crew of between 300 and 400 men and that it was "very nearly finished."

Some of the furnishings, he said, remained to be installed, but the panelwork was completed and the ship's elevators were operating.

Although apparently without guns, the Queen Elizabeth mounted two "pillbox" housings, about five feet high, which may have been used as observation posts to keep a watch against submarines.

25-Year-Old J.D. Profumo M.P.-Elect Youngest in Commons

Northampton, England, March 7 (CP)—J. D. Profumo, Conservative, was returned to the House of Commons for Kettering in a by-election today, polling 17,914 votes against 6,616 for W. Rose, "Anti-War" candidate.

In the general election of 1935, J. F. Eastwood, Conservative, polled 22,885 votes against 21,042 for J. R. Sadler, Labor. There was no Labor candidate in the by-election in accord with the political truce among the major parties affecting wartime by-elections.

Mr. Profumo, who is 25, becomes the youngest member of parliament.

Sharp Increase Reported in Citizenship Applications

Popular Among Aliens Who Before War Had Not Bothered About Changing Allegiance

COURTS WATCHFUL

Ottawa, March 7—(CP)—Canadian citizenship has become popular among aliens who, before the war, were in no hurry to change their allegiance and today naturalization officials reported a sharp increase in citizenship applications.

They estimated that the 375 Canadian court houses where aliens may apply for naturalization, have been receiving applications at the rate of nearly 2,000 a month since the war started.

In addition to direct applications for citizenship there has been a flood of correspondence from foreign-born persons in Canada seeking information as to their status and responsibilities.

Applications received by court clerks are, according to statute, kept on fyle three months before being passed upon by a judge. But in the meantime copies of all applications are registered in the Naturalization branch, Department of the Secretary of State.

Secretary of State Has Power

Once a judge has passed on a naturalization application he sends a copy of his judgment to the Secretary of State. If the Citizenship request has been rejected by the judge the Secretary of State has no alternative but to approve. But if the judge has granted Citizenship the department, if it has other information, has power to disapprove.

Once the application has been accepted and approved the department at Ottawa sends an Oath of Allegiance form to applicant who completes it according to statute and returns it after which he receives his certificate of Naturalization.

In most cases the new applications are from those who, in time of war, desire to secure their right to live in Canada and who, for one reason or another, have neglected this formality.

Many Old Persons Apply

Applications from old residents, some having come to Canada as long as 50 years ago, often are made for the purpose of coming within the scope of the Old Age Pensions Act.

In a recent political speech Justice Minister Lapointe said some countries were urging their Nationals who had migrated to Canada to acquire Citizenship in the Dominion so that their work as enemy agents might be facilitated.

Officials here made no comment as to the extent this reason figured in the increased applications but it was intimated that aliens of this type were unlikely to succeed in obtaining Citizenship.

BRITISH PEOPLE AND BRITISH MONEY IN COUNTRY'S SERVICE

A number of facts stand out in the announcement this week by the British Chancellor of the Exchequer of a loan of three hundred million pounds sterling. There is the question of the size of the loan and there is every likelihood of its being taken up quickly. Issued at par and bearing three per cent it will extend for fifteen to nineteen years.

How Britain's pounds, the great man's wealth and the little man's pennies and shillings are fighting the war for security is apparent in all these financial efforts of the British people. British war savings campaign has brought in a million pounds a day for a hundred days from the citizens with small resources.

Britain is confident in the solid financial resources of the nation and the willingness of the people to make their money fight as well as to fight themselves that it is predicted that many times the amount desired in the new loan could easily be offered.

The loan is smaller than many felt it would be. It is to be the first instalment of the borrowing that will have to be undertaken to meet the expenses in the most costly war in history. As it is the most costly because of the magnitude of the resources involved, the expensiveness of mechanism and entire placing of the whole nation on a practical war basis, the fairly low interest rate will help to bear it more easily.

Throughout Britain the pulse of the nation beats steadily. Every factor that goes into the national fabric is in the war to the end.

One feature of the loan is that the minimum is ten pounds and maximum a thousand pounds. The desire is to have as many as possible small investors.

Britain has a great task and a costly one. She is paying over 27 per cent of the income of the public in taxes to see the war through to victory. That is the spirit of the British.

GREAT EPICS TO BE WRITTEN OF DEEDS OF TODAY

The world loves the great epics of history. There was the Iliad, the story of the fall of Troy, that city of the ancient world situated in Asia Minor not far from the Dardanelles, which has lived from the days of Homer, the Greek, until today. There was the epic of the journeys of Odysseus or Ulysses from the war and his perils by land and sea. A great Roman poet, Virgil, retold the story of Troy in his Aeneid. The Middle Ages produced the heroic Song of Roland and other Chansons and the Morte d'Arthur or the Death of King Arthur.

Some have said that the epic does not suit the modern world. But the Finns prove that view incorrect for they have an epic, called "Kalevala." This work is modern counterpart of the ancient epics and in its story of the past is a very symbol of the freedom-loving Finland of today. Deeds of sheer bravery and with color which would rival the Iliad's tale of battles, have been fought in these days and there remains for some great artist to arise in future days to tell in an epic the story of the defence of the republic. The Finns of this age have written a Thermopylae in many a thousand hills and forests.

A deathless story can be told of Poland, which braved the might of Adolf Hitler's mechanized war. That story of sacrifice in those dreadful weeks when the Fuehrer threw the full force of the Teutons against the Republic will not be fully told for generations. But there is a Polish government in Paris, around which the Polish expatriates and Polish aspirations will gather and when the Poles return from their exile undertaken rather than endure the German yoke, and when the people are restored to their lands, then will begin to be told that story in song of how the Poles bore the onslaught of the Nazis and after tribulations returned to happiness.

A story of the valor of the citizenry and soldiery of Britain and France undertaking the most gigantic tasks for the sake of the freedom of the world from Hitler's mad dream of a Teutonic world empire will be told in song and in epic generations hence. That will be the great story of the people of Western Europe who are destined to hurl back the armed battalions of the Germans and to usher in a day of world peace and security.

The story of this age, called upon for the greatest sacrifices in a world which should have been happy but for the resurgence and revival of brutal barbarism in the enemies of liberty, will be told in a happier state when men and women and children and nations will be enjoying the fruits of the sacrifices and achievements of today. The world will pass through this fire to a happier and warless era, because democracies fought against the aggressor Hitler who symbolizes everything which the world would avoid and everything which civilization has tried to weed out.

The epic writers, the song-writers, the poets and the novelists of that coming day will make poetry and music out of the discords which today jangle out of tune the sounds of harmony of which mankind is capable.

Meanwhile today in every city, town and hamlet in the broad countryside, in factory and in the air, on the seas and in the fortifications and trenches in many lands people are doing the deeds of heroes. Today the people are making the songs and epics for the future and the elements of that civilization at which democracies aim.

WHEN TEMPERATURE IS AT 32 DEGREES

There is one point on the thermometer which always sends a shiver into the spine —zero. Toward spring, however, the point most of interest is 32 degrees above that zero. It is the point at which snow and ice become water. So in the springtime 32 degrees above is regarded favorably though the same temperature in the late autumn causes concern as it then means the dip into the cold winter season.

This week there has been a variety of weather, the gloomy days with snow which is almost rain and snow which is accompanied with rain, weather associated with sunlight, warmth and disappearing banks of snow, sidewalks in some places clearing of the last ice formation but covered in other places with slush, water and ice, and associated with roads in better condition than usual and with traces in many spots of the solid roadbed because of the use of the snowplough after snowfalls; mildly blustery snowstorms which do not succeed in blocking the roadways.

This week so far the weather has been pivoted somewhere about that point of 32 degrees.

This type of weather helps to pass the time until the official opening of spring even if one sometimes has the dread that we may "pay up for it later" with a delayed springtime.

March has so far been gentle and lamblike as it was in the first days of the month. Heating in the homes is not so difficult, furnaces and stoves do not have to be pushed to the extreme as in zero weather. There have been no disturbances and damage caused through heavy hail or water-soaked snow freezing on wires and disrupting communications. The services have been very exact and have been always ready this month, for that matter during all this winter. No one can condemn the winter of 1939-40 on that score. It has been very agreeable.

But while agreeable weather has faced this part of the continent, most of the rest of North America has labored with great storms, tempests, snow blockades, and intensely cold temperatures in sections ordinarily very mild or even warm in wintertime. For the fine weather, outside of the severe cold after the turn of the year, the people of Ontario have had every reason to be happy. The winter will not be forgotten in those places where it brought severe hardship, even causing deaths and being responsible for great suffering in homes not prepared against the contingency of freezing temperatures. But in this clime homes are built for summer and winter, foundations are sturdy and the use of fuel is necessary. Hence cold never surprises us here and causes few hardships because we are prepared.

In these days when the sun will be climbing higher in the heavens, the weather will be a favorite topic and the thermometer and its readings will not be forgotten. The climb up from the ice time of the winter to the days when the mercury does not dip below the freezing line constitutes one of the happiest periods of the year as all look to spring.

R.A.F. Flights Over Germany

London, March 7—(CP)— When men of the Royal Air Force return from a reconnaissance flight over Germany their job is by no means complete. They submit to an examination by an intelligence officer who wants all the answers— and then some.

One plane had just returned from Bremen when the men were confronted by the man with his little red book. He wanted the "dope" for his report to bomber command headquarters. Time of the plane's flight over Bremen and its height were recorded along with information about the German blackout and searchlight activity.

"Where were the searchlights?" he asked. "Where did you run into anti-aircraft fire?"

He got all his information but the crew waited around for a bomber that had taken off with it and had not returned from a flight over Hamburg. On the tarmac, an ambulance and the fired tender were parked side by side. A few minutes later came news of the plane and the squadron leader calculated time of its arrival.

The service doctor arrived. He or one of his colleagues is always present at the end of one of these flights. Forty minutes later the big bomber landed.

The men reported severe weather, ice on the propellers, difficulties in the pilot's oxygen supply. His hand had become slightly frost-bitten when he removed his glove to adjust the apparatus.

Miss E. M. B. Warren will address the Women's Canadian Club to-morrow evening.

Rev. C. G. Smith of Montreal, formerly pastor of the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, is spending a short time in the city and is the guest of Mr. W. B. Riggs.

If the country editor were to snap at all the inducements held out to him he would soon become a millionaire. If he ran a paper according to the popular notion he would be in the poor house. If he published all the items that were sent to him he would be in jail half the time and in the hospital the other half.

Mr. D. V. Sinclair celebrated yesterday his 25th. anniversary of commencing business on his own account in Belleville. He received the hearty congratulations of many friends. To mark the occasion in a worthy manner and to show his deep appreciation of the loyalty and faithful service of the staff, Mr. Sinclair distributed Victory Bonds to the value of $2500. among the eighteen employees in proportion to years of service. His liberality was greatly appreciated by the members of the staff.

30 YEARS AGO

MARCH 7th., 1910.

While no great damage was done by the ice shove which occurred yesterday afternoon and at an early hour this morning, considerable inconvenience was experienced by merchants on the west side of Front Street and on Bridge Street by water in the cellars putting out the fire in furnaces. The river is now clear of ice from the city limits to Lazier's mill at Cannifton. Above the latter point there is still considerable ice to come down. During the shove yesterday afternoon the flume at Ald. Lott's dam was carried away. Much merriment to onlookers was caused by the way some pedestrians slipped off the pontoon bridge in the footbridge gangway.

Unhealed Wounds in France Where R.A.F. Quartered

(This is one of a Canadian Press series written during a visit to Royal Air Force stations behind the Maginot Line.)

By PAT USSHER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in France, March 7—(CP)—War is casting its shadow anew over this countryside which still bears the marks of the last war. A stone wall in one French town retains the shell holes of the First Great War. Nearby is the operations headquarters of a Royal Air Force command.

Along the roads of eastern France at frequent intervals are camouflaged airdromes with trees skilfully arranged to conceal the planes stationed there.

At frequent intervals, too, are military cemeteries with row upon row of stone crosses, recalling the millions who died between 1914 and 1918. One of those cemeteries contains a section devoted to the graves of Polish soldier who fought under the French tricolor. It reminds the passerby that two decades later an invasion of Poland was the spark that set alight the new conflagration.

The trees are mostly small through this part of the country. They have had only 22 years in which to grow. Old trenches still remain in some wooded areas and occasionally sections are fenced off. They are old amunition dumps with so much explosive remaining that people are forbidden to go there.

Stand of 1914-1918

A hilltop commanding the surrounding countryside has been a mecca for visitors since 1918. Here was a French fort which never yielded to the German invaders even though for a time the enemy occupied all the territory in that region.

On the edge of the road running past the remains of the fort is a German tank—left exactly where it was halted more than 20 years ago. In a nearby field is another. Both led vain attempts to capture the fort.

Along that same road today rumble modern French army tanks, steel monsters symbolic of the ugliness of the mechanized warfare of the 1940s.

English Homes Are Beckoning For Canadians

(Extent to which Britain's hearts and homes are being opened to Canada's soldiers is indicated in the following article by Miss Mary Goldie of Galt, Ont., who is attached to the Victoria League Club for Men of the Overseas Forces).

Written for The Canadian Press

By MARY GOLDIE

London, March 7—(CP)—Canadian soldiers are learning that the warmth of English hospitality is a fine antidote to the raw bitterness of the Island's damp winter climate.

The boys who crossed the Atlantic to help in the Empire's defence of freedom are finding the "reserved" English actually can teach them something about hospitality.

Into the office of the Victoria League Club where I work invitations pour daily from people who are eager to take these men into their homes without question and provide them with good meals, warm baths—in fact everything from tea parties, luncheon parties and sherry parties to chatty evenings by the fire, or visits to the theatre or movies after dinner.

The groups invited number anywhere from one or two, to 20 or 50. At our club the men are selected, given directions and sent to their destinations. Even the blackout doesn't seem to hinder them seriously and they nearly always find their way successfully.

It has been a pleasing surprise for some of the Canadian boys who didn't think the English would open their homes to strangers. They hadn't been in London long before they learned their mistake. The people like having them. They like their fresh, breezy ways. They are amused by their accents. But most important of all they admire them for having come over to fight.

Guiding in London

If a man wants to see the sights of London it can be arranged. It isn't easy for one, by himself, to get about London even in peacetime, and a soldier on leave naturally wants to see as much as he can while his spot of leisure lasts. Many Londoners have taken parties sightseeing and one man brought his car—this in the days of petrol rationing—to the Club and took three Canadians to Windsor, Hampton Court and Ascot race track, where they sat in the King's chair on the stand. They told me about it with great excitement, and said they were given a thundering good dinner into the bargain.

The consideration of the hosts and hostesses is sometimes overpowering and amusing. We are asked all sorts of questions: "What do the boys like best to do?" "What do they like to eat?" "Do they like eating at home or should I take them to a restaurant?" The last question is the easiest to answer, because the young Canadian away from home shows a great preference for private entertaining and asks us for invitations to private houses.

They feel the need of this home atmosphere. They enjoy sitting about the fire, smoking, chatting. And there is absolutely no end to the amount of trouble the English are taking to make them feel at home.

Weekend Hospitality

Such a varied assortment of invitations comes into the office that it is sometimes difficult to sort them out. There are several "standing orders" for Saturdays or Sundays, for lunch or tea. One man at Richmond has two boys each Sunday for lunch and then takes them sightseeing.

And if they have to ask what Richmond is before they go, they know it is an eye-filling Park district on the Thames when they return.

People of all types are entertaining the men. Poor people, rich people, people with only small flats, people with large houses. Acceptance of one invitation usually means others will follow, for the hosts have other people in to meet the men and so the ball of hospitality keeps rolling.

They haven't time to be lonely, these Canadian soldiers. If they do feel that way, they are partly to blame. One boy told me he didn't want to go to any parties because he feared he would get roped into something dull. It was his ill luck. I think how he is lonely—but he needn't be.

Some Things Free

There are free theatre tickets, free concert tickets, free zoo tickets, free dance tickets—all provided through the kindness of English people. A Canadian on leave came into the office for writing paper to refuse invitations; he had so many he couldn't cope with them all.

"It's wonderful the way the people here are doing these things for us," he told me.

The English hospitality means a great deal to the men and it means a great deal to the hosts. It is of vital importance in drawing Canada and English closer together and getting the two peoples better acquainted.

The men never miss saying how much they appreciate it. And they are doubly thankful for the fact that when they come on their next leave they have friends to see.

Yes, the "old country" English are showing the overseas Canadians something about hospitality.

Bob-White Quail

"What's the difference between quail and hungarian partridge?" asked a hunter of some experience who called at the office the other day. We showed him pictures of both, and he immediately stated, quite mysteriously, "they were hungarian partridge." It appears that he and a friend were motoring along a country road within a few miles of the city the previous day when they came across a flock of about twelve or fourteen birds feeding on the roadway which they recognized as either quail or hungarian partridge, but did not know enough about either to be able to identify them.

We were discussing the recent pheasant shoot with a well-known sportsman at a meeting we attended a few nights ago, and he told us this one. He had recently purchased a springer pup and was quite enthusiastic about its possibilities in the hunting field. A farmer friend whose place he visited during the hunt told him that there were quite a number of woodcock located in an area behind his farm. He started off in that direction and on the way met a couple of hunters coming from the location. "Did you raise any woodcock in here?" he enquired. "What are they like?" queried one of the men. My sportsman friend had already shot one so he took it out of his bag and showed it to them. "Is that what they are," one of the men exclaimed, "why, we raised at least a dozen of them on the way over."

There appears to be a great deal of confusion in the minds of many of the younger or less experienced hunters when it comes to identifying the various species of the smaller upland game birds. To many, quail, hungarian partridge, woodcock and snipe are but names, for they have either not had the opportunity of bagging any, or have not been keenly enough interested to learn their physical characteristics. These birds, of course, are not as plentiful as we could wish them to be, and open seasons are not general, therefore there is some excuse for the city sportsman not being familiar with them.

The Bob-White-Quail — with which this article deals, is, we are told by ornithologists, not a quail at all, but a partridge. This information is nothing to worry about, for this gamey little bird is known as a quail by sportsmen all over the continent, and any any other name would but lead to confusion and add nothing to its sporting qualities.

The colouring of the quail is quite varied. The top of the head is reddish, with the sides of the neck and throat white, while a black band extends backwards beneath the eye within the white. The fore part of the back, the sides and front of the breast, are a dull, pinkish red. The sides of the body and parts of the wing are brownish red. In the female the white markings of the head are replaced by brownish yellow; the black ones with a brownish colour.

The quail is a ground nesting bird and likes to set up its home on low lands, which it does late in April or early in May. The eggs are small, but the nest will probably contain from twelve to twenty, and the little mother is very faithful during the incubation period. The young birds are very active, and are able to run about and follow their mother almost as soon as hatched. The mother usually raises a second brood, and these invariably unite with the first in the autumn. The whole family, if undisturbed, will remain together until next Spring, when they separate in pairs to take up housekeeping for themselves. During the breeding season the male bird frequently mounts a stump or fence and re-assures his mate with a two-tone staccato whistle which sounds like "bob-white," hence the name.

Because of the fact that they roost upon the ground as a family, quail are probably subjected to more dangers than most game birds. They spend the night sitting in a circle, heads out and tails to the centre, generally in the weedy edge of some swale where they are afforded protective covering. This circle formation enables them to keep a watch on all quarters for enemies, and adds to their warmth during the winter. The arrangement, however, is not without its weaknesses, one of which is the hazard of being covered by drifting snow, and this, if followed by a partial thaw usually forms a crust which imprisons them and frequently results in death from hunger. Natural enemies also take advantage of this manner of roosting, the chance of destruction being greater than if only one bird was involved.

As an aid to agriculture the quail occupies a leading place so far as game birds are concerned. The United States Biological Survey has made a very thorough investigation of the food-habits of the bob-white, and found that its economic value as a destroyer of insects and weed seeds is very high. A list of the contents taken from a large number of stomachs examined looks like an inventory of the insect world and includes such destructive species as potato beetles, cucumber beetles, wire worms, weevils, locusts, grasshoppers, chinch bugs, squash bugs and caterpillars.

Two-score years ago quail were fairly common in southern Ontario, but a multiplicity of causes has contributed to reducing the population, although they are still to be found in reasonable numbers in many western counties and in certain eastern areas.

As a game bird the bob-white commands a great deal of respect from the sportsman. Although comparatively small it is very hardy and is able to stand severe cold weather if food is available. The Biological Survey says: "Winter cold—unless unusually severe—and preying enemies, hold few terrors for the well-fed bob-white, or quail. Neither does snow so long as the bird can find food above the snow line. It is only when the food supply is scanty or covered with snow so that the birds cannot get to it that winter is likely to take heavy toll. The well-fed quail lives through cold that may finish half-starved birds. With an adequate food supply the birds are alert and keep out of the way of enemies, a-wing and on foot. With food available near good cover, the birds do not need to take dangerous chances and can thus escape foxes, racoons, and other furry predators, also the few hawks and owls that are quail-killers when they have the opportunity."

Sportsmen who are interested in this game little bird, and farmers who recognize its worth as an aid to agriculture, may play an important part in its conservation and development, by seeing that it is not decimated through lack of food during severe wintry weather. To quote once more from the Survey publication: "The best way to feed quail is by encouraging wild growth or planting crop seeds in steeps or patches to be left unharvested. But if there is a scarcity of this sort of feed, farmers and sportsmen can help the birds through a bad season by scattering harvested grain where the birds can get it. Heads of sorghum, and fodder corn, will be used with less waste than threshed grains. Hang ear corn on fences. It is a mistake to encourage quail to come to the barnyard to pick up scatterings of grain. It is better to take the grain to the natural cover in which the birds are wintering. Bob-whites and poultry do not mix well. Each is likely to contract diseases from the other."—Monthly bulletin Dept. Game and Fisheries.

Control of Sinus Disease

As medical students, the commonest joke about the profession was that we should all be skin specialists because the skin patient did not arouse the specialist at night, his skin ailment never killed him, and the ailment never got better.

A few years later, the joke was that we should all be ear, nose, and throat specialists in a temperate climate where everybody has some nose, throat, sinus, or ear trouble, the best location being, perhaps, the Great Lake region. It was about this time that operations on the turbinate bones in the nose, straightening the septum of the nose, and opening up the sinuses by surgery— inside and outside—were very common.

What about sinus operations today?

In speaking about the control of nasal sinus disease, Dr. Lewis J. Silvers, New York, in Ear, Nose and Throat Monthly says

"Sinus disease has challenged our best efforts towards its removal during the past ten years. Surgery, electrosurgery, physical therapy (heat and electricity), change of climate, treatment of allergic conditions, and the prevention and care of infections of nose and throat have all contributed somewhat to the removal of the ravages of sinus disease. Today we rarely perform radical disfurguring sinus operations. The use of electrosurgery— knife heated by electricity which prevents infection and bleeding—with Xray and ultra-short wave treatment, has done much for the removal of infections that are deep seated and hard to reach".

Dr. Silvers states that with each treatment by the electric knife or needle to the swollen turbinate bones which are blocking the nose, the heat of the instrument not only stirred up a healthy activity of the normal cells but destroyed many harmful organisms.

Daily War Survey

Italian annoyance at British interference with movement of German coal to Italy by sea injects a new factor into the European diplomatic situation. For the first time since hostilities started, a gradual trend of Italian sentiment away from Germany and towards the Allies appears to have been interrupted.

Whether this is a real interruption or merely one of the diplomatic gestures most neutral countries adjacent to the warring powers must make from time to time in order to keep up an appearance of impartiality may become clear in the next few days. The somewhat restrained tone of Italian comment on the situation is encouraging.

Although not so much has been heard recently about the Anti-Commintern Pact as before the war started, Italy is still bound to Germany by it. The Pact calls for economic cooperation, exchange of information and, in certain events, mutual military assistance. Passive submission to the British blockade when it closes down on importation of such a vital commodity as coal could not be construed in Germany as anything other than a repudiation of Italy's friendship pact with Germany.

The Fascist regime apparently is not ready for that yet. So a vigorous protest and an actual attempt to defy the blockade and move coal is the least that is called for.

On the other hand Italy is committed firmly to a policy of peace and has been doing everything possible to keep the peace in the Mediterranean area and the Balkans. A direct clash with the Allies never has been invited and, unless Italian policy has changed, it is not wanted now.

Thus there is reason for the view that Italy simply wants to put the whole blame for stopping coal exports on Great Britain and satisfy Germany that everything possible is being done to keep the trade moving. When that is done Italy may accept British coal in place of German.

$25,000 Damages Asked for Finger Tip Bitten by Zoo Wolf

Pittsburgh, March 7 (AP) — A physician today asked $25,000 damages from the city for his daughter's loss of a part of a finger which he claimed was bitten off by a caged timber wolf in the Highland Park Zoo.

Dr. L. W. Corbett, member of the staff of the U.S. Veterans Hospital, claimed the city was negligent in failing to provide a railing to keep persons away from the cage.

He requested $10,000 for himself and $15,000 for the girl.

CONSCRIPTION CALLED FAILURE IN LAST WAR

Hon. Dr. Manion Claims Liberal Policy Seeks to Destroy National Unity

WIFE BROADCASTS

Sherbrooke, Que., March 7—(CP)—National unity, in the words of Conservative leader Manion, is essential to Canada, especially in wartime, and is "doubly important" to Quebec."

Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Justice Minister Lapointe are seeking to destroy such unity, Dr. Manion charged here last night in his first election address in Quebec province.

Dr. Manion, who spoke before 2,000 persons, left later for Saint John, N.B., where he will deliver an address tonight.

Charging that for years the Liberal party had succeeded in keeping Quebec as a "strong political bloc," Dr. Manion said that for political purposes Mr. King and Mr. Lapointe were ready to split Canada, to cut Quebec off from the remainder of the Dominion. While this was bad for the Dominion as a whole, it was even worse for Quebec.

Opposed to Conscription

Dr. Manion turned to the conscription question and emphasized that he had long since declared his opposition to conscription, even last March in the House of Commons. He had not waited until he got to Quebec to declare his position.

"If I declare myself against conscription now, it is because it was really a failure in the last war," he said.

Discussing Mr. King and the Quebec members of the cabinet, Dr. Manion said:

"Messieurs King, Lapointe, Cardin and Power have long preached in the Province of Quebec that they would not send any Canadian soldier to fight in an external war.

"Have they kept their promise? It does not become them then to pretend that I will not hold to my word."

It was true that he had voted for the union government of 1917 and it was also true that in a book four years ago he had written that conscription was the equitable way of raising an army. But he felt he had as much right as the Liberal leaders to change his opinion, and with as much sincerity.

"Whispering Campaign" Charged

Dr. Manion, who spoke first in French and then in English, charged that the Liberals had started a whispering campaign against him, alleging that with Manion would come conscription.

Earlier in the evening, Mrs. Manion delivered a 15-minute broadcast over a Quebec radio network, in which she reviewed the issues being placed before the electorate by her husband.

She stressed the need for action to meet youth problems and charged that the Mackenzie King government had made no real effort to reach a solution.

Mrs. Manion, too, referred to a whispering campaign, describing it as "most unjust."

He had not resorted to whispers or changing his time to suit his audience, Dr. Manion said. His speeches in Ontario were the same as in Quebec. His words here, for example, were being reported by representatives of Toronto and Montreal papers as well as by a representative of The Canadian Press which flashed reports of his speeches right across the country. What he had to say about his opponents he said from the public platform, not by a systematic whispering campaign.

Thank God for Sane Quebec People

Dr. Manion "thanked God for the good sane people of Quebec," standing against communism and fascism. He reminded his hearers that he had supported the bill introduced a year ago to prevent use of the mails for communist literature, a bill which Mr. Lapointe had not accepted.

Dr. Manion said he had not been able to learn how Canada could remain neutral in a war in which Britain was participating except by declaring Canada's independence from the empire.

Not many people in this part of Canada or any other want independence from the empire, he said.

Fine Response Made to Appeal For Supplies in Aid of Finns

St. Julien and Argyll Chapters I.O.D.E. Send Several Cartons of Clothing to Toronto

MONEY CONTRIBUTIONS

In response to the appeal made by the St. Julien Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire for supplies to be sent to the soldiers in Finland, the result was very satisfactory both in subscriptions in money and comforts, and three large cartons, the contents of which were valued at $175, were shipped, containing the following articles:

From Belleville Chapter No. 55 O.E.S., six pairs of sox, two sweaters, three scarfs; Minerva Chapter No. 138 O.E.S., fifteen pairs of sox, three sweaters and five pairs of wristlets; The Jewish Ladies' Auxiliary, four pairs of sox, four pairs of wristlets and one scarf; Mrs. Charles A. Cameron, three suits of woolen underwear, three flannel shirts, three pairs of sox and three pairs of leather mitts; Mrs. Edward Hogle, Catherine Street, one suit of woolen underwear; Mrs. George Bennett, Donald Street, one woolen blanket; Mrs. Bert Docter, 10 Victoria Avenue, one woolen blanket; Miss Annabelle Docter, one sweater; Miss Bessie Soutar, one pair of sox; St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E., thirty-eight pairs of sox, six pairs of woolen mitts, four pairs of writslets, one scarf and one sweater.

The following contributions in in money were received: The Wisemen's Club $10; Mr. Alf. W. Foster, Yeomans Street, $10; The Knights of Columbus $5.

With the money received the following articles were purchased: Three woolen blankets, woolen underwear and leather mitts.

The members of the St. Julien Chapter appreciate very much the kindness of the donors who came forward so liberally and enabled them to perform this service for the soldiers in Finland.

Members of the Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E. shipped yesterday a large box containing sox, sweaters, wristlets, scarfs, baraclavas, for Finnish relief. A generous gift of cigarettes was also made to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Refuses to Give Her Up Entirely

Dear Miss Fairfax

I became acquainted with a very nice young man a couple of years ago, and we have been seeing each other about twice a month ever since. He never mentioned marriage, or gave me any reason to think he was serious until about three weeks ago. The subject came up and I let him know at once that I did not think seriously of him. He was terribly upset after that, and didn't come over for several weeks.

The other day he called me up and asked to see me. I made a date with him and he explained that he understood how I felt, but would like to be friends with me. He said he loves me dearly and cannot give me up. I want to do what is right in this matter. It is advisable for me to continue seeing him?

Edith

This is one of the most difficult types of love to refuse—the faithful, dogged type that asks only an opportunity to see you once in a while. It seems only kind to grant this, provided the young man's happiness is not increased. Are you quite sure you cannot become more interested in him Such faithful, devoted characters are a little rare in these days.

Wants to "Shake" a Girl Who Follows Him

Dear Miss Fairfax

I've been married for about a year to a lovely girl, and we get along just fine. However, there's one thing bothering me. A certain girl, whom I took out several times before we were married, persists in tagging after me.

I never made love to this girl and never promised to marry her or in any way blighted her young affections. She persists in calling me up, meeting me downtown, and walking several blocks with me. I'm about distracted. How can I get rid of this person?

Happy Husband

Like the constant dropping of water, which will wear away a stone, studied indifference will discourage the most persistent pursuit. As you tell me there is no reason why this girl should continue to stalk you like game in a forest, you might try a little gentle satire, or, better still, introduce her to some shy young man who has never had any flattering attention from girls.

He Suddenly Stopped Calling on Her

Dear Miss Fairfax

In the office where I am employed, I met a very fine young gentleman, who came in to see the boss on business. After we saw each other a few times I fell deeply in love with him, and we went around together a great deal and I thought he cared a lot about me, although he never told me.

All of a sudden he stopped asking me out, and as his business dealings with our office had ceased, I didn't see him for three months. Then one day he called me up again and asked for a date which I gave him, and we've been seeing each other once a week ever since.

He's the type who likes to run around a lot and have a good time, while I am content to sit home evenings reading or listening to the radio. Do you think he could care for me, or would it be better if I made up my mind to go out more? I'd do anything if I thought I could win his love.

Sara

From what you write me, it seems you are more inclined to be serious than he is. He is careful not to commit himself. If you're going to let this affair gnaw your heart and really make you suffer, do you think it will pay? Will you get happiness or unhappiness out of it? That's the question. If you could take this friendship with this man more lightly, get the sweet instead of the bitter, I'd advise you to keep on. But if you're going to be unhappy, what is there in it for you with a man, who, from what you tell me, is a good deal of a wanderer?

Anne Jamison Pleases Sarnia News Critic

Program Rendered by Noted Artist One of Best Ever Heard in That City

Tribute was paid to the artistry of Anne Jamison, soprano, by the Sarnia newspaper following her recital there on March first. Described as one of the best of the Music and Dramatic Association offerings, the concert was rated as the most enjoyable that organization had sponsored since Edward Johnston came to Sarnia some years ago. The report says in part:

"Anne Jamison is not only a first rate vocalist, she is a talented actress and program maker. Her choice of numbers last night encompassed everything from a Bach aria to Victor Herbert's "Sweethearts." Each selection was carefully balanced against the rest. The high spot arrived with Schubert's Doppleganger." This is one of his greatest dramatic songs and it was sung as he himself would have wished it.

"In addition, Miss Jamison sang ten encores including "Coming Through the Rye," the "Musette Waltz" from "La Boheme", "Songs My Mother Taught Me" which was a request and "Reflections of a Nagging Woman" by the early Italian master, Pergolesi. This number by the way, brought the house down. 'It reminds me of home,' one member of the audience was heard to say."

In Sarnia, Miss Jamison sang for the students in the morning to the delight of the assembly.

Miss Jamison will be in Belleville tomorrow. She will give a brief recital for the students and in the evening will be heard in the Collegiate Auditorium under the auspices of the Canadian Concert Association.

PRIZE POEM

THE MUSIC BOX

So frail, yet clear it brings to me
Sweet music that I know—
A melody of old-time tunes
Out of the long ago.

With memories sweet from happy years
They take me down Life's Lane
And I can hear within my heart
An old well loved refrain.

A sweet and haunting melody
It floats upon the air;
It seems to bring a drowsy peace
That settles everywhere.

I lift the lid of memory
From Life's sweet box of song
And drift and dream of lovely things
That gleamed my path along.

Oh, little music box, so dear,
You've brought them back to me;
And they belong to all the things
That God meant me to be.

Those whispering wings of memory
That brush against my heart . . . .
I pray whatever else I lose
My dreams and I won't part.

So, little music box, play on!
Your melodies impart
And bring back joys of other days
To cheer some lonely heart.

Presentation

A large number of friends and neighbours gathered at the Wallbridge Town Hall on Wednesday, February fourteenth, to spend a social time and join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Yorke a very happy and prosperous wedded life since they have taken such an important step in life. Mr. Sam Nicholson acting as chairman called the crowd to order and everyone joined in community singing. After asking Mr. and Mrs. Yorke to come forward Neita Woods read an address which was signed on behalf of Wallbridge Community by Mae Fisher, Frank Phillips, Jack Ketcheson Malcom Clare and Neita Woods.

Muriel and Ken thanked the gathering for their lovely gifts and invited everyone to visit them in their new home. After having some short speeches from different ones in the audience lunch was served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

Nothing tastes so Good as Granny's Buns

THE special treats Grandmother used to make are happy memories for most of us, but the children and grandchildren of Mrs. Carl Ristow of Killaloe, Ontario, have more than memories. Mrs. Ristow can still turn out as fine a baking of bread or batch of buns as you see anywhere. Mrs. Ristow is 70 years "young" and she's been baking bread and buns for 60 years.

—Shows Younger Folks How To Do Things

I met Mrs. Ristow at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Grant of Westmount Avenue, Ottawa. "Mother is wonderful," Mrs. Grant said. "She has thirty-one grandchildren and four great-grandchildren and she can still show us all how to do things."

Good Flour Means Good Baking

"Have you ever had a baking failure, Mrs. Ristow?" I asked. "You don't have baking failures," she smiled, "if you use Robin Hood Flour and make sure the other ingredients are fresh. We all use Robin Hood Flour, and every one of us has had unfailing success with it."

Secret of Baking Success

A wonderful tribute to Robin Hood Flour—and yet it is not surprising. If you could see the choice wheat selected by the millers of Robin Hood; the way that wheat is washed before it is ground; the endless number of times it is sifted through fine silk—then you would understand something of the care taken before the famous Robin Hood all-purpose flour is packed in the bags.

Order Robin Hood flour for your next baking. Each bag contains a money back plus 10% guarantee certificate which guarantees Robin Hood Flour to give you absolute satisfaction or your money back with an extra 10%.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Silver Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I am planning to have a silver wedding anniversary party for my father and mother. I am going to have it at my home and plan to invite only the family and a few of their close friends.

1—Would it be proper to have my husband's name on the invitation or just my name? How should the invitations be worded?

2—To pass the evening we are going to dance. We intend to have a wedding cake. Should the bride cut the cake?

3—Are we supposed to read an address or anything to the bride and groom of twenty-five years?

Daughter

1—Since you are going to invite so few guests, it would be most appropriate for you to write your invitations as notes. These invitations would be written in your name, but in the body of your invitations, you would include your husband's invitation too. Like this:

Dear Dorothy,

My mother and father are going to have their Silver Wedding Anniversary on Tuesday, the first of April, and John and I want to make it a memorable one. So we are planning to have a small party in honor of the occasion, at our house, and invite a few close relatives and friends. It would make Mother and Father very happy, and it would make us very happy, if you and George will tell us that you will both be with us for the celebration. Please say 'yes'. And will you come to our house about eight o'clock.

Love from us all to you two dear friends.

Cordially,

2—Yes, it is a charming custom to have the "bride" cut the cake at this important occasion, just as she did at her wedding.

3—Don't plan to have anything as formal as an "address" or a planned "speech". I think it would be pleasant to have your husband, as host, propose a toast to your mother and father.

Personal Card

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1—When you enclose your personal card with flowers, candies and so forth, should you write a personal message on the card? If so, please suggest a few to include with a corsage, birthday or graduation flowers, and so forth. Is the message written above or below your name, or both?

2—Should the title and surname be crossed out and the message be written in pencil or ink?

3—Should the card be enclosed in an envelope??

D.

1—Either way is correct—your card as is, or with the written message, depending on the circumstances. When we send a wedding present, we usually don't write a message on the card (although we may if we wish), taking it for granted that the fact that the gift is sent at this time carries its own message. Similiarly, if a man sends a girl a corsage to be worn to some party to which she is accompanying him that day or evening, he probably wouldn't write a message on the card. The same thing might be true if he is sending her flowers on the day of her graduation.

But if he is sending flowers or candy for her birthday he probably would wish to write some message of felicitation on his card, such as "Happy Birthday" or "Best wishes and friendliest greetings to you on your birthday", or "May your birthday and all days to come be full of sunny hours and happy ways". The message may be written either above or below the name.

2—The message should be written in ink. And if you write a message on your card, the card automatically becomes a "note", and to a note you don't sign your name with your title. Therefore, you cross out the title. If you are sending the gift to a close friend, then you cross out both the title and the surname. If to a casual acquaintance you cross out only the title.

3.—Yes.

HOLLOWAY ST. W.M.S.

On Wednesday, March 5th., the Holloway St. W.M.S. met in the church parlor. The President, Mrs. Newman, was in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved, business discussed and reports of various committees received.

Mrs. Lloyd's and Mrs. Hyde's group then took charge of the meeting. Mrs. Denton read a paper on "Christian Stewardship" and Mrs. Cordes "Hymn of Peace". A temperance questionnaire was followed by a duet by Mrs. Hagerman and Mrs. Cordes, "Welcome Joyous Easter Day".

Mrs. Clarence Holmes, then gave a most interesting talk "The Miracle of Modern India" based on the Study Book. She spoke of the political unrest of the efforts of the women in all reform movements and the various religions which, if united, would make India, an outstanding force in the world.

The meeting concluded with Hymn 255.

Activities of Women Of Moose Reported By Officers

Senior Regent Mrs. J. Chapman, presided over the regular meeting of the Women of the Moose Belleville Chapter 435 on Tuesday evening in the Moose Auditorium. Recorder Miss Mary Doran read the audit report which was considered very favorable. The chairman, Mrs. C. St. Louis, reported on the membership, and Mrs. E. McGinness on publicity. Mrs. B. Mossman, chairman of Child Care and Training, also reported on the recent euchres. Since the weekly euchres have now been discontinued, Mrs. Mossman was given a vote of thanks in recognition of her services given in the past. Chairman Mrs. G. Ritch gave a splendid report on the Ritual which was most interesting to the listeners.

Considerable knitting was handed in by Mrs. J. Jeffrey of the Homemaking committee to be returned to the Red Cross. The Charter was draped in memory of the late Mrs. Eleanore Caroline Wells, who was a Charter member and the first graduate regent of the Chapter.

It was announced that next Chapter night will be in charge of the Social Service Chairman, Mrs. A. Burk.

Letters of appreciation were read from families who had illness and bereavement.

Miss Mary Doran was the winner of the Sunshine prize. Supper plans were made in connection with the social hour for the next meeting.

Tuller—Hendrick

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Frankford United Church on Saturday, March 2nd when Rita Mae, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Hendrick became the bride of Corporal William E. Tuller, R.C.A.F., Montreal, eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Tuller, Montreal, Quebec.

Rev. J. F. Lane officiated.

The bride wore a heavenly blue crepe dress with matching hat and grey accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Ralph B. Wrightman was her sister's only attendant wearing a dusty rose crepe dress with black accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Mr. Ralph B. Wrightman was best man.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Henry St., Trenton.

Eat Kellogg's All-Bran regularly, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada. Sold by all grocers in two convenient sizes.

TOPSY-TURVY

Most cooks are familiar with fruit upside-down cakes, but here is a popular new version of turning topsy-turvy and still coming out on the right side. This Salmon Upside Down Cake is a delicious and nourishing dish for luncheon or light supper.

Salmon Upside Down Cake: 2 cups flaked, cooked or canned salmon, tomato catsup or chili sauce, salt, pepper, lemon juice, scraped onion, Worcestershire sauce.

To the flaked, cooked or canned salmon add sufficient catsup or chili sauce to moisten; season to taste with salt, pepper, lemon juice, scraped onion, and if desired, a little Worcestershire sauce. Spread in a greased baking dish or frying pan and cover with a rich tea biscuit dough. Bake in hot oven (450 F.) about 25 minutes. Turn upside down on a heated serving dish, garnish with parsley and lemon sections and serve with an egg sauce.

Egg Sauce: 6 tablespoons of butter, 3 tablespoons of flour, 1 1-2 cups of boiling water, salt and pepper, 1 hard-cooked egg.

Melt half the butter and add dry flour, seasonings, and boiling water gradually. Boil five minutes and add remaining butter in small pieces. Add chopped hard-cooked egg.

START TO-DAY

Sleep Off Beauty Griefs

By HELEN FOLLETT

BLESSED beyond rubies and riches is the woman who can tumble into bed, fall to sleep in five minutes, never rouse or waken until the little birdies start to sing. She cuts down her beauty griefs to practically nothing. Restful slumber makes a sound nervous system, a jolly disposition and a complexion that withstands the ravages of time.

If you are among the afflicted who toss and tumble, have your substantial meal in the middle of the day, take a light dinner — clear soup, a vegetable, a green salad and a sweet. Avoid extreme fatigue and emotional storms. Charter as calm a life course as you can for yourself; avoid hurry and take your time; don't become indignant over trifles. Many women stay awake nights planning mean things to say to other individuals. In the light of day they appear silly.

Though you must deprive yourself of luxuries, have a comfortable bed, with mattresses firm, pillows enough and no more. Have a moving current of air in the bedroom. Relaxation helps if it includes the mind. Make yourself feel heavy. Fancy yourself a log in a deep forest. Many a poor sleeper has trained herself to woo the sandman, overcome insomnia by mental hygiene.

A perspiring scalp is a trial and a trouble. The finger wave hasn't any gumption, goes limp in a few days, ringlets string out into shreds.

On the night before the shampoo give the scalp a brisk friction with witch hazel, if you are among those who suffer from this wretched condition. Trickle the liquid along the partings with a medicine dropper. Spread out fingers and thumbs, give the scalp a workout, pinching, lifting and rolling the flesh.

Wear lightweight hats, the smaller the better, so the scalp will not be overheated. When having a shampoo, see that the rinsing is prolonged.

Sampling Georgia's Charms

By TEMPLE MANNING

For a delightful experience, try a holiday in Georgia. Full of scenic beauty, charm, historic interest and grand, hospitable people, Georgia offers an overwhelming travel menu from which to select one dish or a veritable banquet of delectable holiday fare. Her national reservations and forests are lovely, her beaches delightful and her cities, although urban to the nth degree, retain much charm. There are beautiful parks and gardens and exquisite homes, with busy downtown districts as interesting contrasts.

Savannah is the only city in the United States, with the exception of Washington, that was planned before being built. Its squares and parks were designed as sanctuaries for out-of-town settlers in case of Indian or Spanish attack. It is filled with old and lovely buildings. The oldest orphanage in the country, the oldest theatre in active service, the oldest active military organization—all these are in Savannah. Of added interest is the beautiful Telfair Art Gallery, which we like because it not only contains works of art, but also replicas of early American kitchens with their original furnishings.

Grand Countryside

Savannah's surrounding countryside is gorgeous. We have in mind the suburbs on the salt rivers, such as Isle of Hope, Tybee Island, Beaulieu, all just oozing southern charm and natural beauty. One of the most beautiful drives in America is White Bluff Road, leading to Montgomery and Beaulieu.

On the way from Bethesda to Isle of Hope there is a private estate that is worth coming miles just to glimpse. An original grant, made over 200 years ago, it is still in possession of the same family. On the Isle of Hope is the famous Diamondback Terrapin Farm. Bonaventure, a cemetery, is considered a "must" for the tourist. Its moss-draped old trees, flowers and oak-bordered driveways make it a shrine of loveliness.

If you're in Savannah, someone is sure to drive you out to Savannah Beach. The drive is through a thoroughfare that can hold its own, so far as beauty is concerned, with any road in the world. The long causeway, bordered with palms and oleanders, from Wilmington to Tybee Island, is something to remember.

Typical southern mansion.

Relax—All the Time!

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What definite good comes from relaxation treatment?

Relaxation is advocated by Jacobson as of considerable value in functional nervous disorders. I agree with one of my readers, H. F. D., Plainfield, N. J., who makes this suggestion for us:

"Every book or article I have read on the subject of relaxation misses the point entirely in that they always speak of 'periods of relaxation.' While these 'periods' are valuable, what the world needs instruction about is continuous relaxation while at work. Don't put more effort in your work than is just necessary to accomplish the task. For example, don't put ten pounds of energy working when you have one or two pounds to lift. This attitude should take effect immediately the day's work is confronted, and should be kept in mind during the entire day. Once this mental attitude is acquired and the habit fixed, the most amazing results as to the postponement of fatigue ensue. Few persons think of the difference between doing a thing rapidly and doing it hurriedly. Rapidly implies relaxation with corresponding accuracy and skill. Hurriedly implies tension, generally mental confusion, and poor result with attending dissatisfaction. Elbert Hubbard, of the Roycroft Shops, East Aurora, N.Y., was the most 'relaxed worker' I ever knew. The amount of work he did all the time was simply prodigious, yet he never seemed to tire, and never had a sick day in his whole life. Actually, in our everyday life there are not many times when really heavy work confronts us, but, when it does, all the more reason for our approaching the job relaxed, mentally and physically. Tension is ruination in the end, and as to 'worry' why not, as Scarlett O'Hara did, 'do that tomorrow'?"

Relation of Hearing and Stammering

Is there any relation between hearing acuity and stammering?

Speech defects in pupils of elementary grades occur, according to reports, in from four to 18 per cent of cases. The figures differ with different parts of the country. Taking the average, this would mean at least a million children have defective speech. They outnumber the crippled, blind and deaf combined. Ten per cent of them are stammerers.

The causation of stammering is complicated. Speech is a social habit developed through imitation. It involves not only proper motor mechanism of the tongue and larynx, but also a proper receiving mechanism. If a child does not hear distinctly the words that he is to pronounce, he may fall into speech defects.

Harms and Malone, in Milwaukee, found in 62 consecutive cases of stammerers, who were unaware of any hearing loss, that there was a loss of between 10 and 22 per cent. They are even able to cite cases of former normal hearing and speech, in which subsequent disease resulted in loss of hearing followed by stammering.

In examining school children it is not enough to rely on examinations carried out by parents, school teachers and nurses, because they miss the majority of these slightly hard-of-hearing children. The test should be made by the instrument known as the audiometer.

Get More Oxygen In Your Blood and Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery—you tire quickly—feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. "You'll say it's a tall story..."

In those days the West was 'wild'! We were bringing in a load of furs and we had made camp when up pops a Redskin. I don't know where he came from nor why—but my scalp itched. 'Pipe of peace' I said and shoved over my tobacco. He filled up and sat there saying 'Oom! Ooom!' It was Old Chum I gave him. I said then, and I say now, 'Always and everywhere, there is no other tobacco just like Old Chum! I like it and it likes me. They chose the right name when they called it Old Chum.'

Available in packages, pocket pouches and ½ lb. tins.

Thomasburg

Thomasburg — The March meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of Christ Church was held on Friday evening at the home of the president, Miss E. Porter, with a large attendance of members and several visitors. The president opened the meeting. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. W. W. Morton. The roll call was answered with an appropriate Lenten verse. The correspondence included a "Thank You" letter from Mrs. Edward Carter for the gift of fruit during her recent illness; a report of the Diocesan board meeting and a letter regarding pledge fees for this year, the amount being $35.

It was decided to give $25. for Dorcas work in preference to making an outfit for a child, and other items of business were discussed.

Mrs. S. D. Prindle and Mrs. W. W. Morton were in charge of the program which opened with the Litany service, Mrs. Morton being the leader. Mrs. Prindle gave a reading entitled "God's Pay." Miss Olive Carleton gave a solo. A very appropriate Missionary reading, bringing out many views, was given by Mrs. Clarence Jeffrey and Mrs. P. C. Beazer gave an inspiring talk dealing with prayer first and later telling the story of the origin of the hymn, "It is well with my soul," followed by the reading of this hymn by Miss Porter. All joined in the singing of a hymn. The president closed the meeting with prayer and the Benediction. Mrs. Clarence Jeffrey and Mrs. H. Coulter and the hostess served refreshments.

The March meeting of the Sunbeam Mission Band was held in the Sunday School rooms of the United Church on Saturday afternoon, March 2, with an attendance of 15 members. Merle Bateman, the president, was in charge of the meeting. A game was enjoyed, followed by the opening hymn. Monthly reports were given by the secretary and treasurer. Several membership fees were paid. A hymn was sung. Members responded to the Roll Call by naming an animal. The theme of the worship period was "Following Jesus." After a hymn Ronald Sherry took the Scripture reading. Glen McCamon told a story entitled "Paul." Several members offered sentence prayers. All joined in singing a hymn. The Copper Contest leaders, Gerald Bateman and Glenn McCamon reported the proceeds to date. Ruth Jones sang a solo. A recitation, "The School Bell Song", was given by Douglas Badgley. Gerald Bateman gave a piano solo. Marion Jones gave a reading entitled, "What the Fairy Told the Queen." Mrs. Herman Elliott told the story from the Study Book and Mrs. Adams was in charge of a contest. After the work period all joined in singing the National Anthem, which brought the meeting to a close.

Mrs. Ernest Morton opened her home on Wednesday afternoon for the ladies of Thomasburg United Church Women's Missionary Society. The afternoon was spent in quilting, while the menfolk and other members of the congregation came in time for a pot luck supper. The evening was spent in a social way. A nice sum was realised to add to the treasury of the society.

The Young Canada Club sponsored a very successful and enjoyable dance in the Oddfellows Hall on Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Ernest Coulter, Mrs. Fred Coulter and Miss Stella Orr attended the quilting and pot luck dinner at St. Paul's Rectory, Roslin, on Thursday when Mrs. Beazer was hostess.

The C.G.I.T. group held their meeting at the home of Lucille Herrington on Tuesday evening in the form of a supper meeting. Small tables were set, decorated for Valentine's Day. All enjoyed the delicious supper, after which the tables were cleared and before the meeting all joined in a sing-song. The meeting, in charge of the president, was opened with quiet music and a hymn. The Scripture reading was read by Ana Morton. A hymn was sung softly as a prayer, after which all repeated the Lord's Prayer. The topic, "How we can build our lives better" was given by the president.

The Roll Call was answered with the paying of membership fees. Following the business discussion, Helen McTaggart had charge of the program. A hymn was sung. Betty Vance gave a reading entitled, "A Special Valentine." A duet by Marion Bateman and Ana Morton, "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" was enjoyed. A reading by Irene Walker, "St. Valentine's Day." Evelyn Bateman gave a piano number. "The Doll's Dream." Bessie Calberry gave a Temperance Contest. The president, Marion Bateman, expressed the thanks of the members of the C.G.I.T. group to Mr. and Mrs. Herrington and Lucille for inviting them to the parsonage and also for the lovely supper. The meeting was closed with the Benediction.

Several members of Stirling Oddfellows' lodge visited Thomasburg lodge on Friday evening, putting on some degree work.

Mrs. W. J. Yateman, fourth of Thurlow, was a guest for a few days last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Morton.

Mr and Mrs. H. Carleton and children were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. R. Lancaster at Stirling.

Mr. Russell Bateman, of Queen's University, Kingston, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Bateman.

Police Blotter

One of the community's habitual inebriates again ran afoul of the law and was arrested on charges of violation of the L.C.A. last night. The apprehension of the man followed the breaking of a plate glass window at the Globe Cafe. Police say the man staggered and accidentally fell against the window completely shattering it.

Apartment residents along Front St., have complained to police recently that garbage pails, left out for city garbage collection, have been toppled over and their contents strewn along the street by mischievous persons. Last night Constables Taylor and Wright apprehended two men shortly after two garbage pails had been disturbed. Today Chief Kidd revealed that charges of disorderly conduct had been preferred.

Nine transients were sheltered at the police station last night.

"This is a frank, sincere statement. If I had under a thousand dollars to spend for an automobile and wanted the thrill of luxury transportation plus enduring performance—in plain words if I wanted the most for my money —

"I would step in at Quinte Motors some day soon and examine these cars listed below. Why should I be content with mediocrity, when these carefully conditioned cars afford the luxury and lively energy of new creations, at half the price.

1940 Buick Special Coach: with many extras. Has been driven only a few miles Practically a new car at used car price.

1938 Dodge Sedan: Original paint, hardly soiled. Very low mileage. Positively looks and runs like a new car.

1937 DeSoto Sedan: Finished in dark green. New tires all 'round. Mechanically A1. And the price is right.

1935 Dodge Sedan: Original paint on body. Tires good. A real good family car.

1930 Buick Seven Passenger Sedan: This car is in excellent condition in every way.

ALSO SEVERAL LOW PRICED CARS.

AT THE CAPITOL

'THE EAGLE AND THE "HAWK"

"Still one of the greatest of all films depicting great war drama of the British Flying Corps. For thrills, for romance, for the sheer drama of raw hate and burning love the screen has never surpassed this picture now showing at the Capitol. You will thrill again to the greatest of war stories ever filmed and on the same program another Clarence E. Mulford's western "Renegade Trail", starring the ever-popular William Boyd, and George "Gabby" Hayes. The 7th chapter of the thrilling detective serial "Red Barry" and "Believe or Else," a colored cartoon complete this grand double bill.

PICTON

PICTON DEFEATS WELLINGTON 4-3

First Game of Finals in District Finals, a Rough Contest

Picton March 7 (Special)—Picton won the first game of the finals in the senior section of Wellington and District Hockey League Wednesday night when they defeated Wellington in a rough game 4-3. It required ten minutes overtime to break the tie, Picton scoring twice in overtime and Wellington once. Fraser, Picton's net minder, was penalized in the last minute of the game following a free-for-all among the players but Wellington failed to score with the local's net unguarded.

In "B" group, Mountain View won the round with Wellington, 8-5 winning Wednesday night 3-1. They will meet West Lake in the semifinals.

The "A" game was marked by sixteen penalties with tempers flaring on several occasions. Sticky ice failed to slow up the fast pace. Welsh scored for Picton at the two minute mark, Young tying it up. Grinrod put Picton ahead in the second but Platford got the equalizer. Third period was scoreless. Welsh and Bowerman scored in the first four minutes of overtime and a Wellington rally netted a counter by Platford.

Wellington's lone goal in "B" group was by Morris in the first period. Moy scored twice for Mt. View and Amo once.

MANITOBA WINS 6 GAMES IN ROW IN BRIER 'SPIEL

Woods and His Rink Have Three Tough Games Yet to Play

ONTARIO LOSES

By CHARLES EDWARDS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Winnipeg, March 7 —(CP) — Manitoba, eight times Macdonald's Brier Canadian Curling Champion since the classic was inaugurated in 1927, turned into the final day of the 14th annual bonspiel today with an unbeaten record and three tough games to go.

Howard Wood of Winnipeg, who won the Dominion title in 1930, successively faces Bert Hall's Kitchener rink, which captured the Brier for Ontario last year, Northern Ontario and Alberta.

Hall saw almost his last chance of successful defence of the championship vanish in the sixth round last night when he lost 12-5 to New Brunswick with the veteran Nick Thibodeau of Bathurst playing a grand game. It was Ontario's third loss and at best he could only tie Manitoba. In Brier history no rink with more than two losses has been victorious.

Saskatchewan Chief Threat

Wood's greatest threat is the rink of Saskatchewan wheat farmers led by Bill Dunbar of Kinley who moved into sole possession of second place yesterday afternoon with a 10-6 win over Cliff Manahan of Edmonton, who won the Brier for Alberta in 1933-37.

Manitoba beat Saskatchewan 8-6 in the first round Monday but it was Dunbar's only setback up to today. He is drawn against Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Ontario.

New Brunswick, Alberta and Northern Ontario are tied in third place with four wins each but the latter two shatter the deadlock in their engagement this morning. Other morning pairings are: British Columbia-Quebec; Prince Edward Island-New Brunswick.

Wednesday Afternoon Scores

Yesterday afternoon Hall beat Prince Edward Island 13-9; Saskatchewan beat Alberta 10-6; Northern Ontario downed Quebec 16-8; Manitoba bested B. C. 12-7; and New Brunswick beat Nova Scotia 14-10.

At night Northern Ontario outlasted Nova Scotia 12-6; Manitoba beat Quebec 13-7; Thibodeau upset Hall 12-5; Alberta downed Bill Finlay's Vancouver four 7-6 in one of the best games of the bonspiel; and Saskatchewan handed Prince Edward Island its sixth defeat 17-4.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, March 7 (Special)—In a one-sided game here yesterday afternoon grade X girls of the Trenton high school trounced the grade X girls of Lindsay high school outplaying their rivals in every department throughout. The final score was 56 to 10 in favor of the local lassies. Misses Jean Blair and Mary Hutton did the majority of scoring for the Trenton team.

GEORGE SELKIRK IN LEFT FIELD FOR THE YANKEES

Canadian-Born Gardener Compiles Batting Average of .302 in Six Years

BRITTLE PLAYER

Selkirk Has Suffered Many Physical Injuries Since Joining the Champions

St. Petersburg, Fla. March 7 — (CP)—He's often hit the deck only to come up fighting. His bones have been broken. Many ambitious newcomers have tried to drive him to the bench. But after six years, George Selkirk still is left fielder for New York Yankees, world baseball champions.

Barring injury, the Canadian-born gardener will be in the Yankee left field on opening day, flashing afield in the fashion that earned him the nickname of "Twinkletoes."

Since joining the club in 1934, Selkirk has compiled a batting average of .302. In all but one of six seasons he batted better than .300. Born in Huntsville, Ont. he has been a consistent home-run hitter, and has kept right up with the team leaders at driving in runs.

Selkirk made a fine comeback last season after he slumped to a .254 average in 1938. With 21 home runs and 101 runs batted in, he was one of the important cogs in the Yankees' run-producing machinery. He ended the season without serious injuries.

Selkirk was under a severe mental handicap when he joined the Yankees late in 1934, for he succeeded the mighty Babe Ruth in right field and had to win the confidence of the fans who for years had been accustomed to cheer the Babe. After making good in the eyes of the partisan bleacherites, he ran into many physical mishaps.

Midway in 1937 at Shibe Park, Philadelphia, he broke his collarbone coming in to make a shoestring catch. Later that same year he cracked his elbow. The 1938 campaign had just started when he tore loose the ligaments in his right wrist sliding into second base.

Picton

Picton — Lieut. Hamilton McLean, son of Mr and Mrs. Judge E. H. McLean, has been visiting his parents here for a few days

Rev. J. F. Reycraft was speaker at the Home and School Club in the Kindergarten Wednesday evening. His address was on Religious education and this subject proved an interesting one. A social time was spent.

Mr. Bill Ward of Kingston is a guest of Mr. Carmen H. Burr.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Knox have returned from Peterboro, where they visited their son, Ronald Knox. Mrs. Knox spent a few days in Toronto before returning to her home here. She was accompanied by her son to the city.

Mrs. S. P. Dodds is confined to her home at Cherry Valley through illness.

Rev. Mr. Pair, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Algar, Miss Madeline Jarvis and Mr. Howard Smith are in Dyersburg, Tennessee, where they are attending a conference of the Pentecostal church. They will be gone for two weeks.

Mrs. George Cook is home from Kingston for a time, as her daughter, Miss Olga Cook, who is in hospital there, is improving.

Several meetings have been held in Prince Edward County by Howard Weese, the Liberal candidate. George Tustin, National Conservative candidate is holding his meetings in the Lennox section and comes to Prince Edward next week. Both committee rooms are busy, the voters' lists being checked over.

A canvass is being made here in an effort to organize a junior Board of Trade. There has been a good response and it is felt that the movement will result in an organization being formed in the near future. The town has no such organization here and several projects have already been suggested for such an organization. It would be composed of young men of the town and county.

Hutton Martin, who suffered a broken leg and a broken wrist, when he fell from the steel supports at the top of Picton rink is making a good recovery at Prince Edward County hospital

WALLBRIDGE AND ZION HILL WIN IN CUP PLAYOFFS

Roslin Squad Blanked by Zion Hill While Wallbridge Defeats Foxboro

ICE IS SLUSHY

Most of the Goals Were Scored on Individual Efforts

Wallbridge and Zion Hill drew first blood in the rural league hockey play-offs for the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy in a double-header staged at the Hume Arena last evening. In the opening game of the series Roblin Dulmage's "north Thurlow" sextette from out Zion Hill way blanked Mattis' Roslin squad three to nil, while in the nightcap affair the fast-skating Wallbridge team beat Foxboro 4-2 as the result of some faulty goal-tending.

The ice was soft and slushy, making good hockey next to impossible, although Jack Stewart's Foxboro sextette did attempt combination play, which proved their ultimate downfall on the soft ice. The first game was played without a penalty being necessary, but in the second tussle old sores were re-opened with a minor outbreak of fisticuffs broke out in the last period as tempers rose and fists flared.

Simms scored two goals for Zion Hill in the first game, while Tummon notched the third on a pass from Dickey. Neither goal-keeper in the initial game saw much action as the teams could not advance the puck with any degree of success on the slush-covered ice. The ice tightened up somewhat for the second game, however.

Individual Efforts

All but one goal in the second game came as the result of individual efforts. With no score registered in the initial frame Muir and Ronsky both scored on long shots for Wallbridge in the middle session while Green and Ronsky scored for the winners in the last session, Rowbotham getting the only assist of the game on Ronsky's second counter. Noel Guay and Jan Stojan scored the two Foxboro counters.

The tournament of rural hockey teams will continue at the Hume Arena on Friday night when Mountain View, Glen Miller, Wallbridge and Zion Hill will battle with the two ultimate winners meeting for the district championship and the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy.

The summaries:

ROYALS DEFEAT CORNWALL TEAM BY 8 TO 2 COUNT

Lead in Five-Game Series 2-1 and Appear Headed for Title

START PLAYOFFS

Montreal, March 7 (CP)—Montreal Royals are odds on favorites today to sweep Cornwall Flyers from the Quebec Senior Hockey League playoffs and go on to a defence of their title.

Off to a desultory start in the best-of -five games semi-final series, Royals whipped the Flyers 8-2 here last night to take a 21 lead in the round. The Ontario team won the opening game 2-1 and Royals the second 7-4.

In scoring their one-sided victory, Royals showed more power than Sunday when they ran up a 7-0 lead before easing off in the third period. Last night again the Montrealers had seven goals before the third period began and that they didn't run into the double figures was chiefly because they didn't extend themselves.

The "punch line" of Buddy O'Connor, Pete Morin and Gerry Heffernan, that played such an important part in Royals march to the Allan Cup finals last season, again showed it is rounding into top form, accounting for five of the goals. Two went to O'Connor and Heffernan and Morin got the other.

Play in Cornwall

The teams go back to Cornwall tomorrow for the fourth game.

Playoffs marked action in Quebec's other senior circuit, the Provincial League, with quarter-final series opening in Boston and Lachine. The home teams won in both cases, Boston beating Verdun 5-3 and Lachine trouncing St. Hyacinthe 11-3.

Boston went to the front early in the game and was never headed, outscoring Verdun 4-2 in the frame and allowing the visitors only one goal in the third despite a gallant rally.

At Lachine, the home team took a period to get warmed up and trailed 2-0 early in the second frame. Then their big guns began to boom and rookie Paul Leclerc in the Saints nets had 11 shots go by him before the Gaulois got another counter themselves.

Rosaire Demers and Henry Hayes were the top goal getters with three apiece.

Manager of Lions Suspends Jean Pusie

Vancouver, March 7—(CP)—Guy Patrick, Manager of Vancouver Lions in the Pacific Coast Hockey League, last night suspended Jean Pusie, unpredictable French-Canadian defenceman who deserted the team and left for home a week before play-off time without even saying good-bye.

Patrick said the action would bar the colorful rearguard from organized hockey until the suspension was lifted and could prevent Pusie from ever taking part in professional hockey again. President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League was informed of the suspension and other leagues would be asked, through him, to ostracize Pusie.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By the Associated Press)

Avalon, Calif., March 7—(AP—Gabby Hartnett, Chicago Cubs veteran catcher-manager, is going into action sooner than he expected—all because of the Finnish war. He hadn't planned to play until the Cubs reached San Antonio, Tex., en route home, but agreed to appear along with eight other members of his team in a game at Los Angeles Sunday for the benefit of the Finnish Relief Fund.

Lakeland, Fla. — Detroit Tigers are expected to start rookie Dick Conger, Los Angeles policeman's son and ex-college star, on the mound against Brooklyn in their first exhibition game Sunday. Second baseman Charley Gehringer probably won't play because of a lame back.

San Antonio, Tex.—It has taken only two workouts for George McQuinn, St. Louis Brown's front rank slugger of last season, to show he still swings a big bat. He has the camp hopeful he can lead the Brownies out of the American League cellar.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

St. Petersburg, Fla.—The ghost of the last world series reared itself in New York Yankees' first intra-squad game. Lefty Lee Grissom, obtained by the champions from Cincinnati Reds this winter, was pitching airtight ball until Charley Keller tripled with a man on base.

Orlando, Fla.—Washington Senators see a chance of reviving a deal with Detroit Tigers that would send shortstop Cecil Travis to Detroit for either Hank Greenberg or Rudy York now that Charley Gehringer is ailing. The veteran Tiger infield star is suffering from a strained back.

B. C. I. JUNIOR CAGERS WIN OVER ALBERT

Take C.O.S.S.A. Title After Two Game Series by 46-37 Count

CLOSE CHECKING

Belleville Collegiate won the junior basketball championship of the Bay of Quinte group in the C.O.S.S.A. by defeating the Albert College kids 19 to 11 on their home courts, thus winning the final round by taking both games of the final series.

George Laughlin's B.C.I. juniors led the parade by an 11 to four score at the halfway mark and continued to dominate the play by out-scoring Albert by one point in the second stanza. The "collegians" won both the junior and senior basketball championships in the Bay of Quinte group of the C.O.S.S.A. and now advance to the provincial interscholastic playdowns.

Gannon and Cunningham led the winners with eight points each, while Dobbin paced Alf Moulden's Albert kids with six points. The game was marked by close checking on the part of both clubs. On the round of two games played, the Belleville Collegiate won by a round score of 46 to 37, having won the initial contest by the narrow margin of one point.

Dutton Can Steer Amazing Amerks Into Playoff Spot

By the Canadian Press

Manager Mervyn (Red) Dutton gets a chance tonight to steer New York Americans into the National Hockey League playoffs for the Stanley Cup, an achievement with which he will be satisfied considering the prospects of the old men of Manhattan when the season started.

The Americans play Boston Bruins at New York, while the last-place Canadiens oppose Chicago Black Hawks at Montreal. If the Canadiens lose, the Americans can clinch the sixth and last playoff position by turning back the Bruins. Otherwise they will still have four games in which to make the grade.

Dutton was about ready to throw up the works in mid-season and he actually asked waivers on a group of veterans. Some of his standbys were slowed to a walk and others couldn't find anyone anxious to combine with them. About the only two players who gave Mervyn the Red really first-class service all winter were his goaltender, Earl Robertson, and a young forward, Murray Armstrong.

Some others tried hard, like Harvey Jackson and Charlie Conacher who were eager to show their old Toronto teammates they could come back. The addition of Eddie Shore from Boston heartened the defence and the Americans finally steered a wobbly way out of the cellar late in January. They have been in sixth place ever since.

New York, March 7—(AP)— If Taisto Maki busts a lot of track records as he swings east, don't be surprised......the Finn did three miles on a slow San Francisco track in 14:15.3......Joe McCluskey, veteran distance runner, had predicted that if Taisto could do 14:20 out there he'd be a riot when he hit the faster eastern courses ......old Arturo Godoy is pretty swift on the comeback...... when a Coast reporter asked Mrs. G. (who is a knockout) how she came to "marry a guy like that," Arturo stopped him with, 'didn't you ever hear of beauty and that beast?"

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

In a series of articles written for the Ottawa Journal by Harry J. Walker of Ottawa, some interesting stories were recently told regarding the "golden age of hockey" when the Renfrew 'Millionaires' dominated the game. Mr. Walker contends the Ottawa Valley was the cradle of all hockey players.

"It was a hockey team from Ottawa that first introduced the game into Pittsburg, Pa., as early as 1899, where the first artificial ice rink (the Duquense Gardens) was opened," penned Mr. Walker as he reminded his readers that from 1907 to 1910 the Renfrew 'Millionaires' dominated amateur and professional hockey in Canada and a town of but 4,000 achieved the feat of beating some great teams like the Ottawa "Silver Seven," Montreal Wanderers and the Pembroke "Timber Kings."

"It is a fact the Millionaires of 1910-12 were one of the greatest aggregations of hockey aces ever assembled in one team. It was an all-star team, and that was the chief reason why it did not win the Stanley Cup," pointed out Mr. Walker as he recalled Renfrew imported Bobby Rowe, Williams and Black to play with Steve Vair, Bert Lindsay, Larry Gilmour and N. Kimpton, but the greatest effort was made to land Fred 'Cyclone' Taylor, Ottawa defence ace, who had flashed like a meteor across the hockey horizon," adds Mr. Walker as he recalled the day that Renfrew imported Taylor, paid him a tidy sum in advance to play against the Montreal Victorias in a Stanley Cup game, but J. P. Dickson, of Ottawa, followed Taylor into Renfrew and took him back to the Capital City. Without Taylor the "Creamery Kings," as the Renfrew team was also called, failed by one goal to beat the Victorias and lift the Stanley Cup.

Contending the old-time hockey carried more action and colorful players, Mr. Walker says the players of the past had plenty of individual initiative and their combination plays had to be perfectly co-ordinated for there was no firing the puck ahead to a cruising "inside home." Continuing, Mr. Walker added "Eddie Shore thinks he has discovered what's wrong with professional hockey. In a recent interview he declared that there was too much concentration on unit play to the ruin of colorful individualism. He may have spoken out of turn, but coming from an outstanding player who ought to know modern hockey, he said something of more than passing significance. Certainly all the great teams of hockey's golden age had plenty of cohesion but not at the sacrifice of effective individualism."

In his succeeding article Mr. Walker deals with the famous "Millionaires" of later years, that started the hockey war which resulted in the birth of the N.H.L. All about "Hay" Millar refusing one thousand dollars to play one game and other interesting facts which old time fans will recall.

It was just five years ago this week that George Pepper, then of this city, but who is now employed in the manufacture of aeroplanes in England, established a new U.S.A. motorcycle record for the Class C (500 cc) over the sands of Daytona Beach. Sir Malcolm Campbell, the great English auto racer, was in Pepper's pits when he roared down the beach to slightly over 94 miles per hour to break the Yankee record, which in turn was later shattered once again. However, do you remember when Sir Malcolm Campbell broke his own world automobile record of 272.108 miles an hour over Daytona Beach sands five years ago today, when he reached a speed of 276.810 miles. Later the same years he coaxed his "Bluebird" over the 300 mark. Capt. George Eyston now holds the record hour, made at--- -',."S8Kywith with a recorded 300 miles an hour, made at Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, last summer.

Davey Kerr, leading goaler of the National Hockey league, starring for New York Rangers, celebrated his 30th birthday appropriately. On that day, Jan. 11, the Rangers defeated Chicago Black Hawks 5-3, and equalled the 18-game straight without a defeat record set by Canadiens in 1927-28.

City folk attending the district rural league series at the Hume arena last night were agreeably surprised as to the calibre of hockey dished up by the "farm boys." Zion Hill brought the most rooters into town and were rewarded when Roblin Dulmage's charged blanked Roslin 3-0. Then out trotted Barton Hinchcliffe's Wallbridge sextette (the majority of whom can be seen daily along our main stem) to beat Jack Stewart's Foxboro squad 4-2. In this game the losers' goalie couldn't seem to acclimatize himself to the Belleville lighting as two or three long shots drifted by him for soft counters. The rural pucksters continue with a second doubleheader here on Friday night.

Sport Spice — All is not a bed of roses along the Trent Valley Hockey League front we hear.... Recently Stirling, Madoc and Norwood teams all appeared on the same ice in full expectation of playing, finally Stirling was pushed into the discard, they tell us, and now the fans in Art Duncan's favourite haunts are not only red in the face, but pretty sore about the whole thing.... The Bata "Volcanoes" a team of feminine pucksters will meet the Stirling lassies in a championship game at Frankford tomorrow eve ....Wally Elmer's Kingston kids almost did the trick, the Limestone City juniors led the strong Oshawa "Bees" for well over two periods, before the Motor City sextette showed their strength and rapped home three goals in the last period to win 3-2 and take the round....Joe Medwick packed his baggage and left Florida without signing his 1940 contract with the Cardinals.

Bob Feller Destined To be Great Hurler Says Oscar Vitt

Fort Myers, Fla., March 7—(AP)—Oscar Vitt, the old Detroit infielder, isn't certain that Bob Feller is destined to be baseball's greatest pitcher, but Oscar has his suspicions. He is getting a thrill out of handling Feller, watching the youngster steadily develop.

"Bob won 24 games for Cleveland last year and lost nine," Vitt said. "I think I had to pull him from only three games. If he gets a little more control of his curve ball nobody will beat him. He'll be the greatest we ever saw.

"Some days now he is just as fast as Johnson ever was, and he has that curve that Johnson didn't have. If he had had Derring's control they would be lucky to get one hit a game off the kid. Honest, I hate to say how great a pitcher he is liable to be."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 7 (CP)—Trading on Toronto exchange today was a bit slower in the early session, showing turnover of 109,000 shares for the first three hours, but the price tone held firm to strong for the industrials and the mines. These groups showed narrow index gains at noon.

Brazilian, C.P.R., and some of the steels moved in sizeable volume at steady prices, aircrafts and utilities were slightly higher and the senior oils were unchanged to strong.

Kerr-Addison, San Antonio, East Malartic and Dome posted gains and Pickle Crow, Pioneer and Wright-Hargreaves were softer. Base Metal shares showed only minor changes.

Western oils were unchanged in the average at noon. Home Oil weakened 2 cents and Calgary-Edmonton added 2.

WALL STREET

New York, March 7—(AP)—The stock market's rally met a little resistance today but leaders, generally, managed to cling to modest advances. Many issues erased initial plus marks and near the fourth hour small declines were plentiful.

Bonds pointed higher, especially foreign dollar loans. Commodities were inclined to tilt moderately forward.

There was an assortment of new 1940 highs among shares. These included United Drug, National Tea, Du Pont, American Telephone, Glenn Martin and Eastern Air Lines.

Favorable share performers were Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Montgomery Ward, Anaconda, Loft, Dow Chemical, N.Y. Central and Standard Oil of N.J.

With the exception of Distillers Seagram, up a trifle, Canadian issues fell back. Losses of 5-8 of a point and less were registered by Dome and Lake Shore Mines and McIntyre. Canada 4s, in the bond market, lost 1-8 of a point.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, March 7—(CP)—Dressed weight were up 10 cents at Brantford in bacon-hog markets reporting today. Other markets were unchanged.

Liveweight: Brantford, $8.50, Chatham, $8.75.

Dressedweight: Barrie, $11.85, Brantford $11.60, Chatham $11.95 Hull $11.60, Peterboro $11.50 plus transportation, Stratford $11.50 plus transportation.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, March 7 —(CP)— Cattle trade was slow with few decent killing cattle offered up to mid-session on the Toronto Livestock Market today. Cattle prices were steady. No sheep or lamb sales were reported. No price was established on hogs. The cattle holdover wrom Wednesday was 300 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 80, calves 30, hogs 30.

Odd lots of weighty steers sold at $6.50-$7.25. Common to medium butcher steers and heifers ranged $6-$6.75. No good grades of butcher steers or heifers were offered. Butcher cows sold at $4-$5.50.

Odd sales of good to choice veal calves were made at $10-$11 but most sales were at $8-$10.

Hogs closed yesterday at $9 off-truck for bacon and $12.15 dressed-weight.

AT THE BELLE

"THE SHOP AROUND THE CORNER"

Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart and the famed "Ernst Lubitsch touch" contribute equal shares to one of the most delightful entertainments ever filmed, "The Shop Around The Corner," which is delighting large audiences at the Belle Theatre.

That Lubitsch is the master of comedy in all its various phases, whether of satire as he so ably demonstrated with his direction of Greta Garbo in "Ninotchka" or of human, gentle humor in the everyday lives of everyday people, has been proven for all to see in this new picture.

It is a pleasure to see Miss Sullavan back on the screen again, and this most charming and talented of actresses is perfectly teamed with Stewart, who makes the most of another fine acting opportunity to compare with his great performance in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

Sharing the plaudits with the stars is a flawless cast. Frank Morgan never has appeared to better advantage than in the role of the shop owner. Joseph Schildkraut is thoroughly dislikable as the rascally clerk who has an affair with the wife of his kindly boss, Felix Bressart, who provided so many laughs in the role of the lanky Russian commissar in "Ninotchka", is the timid clerk, afraid of the boss, the butcher and the doctor. Also effective in supporting roles are Sara Haden, William Tracy, Inez Courtney, Sarah Edwards, Edwin Maxwell, Charles Halton and Charles Smith.

"The Shop Around the Corner", is a pleasant departure from the usual film epic. It is as real as life, flavored with honest truth. As the likable employers and his interesting employees move in and out of the picture, they give it life, warmth, suspense, comedy and romance, which makes for entertainment at its best.

"Nick Carter—Master Detective"

The same quality of inventive thrills which made the Jules Verne works popular has been captured in "Nick Carter, Master Detective", ultra-modern version of the super-sleuth's adventures which is the companion feature attraction with Walter Pidgeon in the title role and R tiJa oosnham role and Rita Johnson as leading lady.

Toronto Butter Remains Steady

Toronto, March 7—Butter closed steady at recent price advances in lighter trading on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Eggs ended the session unsteady.

Trading was at a fair pace on the butter market, although buyers were less aggressive than in previous sessions. The first grade Ontario product continued to move at 27 3-4c per pound as no selling pressure was evident. Holders asked 28c for the Western make, but only sale reported was a car on spot on a price basis of 27 3-4c per pound.

Inquiry tapered off on the egg market. Best demand was enjoyed by Government inspected lots, which still commanded a premium of 1-2c per dozen. While the undertone of the market was easier, the only price change was in grade A-large in the graded division. This grade ranged downward at 22 1-2c to 23c per dozen.

on the basis of Italy's previous offer the newspaper Il Piccolo said today.

(The commercial negotiations were reported halted a fortnight ago because Britain could not obtain certain types of manufactured goods, including airplane motors. The blockade against Italian-bound German coal became effective last week-end.)

The blockade was ascribed by the Journalist Giovanni Ansaldo to British "nervousness".

Ansaldo wrote in Il Telegrafo of Leghorn that it had been expected in Britain that entire continents would array themselves on her side, but this depended largely on Germany's attacking some neutral state.

Since this has not happened, Ansaldo said, "there is no war of coalition, the 'anti-German crusade' shows not even a sign of beginning, the war of blockade has not produced the hoped-for results, and England has beside her no one but France."

RUSSO-FINN TRUCE SOUGHT BY SWEDEN

Mediator's Role Likely Difficult

These sources believed the Kremlin to have become embittered over admitted Scandinavian sympathies for Finland to such a point that a mediator's role would be difficult.

The Finnish attitude toward negotiations was regarded as questionable, depending on the Finns' opinion of their chances of continuing their defence.

It was pointed out that the Finns have expressed a consistent willingness to negotiate provided they can do so with honor and full recognition of their national integrity.

Finnish Diplomat in Stockholm

Significance also was seen in reports that Dr. Juho Paasikivi, Finnish diplomat, is in Stockholm. He headed the Finnish delegation in unsuccessful pre-war negotiations at Moscow on Russian territorial demands which Finland found a threat to her independence.

If peace negotiations are under way, Scandinavian political quarters assume that Berlin also is interested.

There are unconfirmed reports even that the German minister to Finland, Dr. Wipert Von Bluecher, has conferred in Helsinki with a representative of Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim, Finnish commander-in-chief, and Finnish government officials.

According to the current reports, Stalin has called for surrender of the Karelian Isthmus to Russia, along with the City of Viipuri, all of the shores of Lake Ladoga, and some territory in the Petsamo district on the Arctic coast.

Sweden's Attitude

Sweden's interest in any peace negotiations is believed to have been prompted by the increasingly difficult position of this country in view of her state policy as regards passage of foreign aid to Finland and new reports that Finland is considering an appeal directly to Great Britain and France for military assistance.

Reported conversations in Berlin between the Swedish explorer Sven Hedin and Adolf Hitler and his foreign minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, are regarded by many observers as associated with the supposed German-Swedish interest in seeing the war in Finland settled.

Doubt was expressed in some informed circles, however, whether any mediation bid from a Scandinavian country had a reasonable chance of success.

Berlin, March 7—(AP)—Authorised German sources said today that Germany never had left any doubt that it regarded passage of volunteers through Sweden to Finland as a hostile act—not against Germany but against the principle of neutrality.

They expressed doubt of the authenticity of reports that peace terms had been transmitted from Soviet Russia to Finland.

RUMANIA THROWS ALL RESOURCES

Statement Approved

Carol's statement was approved in a long session of the Crown Council last night amid signs of an even sharper struggle between the Allies and Germany for Rumania's surplus of raw materials.

Carol appeared in the uniform of the Royal Guard with Crown Prince Michael at his side in the garb of an infantry Lieutenant.

The King told parliament that the government is assured of the stability and continuity necessary to execute a long-range program "which will include intensification of production in all lines."

In a declaraton that relations between Rumania and other nations are good, the King mentioned by name only Italy and Bulgaria.

Viroel Tilea, Rumanian Minister to London, was reported on his way home to deliver a British proposal that Great Britain be accorded equal treatment with Germany on Rumanian exports, including oil, the most coveted product.

On the other hand it was reported that German pressure on Rumania now included a demand for the country's entire 1940 wool crop.

Would Ruin Industry

The native yarn industry would be ruined if such a demand were fulfilled, economic experts said, and if Great Britain and Germany were to share alike in Rumanian oil only 800,000 tons of the 1940 maximum production, estimated at 4,000,000 tons, would remain for other disposition.

This remainder would not suffice to maintain Rumanian trade with the Balkans, Italy and other countries—trade in which Rumania receives other products in exchange for her oil—aside from supplying Rumania's own military needs.

More pointed perhaps than Rumania's promises of oil is the question of delivering it. Bucharest experts predict that Germany will be more than 400,000 tons behind schedule on oil receipts by the time traffic is organized on the Danube this spring, probably as late as April 1.

The ice-locked Danube has started to break up in its upper reaches and the dispatch of a German barge fleet to help gather oil and grain will follow as soon as the way is clear.

VOYAGE IS PROOF BRITAIN CONTROLS

boats, of which she did not carry a complete complement, were uncovered. Members of the crew and a number of stewards, their white jackets emphasized against the dull background, waved from the rails.

As she reached quarantine several planes soared overhead and numerous harbor craft circled around the vessel which rode high in the water.

The Queen Elizabeth successfully evaded the threat of German undersea attack and triumphed in its risk of a serious blow against British supremacy at sea.

Sighted Off Fire Island.

Planes flying out of New York first sighted the Queen Elizabeth off Fire Island, cutting up a mile-long wake as her giant engines turned up apparently close to her top speed of more than 32 knots.

Only a few figures were seen on the decks, and from the planes there was no indication that the world's largest ship even had a name painted on her gray-smudged prows.

Not until a plane made a second circle over the Queen Elizabeth did the ship make her nationality known. On the second circle, crew members broke out the Union Jack and some of the crew waved.

Suddenly Straightened Out.

Black smoke belched from the Queen Elizabeth's two slanted funnels as she suddenly straightened out from her previous zig-zag course and cut a direct line for New York harbor—sure, now, that she was in safe waters.

Below the water-line, the ship showed dark red and along the water-line there were patches of black under the gray paint, indicating her "war paint" had been applied for the audacious voyage to the United States.

Preparations were made to greet the Queen Elizabeth at her new berth at Pier 90, at the foot of West 50th street, where two dredges have recently been deepening the north side of the slip for her huge bulk.

The newcomer will lie snugly in a berth alongside the $60,000,000 French liner Normandie and the Queen Elizabeth's sister ship, the $25,000,000 Queen Mary.

Police Detail Stationed.

A police detail of 250 men was stationed in the pier vicinity, and not even newsmen or photographers were allowed to enter the piershed.

In completing her strange maiden voyage, the Queen Elizabeth wrote a new chapter in war-time drama.

Elaborate precautions were taken by police officials, not only to guard against any sabotage attempt, but also to handle crowds of curious around the pier to which she was headed, at the foot of 50th street.

Only persons on official business will be permitted to board the Queen Elizabeth. She will be placed under heavy guard.

There was no welcoming committee of British officials and American national, state and city representatives as greeted the Queen Mary in 1936 and other new liners on their maiden voyages.

Almost Identical With Queen Mary.

In design the mammoth liner appears almost identical with her sister ship, the Queen Mary, except for a few structural differences and her slightly larger dimensions. Her sharp prow contrasts with her cruiser stern rounded and snubby. Her four decks above the main deck are terraced in the stern and more steeply terraced forward and the bridge curves gently from port to starboard.

On the sun deck where the Queen Mary has play spaces for deck sports limited by three huge funnels, the new Queen Elizabeth has many more square feet of deck space with the middle funnel absent. One funnel is forward and the second is just abaft amidships. Both stacks are canted backwards adding to the racy lines of the ship.

The Queen Elizabeth was unescorted. For at least 15 or 20 miles before the Queen Elizabeth was located, no other ships were seen by persons in the airplane.

Pilot Pat Gallup roughly estimated that the Queen Elizabeth was steaming about 28 knots. It was impossible to make an exact estimate. Her full speed is estimated at 32 knots.

Voyage of the 85,000-ton Queen Elizabeth has not only added proof, if proof was needed, that Britain controls the seas; it also enhanced the already great reputation of the Scotsman for taciturnity.

For the voyage of this largest potential target for enemy action was:

1. Made without an alarm, and
2. Not disclosed until late yesterday.

"Thousands of Clydeside people knew the Queen Elizabeth had left her berth nine days ago," said The Press Association in London, "and the Scottish and National Press of Great Britain knew it. Yet the secret was kept."

Secret Kept For Many Days

The secret was kept until the new queen of the seas, christened September 28, 1938, by the Queen in her own name, was safely across the Atlantic.

The world's largest liner comes to New York to join the company of the other great liners too valuable to risk within the possible reach of submarines. While they wait the return of peace, smaller, more easily replaceable craft carry the Allies' supplies and troops.

The new queen moves in and overshadows in size and potential splendor her sister ship, the Queen Mary and the French liners Normandie and Ile de France, all laid up "for the duration" at the outset of the war six months ago.

As news of the Queen Elizabeth's audacious transatlantic dash leaked out, the new but considerably smaller British liner Mauretania was moved out of the North River pier that harbours the Normandie and Queen Mary to make a place for the new Queen—and it promised to be a tight fit.

The Mauretania was taken to the midtown pier of the now idle North German-Lloyd line from which the Nazi merchant flagship Bremen sped away just before the war began on a hazardous voyage home, by way of the Russian Arctic Port of Murmansk.

Obviously British Reply

The Queen Elizabeth's maiden trip was—besides a dash to safety from danger of bombings and the resultant high insurance rates at home—obviously a British reply to German claims of submarine power and to the boasts of the Nazi high command over the Bremen's circuitously passage, on which a British submarine commander had a chance to destroy it—but held his fire.

"Her arrival in New York," the press association said of the Queen Elizabeth, "gives Adolf Hitler and Admiral Raeder, chief of the Nazi sea terror campaign, a startling shock in view of the Nazi claim to 'control of the oceans.'"

Nothing was said in London of any convoy or armament that might have helped the Queen Elizabeth to her rendezvous with her sister ships in New York.

When her inside fittings are completed she will be the finest as well as the largest ship afloat. Harbor sources speculated that she would remain in her unfinished stage, to be readily converted to any special uses as Britain's needs arose.

Left England February 26

The Queen Elizabeth slipped out of her builder's yards at Clydeside on Feb. 26 and lay at anchor off the mouth of the Clyde until last Saturday when the dash to North America began.

Once at sea, she had a potential top speed of 32 knots although her new engines had to be worked in gradually.

When the British press and people finally opened up with their secret, acknowledging that the new pride of the merchant fleet was bearing the name of their Queen across the seas the Queen herself travelled last summer on a memorable visit, the London Daily Herald said:

"On June 20, 1939, it was announced officially that Feb. 26, 1940 would be the day for moving the Queen Elizabeth. She kept to schedule.

"Had any evilly disposed Central European personage wished to interfere with the proceedings, he had his due notice."

R. A. F. FIGHTING STRENGTH

In surveying the air war to date he said 44 German aircraft had been brought down around British coasts "without a single loss on our side" and many more had been forced down on neutral territory or upon the sea.

Great Expansion of Strength.

In asking for funds for developing the R.A.F., Sir Kingsley said the air force was preparing for a "great expansion of strength which we know will be required."

Where last year the total strength of the air force approached 100,000 men, that is the strength today of one command alone of a force which is divided into coastal, fighter and British Expeditionary Force commands.

Prime Minister Chamberlain announced army estimates will be presented in the House next Tuesday.

Sir Kingsley said the fighting strength of the R.A.F. has been doubled in the past twelve months and that the allied output of aircraft is now greater than Germany's.

He announced New Zealand soon will be joined to the empire air routes by way of Australia, with weekly service across the Tasman Sea. Resumption of North Atlantic Service, he said, will depend on the "inexorable needs of the military situation."

Hopes To Overcome Difficulties.

He added he hoped that difficulties preventing regular service between Britain and Portugal will shortly be overcome. The Portuguese capital, Lisbon, is the eastern terminus of Pan-American Airways.

The minister announced a civil aviation advisory committee will be set up to "safeguard the position" of British civil aviation after the war.

Of the fighting feats of the R.A.F. Sir Kingsley said British fliers had sighted German submarines on more than 100 occasions and had made more than sixty attacks. He said R.A.F. planes had successfully escorted more than 700 convoys.

Superiority To German Machines.

Describing the qualities of British aircraft, Sir Kingsley said the top speed of the Spitfire Fighter, which was more than 300 miles an hour, has been increased 10 per cent. He said the quality of British planes is superior to German craft and declared:

"I would sooner have 100 Wellingtons or 100 Spitfires or Hurricanes than a much larger number of their German counterparts."

He said Germany is expanding and improving her air force although "many of her aircraft types must have proved disappointing."

Hugh Dalton, Labor, continued the debate. He said there was a feeling that "too many German bombers are being allowed to get away after bombing our ships".

He mentioned the attack last Saturday on the liner Domala in the English Channel, in which more than 100 Britons and Indians were killed, as an instance. He added it had been said that there was a lack of effective joint working between the air commands, and as a result the German aircraft got away.

44TH GERMAN CRAFT DESTROYED

other aircraft maintained the customary security patrol over island bases of German mine-laying seaplanes.

"Intensive searchlight activity marked the passage of reconnaissance aircraft over Germany. Beams of a bluish hue most frequently were encountered.

"Near Cuxhaven a battery of 20 to 30 searchlights came into action on the approach of our aircraft but were quickly evaded.

"Over Bremen anti-aircraft guns opened heavy fire and bursts of orange-colored flame marked the course of the British aircraft.

"Two aircraft flying with their navigation lights on at a height of 10,000 feet also were seen by the crew of this aircraft over Heligoland Bight but there was no attempt to attack."

Today's developments preceded a statement to be made in the "House of Commons by Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary of State for air, on the feats of the R.A.F. He will introduce the air ministry estimates.

Against Army Control

It is unofficially reported that the army and navy have been seeking control of the Air Force in so far as it supports their various activities.

"Nothing in the progress of the war has shown that there is any reason for dividing the air force between the navy and the army any further than at present," Sir Kingsley Wood said in an interview.

Sir Kingsley won a point against army control Jan. 9 when the cabinet announced that R.A.F. units in France would be unified under Air-Marshal A. S. Barratt rather than under army command. Marshal Barratt consults with Viscount Gort, commander of the field forces.

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, is understood to want the R.A.F. coastal patrol placed under Admiralty rule.

This force, assigned to ward off German raiders, acts in liason with the navy, and is under command of Air-Marshal Sir Frederick Bowhill.

Its problems were extended last night when German planes made the first nocturnal raids of the war. Two Germans bombed and machine-gunned the 695-ton British tanker Shelbrit 11, and a lightship off the Norfolk coast broadcast an SOS during a similar attack.

Air Minister Faces Criticism

Sir Kingsley faces criticism from many aviation experts.

Some say he is building and buying planes too rapidly, so that they become obsolete in a fast-changing industry, others say he is so pre-occupied with this bugbear that he is acquiring planes too slowly.

Sir Kingsley's name was mentioned Monday in rumors of an impending cabinet shuffle, and the political commenator A. J. Cummings printed in The News-Chronicle today a "persistent rumor" that the next Air Minister would be Sir John Reith, who became Minister of Information two months ago.

Whether or not Sir Kingsley retires, he contends that "the system of unified control (of the R.A.F.) has justified our expectations."

The air estimates to be debated are token only. The actual amount to be spent is a State secret.

Stirling

Stirling — The regular meeting of St. Paul's Women's Association was held on Tuesday afternoon, March 5th at the home of Mrs. H. C. Martin. Presiding over the opening exercises and business period Mrs. F. N. McKee, President of the organization, occupied the chair. Following the singing of the theme song and prayer, Mrs. Nora Wescott in presenting the secretary's report, disclosed the sending of 14 cards and two letters during the month and several communications of appreciation were read. A satisfactory financial report was given by the treasurer Mrs. R. B. Duffin. Reporting for the visiting committee, Mrs. Roy Woodbeck reported thirteen calls made during the month. Further preparations for the bacon and egg supper were completed with committees appointed. Arrangements were also set in motion for the provision of meals at the two day Y.P.U. convention to be held early in April.

Fine Program Presented

The program directed by Mrs. R. B. Duffin convener of the program committee, centred about the Easter thought and opened with an Easter hymn and prayer by Mrs. H. Hubble. Introductory remarks to the scripture lesson embraced "the hope of Easter" ably set forth by Mrs. V. Richardson who also read the lesson. A splendid paper "Don't Poison Your Mind" prepared by Mrs. Lynn Fair was read by Mrs. Duffin as a feature of the program. Another Easter hymn and the Mizpah Benediction closed this part of the meeting.

During the social period that followed Misses Marie McKee and Dorothy Pidgeon offered an instrumental duet "Melody of Love" and Miss Workman also assisted in the presentation of instrumental numbers. A very dainty and exquisitely prepared luncheon climaxed the fine meeting with the attendance recording showing thirty-eight ladies present. The appreciation of the organization to the hostess, Mrs. H. C. Martin and to the program committee, was briefly expressed by Mrs. Walter Elliott. The committee in charge of arrangements included: Mrs. R. B. Duffin Mrs. George Richardson, Mrs. R. Bastedo, Mrs. V. Richardson, Mrs. H. L. Fair, Mrs. C. F. Linn, Mrs. (Dr.) Pedley, and Mrs. C. Scott.

Bathhouse Bandit

By ARCHEY C. NEW

The bathing hour was at its peak, the vast bathhouse, now enjoying that somnolent intermission before the return rush of happy, laughing, wet bodies.

In one of the little cubicles or dressing-rooms, in a cross-section corridor distant from the Boardwalk entrance, a bather stood enshrouded in a huge towel, listening intently. Down the shadowy passage came the shouts of voices. The lone bather opened the door a few inches and peered out. A young man was running this way. At that moment, the bather, perversely it seemed, elected to toss a very wet bathing-suit into the corridor, hitting the runner squarely on his spick-and-span flannel trousers.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," murmured the bather.

"That's all right. Let me in a minutes, will you?"

Without waiting for an answer, the young man crowded into the tiny cubicle and hastily closed the door.

"I like your nerve! Get out of here!"

The intruder, dumfounded, wheeled and faced a very pretty, very wrathful towel-clad lady.

"You'll have to excuse me, sistah" he whispered huskily, "but I can't leave right now. Go right ahead with youh toilet. I won't look."

"I will not," she answered hotly. "What do you think this is—a nudist camp?"

"I wouldn't know about that. Wheah I come from, we don't sorta like such goin's-on." He fingered a man's coat and trousers hanging on the wall. "How come these heah clo'es? You—you're not one of those movie stars that weah men's clo'es, are you?"

"I'm not," she told him, tartly. "I—they're—my husband's." And she added, quickly, "You'd better get out before he comes back."

"Great Grief, that sho' is tough." He started to open the door, when again the excited voices drew near. He shut the door.

"What's wrong?" the bather demanded, "are you running away from the police?"

"Gosh, no sistah!" he assured her.

"Then what are you afraid of?" she insisted.

"I'm in the darndest jam you evah heard of."

"Tell me about it," she urged.

"I was in bathin' today, too," he explained, "and I checked my valuables like they all do. I went back to the hotel, fo'gettin' to claim my things. I came back heah and when I stepped up to the window to get them, the girl in cha'ge was lyin' inside, with blood on her head and lookin' kind of dopey. I yelled fo' someone to come, and reached in the window so's to open the door, so's I could help her, when along came a man. He looks around quick, yells for help and seein' me with my arm in the window, accuses me. Somethin' tells me I'd have a ha'd time explain', so I lammed. And heah I am."

"And you expect me to believe that?" she demanded scornfully.

His eyes, flashing flintily, at that moment made out a glittery object on the floor. He pounced on it. "Must be scads o' gold in this heah bracelet, ma'am: it's pow'ful heavy." He grinned sourly. "An' I can't be a thief, exactly, else I wouldn't be handin' it back to you."

"Help!" she cried out, suddenly. "Help!" The door flew open and a score of men and women, with a Boardwalk cop in the forefront, stared eagerly into the tiny room.

"What's the trouble, ma'am?" asked a white-coated attendant.

"This man said you were hunting him for a hold-up," she cried. "He forced his way into my room, to hide."

"So-o?" growled the cop. "Seems to me I've seen this bozo before, eh, bub? Let's see." He reflected briefly. "Ain't you the Curly Wolf?"

"Gosh, no," protested the young man. "I'm no criminal. I—I—"

"Oh, yeah?" sneered the cop. He turned to the attendant. "See if you can get Miss Jennie back here now."

"And, if you don't mind," spoke up the outraged bather, "I'm going to the beach to find my husband."

"Oh, I say, ma'am—" he started to protest, but the girl vanished. Another girl, holding a wet towel to her head, and half supported by an attendant, appeared in the group.

"Who's he?" she asked listlessly, "I never seen him before."

"Why, Miss Jennie," sputtered the cop, "ain't he the hold-up guy?"

"That big beef?" sniffed the girl, "He is not!"

"That's funny!" came an interruption from the white-coated attendant, emerging from the dressing room, holding a man's suit, and scanning his chart with a puzzled air. "How'd this suit get in there? My books says a lady took his room today—alone."

Jenny snatched at the coat. "That's the little shrimp's coat what slugged me," she shrilled excitedly. "The little sawed-off worm had a voice like a woman. Showed me a big gold bracelet, used it for knuckles, and hit me with it. I'd 'a sworn it was a woman...."

"I'd swear to it now, damn it all," yelled the cop, light striking him suddenly. "Brazen Bess, the—Gangway! everybody—" and dropping his captive's arm, he streaked for the nearest call-box.

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie stayed at my house all night, and we had a race getting washed and dressed and down to breakfist the first, and Artie claimed he won and I said, Like heck you did, look at your tie, it's only half tied, you're a chizzeler.

Then you're a forger and a racketeer, because look at your hair, there's not even a part in it, so that more than makes up for my tie, Artie said, and I said, That's what you say, you pirate.

Well who cares what you say, you cutthroat highwayman? Artie said, and ma said, Here here, there there.

Meaning that was enough, and pop said, I'll take my breakfist without music, if you dont mind, especially chin music of that discordant nature, so let that end it.

Sure, pop, but I cant help it if I had a dream about him last night and I dreamed he was going around picking peoples pockets and nobody could believe a word he said, I said, and Artie said, And can I help it if I had a dream about you and dreamed the reason nobody knows where you are every afternoon is because you're in strange drugstores ordering ice cream sodas and then crawling out on your stummick without paying?

That's nothing to the dream I had about you, I said, and pop said, I had a dream about both of you, it was more like a vision than a dream, and in this vision it seemed that neither one of you was able to reach for a 2nd piece of coffee cake in spite of your agonized efforts, and if I hear another waking or sleeping peep out of either of you you'll experience a startling example of the reality of dreams.

The result being a silent rest of breakfist with only some secret face making.

TONY

— BY ELIZABETH VERNON —

CHAPTER XXIII

Tony rose. She didn't want to see Hyacinth's return to the ballroom. Nor did she want to dance with anyone. Whose dance would she cut if she vanished for a little while? She couldn't remember and she didn't care. She thought of poor Philip Raften's eager boy's face. She remembered the stricken look in Hyacinth's eyes, and she felt as if she were lost in some strange landscape.

In the long gallery couples were sitting out. She wandered past them. She turned off down a deserted passage. Here a sitting room had been prepared as a card room. Hyacinth had prophesied to her mother that no one would find it and Hyacinth had been right. It was empty. Tony entered and pushed to the door behind her. One light only was lit. The cards, untouched, were strewn in fan form on the tables.

By the window was a tray with sandwiches, a great silver bowl of punch, a ladle and wine glasses. "Miss Tony will be served with no alcoholic drink," so Mrs. Querne had instructed Potter. "Won't she, by George!" thought Tony now. The heat of the ballroom had made her thirsty. She was hungry. She ladled herself some punch. Taking a sandwich, she perched on the arm of a chair. She sat there, looking out through the French window into the garden where trees were black against the darkest vaulted blue of the sky and the brilliance of the stars.

It was good to be alone. She felt confused by the hours of noise and light, but the unwanted meetings with strangers. Her part in this dance had not been as she had imagined it. She hadn't thought that she would have so man partners—only Jacky had been sure of that.

There was peace here. No sound of music came from the ballroom. Tony's thoughts wandered to the past, as they so often did. It was summer, and yet these June days seemed so much less real than the Winter that had gone. Surely those frozen weeks when she had been free to see Alan—and to believe foolishly that he cared to see her—would prove to be the happiest of her life? Where was Alan now? Was he lying in bed, bored and angry, as she had found him on her first visit to Holme Dacey If he could have been here tonight, would he have been glad to see her a success? Yes, that would have pleased him. He would have hoped that someone would fall in love with her. He wanted her to marry. Ah, but there, she knew, his wisdom failed him. She smiled a little. There he was no wiser, realized no more than Jacky.

This longing for one's greatest friends—one's only love—it was more vivid than the dance the music, all one's surroundings. "If only I could be with him—do things for him—" it didn't seem very much to ask; just the chance to serve him. But of course it was everything. One couldn't expect Paradise on this earth. "Very few people have the lives they hoped for." One could only repeat in one's heart the stiff words of Alan's letter as if it were a charm to bring one courage.

For a little she sat there gazing out into the quiet night. Then she rose. She must return to the ballroom. But first she would have some more drink. It tasted good. It made one cheerful.

She ladled the punch. She lifted her glass—

"That will do, Tony." From the window a man spoke quietly. "One doesn't drink punch by the half pint."

She didn't look up. Her hand was shaking. The drink was spilt. She set down the glass. It clattered on the tray.

She turned. A man, tall and motionless stood in the long French window. He was smiling a little. She could see his face clearly. At sight of it, her heart stopped.

"Alan—", her lips were dumb. Only her heart cried his name. She stumbled towards him.

"My little love—"

She wavered. Her head dropped. He caught her in his arms.

• •

The singing noises ceased in Tony's head. The blackness withdrew from her eyes. She gazed in silence at the loved face above hers. The tears rose and lay on her lashes. For she knew this could only be a dream. How often in the past months had she not dreamt of Alan and wakened to this same pain?

"My poor little sweet." The words were distinct enough. The voice, so familiar, echoed in her heart.

She moved her head a little. It rested on something not soft enough for comfort. Then it was that she realized that she lay on Alan's knee and in his arms.

"Then it is true," she murmured. She didn't see his smile. Her eyes wandered round the room. The moonlit garden was no longer visible. Alan had drawn the curtains. She put her hand to her forehead where wet curls clung.

"You fainted, Tony dear," he told her. "I've been sprinkling you with water. I was a fool! I came without warning."

"Oh, no!", She clutched at his cuff. "It was like heaven—suddenly—" she stopped. She had said too much. She was only his friend, nothing more. "H-how did you know I was in here?" she asked. Her voice fluttered, tho' she strove so desperately for control. She met his eyes, looking down into hers, and something cried out in her as if she knew that he could read her heart.

"My darling," he said, "I had been watching you from the terrace. You were very still. And not very happy?"

She didn't answer. Her mind played with these words, "my darling." But perhaps they hadn't meant—not what they sounded like. She flushed a little under his smile.

"Are you quite strong again now, Alan " she asked. She tried to be ordinary-seeming. She tried to escape from his arms.

"I am quite strong. And you will stay where you are," he told her.

In wonder she turned her face to his.

Suddenly there was a sound. She leapt in his hold. Someone tried the handle of the door. There came a tattoo of knocks. Alan rose without haste. He set Tony on her feet. She leant, shaking, against a table.

"It's all right, Tony," he said, and she looked up at him and knew that, as she had once told him, she could feel no fear of anyone while he was near her—not even of Hyacinth, whose voice now cried: "Open this door."

Alan crossed the room. He unlocked the door. Hyacinth stood in the doorway. She did not see him. She gazed at the drawn curtains, at her young sister standing before her with damp, disordered hair, still trembling a little, still feeling Alan's arms round her.

Alan spoke from the shadows near the door.

"How nice to see you, Hyacinth."

"Ah!"

In days to come Tony was to remember the strange little movement that Hyacinth made — a movement of recoil, as if she had seen a gulf at her feet. An instant later her face had changed, and Tony, who had learned to be aware of all moods and expressions even when they showed, as now, only for a flashing second, saw hope flame in Hyacinth's eyes. But it was pure pleasure only that could be heard in Hyacinth's voice.

"My dear Alan!" Her hands were outstretched. "This is lovely! I've never been so glad—never so happy—"

Alan took Hyacinth's hands. Tony didn't look at his face. She saw only her sister's beauty.

"How dear of you to come to us!" said Hyacinth. "But what a surprise! Mother—every one — must see you."

To Tony it was as if she herself were no longer there. But of course Alan would not look at her while Hyacinth's beauty claimed him. Had he not loved Hyacinth? And he would love her again. Tony felt like an unwanted super, caught by some accident on the stage when the curtain rises, having to pretend that she is meant to be 'on' in the big scene. No, she thought as she saw Hyacinth draw nearer to Alan, it was as if one were a wraith, looking on at the warm loves of real people. She turned away. Her hands made a little movement as if she would have pulled something round her—some protection from this cold.

Alan spoke. His words were deliberate.

"What a kind welcome, Hyacinth. And I am already so happy — for Tony is going to marry me."

CHAPTER XXIV

There was silence. Tony didn't speak. She didn't glance up. Only her hand went for a moment to her eyes as if the happiness so suddenly flung before her were too bright to bear.

"And I must congratulate you?" Hyacinth said. "Well, you have had opportunities of learning your future wife's character."

"I have," Alan replied.

"Do you think you are doing a wise thing, Alan?" Hyacinth looked him full in the face. It was, Tony thought, as if her sister called on every resource of her beauty—her head thrown back a little, the brilliant eyes, the lines of the perfect body—

Alan did not reply. He said, "you will excuse our leaving you, Hyacinth. I have not seen Tony for some months."

"So this room, with its closed windows, drawn curtains and locked doors, has served its turn?"

Tony, her hand in Alan's, had not minded—had hardly heard — Hyacinth's words. But now she could have jumped at the anger in Alan's voice as he said, "come, Tony!"

He opened the door. Together they left the room.

In the passage he paused. The music of the dance came sweetly from the distance. He turned his back to the sound. He did not intend that a stray couple should see him and recognize him. Not yet. He meant to be alone with Tony.

The green baize door swung to behind them. Their steps sounded on the oilcloth. The schoolroom door was ajar. Alan switched on the light. The shabby, comfortable room leapt into view—the tail-less rocking-horse, the old books in the green-painted shelves, the drugget-covered floor, the ancient easy chairs, the cuckoo clock. An odd setting for the high hour of romance, thought Alan, with a little smile. He closed the door and glanced down at Tony. She wouldn't look at him. Shyness, he saw, had seized her now, driving all other feelings from her—even the passion of joy that a moment since had filled her heart and declared itself in her eyes.

Her glance was on the floor. He looked at her, and he remembered the words spoken of her by Matthew Lake: "She's of the kind that could steal the heart from a man. She has that power." It was, Alan thought, utterly true. He had loved her—he who had been so sure that he could never love again—even when he lay, a broken invalid. Each time he had seen timidity of his love as she stood before him, fingering the rose at her belt, spurred him on. He longed to seize her in his arm. But he forced himself to restraint.

"Tony, come to me."

She glanced up then. Slowly, she advanced. He held out his arms. Suddenly, swiftly, she ran forward. In an instant she had tumbled into his embrace.

He held her to him. A long, long kiss. It left her, he saw, pale and trembling with happiness, and with more than happiness. She hid her face against him. If she could have seen his expression as he looked down at her, this story, perhaps, might have ended here.

He picked her up and carried her over to the window seat and set her down beside him. And now he knew he wanted nothing on earth but Tony. He wanted nothing to stand between them—not reasonable time nor usual custom.

"How do you know I will marry you?" Tony spoke the surprising words. Her eyes, as she glanced up were full of mischief. "You told Hyacinth I would, but you don't know."

"Don't I?" He had never seen her like this—cheeky, untroubled; nor, perhaps, had anyone else. "Didn't you propose to me, at Holme Dacey?"

"Oh, I didn't!" And now her face was pink. "I only said I wanted to live with you and look after you—"

"Well, you will live with me and I shall look after you. That's all the difference."

"But I want a real proposal."

He smiled. "Do you? You won't get one." His arm tightened. "Do you love me, Tony?"

"Oh, yes! Oh, yes!"

"Did you love me at Holme Dacey?"

"After the snowstorm I did.' In a murmur she added. "And before that."

"Well, I think I loved you from that first time you came to see me It's strange, but true."

She gave a little sigh. He thought that he had never heard such a happy sound.

"Tony, I haven't got you an engagement ring—" he might have brought one. He had been so certain of her love.

"I don't want an engagement her he had loved her more. And tonight—how his passion had flamed at sight of her as she sat so quiet, so solitary, in the empty card room. Never would he forget her face as it had been when she first saw him, and how she had sunk, fainting, as she had tried to greet him.

Through the open window there drifted in the scents of the summer night. They and the joy of his new-found strength and the very ring," Tony said with vehemence, "I want to be married."

"My God, so do I." His face was almost stern as he looked down into those clear eyes. "We'll be married in the next few days. Till then, Tony, I've brought a token—to remind you that you belong to me."

"But I don't need reminding."

He took from his pocket a wisp of chiffon—a handkerchief. On it was embroidered, "Antonia."

"Oh!" She gazed down at it, and he saw that she recognized the Christmas present that he had given her and which she had returned to him. "Because I don't like you," she had said then. And now her words were as characteristic.

"Oh, Alan, I was a beast—I was a pig—" she lifted her face to his. Her arms slid round his neck, and all her love was in the kiss she gave him.

There came a little scratching at the door—the noise that a small dog not quite sure of its welcome might make.

"Jacky!" In a flash Tony was out of his arms, across the room, opening the door. "Oh, you ought to be asleep! But Jacky, listen"—and Alan smiled at the happiness that thrilled in her voice—"Alan's back; he's here!"

"Alan? Oh, let me see!" Jacky slipped into the room. She advanced, staring up at him. "How do you do?" She took his hand. "I'm glad you're well. I thought you were ill for ever."

"So did I, Jacky."

"How did you get better?" She asked him the question that Tony had not asked. Tony had taken for granted the miracle of his recovery. The fact of his love for her had filled her heart to the exclusion of all else. He knew that.

"Matthew Lake cured me," he answered.

"Did it hurt?"

Alan nodded. For a moment, as he remembered those weeks of hell, his face was grim. A little hope there had been, but so little. Matt almost had forbidden any.

"I like Sir Matthew," Jacky said. "He's got a nice face, only it's sad and ugly."

Alan didn't miss the flush with which Tony heard that name. With a sense of peril past, he remembered how so short a time ago he had tried to hope that she would marry his friend. And Matt had hoped so, too. Poor Matt—

"Tony and I," he said abruptly, "are going to be married."

"Oh!" Jacky grinned. "Oh, good!" In clear delight she looked from him to Tony. "I am so glad!" Suddenly she flung herself upon him, hugging him.

A few minutes since, he had wished her away. He had wanted to be alone with Tony.

"Will we live at Holme Dacey?"

He smiled at that "we."

"Yes, Jacky."

"Oh!" She knew all that she needed now. "I'm sleepy. I'd like to go back to bed," she said.

• •

They had tucked up Jacky and put out the light. The door of the schoolroom wing swung to behind them. From below rose the sound of music. Tony turned to smile at Alan, and once more he felt a sudden possessiveness.

"Have you been kissed by anyone but me?"

"Harry Beckett—but I wouldn't let him, Alan, so truly it didn't count." She looked up into his face. Suddenly, swiftly, she stooped her head. She kissed his hand. "Oh, Alan, I do belong to you. I'll never love anyone but you, for ever."

TO BE CONTINUED.

LIBERAL LEADERS DEFEND TRADE

Euler Praises Trade Agreement

Trade Minister Euler said at Hanover, Ont., that Prime Minister Mackenzie King deserved re-election on the trade agreement with the United States alone, while in Lethbridge, Alta., Resources Minister Crerar said the pact was a "great achievement."

At Sherbrooke, Que., Dr. Manion charged that Mr. King and Justice Minister Lapointe were trying to keep Quebec province separate from the rest of Canada. He urged thoughtful people of Quebec to end this kind of "humbug" in the election.

Opposition to conscription was voiced again by the Conservative leader who said a "whispering campaign" was being carried on in Quebec that he would bring in conscription.

Mrs. Manion Heard

In one of the rare occasions in Canadian history when the wife of a party leader has spoken publicly on behalf of her husband, Mrs. Manion gave a radio speech from Sherbrooke in her native French. She stressed the need for action to meet the youth problem and upheld her husband's opposition to conscription. It was her first public address.

Wartime regulations and censorship drew fire from three opposition speakers. At Edmonton, Lt.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, attacked censorship regulations which he said resembled "those imposed in Nazi, Germany."

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F., national chairman, in Montreal warned against the dangers of wartime regulations and said his party would fight for preservation of liberties in Canada as well as overseas.

Radio Censorship Criticized

Criticism of alleged radio censorship was voiced by Denton Massey, national government candidate in Toronto-Greenwood, at Midland, Ont. "Let no one tell you that there is no air censorship in Canada," he said.

The "March of Time" film on Canada's war effort is being used "in at least one place as political propaganda, Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, charged at Edmonton.

Col. Drew said that the film, banned in Ontario, had been advertised in a Vancouver paper with the statement "all this was the work of one man—Ian Mackenzie," Federal Pensions Minister.

Declaring there should be no private profit in the making of war weapons, Col. Drew said all weapons for which there is no private market should be made in factories operated by the Dominion government.

Propaganda Will Not Win Claim

The Liberal Government's propaganda and pamphlets will not win the war, he stated.

The government's duty is to equip the people with the weapons to fight a war but "all we have is yellow circulars with the statement that something is done."

Prime Minister Mackenzie King was talking like a "dictator" when he said no members of his cabinet would join a National Government. Why should he speak for all members of his cabinet? Justice Minister Lapointe and Col. J. L. Ralston, Finance Minister would be welcomed to a National Government and it was significant neither had "closed the door" to such a step.

Conservative Leader Manion's proposal for a National Government in Canada is "coming to be universally regarded as name-juggling only," Revenue Minister Ilsley said in a 15-minute broadcast from Halifax.

It was similar to the "change from Tory to Conservative, then to Liberal Conservative, then to National Liberal and Conservative and then to National Conservative. The party remaining the same throughout."

Duty of Voter Clear Charged

"If by any chance we are wrong about this and Dr. Manion really intends, if elected, to select Social Credit and C. C. F. Ministers, the duty of every voter is clear. He should go to the polls, if necessary on a stretcher, to prevent such a tragic-comedy from occurring.

Of the three oppositions to the government, the "group or faction headed by W. D. Herridge, the New Democracy so-called," was the weakest. It was made up entirely of the Social Credit group and "it is not just clear why the advocates of a monetary experiment as a cure-all for our peacetime ills should have a distinctive war policy."

While New Democracy followers were "modified conscriptionists," the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation "on the contrary are against conscription. And they are against participation, except for profit, in the war at all.

Need of National Gov't is Claim

"A nation at war needs a National Government", said Leopold Macaulay, former Conservative leader in the Ontario Legislature, in a 30-minute election address broadcast over an Ontario network from Toronto.

"By National Government I mean a Government representing those persons of goodwill who believe in the Paramount importance of making a supreme war effort on behalf of the whole nation without regard to domestic political philosophies and without regard to past party political affiliations.

"It must be united in a 'win the war' efforts that submerges all other issues. It must put the nation before party, efficiency before patronage, brains and ability before party service.

"It makes my blood boil to hear Mr. Mackenzie King say that only the Liberal party can conduct Canada's war effort. That statement alone proves that Mr. King has the wrong slant on Canada's war effort. It is an all-time high in political hypocrisy and intolerance".

Canada's government rests in the people and not in 16 cabinet ministers or 245 members of parliament, Labor Minister McLarty said at Galt.

Mr. McLarty asked if an appeal to the people could be construed as a scuttling of parliament. The opposition claimed to have had sufficient information with regard to Canada's war effort to scare the government, but why wasn't that information used now?

Homuth Criticized

Karl Homuth, National Government candidate in Waterloo South, had been quoted as saying at Milton Tuesday that any "frank speaker faces arrest" and as labelling Prime Minister Mackenzie King as the "Hitler of Canada". The people of Canada know Mr. Mackenzie King, Mr. McLarty said, and the people of Galt know Mr. Homuth.

Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, had been quoted as suggesting in Calgary that Ontario people buy Alberta coal. But why didn't Col. Drew suggest that in Ontario?

Every ounce of manpower available in Canada will be needed in the next few months for production of war materials, Transport Minister Howe said at Newmarket.

He reviewed Canada's war effort in relation to military affairs and the changes and growth in industry resulting from the war.

To make an effective war effort, Canada would have to remain economically strong enough to continue its effort for the duration of the war. It would be more spectacular to indulge in a "terrific splurge of spending" at the start but it would be of little use to the Allied cause if Canada were to bankrupt herself in the effort.

Looks for Long War

Mr. Howe looked for the war to continue for many years and expressed the belief that all Europe would be drawn into the struggle before it is over.

Canadian people "would not stand for" conditions of the past 10 years in the period following the war, Hon. J. Earl Lawson of Toronto said at Hamilton.

Mr. Lawson said the Dominion's first concern must be to win the war and to avoid post-war conditions of unemployment and relief.

"The war will not be over in any short period of time and don't believe there will be any revolution in Germany," he said. Neither could an uprising be expected in Russia, where the aim of the populace was to convert the world to the Soviet's economic system.

Important Election

Canada's Federal election campaign is the most important in the country's history, Trade Minister Euler said at Hanover, Ont. The Dominion will be under great strain in the next three or four years and it will be the duty of every citizen to forget party in the interests of country.

He denied reports that Great Britain ever had offered $1.50 a bushel for wheat, saying the United Kingdom's highest offer was 82 1-2 cents under terms lasting no more than six months.

At Amherst, N. S., Defence Minister Rogers defended the war effort of the Canadian Government.

The Minister, detailing Canada's defence preparations before and after the outbreak of war, said the Dominion now had almost 75,000 men under arms in the army, besides 10,000 men in the Royal Canadian Air Force and more than 6,000 in the navy.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King called a Dominion general election because he was at "his wits' end" and "simply did not dare to take the responsibility of facing the issue in Parliament," John Blackmore of Lethbridge said in a broadcast address at Calgary.

At "Wits' End" is Claim

Mr. Blackmore, speaking for the New Democracy party, said the Prime Minister "precipitated this election and risked the wrath of the country by dismissing Parliament in such a high-handed manner because he was at his wits' end."

The 30-minute broadcast took the form of a discussion between Mr. Blackmore, 1935-40 Social Credit group leader in the House of Commons, and Premier Aberhart of Alberta. New Democracy now is the Social Credit name in the Federal field.

The two speakers promised that if a New Democracy Government was elected it would bring about monetary reform, "the basis of a solution" of Canadian economic problems, would restore "responsible, Democratic Government," and would "secure a free Parliament." They denied the New Democracy party favored conscription.

Charge is Levelled

Speaking at Leamington, Ont., R. L. Maitland, British Columbia Conservative Leader, said Mr. King deliberately avoided a session of Parliament that would have proved embarrassing.

At Mr. Howe's Newmarket meeting, Sir William Mulock, 98-year-old former Chief Justice of Ontario who was in public life at the turn of the century, declared it would be "disastrous" to entrust Canada's war machine to inexperienced men now. Sir William was the present Prime Minister's mentor in Mr. King's early years in Ottawa.

HEPBURN GIVEN EVERY CHANCE TO

Mr. Rogers' statement, made public through his Ottawa office last night while he was in the Maritimes, welcomed Mr. Hepburn's acceptance of "my offer to arrange for him" to visit the school "and see conditions for himself."

Earlier the Ontario premier had accepted the offer and announced he would visit the school Monday, but added: "If Mr. Rogers does not come I may exercise my authority and appoint a commission to investigate the troubles."

There was no comment last night from the Defence Minister's office whether he would also visit the school. The statement said Mr. Hepburn was being asked to say at what time Monday he would like to make the visit "so that the commanding officer may be available to conduct him and members of the Press, and show them the whole operation of the technical training school."

Charges Made Tuesday

Mr. Hepburn, bitter critic of the Federal Government's war effort, made his charges last Tuesday. He said several hundred men from the school paraded the streets of St. Thomas in protest against lack of training. He further charged that St. Thomas newspaper men were warned by the censors that the story could not be published.

Mr. Rogers followed with a categorical denial Tuesday night and said the Premier could visit the school and take any newspapermen along and ask questions freely.

Yesterday the St. Thomas' Times-Journal in a statement said it had had no communication with the censors before or after publication of a news story February 10 regarding a new system of "leaves" at the school. The paper's statement said it had "learned sufficient, however, to convince us that there had been trouble in the nature of a partial walkout at the school and that it had been due in a great measure to a misunderstanding over a new system of week-end leaves brought into force through the replacing of a single-shift work system with a double-shift work system."

From St. Thomas yesterday came also protests of two British Squadron-Leaders G. R. Hicks, commanding No. 1 Wing, said he considered the reports of trouble "an insult to the intelligence and integrity of the airmen of the R.C.A.F., and R. F. C. Metcalfe, commanding No. 2 Wing, termed Premier Hepburn's statements "full of inaccuracies".

"His Girl Friday"

A Columbia picture, "His Girl Friday," opened at the McCarthy theatre to prove itself a picture that meets every conceivable requirement for the title of "greatest" comedy of the season. A mad, merry whirl of husbands—past, present and future—"His Girl Friday" presents Cary Grant as a heartless, thoughtless, perfectly shameless guy who's still pretty grand; Miss Rosalind Russell is a stubborn, stunning spitfire of a sob sister who refuses to be "His Girl Friday" Saturday, Sunday and every other day, and Mr. Bellamy is the fretting, fuming Lothario of an insurance salesman to whom she turns for "protection."

Grant is seen as the maddest managing editor ever to run a newspaper; Miss Russell is his brightest, most beautiful reporter. On the very eve of a big story, one of nation-rocking consequence, the girl announces her engagement to the insurance agent and her retirement from newspaper work. Her ex-husband as well as her ex-boss, the reckless Grant conspires to prevent either the marriage or the retirement taking place—"framing" Ralph Bellamy, kidnapping his mother, bribing Miss Russell to remain on the job by taking out a tremendous life insurance policy as a wedding present to her, and generally behaving in delightfully mad fashion.

"Rhythm Jamboree" an all-star musical revue and also a new "Screen Snapshots" of Hollywood's outstanding stars is presented in addition to the comedy feature presentation "His Girl Friday."

NAZI INCENDIARY BOMBS DROPPED ON SHIP, CLAIM; FINNS CONSIDER SOVIET PEACE TERMS, REPORTED

Sweden is Acting As Intermediary In Peace Talks

Terms Described as More Demanding Than Those Rejected by Helsinki Before Outbreak of Hostilities — Baron Mannerheim Believed to be Present at Conference.

MEET AT STOCKHOLM

Rejection of Terms Inevitable by Finland Providing They Are More Exacting Than Old Ones Which Reports From Stockholm and Copenhagen Indicate They Are

(By Max Harrelson, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Helsinki, March 8—(AP)—Finland, while keeping silent officially, appeared ready today to reject any far-reaching, ultimatum-like Russian demands as the price of peace.

In the midst of peace talks, her dwindling manpower kept up the fight against the ever-replenished forces of the Russian invader. Gunners defending the headlands of Viipuri Bay blasted at their foe on fields of ice in perhaps the fiercest fighting of the war.

There was no official confirmation that full details of a Russian peace offer had been received by the government but there were reports one had been made which had the character of an ultimatum—accept or undergo even heavier attacks. (Copenhagen reports said the Russians set midnight tonight as the deadline).

In Possession of Terms

The government, nevertheless, was known to be in possession of at least the main points of an offer containing terms more far-reaching than the original Russian demands which resulted in the outbreak of war Nov. 30. Unofficial reaction indicated such proposals would be rejected—if they had not

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Spring weather controls! Spring, like fall, is a season of transition. We have just passed from winter, when the weather was controlled by cyclones and anti-cyclones, or storm and fair weather pressure conditions, and are now on the way towards summer when the control will be largely by the sun. The weather controls of spring will vary from those of winter to those of summer; we may have a storm similar to the past winter or a condition somewhat similar to that of the coming summer. March weather strongly indicates this, being turbulent and changeable.

Peace or War to be Decided by Finnish Commander Reports From Stockholm State

By Elmer Peterson
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Copenhagen, Denmark, March 8.—(AP)—Sweden, anxious to keep Scandinavia from being drawn into war, today pushed a quick drive for peace in the Russian-Finnish conflict.

Her effort centred in Stockholm, which had established contact with Helsinki and Moscow, but extended in its ramifications to other capitals.

Reports of the almost simultaneous arrival in the Swedish capital of Finnish and Russian field marshals led to excited talk in Scandinavia of a possible conference between the two.

GERMAN-OCCUPIED POLAND SCOUTED BY R. A. F. PLANES

Reconnaissance Made Over Wide Range of Enemy Territory

FLIGHT OVER POSEN

London, Mar. 8 (CP).—The Royal Air Force today scouted German-occupied Poland for the first time since Great Britain went to war on account of the German invasion there.

The flight was part of reconnaissance and patrol operations "over wide areas on enemy territory" in the course of the night announced early today by the Air Ministry. It was the third consecutive night of such flights.

The communique follows:

"During the night the R. A. F. maintained their patrols and reconnaissances over wide areas of enemy territory.

"In the course of these operations our aircraft reconnoitred western Poland and flew over the city of Posen (Poznan)."

R.A.F. bombers landed in France after dropping propaganda leaflets over Poland. It was said that only one plane was fired upon, although searchlights were encountered.

Among points in Germany proper scouted were Leipzig and a naval dockyard at Stettin.

Parliamentary Figures and Newspapers Voice Scorn for Pamphlet-Dropping Excursions

"CONFETTI RAIDS"

Admiral Keyes Speaks Mind Before House of Commons Last Night

London, March 8.— (CP)—Day and night German air raids on shipping roused many Britons today to demand retaliation.

The Air Ministry announced that new reconnaissance flights were made last night over Germany and for the first time over former Polish territory, but some parliamentary figures and newspapers voiced scorn for such pamphlet-dropping excursions.

Colonel Josiah Wedgewood, Labor member of parliament, expressed the hope that "we shall soon tackle the Germans with their own weapons on their own ground and . . . . drop bombs on military objectives".

WELLES CONTINUES TALKS IN PARIS WITH LEADERS

Will Complete His Paris Interviews in Talk With Reynaud on Saturday

TO LONDON ON SUNDAY

Paris, Mar. 8 (AP). — President Roosevelt's one-man fact-finding commission, Sumner Welles, continued to tap the French official war attitude today in a series of talks with government leaders.

He was received in succession by Jules Jeanneney, president of the senate; Edouard Herriot, president of the Chamber of Deputies and former Premier Leon Blum, Chief of the Socialist Party.

Others on the second day's calendar of interviews were Andre de Layboulaye, former French Ambassador to Washington, Vice-Premier Camille Chautemps and Justice Minister Georges Bonnet. That the calls implied more than mere diplomatic formality was taken for granted.

Daladier Satisfied.

Blum's Socialist Party has the biggest single bloc of votes in the chamber, and he has advanced from time to time the theory of a federated Europe after peace returns to the continent.

Premier Daladier, who received Welles for a confidential discussion yesterday, expressed himself today as being "entirely satisfied with my talk".

Welles can come to no other conclusion in the belief of the French press, than that the nation is in a prime state of political health to achieve the Allied war aim of victory first—peace later.

Tomorrow Welles will conclude his Paris survey in a talk with Paul Reynaud who holds the portfolio of finance. Following a visit to the Polish government in exile at Angers, its capital, Welles will leave Sunday for London.

Anti-Mine Cable on Giant Liner Puzzles Naval Experts in New York

(By Toby Wiant, Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, March 8—(AP)—The mystery of the anti-mine cable girdle which encircles the Queen Elizabeth and which may be Great Britain's answer to magnetic mines intrigued naval experts today.

The Cunard White Star Line, owner of the $28,750,000, 85,000-ton vessel, the world's newest and largest, made it clear that the device is an admiralty secret

Line officials would say nothing except that it is called the "electrical De Gausse" and is named after the Swedish scientist who pioneered its design.

Captain J. C. Townley, who brought the world's largest ship through an historic maiden dash to a safe berth yesterday alongside two other "war refugees"—the Cunard's Queen Mary and the French line's Normandie—would not discuss the device except to say, "I've known about it only five days."

Asked whether it prevented the explosion of any mines, he commented dryly, "You never know whether you've passed over a mine—unless it goes off."

Magnetic mines have been sown in British coastal waters by German airplanes and submarines. These mines, unlike the usual anchored type, are dropped free and sink to the bottom, and thus must be laid in fairly-shallow coastal

Britain, France Will Continue Aid To Finland if That Country Decides to Fight "To Bitter End"

Paris, March 8. — (AP)—Great Britain and France, who already have sent considerable aid to Finland, are ready to continue their assistance if the Helsinki government decides to fight "to the bitter end", sources close to the French Foreign office said today.

Commenting on Swedish efforts to negotiate peace between Finland and Russia, these sources declared,—

"Finland has the possibility of taking the road which Sweden has invited her to explore, or of appealing to the Allied powers to increase their action. France and Britain, who have carried out the Geneva decisions in favor of Finland, are ready to continue their effort to safeguard the independence of the nation".

Appeal to France

The same sources said Finland had appealed to France for technicians to supervise the use of equipment already dispatched by the Allies, which was reported earlier in the day to include 406 air planes, 916 cannon and large quantities of lesser arms. Two thirds of the material already has arrived, it was said.

Britain has sent 230 planes, of which 67 were bombers, and France has shipped 175 pursuit planes, the announcement said. Britain's artillery contribution was 420 pieces and France's 496. Other Allied contributions were listed as follows,—

One hundred twenty-four machine guns, 5,000 light machine guns; 150 anti-tank guns, 2,300,000 shells; 450,000 grenades, 1,050 sea mines, 10,000 anti-tank mines, 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 cartridges.

Besides the armaments that Great Britain and France have contributed, Italy and Spain have been routing arms consignments through France for the Finnish armies.

$3,115,000,000 VOTE OF CREDIT TO FINANCE WAR

Amount is Estimated for Prosecution of War Till March 31, 1941

GENERAL SERVICES

London, March 8—(CP)— The Treasury announced a 700,000,000 pounds $(3,115,000,000) vote of credit today to finance war expenditures.

This amount was the estimate of what would be necessary to cover expenses for the year ending March 31, 1941, for the navy, army, air service, Ministry of Supply and "maintenance of public order and efficient prosecution of the war."

The Treasury's command paper on war finances said the 700,000,000 credit estimate was for general expenses, in addition to specific appropriations by Parliament.

GERMAN BOMBER IS SHOT DOWN

Raider is Second Victim of R.A.F. Off Scotland in Two Days

The raider was the second victim of the Royal Air Force off Scotland in two days and the 45th on or near the coast since the war began.

Explosion Homemade Bombs Alarms Downtown Toronto

Toronto, March 8—(CP)— Two homemade bombs exploded in the back yard of a Chestnut Street home last night, shook the downtown section of Toronto and sent people scurrying into the streets in night attire.

Several windows in neighboring houses were smashed by the force of the explosion but no injuries were reported.

Police said the bombs, cannisters filled with explosives, had been tossed into the yard from a lane at the back. The bombs landed on a fence which was demolished by the explosion.

Gus Mattiachione, who moved into the house just two days ago, told police he believed the bombs were intended for someone else.

Police considered the possibility the explosives may have been aimed at Angelo's restaurant, a few doors away, which was the object of an abortive extortion plot in 1936. Angelo Belfanti, owner of the restaurant, said he had received no threats or demands for money since the original one four years ago.

Finnish Delegate Visits Adolf Hitler

Berlin, March 8 (AP)—Per Evind Svinhufvud, 79-year-old former President of Finland, arrived here by plane today and immediately entered the office of Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop accompanied by the Swedish Minister to Germany, Arvid Richert.

Diplomatic circles believed the governments of Finland and Sweden would make an appeal to Adolf Hitler to intercede with Russia for terms on which a Russian-Finnish peace might be negotiated.

These circles believed the Emissaries would represent to Hitler that such mediation on his part is the only means of averting intervention of the western powers in the struggle.

FEW NEW ISSUES AS THE CAMPAIGN ENTERS STRETCH

National Gov't. Nothing But "Nebulous Gov't. of Unnamed Persons and Unknown Policies," States P. E. I. Premier

(By The Canadian Press)

Quickening activity along the political front showed signs today of being the preliminary to a general barrage in which the heavy fire of all combatting parties will open up in the last two weeks of the Dominion election campaign.

The government and opposition groups are sending some of their strongest speakers into the verbal battle and reinforcements are being called up as the crucial period of the campaign approaches in the drive for votes in the March 26 election.

MARTIAL LAW DECREED FOR GREATER PART OF THE NETHERLANDS

The Hague, Mar. 8 (AP).—A Royal decree extending maritial law to the greater part of the Netherlands" is in preparation, it was announced today. Defence Minister A. Q. H. Dijxhoorn, made the announcement in the Upper Chamber of the States General in answer to questions as to what steps the government was taking in view of the "dangers of espionage".

"If necessary the government will not hesitate to proclaim martial law for the entire country," the minister declared. He did not indicate when the decree will become effective.

Martial law was declared Nov. 1, 1939, in all strategic military and naval areas without suspending civil authority.

The Defence Minister said secret service agents and the police were actively combating espionage.

New 'Lawrence of Arabia' Leading Arab Legion Against German Efforts

London, March 8—(CP)—Reuters News Agency, in a dispatch from Amman, Trans-Jordan, said last night that a new "Lawrence of Arabia" is leading a desert patrol of the Arab Legion and will defeat any efforts of Germany to create an Arab revolt in the Near East.

The correspondent said that if the war moves to the Near East Britain will be in a far stronger position than the Turks were in the last war.

He wrote—

"Already there are signs that Germany is trying to emulate Lawrence by stirring the Arabs to revolt. But this is where the famous desert patrol of the Arab Legion will play its part.

"This body of men, true unspoiled Bedouins and fine warriors, recruited from the tribes of Eastern Trans-Jordan is headed by an Englishman—Club Pasha.

"He is known throughout the Arabian Deserts as Abou Heeik—the Father of Chins—owing to a wound on the chin which he received in the last war.

"He knows more about the Bedouin tribes than any living Englishman. . . .

"He has a reputation as a great fighter, won when he co-ordinated the Iraq and Bedouin tribes in 1924 and personally led them into battle against marauding bands of raiders from Saudi Arabia.

"The men of the Desert patrol wear striking uniforms, consisting mainly of a colored Galabieh with long white sleeves, a silver dagger a bandolier, rifle, scarlet skin-lined cloak, sandals and flowing Arab head-dress.

"They will be our surest weapon against German agents trying to seduce with gold certain tribal elements across the border".

Survivors From Italian Freighter Tell of Incident

Freighter Sailing Fully Lighted and German Plane Must Have Seen Italian Markings, 16-Year-Old Survivor Remarks on Landing

EVERYTHING LOST

Four Bombs Dropped on Vessel and Crew Soon Realized They Were Incendiary Ones — Radio Man Injured and One of Crew Killed

London, Mar. 8 (CP).—Charges that a German plane deliberately dropped incendiary bombs on the 5,335-ton Italian freighter Amelia Lauro, killing one crew member, were made by survivors when they reached a British port today.

The body of the dead sailor remained aboard the burning vessel. The 29 other members of the crew were picked up by the 5,297-ton Italian freighter Titania and were later transferred to a coastal lifeboat. Having lost everything, the Italian sailors had to borrow clothing when they came ashore.

Tomasso Giacco Elio, 16-year-old survivor, said his ship was sailing fully lighted and that the crew of the German plane must have seen the Italian flag before attacking her. He added that the Amelia Lauro was unarmed, and that the plane came down to within a few yards of its deck.

"I heard a strange noise," Captain Massimiliano Lepaci said in telling of the attack. "I was asked whethed our motors were working regularly or not when I saw a plane flying over our ship.

"After examining her carefully the plane few off, but ten minutes later came back over us and threw four bombs on the vessel. We did not know at first what missiles were used, but we soon realized they were incendiary ones. They did not explode on the spot, but the deck had been almost destroyed and our radio damaged.

"The radio man was injured, and one of his comrades set up an emergency antenna and broadcast an SOS. Another Italian ship, the steamer Titania, came to us, and we were able to row to her. About one hour later explosions were heard on the wreck of the Amelia Lauro.

"The bombs were exploding. The deck was ablaze. We could do nothing, and the Titania transferred us on board the lifeboat that brought us ashore."

Last week the 2,227-ton Italian steamer Mira was bombed and machine-gunned while passing through the North Sea to a Scottish port, but no one was hurt.

Three injured members of the Amelia Lauro's crew, Michele Spinelli, cook, Salvatore Spennato, stoker, and Lugi Sansfilippo were taken to a hospital.

The Second Officer had a remarkable escape when a bomb splinter cut a hole in his jacket, striking a pocket lighter.

Giving his story of the attack, Salvatore Barano, of Priposto, Sicily, said—

"I was below in the engine room. I heard a plane flying than a thud. An order came to stop the engines. There was a really big crash.

Thirty Members of Queen Elizabeth's Crew Quit Ship

New York, March 8 — (AP)—Nearly 30 members of the Queen Elizabeth's crew quit the ship at Greenock, at the mouth of the River Clyde, when they learned they were sailing for New York, one of those who stayed with the liner disclosed today.

They had signed on, said the crewman, thinking they were going to a commonplace cruise from Greenock to Southampton, about 700 miles down the British coast. They were to get "four pounds, two and 10," about $18.50.

"Some of those who got off," he continued, "were dissatisfied with the company's guarantees, and others said they had not been signed on to go to New York.

"There was a disagreement about a guarantee of their security. The commander, the chief engineer and representatives of the British Board of Trade met all of the sailors at Greenock to discuss the differences. A guarantee of a bonus of 30 pounds, (about $135) was made.

"Despite this promise, about 30 crew members still were reluctant to continue with the voyage, so they got off. They were afraid to face the hazards. The remainder, inspired by their loyalty to the company and their country, were willing to proceed."

Denies Charges Of Disloyalty

Regina, March 8.— (CP)— Rev. T. C. Douglas, the C.C.F. member for Weyburn in the recently dissolved House of Commons, issued a statement today in which he denied what he termed "the absurd and untruthful" charges made by J. F. Herman (S.C. Melville) in the Saskatchewan legislature on March fourth.

In the legislature, Mr. Herman charged that Mr. Douglas "did not play the part of a loyal British subject", and that in 1937 the Weyburn Member had declared at a Coronation Day celebration that "we have sung God Save the King long enough". The celebration was held at Outram, Sask.

Mr. Douglas in his statement quoted from a report of his address at Outram in which he declared there was a greater loyalty now than ever before to the throne of the British Empire.

"Mr. Herman's charges", added Mr. Douglas, "are not only a reflection upon my loyalty but upon the citizens of the Outram district".

TREE PLANTING ON SCHOOLYARDS ADD MUCH TO APPEARANCE

Taking advantage of the offer of the Forestry Department to supply young trees for schoolyard planting and other beautification projects, 32 schools of Hastings County now have attractive wind-breaks on their property, according to County Agricultural Representative H. L. Fair.

The pupils were also given the opportunity to secure trees for home-planting.

There are 184 rural schools in Hastings County, all of which have received application forms for trees. It is expected that there will be a large increase in the number of trees planted by school children this year.

Tree-planting has been on the increase in this county during the past few years. In 1935 there were 24 applications for trees, and 77,878 were distributed. In 1939 there were 130 applications and 127,351 were sent to this county. Simcoe County planted 2,316,530 last year.

KINSMEN CLUB RALLY HERE ON MONDAY

Kingston, Marmora, and representatives of clubs in this district will be the guests of the Belleville Kinsmen Club at the district meeting rally here on Monday night.

The governor of the district will be the guest speaker and a novel program has been arranged for the occasion. The clubmen will hold their annual dance on Easter Monday night.

GET LICENCES EARLY AND AVOID THE RUSH

No extension of time will be granted beyond March 31st for use of 1939 plates and licences.

In making this announcement, officials of the local issuer's office urged all motorists to secure their permits and licences immediately. While many car owners throughout the province have secured their plates there are hundreds who have not as yet bothered, and who face the prospect of finding themselves in a last-minute rush.

Motorists can easily avoid the inconveniences of waiting in a crowd, officials declare. "It's a job that takes but a few minutes now, but may take hours later on. "We have the plates and licences; it is now up to the motorists, but March 31st is positively the deadline."

CLEAN OFF SIDEWALKS

City Public Works Department officials today urged that citizens take advantage of the mild weather and remove ice from pavements outside their places of residence.

Plenty of sand also is available, City Engineer Mott said. A telephone call will bring any desired quantity.

SHORTAGE OF TRAINED GIRLS FOR HOUSEWORK

With twenty-five women employees leaving for the Bata Shoe Company's plant at Frankford this week, the total of city employees is brought to approximately seventy all told, Employment Superintendent W. D. Ross said today.

There is still a shortage of trained domestics in this district although a number of inexperienced girls are looking for domestic positions.

Registration of skilled mechanics is proceeding very slowly with something like fifty-four having filled in forms.

No farmers have as yet made application for Spring labor, while few if any laborers have signified their desire to go to the farms.

Police Blotter

No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours, leaving the police cell block available to the 11 transients, who sought warm sleeping quarters there last night.

Robert Browning, driver for the Purity Bread Company, complained to police, that a cake had been stolen from his parked truck last evening. The baking is believed to have been taken by juveniles and other bakeries have complained of similar pilferings this winter. Teen-aged boys are said to have raided the bakery trucks while the deliverymen are making sales in private homes.

Picton police hold a warrant for a man and woman, who have alleged to have left that town without paying their board bill. A description of the pair was afforded the local police today.

Sergeant Arthur Harman revealed today that the police are in possession of a lady's purse, found on Bridge St., about one week ago. No owner has sought the article to date.

POLICE COURT

"I'm going to place you on the prohibitive list," stated Magistrate E. J. Butler K. C., after a Tyendinaga Township resident had pleaded guilty to a third offence of intoxication, when arraigned in local police court today. A charge of breaking a plate glass window at the Globe Cafe against the same man was held in abeyance until Monday, as the accused stated he had no recollection of the incident.

"I have considerable respect for your family, but none whatsoever for you. The last time you were in this court I told you to stay out of Belleville," added His Worship as he severely admonished the accused for his continual drunkenness.

Charged with being found in possession of an increased amount of native wine, Patrick Farrara of this city, appeared and requested an enlargement until Monday. It was granted when Acting Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson stated he had no objections to the adjournment.

Two other minor L.C.A. charges constituted the court.

Picton I. O. D. E. Sends Box Clothing to Finns

Picton, Mar. 8.—The Sir Thomas Picton Chapter I.O.D.E. continues their work of responding to worthy appeals. This week they packed a large bale to be sent to Finland. Included in the contents were 72 pairs of socks, seven Balaclava caps, ten scarves, 23 sweaters, mittens, seven pairs wristlets, 45 suits woollen combinations, 15 pairs woollen blankets. Various members contributed many articles and cash. The Chapter received an appeal from the Provincial I.O.D.E. headquarters and there was a speedy response.

Women Conservatives Organise.

Picton Women's Conservative Association was reorganized Thursday afternoon with Mrs. (Dr.) T. S. Philp as president, Mrs. C. L. Colliver, vice-president, and Miss Lottie Cole, secretary-treasurer.

Short addresses outlining the issues of the campaign were given by George J. Tustin, the candidate and James deC. Hepburn, M.L.A.

In their addresses, Mr. Tustin and Mr. Hepburn explained the plan of National Government and what such a united effort would mean to Canada and the Empire.

Scout Gathering.

The various Boy Scout troops in town met Wednesday evening in the scout hall with a large attendance of Scouts and leaders and assistants. S.M. Milton Snider and three members of the live Wellington troops were welcome visitors and Mr. Snider revealed some of their activities. Also present were Mrs. C. Ball, R.N. of the Mission Church Troop, Miss V. McLean, Miss Dorothy Keep, representing the local Girl Guides. Scout Commissioner Gordon Smith presided. Roger Ross gave an interesting account of a trip to the gold mines in Northern Ontario. Scout work and plans were discussed. The local Scouts have collected a ton of paper, proceeds to purchase supplies for the Scouts. This is collected Saturdays. A social time was spent.

OBITUARY

MRS. OSBORNE PARM

After an illness of ten days' duration, Mrs. Osborne Parm, late residence, Cannifton Road, passed away in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday, March 7th.

The late Mrs. Parm, who was in her 75th year, was born in Kent, England. Prior to her marriage, she was Miss Susan Walker, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Walker. For a time she resided in Toronto and for the past thirty years she made her home in this locality and was well esteemed. Fraternally she was a member of Court Robinhood Ancient Order of Foresters, Toronto, for about sixty years.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Osborne Parm; three daughters, Mrs. F. Patterson, Toronto; Mrs. William Tindall, Toronto, and Mrs. E. M. Pigden, Belleville; three sons, Mr. Charles Parm, Cannifton Road; Mr. James Parm of Tweed, and Mr. John Parm of Cannifton; two sisters, Mrs. Catherine Jessop and Mrs. Paul Sheffield, both of Toronto.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. ELIZA J. GRILLS

Mrs. Eliza Jane Grills, late residence, Ottawa, and widow of George Henry Grills, passed away on Tuesday, March 5th. She had been in failing health for some time.

The late Mrs. Grills, who was in her 75th year, was born in Oshawa, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Craig. For some years she resided in Belleville and left here to reside in Toronto many years ago. In religion she was a member of the United Church.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. J. W. Hocking, and Mrs. Fred L. Murphy, both of Ottawa; a grandson, Mr. Joseph Hocking, Ottawa, and a granddaughter, Mrs. Douglas Gall (nee Betty Hocking), Ottawa.

The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street. The service in the chapel and at the Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church. (Toronto papers please copy.)

LATE ANDREW TOUNSLEY

The funeral of Andrew Tounsley, late residence 41 Baldwin Street, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, on Thursday afternoon, March 7th. The service in the chapel and at Belleville Cemetery, where entombment was made, was conducted by the Rev. D. T. McClintock, pastor of the Tabernacle United Church.

The bearers were Messrs. G. S. Casey, F. S. Follwell, W. Hogan, R. Davidson, H. Halls and G. Clarke.

Village of Wellington Does Nobly in Work For Red Cross Assoc.

Headed by a mere male, who has already knitted ten pairs of socks, and other woolen articles, the War Emergency Committee of the village of Wellington, is rapidly approaching a record in made articles forwarded to the Red Cross Headquarters.

Since operations started in November, 360 pairs of socks, 14 scarfs, 14 pairs wristlets, 5 dozen triangular bandages, 5 dozen abdominal bandages, 4 dozen T binders and numerous other articles were made. Included are pyjamas, hospital gowns, caps and hot water bottle covers.

Fifty members comprise the organization and to date through their efforts they have raised five hundred dollars locally.

Suspended Sentence Given on Receiving Charge in Court

"When coal companies place large piles of coal on the Government Dock, and in a district where coal is needed to maintain warmth in the home, these companies are extending an invitation to theft and should more adequately protect their property, when it is exposed."

R. D. Arnott K.C., told the Belleville police court, held before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., when his client, Arthur Kellar, St. Paul Street, appeared on a charge of receiving stolen goods to wit a quantity of coal alleged to be stolen from the coal pile of the Schuster Coal Company, situated on the Belleville Government Dock.

Kellar pleaded guilty and was given a six months suspended sentence and bound over to keep the peace for one year. No costs were imposed.

"This is a very unfortunate case. This family of eight was in receipt of $45.00 a month from the Mothers' Allowance Board until December last, when by a mistake the amount was reduced to $15.00 per month. That error has now been rectified, however, and the family will receive $40.00 per month in the future," explained Mr. Arnott as he pointed out that Mr. Kellar was in poor health and also the fact that the family was not eligible for city relief.

Speaking on behalf of the prosecution, Acting Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson did not press the case too strongly, but assured the court that private and company property must be protected. "This practice of stealing coal from companies is an all too frequent occurrence in this district and must be curbed," held Mr. Robertson as he consented to a suspended sentence under the circumstances.

Magistrate Butler held there "must have been a robbery," but took a lenient stand in the matter in his judgment.

Trenton Teams Lose to St. Georges

Bantams Lose 4-3 but Midgets Were Swamped 7-1—Return Games on Saturday

Trenton, March 8 (Special)—Midget and Bantam hockey clubs from Trenton journeyed to St. Georges yesterday where both local teams lost their game versus the St. Georges kids in the O.J.H.A. semi-finals. Goals count on the round, however, and the return games will be played here on Saturday.

The Trenton bantams only face a one goal deficit for their return game, having lost 4 to 3 while the St. Georges Midgets triumphed 7 to 1 over the local midgets, however.

Seven motor car loads of players and interested Trenton supporters made the trip to St. Georges yesterday arriving back in Trenton early today. Both series are provincial semi-final play-offs. The local bantam team entertains high aspirations of winning their round and advancing to the association finals while the bantams face a six-goal deficit in their series.

Defective eyesight is a major cause of the jitters and "sour" dispositions. Eyes that are weak or defective usurp nerve energy intended to keep other organs in balance—and indirectly cause a person to fatigue easily, become cross, on edge—and generally jittery. 50-YEAR JEWELS TO BE PRESENTED

Napanee, Ont., March 8 (CP) — Fifty-year jewels will be presented tonight to three members of Union Masonic Lodge No. 9 here in a ceremony believed to be without precedent in Ontario.

W. S. Herrington, a Past Grand Master of Ontario jurisdiction, and Frank H. Perry and John W. Robinson will receive the awards. It is believed the first time three veterans' jewels have been presented in one night in the province.

The Ontario Grand Master, Dr. J. A. Dobbie of Ottawa, and Past Grand Masters R. B. Dargavel and John A. Rowland of Toronto will attend. The Napanee lodge is 128 years old.

ANTI-MINE CABLE ON GIANT LINER

zones to be effective. They are detonated when the steel hull of a ship actuates a magnetic plunger within the mine.

Installed High Above Water

The girdle of 10 to 12 heavily-insulated cables on the Queen Elizabeth are strung like metal fixtures riveted into the plates just below the promenade deck windows.

One naval expert expressed belief the cables set up a field which neutralizes the magnetic mechanism in mines. Thus, a mine attracted to the steel hull would be neutralized or repelled by the cable circuit.

He also believed the device would be effective against more recently developed mines which contain a pendulum set into motion against internal detonators by a steel hull.

Another observer ventured the opinion that the cables form a loop antennae for the transmission of powerful long-wave radio beams sufficient to explode mines.

The Cunard Line, in a statement explaining the ordering of the ship to New York Harbor, said in part: "In view of existing circumstances, it was decided that the ship should proceed to New York, which she did, leaving last Saturday and arriving yesterday after an uneventful voyage at moderate speed.

Interior Not Completed

"Her interior accommodations are not wholly complete, and no plans have been made for the vessel beyond tying her up at pier 90 with the Queen Mary."

One of the 378 crew members, however, disclosed that "20 marine engineers and naval architects" came over on the ship. That gave rise to speculation that the ship might be completed while in her berth here.

Like the line officials, members of the crew declined to comment on the Queen Elizabeth's cable girdle.

One, however, commented:

"It really don't do a blasted thing. It's only there to frighten submarines."

Makes Ship Non-magnetic.

London, Mar. 8 (CP).—Great Britain has beaten Germany's magnetic mine with an electrical girdle for ships which neutralizes the trigger action of the underwater terrors.

The arrival of the steamship Queen Elizabeth at New York gave the world its first inkling of the apparatus which was evolved and perfected by British scientists after three months of intensive work.

The apparatus consists of a snake of wire around the upper decks of the ship with electric currents running through it. How the current is energized and neutralizes the magnetic field of the ship is the secret of the whole device.

In effect it makes the ship non-magnetic. This destroys the effectiveness of the magnetic mine which depends on the magnetic field of the passing vessel to fire it.

The apparatus has been installed on hundreds of ships ranging from yachts and trawlers to mighty battleships and ocean greyhounds like the Queen Elizabeth. Its effect is to turn each of them into a ship having no more magnetic effect than a wooden hulled vessel.

The principal was evolved in a naval establishment and developed by naval technicians and scientists. The navy calls it "de-gauss equipment" The gauss is the unit of magnetic flux.

It is the intention of the admiralty to instal de-gauss equipment on every British ship. It can be installed on an ordinary vessel in four days but on a ship like the Queen Elizabeth it takes two weeks.

During experiments it was discovered that the magnetic fields differ on every ship, depending on many factors including the latitude in which it was built. This necessitates that each ship be energized differently.

Boycott of Mexican Oil by U. S. Interests May be Broken

Mexico City, March 8—(AP)—A settlement with the Sinclair Oil interests, indicating a break in the world-wide boycott established by big petroleum interests when Mexico expropriated their properties two years ago, was reported reliably today. Disclosure of a plan to pay the United States firm 9,000,000 barrels of oil as full indemnity for its seized properties was made by one of President Lazaro aCrdenas' advisers.

AT THE McCARTHY

"HIS GIRL FRIDAY"

Columbia release of Howard Hawks' production, "from a play by Ben Hecht and Charles McArthur", now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, with the following cast:

Walter Burns—Cary Grant
Hildy Johnson—Rosalind Russell
Bruce Baldwin—Ralph Bellamy
Sheriff Hartwell—Gene Lockhart
Mollie Malloy—Helen Mack
Murphy—Porter Hall
Bensinger—Ernest Truex
Mayor—Clarence Kolb
Endicott—Cliff Edwards
McCue—Roscoe Karns
Wilson—Frank Jenks
Sanders—Regis Toomey
Louis—Abner Biberman
Duffy—Frank Orth
Earl Williams—John Qualan
Mrs. Baldwin—Alma Kruger
Joe Pettibone—Billy Gilbert
Warden Cooley—Pat West
Dr. Egelhoffer—Edwin Maxwell

The following is the review on "His Girl Friday" now at the McCarthy Theatre, as written by Roly Young (Rambling with Roly), in his column of February 17th, during its showing at the Imperial Theatre, Toronto.

Within the past week or so I have been making some observations about remakes which were not on the side of these warmed-over films so........along comes "His Girl Friday" (Imperial) just to make a liar out of me. Of course I have an alibi, because "His Girl Friday" has been so far remade that you can hardly recognize it. Columbia carefully says it is "from a play by Ben Hecht and Charles McArthur", which is an obvious attempt to camouflage the fact that it is the old favorite newspaper yarn "The Front Page", all dressed up in new guise.

Remember "The Front Page"?, Adolphe Menjou was the hard-boiled managing editor, and Pat O'Brien was Hildy Johnson. Cary Grant has Menjou's role in this new version, and Pat O'Brien can blush over the fact that his role of Hildy Johnson is now being played by Rosalind Russell. Yes, Hildy has changed sex That makes several amusing complications. For one thing there a lot of things that happened to Hildy in "The Front Page", that couldn't happen to Hildy in "His Girl Friday", so they invented Bruce Baldwin (Ralph Bellamy) as Hildy's fiance, and he takes all the raps formerly hung on the male Hildy.

When those complications are ironed out and a bit more romance injected in proceedings, what remains is fundamentally "Front Page" and it all adds up to headline entertainment. Howard Hawks has kept things moving at a feverish pace and the script(this version by Charles Lederer, who rates a bow) adopts a tongue-in-cheek farcical attitude that does much to keep the entertainment quota high. I'm happy to report that this remake is a complete success, with plenty of laughs and all the drama of the original, and sufficiently dissimilar that you don't feel you are looking at something you've seen before.

The cast is swell throughout. Grant does a grand job as a hard-boiled smart alec managing editor. Whereas Menjou played the role straight, Grant plays it farce, in keeping with the whole spirit of the picture, and is just as good in his own way. Rosalind Russell is terrific as Hildegarde Johnson. A few more roles like these recent ones and I can see Rosy giving Myrna Loy a run for her money. Ralph Bellamy does a swell job as the serious-minded insurance man from Albany. (The picture goes "cute" a couple of times, such as when Cary Grant called on to describe the character played by Bellamy, remarks: "Oh, he looks like that movie guy Ralph Bellamy," and later still when somebody tells Grant that he's all washed up, Grant remarks that "the last guy who told me that was Archie Leach", (his own name.)

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Eagle and the Hawk."

Still one of the greatest of all films for thrills, for romance, for sheer drama of raw hate and burning love, the screen has never surpassed this great war drama of the British Flying Corps. "The Eagle and the Hawk," now playing to capacity audiences at the Capitol featuring an all-star cast, Frederic March, Cary Grant, Jack Oakie and Carole Lombard.

On the same program, Clarence E. Mulford's "Renegade Trail," starring the popular western cowboy William Boyd and "Gabby" George Hayes. The 7th chapter of the thrilling detective serial "Red Barry," and "Believe or Else," a cartoon complete the bill.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, March 9
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

The lunar and mutual aspects bearing rule on the affairs of this day are rather conflicting but eventually culminate in constructive and satisfactory results. Preliminary to success there will be a decisive breaking up of static or long-thwarting conditions will pave the way for sound progress and a stabilization of the fortunes. Real possessions should increase, but be alert to wiles and schemes and sign papers cautiously. In the domestic, social and sentimental relations there is much security and happiness.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a year of very definite progress in the matter of advancing their interests and enhancing their fortunes. These may be put on a stable basis by the breaking up of old, congested or stagnant situations to make way for constructive results by hard work, initiative and sound judgment. But be wary of schemes and sign all papers with care. A similar state of advancement and security pervades all domestic, social and affectional relationships. Elders are of benefit.

A child born on this day may be serious, profound, studious, and hard working, and practical as well as enterprising. Its stability of character and sound principles should lead it to success, happiness and recognition.

AT THE BELLE

"Little Old New York"

Darryl F. Zanuck and Director Henry King, the combination that gave screen fans such films as "In Old Chicago", "Stanley and Livingstone," Alexander's Ragtime Band" and "Jesse James" have turned out another smash hit in Zanuck's production of "Little Old New York." This robust, rollicking, romantic drama from 20th Century-Fox opens next at the Belle Theatre, with Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene and Brenda Joyce heading a brilliant cast which includes Andy Devine, Henry Stephenson and Fritz Feld.

"Little Old New York" brings back those days "way back when" cows roamed Fifth Avenue, grog was a penny a swig and the Astors and the Roosevelts were just starting on their way. New York's waterfront was a colorful maze of sailing ships, whose rigging made an exotic network against the sky and whose bowsprits jutting into the shore made progress along the waterfront streets like walking under a beamed ceiling. It was a robust, hail-and-hearty life New Yorkers led in those days, typified in the story of the barmaid belle of the brawling waterfront who fought the whole town to win the love and share in the glory of such a man as Robert Fulton.

The headstrong belle is Alice Faye who finds herself in rivalry with Brenda Joyce, niece of Fulton's wealthy backer, for the affections of Fulton played by Richard Greene.

Although "Little Old New York" deals basically with the drama of the first steamboat, the "Clermont," the historical aspects are overshadowed by the absorbing double romance, with Fred MacMurray making his bid for love as the rough-hearted, shipbuilder admirer of Miss Faye.

Both girls try to help Fulton in his struggle against those who would prevent the success of his invention as well as an inconsiderate fate determined to place as many obstacles as possible in the way of the coming of steam to the sea.

From a production standpoint "Little Old New York" is almost without parallel. The sets are gigantic. The producers have actually rebuilt the whole lower part of New York as it was in 1807. Every element of good film fare is present, from fist fights and weddings, ships afire, robust romance, to dancing and song. Little Old New York is rousingly good entertainment and must be seen.

"The Shop Around the Corner"

Ernst Lubitsch has come up with another and most agreeable surprise. For the director who made Gerta Garbo and the nation laugh with "Ninotchka" has brought Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart to the screen in a motion picture as humanly realistic and charmingly amusing as the daily doing at the neighborhood grocery store. It is "The Shop Around the Corner" which is now being presented at the Belle theatre.

"Nick Carter—Master Detective"

A dime-novel hero familiar to all readers of the past generation becomes reincarnated in streamline form in "Nick Carter—Detective," romantic thrill story of the famed super sleuth, which is brought completely up to date in the film announced as the added feature attraction with Walter Pidgeon in the title role and Rita Johnson playing the feminine lead.

Province of Quebec a beautiful traveltalk in color will be exhibited in the same program.

ALLIES OUTSTRIP ENEMY IN PLANE PRODUCTION

Two major factors in the air warfare of the future which will play a great role in crushing Hitler are the supremacy in numbers of warplanes of the Allies and the great superiority of their aircraft.

The Empire and France had the great satisfaction of knowing yesterday for a fact that Anglo-French production of aircraft has outstripped Germany's and that the Allies' machines have the edge on the Germans' in performance.

How many planes the two great democracic nations have is naturally not revealed but kept under a cloak of secrecy but it was encouraging to know that they are superior in both respects to the Nazi Germans.

What Britain and France have in air mechanism and personnel will be greatly increased. The future is beginning to unfold with the great air training plans for Canada, New Zealand and Australia which will produce as high as 20,000 pilots and 30,000 other airmen annually.

What have Allied airmen done? They have made more than a thousand sorties night and day over Germany, they have sighted enemy submarines more than 100 times and have attacked more than sixty of them.

Forty-four German raiding planes have been shot down at or near the British coast in the six months of war.

GREATEST LINER HAS QUIET PASSAGE ACROSS OCEAN

One of the feats of the war has just been accomplished, the safe passage through the Atlantic from the British Isles to New York of the largest of ocean liners, the Queen Elizabeth. For days while the giant ship was steaming towards the Western World, the world at large knew nothing of her, though many along the Clyde had seen the vessel sailing out to sea.

She would have been a giant target for any enemy submarine if the enemy could have known of her departure or the course of her voyage and could have approached her but so well was the secret kept that she has arrived without incident in New York harbor.

This voyage of what would have been an amazing prize could the enemy have taken it, shows the supremacy which Britain enjoys on the seas, the voyage being the answer to the German boasts and shows the confidence of British people. An answer has been given Adolf Hitler and Admiral Raeder, naval chief of the Nazis, in the words of the Scottish and National Press Association report.

Britons take pride in the accomplishment of the gigantic ship, which will when finished be the greatest of all liners, because she has proven, what Britishers know, that so large a ship was safe all the way through the journey.

The Nazis on the other hand must have chafed when they heard of the liner's successful voyage to the new world port of New York, where under the laws she is quite safe.

NEWFOUNDLAND AT WAR

Newfoundland, the oldest of Britain's colonies, is doing a service of yeoman character, marked by the ruggedness which is typical of the people of that country. More daring and brave men were not born than the people of this colony, Canada's neighbor in the British Commonwealth. The world has some notion of the service which the fishermen and seamen of the colony have given and now there is the statement by Mr. Anthony Eden that upwards of thirteen hundred more Newfoundlanders have enlisted in the British forces in the artillery branch. The Newfoundlanders will as far as possible be maintained as a Newfoundland unit.

Newfoundland is a country which by its very nature develops men of resource, hardy men, to whom bravery in the face of danger is natural. She was represented in the last war and in this war her men will give a good account of themselves.

AVOID SPLASHING

Motorcar drivers have an opportunity these days of a real service, so to drive when pedestrians are close to their cars that will not splash them with the water and slushy snow. There are times when the pedestrian has to take to the road to avoid getting his feet wet on walks the surface of which may be covered with water for stretches and it is only fair that drivers slacken their speed and drive carefully by so as not to send flying a mass of water and snow and drench everybody within reach. At the corners, too, the same opportunity of courtesy is privileged drivers.

HOW MUCH SLEEP DO WE NEED?

The above words open an interesting section of the little pamphlet of the National Health Series on "Sleep," issued by the Ministry of Pensions and National Health, Ottawa. "For adults, authorities are not agreed, although for generations it has been believed that the average grown-up person should, to be mentally and physically alert and efficient, obtain a good eight hours slumber in each of the twenty four.. Individual cases must be considered. Some people do not feel at their best when they get less than nine or even ten hours' sleep per day. Others are as fit as a fiddle with as little as four or five or six hours daily."

Findings are not definite but the booklet says "experience with a great army of patients, many of them neurotics, has convinced Dr. J. P. S. Cathcart, chief neuro-psychiatrist of the Department of Pensions and National Health, that adults sleep too much, as a rule, and that doctors should be as concerned over the health of those who sleep more than eight hours a day as of those who sleep less but think they need more."

Sleep, the thought of which is so soothing to the mind and the one possession on earth a man would not yield even if he could and live, has been praised by the poets through all ages. Here are a few selections from them:—

"Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath;
Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second nurse,
Chief nourisher in life's feast."

"O sleep! it is a gentle thing,
Beloved from pole to pole.
To Mary Queen the praise be given,
She sent the gentle sleep from Heaven
That slid into my soul."

"Nature, oppressed and harassed out with care, Sinks down to rest."

"Sleep on, Baby, on the floor,
Tired of all the playing,
Sleep with the smile sweeter for
That you dropped away in!
On your curls' full roundness stand
Golden lights serenely—
One cheek, pushed out by the hand,
Folds the dimple inly."

"For his sleep
Was aery light, from pure digestion bred."

"Hush, my dear, lie still and slumber!
Holy angels guard thy bed."

Correcting Careless Constipation

Despite the fact that chronic constipation may be due to weak abdominal muscles which lack power to drive wastes downward, or to weak muscles of the intestines themselves, most cases of chronic constipation are due to carelessness or thoughtlessness.

In discussing chronic constipation, Dr. T. F. Reuther, Assistant in Surgery, University of Illinois, in Clinical Medicine and Surgery, states:—

"Most cases of constipation are functional (not due to weakness of muscles, obstruction, or disease). The patient does not answer the "call" promptly; the rectum becomes more or less anaesthetic (quiet or asleep), by habit, then the patient takes laxatives and developes an 'irritable colon'. In these cases the patient must faithfully follow the physician's detailed instructions, establishing correct bowel habits. Many physicians now give these instructions in typewritten form which the patient gradually memorizes".

Some of the instructions given by Dr. Reuther are:—

1—Learn to live without hurry, worry, or psychic (mental or emotional) strain.

2—Get up half an hour earlier than usual. Go to bed half an hour earlier. Drink a glass of water on arising.

3—Take a short brisk walk, or 10 to 15 minutes' "setting up" exercises before breakfast. (Perhaps a couple of lumps of sugar may be necessary before the walk to prevent any "weak" feeling).

4—Eat enough breakfast to distend the stomach and so start the "movement" downward of the whole digestive tract. Eat the breakfast slowly, and then go to stool. (It is this regular, leisurely habit of going to stool after breakfast, instead of rushing off to get to work on time, that prevents constipation in most cases.)

5.—Take no laxative drugs to relax the spasm in spastic constipation.

I believe the most helpful of the above suggestions is to get up early enough to take exercise, eat a large breakfast, and have plenty of time to go to stool regularly after breakfast instead of hurrying away and neglecting Nature's "call".

Fight Nazi Spies In South Africa

Johannesburg, South Africa — (CP)—Confidential reports on the extent of the Nazi propaganda campaign in South Africa have disclosed such a serious state of affairs that the Unity Truth Service—the instrument with which the Union Unity Fund fights Nazi spies and sympathisers—has decided to double its efforts.

Since the fund has started work town and country districts of South Africa have been swept by a "pamphlet blizzard." More than 1,500,000 leaflets, explaining Hitlerism to the people and warning them of its dangers, have reached the most remote parts of the union.

Most important of all, a fighting organization, the Truth Legion, has been created to deal with Nazi lies when they crop up. Already 12,000 men and women have become legionnaires—8,000 of them in the Orange Free State—and a new recruiting campaign should bring the membership up to 25,000 soon.

Columbia's Cartagena

By TEMPLE MANNING

FEW ANCIENT cities of Europe present to the traveler a better picture of the Middle Ages or a more complete relic of the distant past than Cartagena, Colombia's four-century-old seaport. The picturesque old walled city, the fortress of San Felipe, the huge rooms and dungeons are but little changed in physical aspects from the days when pirates as well as organized navies tried to despoil it of the fabulous wealth heaped up behind its thick ramparts.

Nowadays Cartagena is a port of call for American cruise ships, the same port where ships from Spain, laden with goods for the new colonies, met treasure-laden caravans from all parts of the Caribbean—mule teams with gold and silver from the glittering palaces of the fabulous Incas in Peru and the Aztec capital in Mexico; emeralds from Colombia's rich mines; pearls from the Caribbean and indigo, tobacco and cacao from the fertile New World fields. While the ships were in port there were frenzied days of bartering under the grim walls of the fortifications, after which the vessels left for Spain and the mule trains wended their way slowly back to the colonies, carrying tools, clothes and other necessities.

Scene of Struggles

And this wealth is reflected in Cartagena. Engineers and architects came from the mother country to lay out its streets, to design its palaces and churches. Cathedrals and convents rose in the style of old Seville. About the ramparts were built walls and defenses to repulse the strongest foe. And foes there were aplenty, for the harbor of Cartagena, which appears so serene under the tropic skies, has probably witnessed more bloody conflicts than any similar spot on the American continent.

The enchantment of the middle ages is nowhere more carefully preserved than here. The narrow, winding streets are crowded with arcaded buildings. Old houses with balconies profusely carved and decorated, many of them following the Moorish form of iron-barred windows opening on courtyards that are filled with tropical vegetation, reveal their histories in coats of arms emblazoned over iron-studded doors.

Natives of Cartagena

Old Landmarks

Around the plaza and the parks of old Cartagena stand the churches in their mellow beauty. In the Parque Bolivar, surrounded by marble benches and stately palm trees, stands the Palace of the Inquisition, from which emanated the stern degrees of the religious courts. An interesting old building is the Convent of Santa Cadelaria, known as "La Popa," standing on a high hill.

Fascinating to the visitor are the tunnels and walls of the ancient city. Days could be spent wandering through the tunnels, many of which have been cleared of the debris of years and are being opened to the public for inspection.

Paris Smiles For Soldiers Coming-Going

By GLADYS M. ARNOLD

Canadian Press Correspondent

Paris—(CP)—Probably nowhere in Paris is the war so evident as in the railway stations.

A year ago tantalizing posters displayed the beauties of the Savoy the Alps and the Pyrenees, accompanied by seductively low prices for a week of ski or 10 days of sun at Cannes or Nice on the Mediterranean. These brightened the sombre halls, so rapidly called the "Pas Perdus"—Halls of Lost Footsteps.

Today a few of these faded posters still hang in the Parisian stations but most of them have been covered by new ones calling for buyers of armament bonds, or huge signs stating frankly that the stations have become the exclusive property of the soldiers.

The East Station is the most characteristic, for it is from here the soldiers leave for the front and the "permissionaries" arrive on leave. Entering at any hour of the day or night uniforms of every description are to be seen. The dull blue lights cast a ghostly palor over tired faces and gleams on the mud-colored paint of steel helmets.

There is much laughter and some tears; there are bright red signs and arrows pointing to canteens, barbershops, dormitories; there are special prices, special services, special privileges for the 'military'; there are the dark blue veils and active hands of the nurses, the anxious eyes of women.

Soldiers Exclusively

But the Montparnasse station is more interesting if on a smaller scale. The Red Cross nurse in charge accompanied me, for a large sign above the doors leading to the soldiers' "foyer" says sternly "No women admitted."

In the colossal outside hall with its tobacco and magazine stands and ticket offices along the walls, a partition has been thrown up enclosing a floorspace about 100 feet square. Within are a kitchen, dining-hall and reading room. Beneath on the next floor is a similar dormitory. The exterior is decorated with the draped flags of France, Poland and Great Britain. Inside the walls are decorated with modern murals—painted by the pupils between 15 and 18 years of age of a girl's art school.

The work is particularly good and represents the historic, comic and fantasy. "Anastasie" (censorship) with her large pair of scissors and long nose fills one corner; the soldiers of the three countries in the uniforms of the different periods depict the evolution of war; other scenes bring the freshness of flowers, the dance and landscape. One wall is devoted to Paris at night—and out of the blackness only the Eiffel Tower, a few stars and the moon are visible.

A soldier can buy a good meal for six francs (15 cents) and he is home here. They may do as they like. A shave costs them 50 centimes (about one cent) and a haircut four cents. Hundreds are served daily, for when the men come home on leave most of them must pass through Paris. This eliminated their expenses almost totally.

The Red Cross nurse said they did everything for the soldiers, from preparing their meals to writing their love letters.

Recalls Canadians

In the reading room a small, grey-haired man was putting things in order when we entered.

"Canadian?" he said, his eyes gleamed behind thick glasses. "Ah, I know your soldiers, mademoiselle, and permit myself to tell you that I spent many months with them at Vimy—such soldiers—they fight like devils. It gives me great emotion to think of it.

"Those of us who knew your compatriots in the First Great War can never forget, we were filled with profound admiration for them. You probably don't remember the meaning of—what is it they called it?—Hill 60—but you may be proud to be a Canadian. I hope it will be announced when they come to Paris, for I should deem it an honor to be at the station when they arrive."

The sincerity of the little man was so evident that your correspondent marvelled once again—for perhaps the hundredth time—at the deep and lasting impression the Canadians of the First Great War left in France.

Merry Budapest Gay but Alert

Budapest (CP)—Budapest is still gay. It's a muffled sort of gaiety, to be sure, what with war in Europe, but still there are the night clubs, the gypsy music the numberless inns and restaurants and the famous coffee houses.

True, there are fewer foreigners, but the Budapest citizen does quite well by himself in a city which as yet knows nothing of sandbagged buildings, blackouts and suspense.

The populace of Hungary's capital city has a rather happy temperament in general. They have the advantage, of course, of an unusually attractive city, well given to a sort of springtime attitude towards life. On the more realistic side, there has been plenty of food here.

However, it does not follow that Budapest lets the gypsy musicians fiddle while Europe burns, for when it looks as though trouble may strike, anti-aircraft guns are planted on top of bridges and buildings.

One old Hungarian folk song seems to catch something of the spirit of present-day Budapest. It is called "Let the Horse Worry, His Head is Bigger."

Junior Refugees British Trained Go to Palestine

By FRED BACKHOUSE

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London—CP)—As Spring comes to the quiet village of Pine Trees, deep in the heart of the Kentish Wald, a handful of youngsters there are preparing to pass through the shadow of warring Europe to a new land and a new life hundreds of miles away.

Accompanying the latest group of 25 children to Palestine will be Miss Anita Engle, a Canadian associate of the Youth Aliyah (Immigration) Movement. Miss Engle, former Calgary journalist, will go to their communal settlement and record their acclimatization in the new surroundings.

The children bear strange names for the inhabitants of Kent's typical English countryside and they speak a little English with a guttural accent that makes the local children laugh.

But when Liselotte (hair like corn) and Hans(darkly handsome) and Siegfried, Erna, Boris and the others go away, the natives will be sorry, until a new bunch of "they refugees" looking just like Liselotte and Hans come to Pine Trees.

Every so often they arrive at the great estate, these strangely dressed little children; part of Europe's human flotsam thrown up by the Nazi terror. They have been rescued by the Youth Aliyah and brought to this country to be trained for a new life as free and self-supporting citizens in Palestine.

Typical of Many

Some 7,500 of these tragic children have been taken from Germany and other Nazi-fied countries in the past six years. Even in wartime the work goes on with increasing vigor.

Six thousand young refugees already in Palestine are fitting themselves, in vocational schools and agricultural settlements for a pioneer life under the blazing sun. Many hundreds of others are in training centres in hospitable "transit" countries, like England, awaiting emigration. They come to Pine Trees, or another of the six training centres here, bewildered and subdued.

In the 13-year-old minds of Liselotte and Hans was a kaleidescope of poverty, expulsion from school; of father or brother "disappearing," never to return; of being herded into the ghettos; of beatings and of flight; and then, miraculously, of escape to this haven in England.

Kindness a Surprise

At first they could not understand the kindly and sympathetic treatment they received at the hands of the villagers among whom they lived. But through the months of work and play here the sheer impact of kindness made them believe that they were not different, not outcasts.

"When they leave for Palestine," I was told, "they carry with them a real love for England and its people."

Their daily routine at the centres is as much as possible like their future life in Palestine. Four hours physical work, four hours study. Lessons in physics, biology, history, English, Hebrew and the theory of agriculture.

Newfoundland Gives Seamen And Tree Men

(By Guy E. Rhoades, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 8—(CP) — Two thousand mackinaw-shirted Newfoundland woodsmen are felling the trees of northern England and Scotland while their fellow-countrymen patrol the coasts or man the guns of Britain's heavy mobile artillery.

Citizens of the north were startled when the hefty bushwhackers came to teach British forestry employees to make logs as they do in Britain's oldest colony. They had never seen men work so fast with axes, most of them had never heard of a crosscut saw and none of them had seen men who could drink so much strong tea.

With the loggers more than 1,800 fisherman came to help their British colleagues aboard mine-sweeping trawlers and in the auxiliary merchant service, while 1,400 men joined the heavy artillery.

The woodsmen came in groups of 1,000 each. They were recruited as experts on a six-month basis and the British government reserved the right to renew their contracts should they still be needed at the end of that time.

Transport difficulties arising from war conditions caused Britain to call for help from Newfoundland's loggers as the supply of pit-props for the nation's mines dropped dangerously low. Ordinarily pit-props are made from imported timber and the country lacks an adequate supply of competent forestry help to make her own.

Usual Supply Cut

The war cut off much of the supply from northern Europe and made its delivery uncertain. Canada and Newfoundland partly made up the deficiency but the government decided it was advisable to cut wood at home.

Newfoundland's contribution to the Empire's naval effort followed an initial call for 650 men of high physical standard and between the ages of 18 and 30. These men, many of them sons of fishermen who came from the island during the First Great War, are regarded as about the toughest sailors afloat although the British with whom they serve are mighty tough too. End of the logging season will not see the departure of the 2,000 bushmen from England. Most of them want to join the army.

Meanwhile the war at sea has given a boost to Newfoundland's cod-fishing industry which languished for years when European countries who never had fished before sent vessels to the Grand Banks.

Britain has several hundred fishing trawlers tied up with mine-sweeping and patrol duties. Newfoundland will ship a considerable quantity of fresh frozen cod to these shores. It will also continue to supply pit-props and minerals, particularly iron ore, zinc and lead concentrates.

Incidentals Count up

It wasn't always the size of the main item in a bill that runs the cost up; the "incidentals," the "minor items" often figure largely in piling up a big total.

An action was tried recently in the Supreme Court assizes at Woodstock. The amount claimed was $58. Court records show that the cost to the taxpayer of summoning a jury to hear the evidence was $4 a day to each of the 45 veniremen who were summoned for the first day of the trial and a further $4 each of the 12 jurymen who were selected from the panel of veniremen. Mileage allowance for the 45 brought the total cost to $299.37.

And the jurymen had nothing to do, after all. Except to draw their pay. For when the defendant did not present any evidence the judge instructed the jury to find for the plaintiff—just a matter of form, as the jurors did as they were told.

Add to the $299.37—paid by the County of Oxford, the City of Woodstock and the Town of Ingersoll in proportions fixed by an agreement among them—must be added the lawyers' fees, amount unknown. The greater part of those had to be paid by the defendant; but the plaintiff, though she got judgment, did not get her $58 because there are certain items which cannot be charged against the loser in a suit.

It looks as if the only persons who made any money out of that suit were the jurymen—and perhaps not all of them. It may have cost some of them more than $4 in time lost through being forced to attend court. And the lawyers.

The law is a grand institution. We could not get along without it. But it is a pretty expensive institution.

"Going to law" is liable to be a costly business. And in the end nobody comes out ahead of the game. —Owen Sound Sun-Times.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

According to Sir Kingsley Wood, British Air Secretary, the Allied air forces now exceed the German air forces in numbers of aircraft and in quality. Sir Kingsley's announcement means the Allies have taken a long step in the direction of their goal of overwhelming supremacy of the air.

The British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, now coming into operation in Canada, is designed to provide the man-power needed for the great air fleets projected in the Allied war plans.

Figures on the number of aircraft possessed by the different warring nations naturally are closely guarded. Most authorities, however, took it for granted Germany entered the war with a numerical superiority over the combined air fleets of Great Britain and France, though in the months immediately before the war the Allies were adding to their strength at a greater rate than Germany.

Additions to the Allied fleets are made by manufacture in British and French factories and by purchases, chiefly from the United States. The fact that after six months of war, during which no serious losses have been suffered, the Allied air fleets outnumber the enemy is as much or perhaps a little more than was expected.

In the matter of quality the Allies, being later in the race than the Germans, have a certain advantage. Many German aircraft were constructed before improvements now in use were discovered.

MANION LAUNCHES SHARP ATTACK ON DEFENCE MINISTER

Conservative Leader States He Has as Much Right to be Believed as Hon. Norman Rogers

REPEATS CHARGES

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Saint John, N.B., March 8—(CP)—When it comes to making statements about the equipment or lack of equipment of the first division Canada sent overseas, Conservative Leader Manion contends he has at least as much right to be believed as Defence Minister Rogers—whom he terms a "spreader of falsehoods."

In a sharp attack on the Minister of Defence here last night, Dr. Manion accused Mr. Rogers of "intentionally misleading" the people when he was Minister of Labor, of indulging in "loose talk," in charging Premier Hepburn with conspiracy but producing no proof, of being "not very truthful" generally.

"Why then is his word any better than mine when he offers no proof of the way the first division was equipped?" Dr. Manion asked an audience of 1,800.

Highest Authority for Charges is Claim

He insisted that when he stated the first division had only old rifles of the last war, a few obsolete machine guns and no artillery, he was speaking on the word of the "highest officers" who took the division to England.

"Mr. Rogers is an academician without any experience and not very truthful in his remarks," Dr. Manion said, referring especially to the issuance of unemployment figures when Mr. Rogers was Labor Minister. He claimed figures issued as "unemployed on relief" were intended to suggest total unemployed.

Then Mr. Rogers had charged Premier Hepburn of Ontario with conspiracy, a criminal charge. Mr. Hepburn had challenged him to produce proof, which was not forthcoming, making the charge "another example of Mr. Rogers' type of loose talk."

Discusses Question

Mr. Rogers had later defended Hon. Ian Mackenzie in the "disgraceful Bren gun affair."

"If Mr. Mackenzie was not guilty, why was he demoted? If he was wrong, he should have been thrown out of the government," Dr. Manion said.

Discussing the same question in a 30-minute broadcast over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation from here, he said he had made no statements in that regard which he could not prove before a proper tribunal or which he could not have proved before parliament if it had not been "scuttled."

Today Dr. Manion is en route to Charlottetown, where he is scheduled to speak tonight. He completes a rapid tour of the Maritime Provinces Saturday with a night address in Halifax.

In a general broadside against the King government, Dr. Manion denounced its "stupid and cruel" handling of allowances of wives and mothers of enlisted men. He charged the Prime Minister with being "too far removed from the people to realize conditions either in peace or war."

As to the personnel of the national government he proposed forming to handle the war and its resulting problems, he said he could "pick out of this audience quite the equal of the present Dominion cabinet and probably much better."

Sighted Sale of Wool

Dr. Manion said he would modify the present centralized control of the country's national harbours. He would retain the National Harbours Board as a general supervisory body to curb extravagance and co-ordinate operations but he would establish local voluntary board, "autonomous for most purposes", which would allow local control of the competitive aspects of port management.

As an example of the government's "stupidity" in the war effort, Dr. Manion cited the sale of more than 2,000,000 pounds of Canadian wool to American dealers during the early months of the war, delaying manufacture of woollen goods for the army here.

Among his post-war proposals, Dr. Manion said he would establish unemployment insurance and appoint a committee of the House of Commons to study social legislation generally and particularly health insurance, medical health centres and similar measures. It would also study Old Age Pensions, with a view to possible lowering the age, increasing payments and exempting larger amounts of personal earnings.

"All these must be done in co-operation with the provinces but they are aims worthy of both province and Dominion".

FINLAND WEIGHS CHOICE BETWEEN

Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim and Marshal Vassily Blucher, once Russia's far eastern army commander, were said to be in the Swedish capital, centre of the new effort for peace.

Finland was known to be pondering Swedish-transmitted Russian peace terms, described as more severe than those she rejected on the eve of the war's outbreak.

U. S. May be Invited

(Reuters News Agency quoted well-informed sources as saying the United States might be asked to act as mediator, and reported from Stockholm that Frederick Sterling, United States minister, had conferred there today with Aljas Erkko, Finnish minister).

That Berlin also was keenly interested in the peace move and might be a centre for negotiations was indicated by the arrival in Copenhagen and immediate departure for Berlin of Per Ervind Svinhufvud, 79-year-old former president of Finland. It was believed the Finns through him might ask Germany to use her influence at Moscow for ending the war.

Left With Mannerheim

From Helsinki came evidences of Finnish determination to fight rather than bow to a victorious Russia. But the Finnish Government was said to have placed the choice of peace or war in the hands of Baron Mannerheim, and a Stockholm newspaper quoted Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner of Finland as saying his government was "in contact with a go-between for the Soviet Government and this contact has not been broken."

Berlin spokesmen declined to confirm or deny reports of possible German mediation, but it was a matter of common gossip in Berlin diplomatic circles that Berlin has been interested in Swedish efforts to end the Russian-Finnish war. Trustworthy sources said the Swedish explorer, Sven Hedin, visited Adolf Hitler several days ago with a private message from King Gustaf of Sweden asking Hitler to intervene.

Tanner, who talked by telephone with the Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet, did not indicate whether Finland's "contact" with Russia was that established yesterday between Erkko and Madame Alexandra Kollontay, Soviet Minister to Sweden. Talks between the two were expected to continue today.

News Severely Censored

Telephone and other communications between Stockholm and other Scandinavian capitals continued to be severely censored in an apparent effort to permit the peace talks to continue with as little publicity as possible.

The Oslo newspaper Tidens Tegn, commenting on the talks, said the Finnish government had laid the final decision concerning continuation of the war with Baron Mannerheim. His decision, the paper said, was expected to hinge on what possibility he sees of obtaining help from abroad with which to continue the struggle.

Great significance was laid on the fact that Soviet leaders apparently had established contact with the Helsinki government despite previous assertions that they would negotiate only with the Soviet-sponsored government set up at Terijoki in the wake of the red army.

Distance Between Viewpoints

The Oslo newspaper Aftenposten, discussing the possibility of peace, said "the distance between the Soviet and Finnish viewpoints appears so wide that one cannot be too optimistic", but added that Sweden is "working energetically" to lessen the Russian demands to the point where they may be acceptable to the Finns.

Aftenposten said the Russian terms were understood to include cession of the entire Karelian Isthmus, including Viipuri; regulation of the frontier north of Lake Ladoga to Sortvala, thus making the entire northern coast of the Lake Russian, and concessions regarding the Hanko Peninsula and possibly the entire Petsamo district.

Russia's pre-war demands did not include Viipuri or Sortvala.

The newspaper said "the energetic peace work now being conducted by Sweden" was expected to bring definite results one way or the other in a very short time.

Fools His Cattle

Erwin, N. C., March 8—(AP) — When J. C. Byrd wants his cattle to eat corn shucks, he pins the shucks in a feed lock and leaves a noticeable crack around the bin. The cattle, he says, think they are getting into forbidden feed and devour all the shucks in sight.

Picton

Horace Thomas Youngest Member

Picton, March 8 — The honor of being the youngest member of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, now overseas, goes to Pte. Horace Thomas, it is claimed here. This lad is still in his sixteenth year and it is said is some six months younger than Pte. Bob Wright of Marmora, of the same regiment, for whom the honor was previously claimed. However these two cannot compete for the title of youngest member in the C. A.S.F. overseas as one member of fifteen years has been discovered Thomas is a big lad and his age was not questioned when men were being accepted for overseas service. Others who knew his correct age were envious of him when he was accepted and they were left behind as they were not nineteen years of age as required.

Pte. Thomas is not the only member of the family who is serving his King and Country. His father, Pte. Wren Thomas, is also a member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

WISE OLD OWLS FOR WEATHERS

London, March 8—(CP) — Britons, forced to do without published weather forecasts due to wartime restrictions, found consolation in a letter to The Times received from Lieut.-Col. A. Vickers, of Ashwells, Terling, Essex. He said such information could be obtained from owls.

"I have tested the honor of these excellent weather prophets for some years," he wrote, "and the conclusions are arrived at as follows: If the Wood Owl calls more than three times at night rain will come within 24 hours. If the Barn Owl calls even once during the night it will be fine for the next 24 hours."

Advice to the Lovelorn

Mother-in-Law Association of New York Objects to That Name

It seems that the hyphenated word which has so long masqueraded the relationship with sons and daughters' husbands and wives is to be cut mandate of the Mother-in-law Association of New York. In its place they have adopted "Kin-Mother".

Dr. Wilfred Funk has promised to put "Kin-Mother" in the next edition of the Standard Dictionary. And while we sympathize deeply with mother-in-law in their dislike for the unkind jokes about the word, one fears that the "Kin-Mother Association" may be no more immune to the gibes formerly directed toward the old word mother-in-law.

It's a tragedy that one of the great standbys of married life should have been selected as the butt of often clumsy humor. There are of course mothers-in-law who are meanies, just as there are husbands, wives, brothers, sisters, uncles, aunts who are meanies as well. But the mothers-in-law have had to bear the brunt of it.

Who's so helpful to the young couple as a good mother-in-law? Who takes care of the children when the parents want an evening outing? Who preaches tolerance, helps out with money and averts tragedies by saying "We went through just such problems ourselves?" But too often the friendly deeds of the good mother-in-law are submerged, while those of the cantankerous are awarded a five-star final.

It's interesting to know that people blessed with lovable mothers-in-law have rushed to defend them with names stressing the love and reverence in which they are held. The wife of one of Washington, D.C.'s leading clergymen has suggested "mother-in-love" as a substitute for mother-in-law. And there's a strong delegation in favor of "other mother".

Loyal sons and daughters-in-law sometimes object to sharing the word "mother" with anyone but their own mothers, and the resultant "Mother Smith", "Mother Jones", "Mother Robinson" is hardly a happy solution.

The mother-in-law name controversy has stimulated some pretty dreadful attempts at humor. Among them, rejected by the judges, were "ersatz-mother' and "blitzkrieg-mother". The palm for downright meanness could be awarded to "hit-and-stay mother" and hardly less friendly was "police mother".

These jests were taken in good part by women who looked young enough to be the grand-daughters of former generations of mothers-in-law. Waved hair, cared-for rosy skins, smart dresses, made the term mother-in-law a misnomer. Apart from being well-groomed and well-dressed, they had plenty of humor, which is even more necessary in the relationship of a mother-law to a son's or daughter's family.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Why Not Take Time to Be Courteous?

"Life is not so short but that there is always time for courtesy", said Emerson. There's a great lesson in these wise words. The tempo of our daily lives is speeding up at such a rate that too many of us get into the slovenly habit of thinking that we are "too busy" to pay much attention to doing and saying the courteous little things that really should be important to us, and are certainly important to others. Too many of us don't take time to do and say the pleasant things that would oil the machinery of our family life. Too many of us shut our eyes to the common sense of being gracious and appreciative to the people with whom we work. Too many of us "haven't time" to say "Thank you" or "Please" or "I beg your pardon." Too many of us haven't time to listen attentively to people when they are talking; we interrupt, or seem absorbed in our own thoughts, taking no time to show an interest in their interests.

How do we know that that extra moment or two spent in real courtesy to other people may not be of real importance to us and to the other person?

And I wonder how we spend the time we "save" by not being gracious.

Order of Service

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1—If I have three or more people for dinner, should the host always be served last?

2—Having only gentlemen for a luncheon, should the host be served first or last?

3—When the dessert is a fruit salad, how is the silver arranged?

R. B.

1—Yes, the host is served last. If there is a waitress, she serves first the woman seated at the host's right, then proceeds to the right, serving the guests in the order in which they are seated. If the host is carving and serving, he serves the women guests first, then the men, and, of course, himself last.

2—At a "stag" luncheon, the host would also be served last.

3—The fork that is to be used with the fruit salad—it may be a salad fork or any medium-sized fork—may be placed before the dessert is served, or it may be placed nearest the plate at the left when the table is set. The European manner is to place it above the plate when the table is set.

For a More Graceful Silhouette

RITA HAYWORTH . . proper foundation provides graceful silhouette.

By HELEN FOLLETT

GET YOUR foundation garment amply large, but snug enough to make you appear neatly harnessed. When the fat lady gets into a garment that is a size too small, the flesh flops over the top and rolls out below.

Beware of tight brassieres. They weaken the muscles of the breasts, dissolve tissues, cause sagging. They have a deplorable effect upon the circlation of the blood stream.

The wise woman will have both of these garments fitted. It costs no more and is the only satisfactory means of making a selection. One can't buy by size because there are many variations of the feminine figure; what produces a graceful silhouette for one will do a completes flop for another.

It is possible to find a hat with a brim which is much more flattering to the woman whose beauty petals have fallen. Why don't the poor dear who has acquired wrinkles do everything possible to make them less apparent to the eye?

Soft colors help a lot. Cold greys, some green shades, certain tones of brown do nothing to wipe away the evidences of the years. A bit of old blue, or rose, even red, will often give an appearance of youthful charm.

Halo hats and hair sleeked up at front reveal forehead lines which might better be concealed beneath a soft bang. To keep a bang curly, apply a heavy setting lotion, form a row of buttonhook curls. When the lotion has dried, there will be a soft fluff with curly ends.

There's no need of wearing dismal garments, even though one be 70 years old. But neither is there sense in donning trappings flaunted by grand-daughter. Age calls for dignity of manner and appearance. Yet, one can indulge in the beauty whims of the moment—a touch of lipstick, a chic coiffure, pretty shoes, smart attire.

You Want Your Child Stubborn

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

STUBBORNNESS is a good trait when properly employed. Without it we could have no striving to overcome great difficulties, no leadership or moral progress. Without it there could not have been Florence Nightingale, Moses, Socratees, St. Paul, Jesus.

Would you and I want our children always to give up easily and run away from hard things Would we want them never to be stubborn? Certainly not.

We want our children to be stubborn at the right things, in the right place, at the right time. We want the baby who attempts to make his rubber dolly stand alone not to give up until he eventually succeeds. We want the boy or girl who begins to make things for fun to stick to the job until he has finished, if possible, what he set out to do. We want the youth not to give up the problem in mathematics until it is solved.

Rage Not Involved

But no such stubbornness as we have considered here is accompanied by violent or explosive rage. Yet, we ordinarily associate strong expression of anger with stubbornness. Generally we think of stubbornness as expressed by the child who refuses to do what his parents try to force him to do against his force ,the more stubborn he grows, will. The longer they exert this as a rule. Often he wins and gets rewarded for his rage, growing more inclined to be stubborn later.

It is relatively easy to train a tot to avoid doing certain specific things, by applying immediate physical pain without exception. But no amount of force may compel him to do what you command him to do. The child of two or three who deliberately throws a block at the mirror may never do it again if his throwing is immediately followed by a good, sound spanking. Yet, he might refuse to pick up that block even after a dozen spankings. Around such refusals to obey a command arise nearly all stubbornness about which parents need to be concerned.

Avoid Commands

Don't command a little child, except in routines, and routines rarely require commanding, to do anything. Then you won't have a stubborn child. Command him not to do a few things. But the things you want him to do, ask him to do, and employ illimitable patience to induce him to accede. Then heartily approve his co-operation as he does accede. Make pleasant what you want him to do and painful only what you want him never to do.

In order to succeed, you must treat a request as a request; not as a command. Then, if the child (of any age) fails to do what you asked him to do, you have no occasion to punish him; since there was no command, there could be no disobedience. I consider this principle, when properly applied, to pay more good dividends in co-operation than practically any other I try to expound. Yet it seems to be the hardest one to make clear and convincing to my students and readers.

Fashion Flashes

Shooting up are the crowns and trimmings of many new hats. A smart late winter model is a sailor in three tiers, with a quill shooting out from the top. The fabric is brown taffeta bound in matching grosgrain.

Time out for a travel trip. Start off in a suit under a coat of oatmeal colored basketweave tweed with tuxedo revers of beige fox.

Tied up to bring smartness to any outfit is a glove and hat set. The pink suede hat with side brim has navy blue coq feather trimming. The pink suede gloves have blue silk knot embroidery.

Still around for dinner wear is the separate blouse and skirt. An accordion pleated gold lame skirt, for instance, teamed with a blouse of emerald green satin.

The sun shines on smart clothes down south. A smart afternoon hat is a tall pillbox fashioned of yellow felt covered with sprays of yellow mimosa. Hand crocheted yarn makes its snood.

Cabana parties call for trousers and tunic coats. A delightful tunic is of light gray sharkskin with tiny gold bowknot buttons, cut long and flared, and very snug at the waist. Worn with red slacks.

IF SPAGHETTI TASTES FLAT

Add a few drops of a concentrated relish

WHETHER you buy spaghetti in the can or cook it yourself, you will improve the flavour wonderfully if you add a little H. P. Sauce. A good way is to stir in H. P. while heating up or cooking the spaghetti: And some people like the H. P. flavour so well that they will add a little more when the spaghetti is served on their plates. One good point about H. P. is that you use it sparingly. A little of this thick, fruity sauce imparts a lot of flavour and it's a flavour that is appetizingly delicious. Don't forget H. P. Sauce next time you have spaghetti or macaroni. Use it also for flavouring soups, stews, meats, fish, fowl, sandwiches and salads.

FOR PETE'S SAKE! AM I SUPPOSED TO GET MY FOOT IN THAT?
LUX

WOOL SOCKS WON'T SHRINK if you LUX them this way

With Lux you avoid the use of hot water (which shrinks wool), and the cake-soap rubbing (which mats fibres) and harmful alkali (which roughens the texture). It's the alkali in ordinary soaps which makes wool socks, sweaters, shirts and woolly undies rough and "scratchy"—Lux contains NO harmful alkali.

Lux Flakes dissolve in lukewarm or cool water—so you don't risk hot-water shrinkage when you wash with Lux. Why not wash all your woollens the LUX way—preserve their shape and their soft, fluffy texture.

How to wash woollen socks the easy, saving, LUX way

1. Before washing wool socks get a pair of inexpensive wooden sock frames of the correct foot size.

2. Wash quickly in lukewarm-to-cool water rich in gentle Lux suds. Never rub. Never soak.

3. Rinse thoroughly in lukewarm water. Squeeze socks, roll in Turkish towel and knead out moisture. Unroll.

4. Dry immediately, hanged on sock frames away from extreme heat, such as radiators or stoves.

WON'T SHRINK WOOLLENS

SPRING

Tree and hedge will shed their ermine,
Sullen clouds will waft away,
Nature soon will wake from slumber,
And will don her gay array.

Flowers soon will deck the hillside,
Streams will murmur to the sea,
Birds will gather in the treetops,
With their songs for you and me.

As in life, when sorrow passes
And our hearts once more are gay,
We will sense the robins singing,
We will feel the new Spring day.

We will revel in the sunshine,
And our hopes once buried low,
Will wake again in Springtime,
When the sun doth melt the snow.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

St. Andrew's W.M.S. met in the Presbyterian Church parlour on Wednesday. The President, Mrs. C. Fargey called the members to worship by the singing of the National Anthem followed by the Lord's Prayer. The hymn "I will commune with Thee from the Mercy-Seat" was sung. Miss Elizabeth Russell read Psalm 84. Mrs. Fargey offered prayer. The hymn "Happy the people whose God is the Lord", was sung.

Mrs. A. R. Cameron and Mrs. P. Ranson gave the Secretary's and Treasurer's reports, respectively.

Mrs. Fargey was appointed delegate to attend the Provincial Presbyterial in Knox Presbyterian Church, Toronto, April 16-18.

Mrs. Maurice is to represent the Society as an invited guest to a Presbyterial Supper in Halloway Street United Church.

Mrs. C. Baragar requested books to be left with her or at the church, these books to be sent to the western provinces not later than March 20, for use in Mission Sunday schools.

Mrs. H. S. Graham gave a most interesting address on the Home Mission work done by Miss Lena Fraser, deaconess, at the Port of Halifax.

Mrs. Agnes Bell sang in her lovely style "Because of His Love for us", Mrs. W. Mantel accompanying her.

Mrs. A. R. Cameron gave a very clever address on the constitutions of India.

Mrs. Jas. Hill and her group are to be congratulated on the fine program provided for this March meeting.

Lunch was served at the close of the meeting. Miss Fargey and Mrs. J. R. Weir assisted in the serving.

PRESENTATION

On Monday evening March the 4th, friends and neighbors gathered at the home of the Acker brothers, 2nd concession of Sidney, to show their respects to Private Kenneth Sine, who had recently donned the uniform in the Quebec Regiment for his King and country.

Mr. Alfred Reid who acted as chairman, called the gathering to order and Kenneth was then requested to come forward and take his seat of honour. After a few remarks by Mr. Reid an address was read by Miss Elsie Meyers.

The address was signed on behalf of the neighborhood by Ernest Curtis and Clifford Acker.

He was presented with a lovely wrist watch and bill fold by Miss Jean Sandercock. In a very fitting reply Private Kenneth Sine thanked his friends. Cards and crokinole were then enjoyed, after which a delightful lunch was served. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing and then the friends dispersed to their homes after wishing Kenneth the best of luck.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Encephalitis

In recent columns I have been discussing the more common infectious diseases of children. Though it is not common I think I should also give some attention to a disease that sometimes comes on the heels of these infectious diseases to affect the child's brain.

Encephalitis is the disease to which I refer. It is not unlike another brain infection—meningitis. The main difference is that encephalitis is an inflammation of the brain itself and meningitis affects the cover of the brain, the meninges.

There have been cases when I have had difficulty in determining which one a patient had, encephalitis or meningitis. As a general rule, the symptoms of the two diseases are quite different. In encephalitis there usually is no sudden rise in temperature, no sudden stiffness of the neck, and no short-lived dramatic attack that soon ends in either recovery or death. But sometimes either or both these diseases come as complications to other diseases—pneumonia, for instance—and this throws the ordinary diagnosis away off.

Encephalitis is more insidious than meningitis. It mostly occurs when some other disease, such as measles, mumps or chickenpox has been present for some time. There is a gradual change in the child's appearance and actions as the infection appears. Frequently the child becomes wildly delirious and difficult to control; sometimes the disease may be ushered in by a gradually increasing drowsiness' In rare cases the disease makes itself known through sudden convulsions.

So you can see why encephalitis is insidious, difficult to diagnose and more difficult to cure.

The kind of encephalitis that affects a child seems to depend on the disease that preceeded it. For instance, the kind that follows measles is likely to be very severe and many deaths occur from it. But encephalitis following mumps isn't nearly so serious, the child isn't ill so long and most such cases recover completely.

Even when the acute symptoms—unconsciousness, convulsions, coma—are absent, we cannot be certain that the child will have a complete recovery. A great many cases that may appear cured for a while aren't. As the child grows older, it is noticed he becomes less and less bright. His playmates go on and develop mentally, but he may remain arrested in mental development until in a few years he is definitely in the feeble minded class.

There are many adults going through life today in our mental hospitals who were normal in every respect until a comparatively harmless disease like measles led to encephalitis.

In choosing this topic today, there was no intent to frighten mothers, for that would serve no useful purpose. I merely want to emphasize to the mothers of the country that these common infectious diseases of childhood aren't as harmless as they sometimes seem, and to plead that every child be given the benefits of all the immunity producing serums we have.

Elzevir Township Red Cross Society Has Busy Month

Elzevir Township Red Cross Branch comprising Actinolite and Queensboro held an open meeting in the Queensboro Hall on Monday afternoon, March 4th with forty members present.

The work of the month was exhibited and then packed for shipping.

The Junior Red Cross of Queensboro School under the leadership of their teacher, Miss Gilmer, had pieced a "Bow Tie" quilt during the month and supplied lining and batting so in one corner the quilters were very busy getting this ready to go in the bale. Queensboro had quilted three others during the month and Actinolite had two.

The following is a list of the articles sent: 27 hospital gowns, 8 pneumonia jackets, 14 pair pyjamas, 16 triangular bandages, 11 abdominal binders, 8 T binders, 18 ice cap covers, 2 hot water bottle covers, 6 pair bed socks, 27 pair socks, 6 pair wristlets, 4 sweaters, 4 scarves, 2 helmets.

For refugee children: 6 pair children's socks, 1 pair mittens, 10 jackets, 5 pantie dresses, 5 wool sweaters, 13 Balaclava caps, 5 pair bloomers, 6 quilts.

Judging from the size of the cartons, the Branch workers have given generously of their time and much pleasure has been derived from these social contacts.

Lunch was served by the Queensboro Women's War Work Committee and a charge of ten cents made, which added $4.00 to the fund.

During the month a Valentine Tea and Sale was held and in spite of the inclement weather and bad roads the receipts were $15.35.

The Program Committee met at the home of Mrs. John Moore on February 28th and decided on a play which they hope to stage early in April.

Mrs. (Rev.) Price of Actinolite represented Elzevir Township Branch at the annual meeting of the council of the Ontario Division held in Royal York Hotel, Toronto, on Tuesday, March 5th.

CANADIAN PACIFIC • CANADIAN NATIONAL UNITY

Not an Accident . . . but an Achievement

The REALITY of Canada's unity in this day of great national effort is a source of dismay to our enemy —and a factor of strength to ourselves and to our Allies . . . What Canadians should realize most fully is that their national unity does not exist through accident . . . It is the direct consequence of resourceful, determined and painstaking administration during recent years by an experienced and nationally-minded federal government . . . During the past five years the peacetime policies of the Mackenzie King Government —with respect to both domestic and external affairs—have been designed and executed with one main purpose in view—the strengthening of Canada's bonds of nationhood . . . Because those policies were sound; because they increased the measure of contentment throughout Canada; because they avoided clashes between provinces and races and creeds; because they were equally considerate of agriculture, industry and labour . . . because those policies have been truly national in scope, Canada is today putting forth a great, united, national war effort.

These are the sort of things which have contributed to unifying our nation:—

A Program of Trade Treaties—lowering Canada's tariff barriers and opening new market opportunities for citizens of every province . . . achieved by the Liberal administration in spite of the opposition of Conservatives, and the indifference of C.C.F. and Social Credit.

Development of the Trans-Canada Airways—bringing the people of East and West into overnight contact . . . created by the Mackenzie King Government from the ashes of the first airway attempt—sabotaged by the Conservatives.

Support for the Canadian National Railways System—Liberals have been steadfast in standing behind this great national enterprise of the Canadian people . . . while Conservatives have worked assiduously for destruction of the system.

A National Agricultural Policy—a new conception of federal encouragement for the farm families of every province.

Publicly Owned Central Bank—the Bank of Canada, focal point of our national financial problems, was changed to public ownership by the Mackenzie King Government . . . reversing the Conservative policy of a central bank owned by private stockholders.

Co-operative Action on Unemployment Problem—the Mackenzie King Government has co-operated willingly and continuously with the provincial governments in efforts to overcome the unemployment problem . . . the Conservative policy of denying all federal responsibility in this matter was rejected by the Liberals.

Parliament's Right to Decide on War—Mackenzie King promised the people of all Canada that the country would not be committed to war without the sanction of parliament . . . He held to that pledge honorably and steadfastly, in spite of the personal abuse which was heaped upon him and his government by hot-heads who did not represent the collective views of Canadian people.

No Prior Commitments—the King Government—wisely interpreting the wishes of the Canadian people—refused to commit this country, in advance, to a policy of fighting wars at unpredictable times, at unknown places and for undetermined causes.

The Quebec Election — when certain political opportunists in the province of Quebec attempted to disrupt Canadian unity and seriously halt our national war effort the men of the Mackenzie King Government were the ones who went in and fought to preserve national solidarity . . . The Conservative national leader remained silent during this crisis—when his voice should have rung out on behalf of national unity . . . Because the courageous action of Mackenzie King and his Quebec ministers helped the electors to keep the only true issue clearly in mind, Quebec was able to reaffirm her proud position . . . squarely and loyally and warmly behind Canada's national war effort.

Individual Sensationalism Completely Lacking in Hawks But Team Has Plenty of Drive

Chicago Squad Fast Becoming Best Team in N.H.L. and Only Two Points Behind Leafs

DEFEAT CANADIENS

Boston Bruins Head N.H.L. With 2-1 Victory Over the N. Y. Americans

By JACK CALDER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Contributing heavily to Chicago Black Hawks' sensational showing in this National Hockey League campaign, which was supposed to be an experimental year for the Blackbirds, is their almost complete lack of individual sensationalism.

"We've got a scrappy bunch of hockey players—no prima-donnas," says Coach Paul Thompson, "I think we've got as even a distribution of power as any club in the league."

The Hawks turned on their distributed power last night at Montreal to defeat the Canadiens 6-1 and all but cut off the Habitants' last chance at a Stanley Cup playoff position. No player got more than one goal and the outstanding individual achievement was that of Rookie Doug Bentley, who fired one goal and helped in three.

Can Tie Leafs

The Hawks, moving strongly in fourth place, can tie Toronto for third by beating the Maple Leafs at Toronto Saturday and again at Chicago Sunday.

Thoms, Allen, Johnny Chad, Dahlstrom and Gottselig were other scorers besides Bentley. Charlie Sands scored for Canadiens with less than three minutes to play.

Meanwhile Boston Bruins, as expected, took over first place by scoring early and beating the Americans 2-1 at New York. As usual the Bruin Sauerkraut Line of Milt Schmidt, Woody Dumart and Bobby Bauer predominated.

But the last bitter battle for the league championship is just starting.

Boston Ahead of Rangers

Boston is one point ahead of New York Rangers and has four games to play, compared with three for the Blueshirts. The two contenders meet twice next week, at Boston Tuesday and at New York Thursday, and the title will be hanging in the balance.

Schmidt sent the Bruins ahead in the first period with Bauer's aid and there was no further scoring until 11 minutes had passed in the third. Then Schmidt with Dumart assisting scored the second goal. Hooley Smith narrowed the margin with a New York score four minutes from the finish.

The Americans could have clinched the sixth and last playoff spot by winning. As it was, they remained seven points ahead of the Canadiens and have four games in which to register a single victory that will assure them of the last Stanley Cup slot.

Ernie Lombardi Hardest Working Player in Camp

By GAYLE TALBOT

Associated Press Sports Writer

Tampa, Fla., March 8—(AP) —The hardest working player in the Cincinnati training camp is Ernie Lombardi, the goat of the last world's series. As game as he is big Ernie nwears the expressio these days of a man who intends to make his detractors eat their words.

The slugging catcher never has explained what happened to him in the big series, when the Yankees bounced him around like a rubber ball. The most he has said was: "I don't know what happened."

Probably that is the literal truth, but it would have been easy for him to have said that Keller knocked the wind from him when they collided at the plate, and that he was a hurt man for the remainder of the dizzy game.

Now he is working like a rookie. Already he has caught two full inter-camp games, one of which went 12 innings. A teammate confided that Ernie was at least two weeks ahead of last spring in his conditioning, and said he would be willing to bet Ernie was coming back to hit at least .320.

Last year was bad for him all around. National League batting champion in 1938 with a mark of .342, and voted the league's most valuable player, he hit ony .286 last season.

There is another case in the Cincinnati camp very similar to Lombardi's. Johnny Vandermeer looks like he might have a comeback in his system too. Manager Bill McKecknie is sure of it. If both of them should return to their 1938 form, the Reds probably would be a shoo-in.

Alf Pike

Last October, while the major league hockey teams were in training, Lester Patrick announced that there would be but two changes in the Ranger team that had finished a bang-up second to Boston Bruins in 1938-39. Cecil Dillon had been traded to Detroit and Larry Molyneaux sent to the minors, and replacing them were Kilby Macdonald and Alf Pike, both recruits from the Ranger farm system. The two newcomers have fitted smoothly into the squad. Pike's role being that of utility player, usually filling in at centre or left wing. Previous to entering the National league he had had but 11 games experience as a pro, those at the end of the 1938-39 season when he moved up from the Rovers to Philadelphia Ramblers in the Int.-Am. loop. The jump to the top team in the R-R-R-R system came as a wedding gift to Pike, who was married a few days after the announcement of his promotion was made. He's a good-sized player, standing six feet and weighing around 185 pounds. Winnipeg was his birthplace (22 years ago) and the scenes of his first hockey endeavors. He played through the usual city leagues and then spent two seasons with the famed Monarchs, adding something to that fame himself, as in his second year he played a vital part in his team's capture of the Memorial Cup. Thence to New York Rovers and so on.

Valleyfield Braves With Intermediates and Juniors Defeat Sherbrooke 2-1

ASKS SUSPENSION

Player's Strike Will be Reported to Amateur Body for Action

Valleyfield, Que., March 8—(CP) —Victims of the first major hockey strike in the history of the game in Quebec, Valleyfield Braves prepared today to carry on in the Provincial Senior League playoffs, still uncertain whether the move that forced them to release seven of their best players helped or shattered the team's chances.

Judging from the Braves' 2-1 victory over Sherbrooke Red Raiders last night in the second game of the P.S.H.L. semi-finals, release of the players, "because they wanted their salaries and bonuses guaranteed to the end of the playoffs," did not harm the team.

The clubs move to Sherbrooke Sunday for the third game of the best-of-five series and if the Braves can do as well they will be ranked as the wonder team of the year. Their victory last night, with intermediates filling in for the released regulars, squared the series, for Sherbrooke won the opening game 2-1.

Georges Perron, Valleyfield Secretary, said the seven players "had all been paid up for the regular season."

He described the action of Chick Gromoll, Ray Mullins, Marcel Despelteau, Lionel Lafontaine, Henri Matte, Jean Huguet and Jean Lapointe as "little more than a threat." It was a case of "pay or we won't play," he said.

Perron said the club would report the matter to the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association with a strong recommendation that the players "be suspended from hockey for anywhere up to 20 years."

On Being Well Dressed

TALL MEN

For tall men double-breasted suits are ideal. The trimness and neatness of the double-breasted suit is the very thing a big man needs. His choice of patterns should be towards simplicity, avoiding stripes, inclining towards neat checks and plaids. These suggest breadth instead of height. All men of different-than-ordinary stature should avoid too-prominent patterns.

Tall, slender men, particularly, should avoid pronounced stripes. Short, stout men will reverse this, going in for stripes, but avoiding rough fabrics.

Ont.-Intell. Newsboys To Play Hockey Game At Hume Arena Tonight

Newspaper delivery boys of the Ontario-Intelligencer will engage in an ice hockey feud at the Hume Arena between six and seven o'clock this evening. It is presumed the game is the outcome of continued verbal remarks hurled by the feuding factions and which became magnified as the taunts were finally accepted and the terms of battle agreed upon.

One team of news boys is led by "Quasimodo" Hutchinson and known as the "Tea Leafs", while the other team called the "Alley Cats", by their rival delivery boys, is headed by "Jub" Juby. The "Cats" have been tossing catty remarks regarding the prowess of their bruising defence of Bob Holland and "Farmer" Harrison, while the "Tea Leafs" rear cruisers are manned by Hutchinson and Jerry Spafford. Stewart and Lummis are the opposition net-minders, so Mr. and Mrs. Reader take your choice, back your newsboy and feel no sentiment towards Referee "Bonny" Gerow.

All of the boys participating in this hockey game are Ontario-Intelligencer newspaper delivery boys.

TWO-TIME WINNER OF BRIER TANKARD IS HOWARD WOOD

Tankard and Miniatures Presented to Winning Rinks at Conclusion of Matches

(By Charles Edwards, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, March 8 — (CP) — Howard Wood, who reconsidered a decision to retire from major competition this year at insistence of his 21-year-old son, ranks today with the immortals of Canadian curling — two-time winner of the Macdonald Brier Tankard.

Wood, who won the Brier for Manitoba in 1930 and played third for Jimmy Congalton when that Winnipegger took the tankard in 1932, completed a nine-game sweep of the 14th annual Dominion championships last night.

It was Manitoba's ninth victory in the classic and the fourth time it had been won in straight games. Gordon Hudson and Leo Johnson of Winnipeg accomplished the feat in 1929 and '34 and Ab Gowanlock of Glenboro, Man., turned the trick in '38.

Wood Made Sure of Tankard

Only Hudson, in 1928-29, and Cliff Manahan of Edmonton, in 1933-37, had previously skipped two Brier champion rinks and Wood made sure of his second victory last night by beating Manahan's Albertas 17-11 in the ninth and final round.

Peter Lyall of Montreal, Brier trustee who addressed the curlers at the presentation of prizes, termed the crowd "the greatest spectacle in the history of curling." Mr. Caverhill of Montreal presented the tankard and miniatures to the Wood rink and Mrs. Walter Stewart of Montreal presented silver trays to the second-place Saskatchewan rink, skipped by Bill Dunbar of Kinley.

Wood passed safely through a gruelling program yesterday, beating the 1939 champions, Bert Hall's Kitchener, Ont. four, 8-6 in the morning and defeating Jim Davis' northern Ontarians 13-8 in the afternoon before engaging Manahan.

TRAINING CAMP NEWS

(By The Associated Press)

Lakeland Fla. March 8 (AP) — Detroit Tigers are starting their 1940 conditioning backward. They now have two players on the hospital list, Charley Gehringer with a lame back and Barney McCosky with an upset stomach.

San Bernardino, Calif.—Paul (Big Poison) Waner had this to say about the rigorous routine, new to Pittsburgh Pirates, that Manager Frank Frisch has imposed at training camp:

"Some of the pitchers and catchers told me they never worked harder in their lives and after I'd been un unform for half an hour I saw they weren't talking through their hats. But hard work of this kind never hurt any ball player."

Long Beach, Calif.—Eddie Collins Jr. is looking more like his famous dad every day. He sparked Philadelphia Athletics to a 4-1 triumph over Seattle yesterday, making several fine catches in centrefield and in the eighth inning beating out a drag bunt, stealing second and scoring on a hit by Dee Miles.

Brandenton, Fla.—If young Eddie Miller doesn't show up in Boston Bees' camp today — he's a holdout; that's the word of Casey Stengel.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Some months after Russia invaded little Finland, the Olympic committee from that courageous little country continued to send out Olympic bulletins to all parts of the world, in hopes that the 1940 Olympics might reach the stage of realization and ultimately prove a factor towards perhaps restoring peace to the warring nations of Europe. Right after the New Year, however, these Olympic bulletins from Finland ceased to arrive at the sports desks of the world's newspapers, but this week what may prove a final appealing bulletin was received. As will be recalled, Finland took up the Olympic torch after Japan tossed it to the winds. In the recent bulletin the Finnish Olympic committee said in part—"In 1938 the International Olympic committee entrusted Finland with organizing the 12th Olympic Games in Helsinki. Finland and her sportsmen accepted with gratitude and, thanks to the generous sacrifices of the entire nation, preparations had progressed so far by the autumn of 1939 that the success of the Games seemed ensured. In a cheerful and confident spirit we looked forward to the arrival of the world's athletes and sportsmen as our guests."

Continuing, the bulletin stated that, despite the outbreak of war in Europe, the Finns continued their Olympic organization, believing the 12th Olympiad might tend to unite nations and restore the spirit of peace and brotherhood. However, the hungry Russian "bear" attacked the peaceful little country of Finland and threatened to bomb and destroy their Olympic village at Helsinki, which does not boast of any armaments and is unfortified. Today the Finnish Olympic committee is making an appeal to the athletes and sportsmen of the world, not for moral support only, but something more material. Continuing the Olympic bulletin appeals as follows—"And when thinking of Finland may you understand that, however encouraging the sympathy shown us by the world has been, it is not sufficient for a nation struggling against an enemy 50 times greater in size and power. It's up to you also, athletes and sportsmen of the world, to decide whether this appeal from the organising committee shall be a last message or not."

Such conditions should make us glad we are Canadians and not the subjects of Hitler or Stalin, whose main object is not the building of healthful bodies and minds, but greed and power.

Lex Chisholm, former Oshawa amateur now playing right wing for the Toronto Maple Leafs, is out of hockey for the remainder of the season. Chisholm broke his right arm while practicing with the Leafs yesterday. He was in collision with Hank (Kingston) Goldup and crashed into the boards breaking the flipper. Incidentally the Leafs have had more than their share of injuries this season, Apps and Schriner having been casualties for lengthy periods.

"I saw his picture in the newsreel and that reminds me that my next vote for the shrine at Cooperstown goes to Dickie Kerr," observes Jimmy Powers, live-wire sports editor of the New York Daily News. "In 1919, during the Black Sox series, he scored two of the victories credited to the White Sox, despite the fact that several of his mates behind him were trying desperately to lose. How he won them, I don't know. But little Dickie deserves to have his name in the Hall of Fame." No doubt Scribe Powers will gain many supporters in his proposed vote for "Little Dickie" Kerr. It is to men like Dick Kerr that sport really owes something and Powers no doubt has the solution in hand.

Do you remember when for striking Red Horner, Toronto defenceman, on the head with a hockey stick during a match at Toronto, Paul Runge, Maroon forward, was fined $50 and suspended from the National Hockey League for two games, two years ago today? In imposing the penalty President Frank Calder said Runge's previous good record had been taken into consideration.

The rural hockey teams hold sway at the Hume Arena again tonight following which the tournament finalists will be determined. Zion Hill and Wallbridge advanced to the semi - finals as the result of wins, while Glen Miller and Mountain View drew byes into the second round. These four teams appear in a doubleheader this evening. These rural pucksters are keen disciples of the game and employ all of the tricks known to the modern puck-chasing business.

The Ontario Intelligencer news delivery boys are going to try their lot at hockey this evening between the hours of six and seven o'clock. Two teams of "newsies," the "Tea Leafs" and "Alley Cats," have been launching verbal taunts at each other to such great lengths, that the ultimate outcome was obvious with the announcement of this ice battle.

Give Bill Terry one good winning pitcher—he doesn't care whether he is a southpaw or a righthander—and the New York Giants will be in the pennant race next season. So Memphis Bill declared in an interview at Winter Haven, Fla. last week. "I just want another good pitcher," said Bill, but he still has faith in Carl Hubbell to deliver. "When Hub's got half of his stuff, he can win. At the end of the season he said his arm felt fine. Bill also believes he has the formula to make Paul Dean a winning hurler. "We're going to run, run, run him down to normal weight and effectiveness."

SPORT SPICE—Over in Trenton they're at least one jump ahead of local hockey circles. . . Not only do they sponsor junior and juvenile hockey, but midget hockey in the newly formed Ontario Midget Hockey Loop. . . . The Trenton Midgets have won their district and will meet Lindsay next, — "Wake up Belleville" or it's the rural leagues for this village ere long. . . . Peterboro plays in Kitchener tonight in the intermediate "A" round robin series of the O.H.A. . . . When seven members of the Valleyfield team in the Quebec Senior League go "on strike for more expense money" they'd better vault out of the amateur class right smartly. . . . The Boston Bruins are giving the Rangers quite a chase for that top rung of the N.H.L. ladder, the Bruins won 6-1 over Canadiens last night and are only one point behind the league leaders. . . . The Angel won over Jerry Monohan last night.

Yesterday's Stars

By The Canadian Press

Woody Dumart, Milt Schmidt and Bobby Bauer, Boston, combined to give Bruins a 2-1 victory over Americans by getting all five scoring points for their team.

Doug Bentley, Chicago, got a goal and three assists as the Black Hawks swamped Montreal Canadiens 6-1.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use, may be had at such a reasonable cost.

USED CAR Buys

"This is a frank, sincere statement. If I had under a thousand dollars to spend for an automobile and wanted the thrill of luxury transportation plus enduring performance—in plain words if I wanted the most for my money —

"I would step in at Quinte Motors some day soon and examine these cars listed below. Why should I be content with mediocrity, when these carefully conditioned cars afford the luxury and lively energy of new creations, at half the price.

1940 Buick Special Coach: with many extras. Has been driven only a few miles Practically a new car at used car price.

1938 Dodge Sedan: Original paint, hardly soiled. Very low mileage. Positively looks and runs like a new car.

1937 DeSoto Sedan: Finished in dark green. New tires all 'round. Mechanically A1. And the price is right.

1935 Dodge Sedan: Original paint on body. Tires good. A real good family car.

1930 Buick Seven Passenger Sedan: This car is in excellent condition in every way.

ALSO SEVERAL LOW PRICED CARS.

Corsicana, Tex., March 8—(AP)—The wind blows hard here An extra strong puff blew over a truck loaded with 14 men. Five were taken to hospital.

TONY

—BY ELIZABETH VERNON—

CHAPTER XXV

Hyacinth glanced out of the drawing-room window. Her mother's glance followed hers. They saw Tony coming slowly across the lawn towards the house. They had sent for her. But if Alan had not been in London seeing his lawyers, making arrangements, she would have been at Holme Dacey, seeing Alan; or out riding—with Alan; or wandering down by the lake—with Alan. Hyacinth could imagine it all. Fortunately, however, there hadn't been much time for Alan's courting. The dance, the disastrous dance, had taken place only two days ago. Yes. Only two days. It seemed like two leaden months. And now Alan was in London and expecting to be married on Saturday. Well......

Hyacinth hummed a little tune. There would be no real unpleasantness—nothing that she could object to—in the coming scene. No, the unpleasantness would be all for Tony.

Hyacinth had turned back to the piano. She played a few gentle notes.

Tony entered. "You wanted me, Mother?"

"Yes, Tony. Shut the door."

Tony crossed the room to a chair. She sat down, averting her face a little, as she always did in the presence of her sister or her mother.

"Tony, we must speak to you about this engagement to Alan Fleming," Mrs. Querne led off, as it had been arranged that she should.

"Yes, Mother."

"I'm afraid we cannot countenance it."

"You mean I'm under age. You won't give your consent?" Tony faced her mother now. But she didn't seem afraid.

"Alan isn't asking for Mother's consent," Hyacinth said. She hadn't meant to speak yet. But the happy certainty in Tony's face forced the words from her. "He says he is willing to marry you if Mother thinks it necessary—"

"What do you mean?" Tony's words came quickly. And now her expression had changed, as if this attack came from an unexpected quarter—from within the fortress itself. "Alan wants us to be married."

"No, dear." Querulously, Mrs. Querne continued. "It really does seem hard that I should have to explain all this, Tony. It's more than I can do—"

"I'll do it, Mother." Hyacinth heard her own voice, cool and efficient. She leaned forward, a smile on her lips.

"After being expelled because of Harry Beckett, Tony, you will hardly need much explanation of these things. Alan feels that he compromised you—as indeed he did—by locking himself into the card room with you the other night. He realizes that there is bound to be scandal, and he has said to Mother that he felt himself bound to offer to marry you that night. Of course, we should be delighted to have him marry you—if he wanted to. But Mother doesn't see why the poor man should be bound for life merely because you threw yourself at his head—we remember your visits to Holme Dacey, you see—and then encouraged him to wreck your good name on the night of the dance. She has explained to him that she will not hold him to his word. It isn't as if your name had been quite unspotted so far."

There was silence. Mrs. Querne was rearranging the lace of her wrists. Tony didn't speak. Hyacinth felt herself smile. Really, one couldn't help it—such success. One felt such a lifting of the heart.

"I don't believe what you say." Tony's voice, changed, came at last.

"Really?" Hyacinth replied. "Do you think that any man who kisses you must marry you?" Young Beckett was seen to kiss you at the dance."

"It isn't true." With dreadful mechanicalness the words came from Tony.

"I told you, Mother," Hyacinth said brightly, "that Tony wouldn't believe it. Show her Alan's letter."

Mrs. Querne searched in her bag. She brought out a letter. Tony took it. Hyacinth watched her as she stared at the firm handwriting on the sheet of paper. She knew the words that would leap to Tony's eyes......"realize that I behaved indiscreetly" ...... "cannot help knowing, however, that she was again flirting with young Beckett." And then, "Should you feel, on reflection, that I need not consider myself bound, a few words in writing from Tony......"

The paper fluttered to the floor. Tony rose from her chair. Her face was perfectly blank—void of anything.

"Don't go, dear. You must write to Alan, you know," said Mrs. Querne.

"Now?" In Tony's voice there was a strange dependence, as if some part of her had indeed been blinded and she knew that she must be led. She looked from her mother to Hyacinth.

"I think so," her mother replied.

They watched her as she wandered over to the writing table. She took a pen and paper. Then for a minute or two she sat quite motionless.

"I don't know what to write," she said at last.

"I should think that 'Dear Alan: I am very sorry. I have changed my mind about marrying you, would do. He could show that to anyone who suggested that he had treated you badly."

For a little, the pen scratched obediently on the paper.

"You needn't stamp it, dear," said Mrs. Querne. "Give it to me. I will see that Alan gets it."

Tony handed the letter to her mother. She stood in the middle of the room as if waiting for a word to move her.

"You know, Tony," Mrs. Querne was saying, " you can't stay on here after all this. There will be so much talk. You must go away for some time. We are arranging to send you abroad."

"Yes," Tony answered. "When will I go?"

"Tomorrow."

"And Jacky?"

"Jacky will stay here of course."

"Yes, I see," Tony stared round her as though, Hyacinth thought, the walls of the room, everything were invisible. Suddenly her eyes came round to Hyacinth. The blind look had left them. "You have won, Hyacinth," she said.

For a moment she still stood there. She muttered something. Then she turned away. She ascended the stairs. Her feet dragged as if she were weak and ill. At the top of the stairs she paused. She leaned on the balustrade, gazing down into the hall. If only all things might come to an end now. So that she might have no further step to take, no thoughts to fill her mind. That mind was empty now—as empty as her heart. But she could feel somewhere a wild press of thoughts hammering at the door, demanding entrance.

She went on. Her footsteps took her through the green baize door, down the passage, past the schoolroom. She knew that Jacky was waiting for her there. But she would never see that room again. Never.

She sat down on her bed. She heard Jacky coming along the passage. She loved Jacky. Of course. One knew that. But something had died within her so that even at the thought of Jacky she could feel nothing. It was as if a strange child were about to enter the room. She summoned a smile for that child.

Jackey entered, sliding through the quarter-open door. She glanced at Tony, and again, anxiously.

"Tony, aren't you well?"

Tony, seated on the bed, nodded. "Please," she said, "don't speak to me for one moment, darling." Strange how exhausted one felt. As if the familiar stairs had been a high, high mountain.

Timidly, Jacky gazed at her sister. Tony avoided her eyes. She took Jacky's hands in hers. At that touch she had expected to feel some warmth in her heart. But no; nothing.

"Jacky, would you like to run away with me tonight? I must go and I won't go without you."

"Will we go to Holme Dacey?" Jacky asked.

Speechless with sudden pain, Tony shook her head.

"But what will Alan say?" Jacky asked. She was curled on the floor by the bed now, her hands still in Tony's.

"I—I—he—" Tony stopped. How difficult to say the words. "It's all over, Jacky. We're not going to be married."

"Why?" Almost fiercely the child stared up at her sister. "Does Alan say so?"

"He's said—he told Mother— he doesn't want to marry me—I've seen his letter—"

"I don't believe it!" Jacky snatched her hands away. "Why—"

"Jacky, he only said he'd marry me because—" Tony put her hands to her face. "Oh, Jacky, you can't understand—and I can't tell you."
